The. XVI. Chapter.

A IOb aunſwered and ſaide: I haue oftymes herde ſuche thynges. Miſerable geeuers of comforte are ye/ all the ſort of you.
Shall not thy vayne woordes come yet to an ende? Or haſt thou yet any more to ſaye? I coulde ſpeake/ as ye do alſo. But woldo God/ that your ſoule were in my ſoules ſteade: then ſhoulde I heape vp woordes againſte you/ and ſhake my heade at you. I ſhoulde com-forte you with my mouth/ and releaſe youre payne payne with the talkynge of my lippes. But what ſhall I do? For all my wordes/ my ſorowe wil not ceaſſe: and though I holde my tunge/ yet wyl it not depart fro me. And now that I am full of payne/ and all that I haue deſtroyed/ (whereof my wryncles beare wytneſſe) there ſtandeth vp a diſſembler to make me aunſwere with lyes to my face. He is angry at me/ he hateth me/ and gnaſheth vp-on me with his teeth. Myne enemie ſkou-leth vpon me with his eyes.

B They haue opened their mouthes wide vp-on me/ † and ſmitten me vpon the cheke de-ſpytefully/ they haue eaſed them ſelfes thorow myne aduerſyte. God hath geuen me ouer to the vngodly/ and deliuered me into the han-des of the wicked. I was ſomtime in wealth/ but ſodenly hath he brought me to naught. He hath taken me by the necke/ he hath rente me/ and ſet me/ as it were a marke for him to ſhute at. He hath compaſſed me round about with his dartes/ he hath wounded my loines and not ſpared. My bowels hath he poured vpon the grounde. He hath geuen me one wound vpon another/ and is fallen vpon me like a giaunte. I haue ſowed a ſackecloth vp-on my ſkynne/ and lye with my ſtrength in the duſte. R. xxij. d

C My face is ſwollen with wepinge/ and myne eyes are waxē dymme. Howbeit/ there is no wickednеſſe in my handes/ & my prayer is cleane. O earth/ couer not my bloude/ and let my crieng find no rowme. For lo/ my witneſſe is in heauen/ and he that knoweth me/ is aboue in the heyghte. My frendes laugh me to ſcorne/ but myne eye poureth out tea-res vnto God. Though a body myght pleate with God/ as one man doeth with another/ yet the numbre of my yeares are come/ and I muſt go the waie/ from whence I ſhall not turne againe.

The. XVII. Chapter.

A MY breth faileth/ my daies are ſhortened/ I am hard at deathes dore. I haue deceaued no man/ yet muſt myne eye continue in heauyneſſe. O delyuer me/ and ſet me by the/ who ſhal then be able to thruſt my hādes together? Thou haſt withholden their hertes from vnderſtandinge/ therfore ſhall they not be ſet vpon hye. He promiſeth his frendes parte of his good/ but his own childrē ſpende it. He made me as it were a byword of the cō munc people/ I am his ieſtinge ſtocke amōg them. My countenaunce is heauy for very anger/ and the membres of my body are become lyke a ſhadowe. Verteous men therfore ſhal wel conſidre this/ and the innocent ſhall take parte againſt the ypocrite.

The ryghteous will kepe his waye/ and he B that hath cleane handes/ will euer be ſtron-ger and ſtronger. As for you/ turne you/ and get you hence/ for I can not ſe one wyſe man amonge you. My daies are paſt/ my thoughtes are vaniſhed awaye/ whiche haue vexed myne herte/ chaungynge the nyghte into day/ and the lyght into darkeneſſe. Though I tary neuer ſo muche/ yet the graue is my houſe/ and I muſt make my bedde in the darcke. I call corrupcion my father/ and the wormes call I my mother and my ſyſter. What hel-peth then my longe taryinge? Or who wyll fulfyll the thinge that I loke for? All that I haue/ ſhal go doune into the pyt/ and lye with me in the duſt.

The. XVIII. Chapter.

THen aunſwered Baldad the Suhite/ A and ſayde: whan will ye make an ende of youre wordes? Marke weil/ and conſidre/ we will ſpeake alſo. Wherfore are we counted as beaſtes/ and reputed ſo vile in youre ſight? Why deſtroieſt thou thy ſelfe with anger? Shal the earth be forſake/ or the ſtones remoued out of their place/ becauſe of the? Shall not the light of the vngodlie be put out? yee/ the flame of his fyre ſhal not burne. The light ſhalbe darke in his dwellinge/ and his candle ſhalbe put out with him. His preſumpteous goyinges ſhall be kepte in/ and his owne counſayll ſhall caſt hym doune. For his fete ſhalbe taken in the net/ and he ſhall walke in the ſnare. His fote ſhalbe holden in the trappe/ and the thyrſtie ſhall catche him. The ſnare is layed for him in the grounde/ and a pitfall in the waie.

Fearfulneſſe ſhall make him afraied on e- B

All

All his comforte and hope shal be roted out of his dwellynge/very fearfulnesse shal brynge him to the kinge. Other men shal dwel in his house/(which now is none of his) and brimstone shalbe scatered vpon his habitacion. His rotes shalbe dryed vp beneth/and aboue shal his harueste be cut doune. His remembraunce shal perisshe from the earth/and his name shall not be praysed in the stretes: he shalbe driuen from the lighte into darkenesse/and be caste clene out of the world. He shall neyther haue children nor kynsfolkes amonge his people/no/nor any posteritie in his cõtrie: yonge and olde shalbe astonyed at his death. Suche are now the dwellinges of the wycked/and this is the place of him that knoweth not God.

The. XIX. Chapter.

A IOb aunswered/and sayde: How longe wyll ye vexe my soule/and trouble me with woordes? Lo/ten tymes haue ye reproued me: are ye not ashamed/for to laugh me so to scorne? if I go wronge/I go wronge to my selfe. But if ye will enhaunce youre selfes againste me/and accuse me to be a wycked persone/because of thesame that is come vpon me: knowe this then/that it is God/ whiche had handled me so violently/and hath compassed me aboute with his scourges. †Beholde/though I crye/yet violence is done vnto me. I canne not be herde: Thoughe I complayne/there is none to geue sentence with me. He hath hedged vp my path/I can not get awaye/he hath set darkenesse in my gate. Abac. j.a

B †He hath spoyled me of myne honour/and taken the crowne away fro my head. He hath destroyed me on euery side/and I am vndon: My hope hath he taken awaye fro me/as it were a tree pluct vp by the rote. His wrath is kindled againste me/he taketh me/as though I were his enemye. Job. j.a

His men of warre came together/which made their way ouer me/& besieged my dwellinge rounde about. †He hath put my brethrẽ farre away fro me/& such as were of myne acquaintaunce/are become straũgers vnto me. Myne owne kynsfolkes haue forsaken me/& my frẽdes haue put me out of remembraũce. The seruauntes/and maidens of myne owne house take me for a straunger/and I am become as an alcaunt in their syghte. Psal. xxxvij.b

C Whan I call vpon my seruaunt/he geueth me no aunswere: no/thoughe I praye hym with my mouth. Myne owne wyfe maye not abyde my breth/I am fayne to speake fayre vnto the children of myne owne body. Yee/the very vyserte foules despyse me/and whan I am gone from them/they speake euell vpon me. All suche as were my moost familiars/abhorre me: & they whome I loued best/are turned againste me. My bone hangeth to my skynne/and the flesshe is awaye/onely there is lefte me the skynne about my teeth. Haue pitie vpon me/haue pitie vpon me/(O ye my frendes) for the hand of the Lorde hath touched me. Seynge/ God persecuteth me/wyll ye vexe me also? Haue ye not yet ynough of the trouble of my flesshe?

D O that my woordes were wrytten/O that they were put in a boke: wold God they were grauen with an yron penne in leade or stone. For I am a sure/that my redemer liueth/and that I shal rise out of the earth in the latter daye: that I shal be clothed again with this skinne/and se God in my flesshe. Yee/I my selfe shal behold him/not with other/but with these same eyes. My reynes are consumed within me/whan ye say: Why do not we persecute him? we haue founde an occasion against him. But beware of the sweard/for the swearde wylbe auenged of wickednesse/and be sure/that there is a iudgement.

The. XX. Chapter.

I Then aunswered Sophar the Naamathite/and sayde: For thesame cause do my thoughtes cõpel me to aunswere. And why? my mynde is tossed here and there. I haue sufficiently herde the checkinge and reproue/ therfore am I purposed to make aunswere after my vnderstandinge. Knowest thou not this/namely: that from the beginninge/Ceuer sence the creacion of man vppon earthe) the prayse of the vngodlye hath bene shorte/and that the ioye of Ypocrytes continued but the twincklinge of an eye? Though he be magnifyed vp to the heauen/so that his heade reacheth vnto the cloudes: yet he perysshed at ý last like donge: In so much that they which which haue sene him/saye: Where is he? He vanysshed as a dreame/so that he can no more be founde: and passeth awaye as a vision in the nighte. So that the eye whiche sawe hym before/getteth now no syght of him/and his place knoweth him nomore. His children go a beggynge/their handes brynge them to sorowe and heauynesse.

B From his youth vp are his bones full of vyce/whiche shall lye doune with him in the earth. Whã wickednes is swet in his mouth/ he hydeth it vnder his tunge. That he fauoureth/that wyl he not forsake/But kepeth it close in his throte. The meate that he eateth/shalbe turned to the poyson of serpentes within his body. The riches that he deuoureth/shall he perbreake agayne/for God shall drawe them oute of his belly. The serpẽtes heade shal sucke him/and the addders tunge shal slaye him: so that he shal nomore se the riuers and brokes of hony and butter: But labour shal he/and yet haue nothynge to eate. Greate trauayle shal he make for ryches/but he shal not enioye them. And why? he hath oppressed the poore/ and not helped them: houses hath he spoyled/ and not builded them. His belly could neuer be fylled/therfore shal he perysh in his couetousnes. C He deuoured so gredely/that he left nothing behind/therfore his goodes shal not prospere. † Though he had plenteousnesse of euery thinge/yet was he poore/and therfore he is but a wretch on euery syde. xcviij.b

For though the wycked haue neuer so much to fill his belly/yet God shal sende his wrath vpon him/and cause his battayl to raygne ouer him: so that if he flye the yron weapens/ he shal be shot with the stele bowe. The arow shal be taken forth/and go out at his backe/& a glystering swearde thorowe hys gall/feare shal come vpon him. There shall no darkenes be able to hyde hym. An vnkindled fyre shall cõsume him/and loke what remayneth in his house/it shalbe destroyed. The heauen shal declare his wyckednesse/and the earthe shal take parte against him. The substaunce that he hath in his house shalbe taken awaye/and perysshe in the daye of ý Lordes wrath. † This is the porcyon that the wycked shall haue of God/and the heritage that he maye loke for of the Lorde. xxviij.b

The. XXI. Chapter.

A NOw Job aunswered/and sayde: O heare my wordes/& amende your selfes. Suffre me a litle/that I maye speake also/and then laugh my woordes to scorne/yf ye wyl. Is it with a man that I make this disputacion? Which if it were so/shoulde not my spirete be then in sore trouble? Marcke me wel/be abashed/and laye your hande vpon your mouth. They spende their dayes in welthynesse: But sodenly they go doune to hell. They saye vnto God: go from vs/we desyre not the knowlege of thy wayes. What maner of felowe is the Almyghtye/that we shoulde serue hym: What profyte shoulde we haue to submitte oure selfes vnto hym: Lo/there is vtterly no goodnesse in them/therfore wyll not I haue to do wyth the counsail of ý vngodly. † How oft shal the candle of the wycked be put out: how oft commeth theyr destruccyon vpon them: O what sorowe shal God geue them for their parte in his wrath: † Yee/they shall be euen as chaffe before the wynde/and as duste that the storme carieth awaye. If any such cōplayne / no man geueth aunswere / and that because of the wickednesse of proude tyrauntes. But if a man call vpō God / doeth not he heare him? Doeth not the almyghty accept his crye? Whan thou speakest then / shoulde not he pardon the / if thou open thy selfe before him / and put thy trust in him? Then vseth he no violence in his wrath / neyther hath he pleasure in curious and depe inquisicions. Therefore hath Job opened his
C mouth but in vayn / and folishly hath he made so many wordes.

The. XXXVI Chapter.

A ELiu proceded forth in his talkyng / & sayd: holde the styll a lytle / and I shal shewe the what I haue yet to speake on Gods behalfe. I wyll open vnto the yet more of myne vnderstandyng / and proue my maker righteous. Trewe are my wordes / & no lye: & the knowlege where withall I argue agaynst the / is perfect. Beholde / God casteth not awaye the mighty / for he himselfe is myghty in power and wysdome.

As for the vngodly / he preserueth them not /
Psal. xxxj. b but helpeth the poore to theyr right. † He turneth not his eyes away from the righteous: † Setteth vp kinges in theyr trone / and confyrmeth them / so that they alwaye syt therein. ij. Re. v. iij. Re. j. But if they be layed in pryson and chaynes / or ij. Pa. xxj. bounde with the bondes of powerte: then sheweth he them theyr workes and dedes / and the synnes wherewith they haue vsed cruell violence.

He with punyshyng & nurturynge of the / B rowneth them in the eares / warneth them to leaue of from their wickednesse / & to amende. † If they now wyl take hede & be obedient / they Esa. i. c shal weare out their dayes in prosperite / and their yeares in pleasure and ioye. But if they wil not obeye / they shall go thorow ỹ swearde / and perysh or euer they be aware. As for such as be fayned / dissemblers and Ypocrytes / they heape vp wrath for them selfes: for they cal not vpō him / though they be his prysoners. Thus their soule perisheth in folishnes / and their life with the condempned. The poore deliuereth he out of his straytnesse / and comforteth suche as be in necessite and trouble. Euen so shall he kepe the (if thou wylt be content) from the bottomlesse pytte that is beneth: and if thou wilt holde the quiet / he shall fyll thy table with plenteousnes.

Neuertheless / thou hast condempned the C iudgmēt of the vngodly / yee / euen suche a iudgement and sentēce shalt thou suffre. For then shal not thy cause be stylled with cruelte / nor pacified with many giftes. Hath God ordeined then / that the gloryous lyse of the / and all such mighty men should not be put doun? Prolong not thou the time / tyll there come a nyght for the / to set other people in thy steade. But beware ỹ thou turne not asyde to wickednesse and synne / which hytherto thou hast chosen more then mekenesse. Beholde / God is of a myghty hye power: Where is there such a gyde and law geuer as he? Who wil reproue him of his way? who wil say vnto him thou hast done wronge?

O consider how great and excellent his D workes be / whome all men cōmende & praise: yee / they wonder at him / and yet they se hym but afarre of. Behold / so great is God / that he passeth oure knowlege / neyther are we able to Deut. ỹ. & xxxiij. come to the experience of his yeares. † He turneth the water to small droppes / he dryueth his cloudes together for to rayne / so that they poure poure doune / and droppe vpon men. He can spreade out the cloudes / (& coueryng of his tabernacle) and cause his light to shyne vpon them / and to couer the bottom of the see. By these thinges gouerneth he his people / and geueth them aboundaūce of meat / in the turnynge of a hande he hydeth the lyght / and at his commaundement it cōmeth agayne. The risyng vp thereof sheweth he to his frendes and to the cattell.

The. XXXVII. Chapter.

A AT this my herte is astonied / and moued out of his place. Heare then the sounde of his voyce / and the noyse that goeth out at his mouth. He gouerneth euery thing vnder the heauen / and his lyght reacheth vnto the ende of the world. A roaringe voyce foloweth him: for his glorious maiesty geueth such a thondre klap / that (though a man heare it) yet may he not perceaue it afterward. It geueth an horrible soūde / whan God sendeth out his voyce: great thinges doeth he / whiche we can not Aquiij b comprehende. † Whan he commaundeth the snow / it falleth vpon the earth: As sone as he geneth the rayne a charge / Immediatly the shoures haue theyr strength and fal doune. He sendeth feare vpon euery mā / that they might know theyr owne workes. The beastes crepe into theyr dennes / and take theyr rest. Out of the South cōmeth the tempest / and colde out of the North.

B At the breth of God the frost cōmeth / & the waters are shed abroade. The cloudes do their labour in geuyng moystnes / ỹ cloudes poure doune theyr rayne. He distributeth also on euery syde / according as it pleaseth him to deale out his workes / that they maye do whatsoeuer he cōmaundeth them / thorowe the whole worlde: whether it be to punysh any lande / or to do good vnto them that seke him.

Herken vnto this (O Job) stande styl / and considre the wonderous workes of God. Art thou of counsayll with God / whan he doeth these thinges? Whan he causeth the light to come forth of his cloudes? Art thou of his counsayll whā he spredeth out ỹ cloudes? Hast thou the perfect knowlege of his wonders? & how thy clothes are warme / whan the lande is styll thorow the South wynde? hast thou helped him to spreade out the heauen / which is to loke vpon / as it were caste of cleare metall? C Teach vs what shall we saye vnto him / for we are vnnete because of darkenesse. Shall it be told him what I say? Shoulde a man speake / or should he kepe it backe? For euery mā seyth not the light / tyat he kepeth cleare in the cloudes / which he clenseth / whā he maketh ỹ wind to blowe. Golde is brought out of the North / but the praise and honour of Gods feare commeth from God hym self. It is not we that cā fynde out the Almighty: for in power / equitie and righteousnesse / he is hyer than can be expressed. Seinge then that euery body feareth hym: why shoulde not all wyse men also stāde in feare of hym.

Vnto whome I haue geuen the wylderneſſe to be they? house / and the vntylled lande to be they? dwelling place / that they may geue no force for the multitude of people in the cytes / neyther to regarde the cryenge of the dryuer: but to seke they? pasture about the mountaynes/ and to folowe vpō the grene grasse. Wil the Vnicorne be so tame as to do B seruyce/ or to abyde styll by thy crybbe? Canste thou bynde the yocke about him in thy sorowes/ to make him plowe after the in the valleys? Maist thou trust him / (because he is strong) or cōmyt thy labour vnto him? maist thou beleue him/ that he wyll bringe home thy corne / or to cary any thing vnto thy barne? So harde is he vnto his yongeones / as though they were not his / and laboureth in vayne without any feare. And that because God hath taken wysdome frō him / and hath not geuen him vnderstanding. Whan his time is/ he flyeth vp on hye/ and careth neither for horse nor man.

The. XL. Chapter.

A Than spake the Lord vnto Job oute of Job. xxxviij. a the storme/ and saide: †Girde vp thy loynes like a man/ and tel me the thinge that I wil aske the. Wilt thou disanul my iudgemēt? Or wilt thou condempne me / that thou thy selfe maiest be made righteous? Is thine arme then like the arme of God? Maketh thy voice suche a sounde as his doeth? Then arme thy selfe with thine owne power/ vp/ decke the in thy ioly aray/ poure out the indignaciō of thy wrath: se that thou caste doune al the proude/ loke wel that thou make all such as be stubburne to obey: treade all ỹ vngodly vnder thy fete/ caste thē doune in to the mire/ and couer their faces with darkenesse: Then wyl I confesse also / that thine owne righte hande hath saued the.

B Beholde/ the cruel beaste (whome I made with the) which eateth haye as an oxe: lo/ how stronge he is in his loynes/ and what power he hath in the nauell of his body. He spredeth out his tayle like a Cedre tree/ all his vaynes are stuffe. His shynnes are like pypes of brasse his rygge bones are like staues of yron. First whan God made him/ he ordeyned the wylderneſſe for him/ that the mountaines should geue him grasse/ where all the beastes of the felde take their pastime. He lyeth amonge the redes in the mosses/ the fennes hide him with their shadowe/ and the willowes of the broke couer him rounde aboute. Lo/ without any labour might he drinke out the whole floude/ & suppe of Jordane without any trauaile. Who darre lay hand vpon him openly/ and vndertake to catch him? Wilt thou take thy pastime with him as wt a byrde / or geue him vnto thy maidens/ that thy cōpanions maye hewe him in pecces/ to be parted amonge the marchaunt men? Canst thou fyll the net with his skinne/ or the fish pannier with his head? Darrest thou lay hande vpon him? gaine? All thinges vnder heauen are myne. I feare him not/ whether he threaten / or speake fayre. Who lifteth him vp / and stripeth hym out of his clothes / or who taketh him by the bit of his bridle? Who openeth the dore of his face? for he hath horrible teethe rounde about. His body is couered with scales as it were with shildes/ lockte in/ kept/ wel cōpacte together. One is so ioyned to another/ that no ayre can come in: Yee/ one hangeth so vpon another/ and sticke so together/ that they can not be sundered. His nesing is like a glisteringe fyre/ and his eyes like the morning shine. Out of his mouth go torches and fyre brandes/ out of his nosethrels there goeth a smoke/ like as B out of an hote seetinge pot. His breth maketh the coales burne/ the flame goeth oute of his mouthe. In his necke remayneth stręghte/and before his face sorowe is turned to gladnesse. The mẽbres of his body are ioyned so straite one to another / & cleue so fast together/that he can not be moued.

His herte is as harde as a stone/ & as fast as the stithye that the hãmerman smiteth vpon. Whan he goeth/ the mightiest of all are afrayed / and the wawes heavy: if he drawe out the swearde/ there may neyther speare nor brest plate abyde him. He setteth as much by a strawe as by yron/and as much by a rottẽ stock as by metall. He starteth not awaye for him that bendeth the bowe/and as for slingestones/he careth as much for stuble as for thẽ. He counteth the hãmer no better thẽ a straw/ he laugheth him to scorne that shaketh the speare. He treadeth the gold in the myre like the sharpe potsherdes. He maketh the depe to seeth and boyle like a pot/and stereth the see together like an oyntment: the waye is lighte after him/the depe is his walking place. Upõ earth is there no power like vnto his/for he is so made that he feareth not. If a man wil considre al hye thinges/this same is a kinge ouer al the children of pride.

The. XLII. Chapter.

THen Job aunswered the Lorde/ and saide: †I knowe that thou hast power of all thinges/and that there is no thought hyd vnto the. For who can kepe his owne counsail so secrete/but it shal be knowen? The first Chapter.

MY sonne/heare thy fathers doctryne/ and forsake not ỹ lawe of thy mother: for that shal bryng grace vnto thy heade/ and shalbe a cheyne aboute thy necke. A

†My sonne/consente not vnto synners/yf they entyse the/ & saye: come with vs/let vs laye wayte for bloud/ & lurke priuely for the innocente wythout a cause: let vs swalowe them vp lyke the hell/ †let vs Esa.xxix.b psa.cxxiij.a deuoure them quicke and whole/as those that go doun in to the pyt. So shall we fynde all maner of costly ryches/ and fyl our houses with spoyles. Caste in thy lot amonge vs/ we shall haue all one purse.

My sonne/walke not thou with them/ refrayn thy foote from theyr wayes. †For theyr Esa.lix.a fete runne to euell/ and are haistye to shed Pro.vj.b bloude. But in vayne is the net layed forth Psal.xxiij.a before the byrdes eyes. Yee/ they them selfes B laye wayte one for anothers bloud/and one of them wold slay another. These are the wayes of all suche as be couetous/that one wold rauisshe anothers lyfe.

†Wysdome crieth wythout/ and putteth Pro.viij.a forth her voyce in the stretes. She calleth before the congregacion in the open gates/ and sheweth her wordes thorow the cytie/saying: O ye children/ how longe will ye loue childishnesse: how longe will the scorners delite in scorninge/and the vnwyse be enemies vnto knowlege? O turne you vnto my correction: lo/ I wil expresse my minde vnto you/ and make you vnderstande my wordes.

Therfore shal I also laugh in your destruccion/and mocke you/whan the thinge that ye feare commeth vpon you: euen whan the thynge that ye be afraied of/falleth in sodenly lyke a storme/and youre misery like a tempest: yee/ whan trouble and heauynesse commeth vpon you. Then shall they call vpon me/but I will not heare/they shall seke me earlye/but they shall not fynde me. And that because they hated knowlege/ and receaued not the

The boke of the Preacher/ otherwyse called Ecclesiastes.

The fyrst Chapter.

A THese are the wordes of the Preacher the sonne of Dauid/ kinge of Ierusalem. All is but vanitye/ (sayeth the Preacher) all is but playne vanitie. For what els hath a mã of all the laboure that he taketh vnder the Sunne? One generacion passeth away/ another commeth/ but the earth abideth styll. The Sunne ariseth/ the Sunne goeth doune / and returneth to his place/ that he maye there ryse vp agayn. The winde goeth toward the South/ and fetcheth his compasse about vnto ẏ North/ and so turneth into himselfe again. † All flouds runne into the see / and yet the see is not fylled: for loke vnto what place the waters runne/ thence they come againe. All thinges are so harde/ that noman can expresse them. † The eye is not satisfyed with syght / the eare is not fylled with hearynge. * The thinge that B hath bene commeth to passe agayne: and the thinge that hath bene done/ is done agayne/ there is no new thinge vnder the Sunne. Is there any thing where of it maye be sayde: lo/ this is newe? For it was longe ago in the tymes that haue ben before vs. The thynge that is past/ is oute of remembraunce: Euen so the thinges that are for to come / shall nomore be thought vpon among them that come after. I my selfe the Preacher / beynge kynge of Israell and Ierusalem/ applyed my minde to seke oute and searche for the knowlege of al thinges that are done vnder heauen. Such trauayle and laboure hath God geuen vnto the chyldren of men / to exercise them selfes therein.

Thus I haue consydered all the thynges that come to passe vnder the Sunne/ and lo/ they are all but vanytie and vexacyon of mynde. The croked can not be made straight/ and the fautes can not be numbred. I comuned with myne owne herte/ sayinge: † lo/ I am come to a greate estate / and haue gotten more wysedome / then all they that haue ben before me in Ierusalem. Yee/ my hert had great experiẽce of wysedome & knowlege / for there vnto I applyed my mind: that I might knowe what were wysedome and vnderstandinge / what were erroure and foolyshnes. And I perceaued that this also was but a vexacyon of mynde: for where muche wysedome is / there is also greate trauayle and disquietnes: and the more knowlege a man hath/ the more is his care.

The. II. Chapter.

THen sayde I thus in my herte: Now go A to/ I wyll take myne ease and haue good dayes. But lo / that was vanytie also: in so muche that I sayde vnto laughter: thou arte madde/ and to myrthe: what doest thou?

So I thought in my herte/ to withdrawe my flesshe from wyne / to applye my mynde vnto wisedome/ and to comprehende foolishnesse vntill the tyme that (among al the thinges which are vnder the Sunne) I myghte se what were best for men to do / so longe as they liue vnder heauen.

tes and maydens / and had a greate housholde. As for cattell and shepe / I had more substaunce of them/ then all they that were before me in Ierusalem. I gathered syluer and golde together/ euen a treasure of kinges and landes.

I prouyded me syngers and women which B coulde playe on instrumentes / to make men myrth and pastime. I gat me drinkinge cuppes also and glasses. (Finally) I was greater and in more worshippe/ then al my predecessours in Ierusalem. For wisedome remayned with me: and loke whatsoeuer myne eyes desyred / I let them haue it: and wherin soeuer my herte delited or had any pleasure/ I with-helde it not from it. Thus my herte reioyced in all that I dyd/and this I toke for the porcyon of all my trauayle. But whan I consydered al ỹ workes ỹ my hãdes had wroughte/ and all the labours that I had taken therein: lo/al was but vanitie and vexacion of minde/ and nothynge of any value vnder the Sũne.

Then turned I me to consyder wysedom/errours and foolishnesse (for what is he amõge men/ that myght be compared to me ỹ kinge in suche workes?) and I sawe/that wysedome excelleth foolysh̃nesse/ as farre as lyght doeth darkenesse. For a wiseman beareth his eyes aboute in his heade/but the foule goeth in the darkenesse. I perceaued also that they both had one ende.

¶ Then thought I in my minde: If it happẽ vnto the foule as it doeth vnto me/ what nedeth me thẽ to labour any more for wisdom. So I confessed within my herte/that this also was but vanitie. For the wyse are euer as litle in remembraunce as the foolysh̃e/ and all the dayes for to come shalbe forgotten/yee/the wyseman dyeth as well as the foule. Thus beganne I to be weery of my life/in so muche that I coulde away with nothinge ỹ is done vnder the Sunne/for al was but vanitie and vexacion of mynde: yee/ I was weery of al my laboure/which I had taken vnder ỹ sõne/ Because I shoulde be fayn to leaue them vnto another man that commeth after me: for who knoweth/whether he shalbe a wyse man or a foule? And yet shall he be lorde of all my labours/which I ẽ such wisdome haue taken vnder the sonne. Is not this a vaine thinge?

So I turned me to refraine my minde frõ all suche trauaile/as I toke vnder the Sunne: for so muche as a man shoulde weery himself with wisdome/with vnderstanding and opportunitie/& yet be faine to leaue his labours vnto another/that neuer swet for them. This is also a vaine thinge and a great misery. For what getteth a man of al the labour and trauaile of his mynde/ that he taketh vnder the Sunne/but heauinesse/sorowe and disquietnesse al the daies of his life? In so muche that his herte cã not rest in the night. Is not this also a vaine thinge? Is it not better then for a man to eat and drinke/& his soule to be mery in his labour? Yee/ I saw that this also was a gyfte of God. † For who maie eate & drinke/ or bringe any thinge to passe without hym? And why? he geueth vnto man what it pleaseth him: whether it be wisedome/vnderstandinge/ or gladnesse. But vnto the synner he geueth weerines and sorow/that he may gather & heape together the thinge/ that afterwarde shalbe geuen vnto him whome it pleaseth God. This is now a vaine thinge/ yee/ a very vexquietnesse and vexacion of minde.

The. III. Chapter.

EVery thing hath a time/yee/al that is vnder the heauẽ/hath his cõuenient seãson. Job. xiiij. c

† There is a time to be borne/and a time to dye.

There is a time to plante/& a time to plucke vp the thinge that is planted.

A time to slay/and a time to make whole.

A tyme to breake doune/ and a tyme to builde vp.

A tyme to wepe/and a tyme to laugh.

A time to mourne/ and a tyme to daunce.

A time to cast awaye stones/and a tyme to gather stones together.

A time to enbrace/ and a time to refraine from enbracing.

A time to winne/and a time to lese.

A time to spare/and a time to spende.

A time to cut in peces/and a time to sowe together.

† A time to kepe silence/& a time to speake. Eccle. xx. c

A time to loue/and a time to hate.

A time of warre/and a time of peace.

What hath a mã els (ỹ doeth any thinge) But weerinesse & labour? For as touching the trauaile and carefulnesse whiche God hath geuen vnto men/ I se that he hath geuẽ it thẽ/ to be exercised in it. Al this hath he ordeyned marualous goodly/to euery thinge his due time. He had planted ignoraunce also in the hertes of men/that they shoulde not finde out ỹ grounde of his workes/whiche he doeth frõ the beginning to ỹ end. So I perceaued/that in these thinges there is nothinge better for a man/then to be mery and do well so longe as he liueth. For al that a man eateth and drinketh/yee/whatsoeuer a man enioyeth of al his labour/thesame is a gyfte of God. I consydered also that whatsoeuer God doeth/ it cõtinueth for euer/and that nothing can be put vnto vnto it/nor taken from it: and that God doeth it to ỹ intent/that men should feare him. † The thinge that hath ben/is now: and the thinge that is for to come/hath bene afore time/ for God restoreth again the thing that was past. Moreouer/I sawe vnder the Sũne/vngodlynesse in the steade of iudgemente/ and iniquite in steade of righteousnesse. Eccles. j. a

¶ Then thought I in my minde: God shall separate the righteous from the vngodly/and then shalbe the time and iudgment of al coũsails and workes. I communed with myne owne herte also/concerninge the children of men: how God hath chosen them/and yet letteth them appeare/as though they were beastes: for it happeneth vnto mẽ as it doeth vnto beastes/& as ỹ one dyeth/ so dyeth ỹ other: yee/they haue both one maner of breth/so ỹ (in this) a mã hath no preeminẽce aboue a beast/ but all are subdued vnto vanitie. They go all vnto one place/for as they be al of dust/so shal they al turne vnto dust againe.

Eccli. xij. b Cap. ij. a † Who knoweth the spriete of man ỹ goeth vpward/and the breth of the beast that goeth doune into the earth? Wherfore I perceaue/ that there is nothinge better for a man/ thẽ to be ioyfull in his laboure/for that is his porcyon. But who wyll bringe him to se the thinge that shal come after him?

The. IIII. Chapter.

A SO I turned me/ and considered all the † violent wronge that is done vnder the Sũne: and behold/ the teares of such as were oppressed/and there was no man to comforte them/or that wolde deliuer and defende them from the violẽce of their oppressours. Wherfore I iudged those that are dead to be more happy then suche as be aliue: yee/ him that is yet vnborne to be better at ease thẽ they both/ Because he seyth not ỹ myserable workes that are done vnder the Sunne. Again/ I sawe that al trauaile and diligence of laboure was hated of euery mã. This is also a vaine thing/ and a vexaciõ of minde. The foule foldeth his handes together/& eateth vp his own flesshe. One handful (sayeth he) is better with rest/ then both the handes full with laboure and trauayle. Moreouer/I turned me/ & beholde/ yet another vanitie vnder the Sunne. There is one mã nomore but himself alone/hauinge neither childe nor brother: yet is there no ende of his carefull trauayle/his eyes can not be satisfyed with riches/yet doeth he not remẽbre himselfe/(& saie:) For whome do I take sirche trauaile? For whose pleasure do I thus consume away my lyfe? This is also a vaine and miserable thinge. Therfore two are better thẽ one/for they maie wel enioye ỹ profyte of their laboure. If any of them fall/his companion helpeth him vp again: But wo is him that is alone/for if he fal/he hath not another to helpe him vp. Againe/ when two slepe together/ they are warme: but how cã a body be warme alone? One may be ouercome/ But two maye make resistaũce. A thre folde cable is not lightely broken. A poore childe beyng wise/is better then an olde kinge that doteth/ & can not beware in time to come. † Some one cõmeth out of pryson/and is made a kinge: & another *which is borne in the kingdom cõmeth vnto pouerte. And I perceaued/that al men lyuinge vnder the Sunne/ go with the seconde childe/ ỹ cõmeth vp in the steade of the other. As for the people that haue bene before him/& that come after him/they are innumerable: yet is not their ioye the greater thorowe him. This is also a vaine thinge and a vexacion of minde. Whan thou cõmest into ỹ house of God/kepe thy fote/& drawe nye that thou maist heare: that is better thẽ ỹ offeringes of foules/for they know not what euel they do. Gene. xlij. b j. Re. xvj. c iij. Re. xij. c *ij. p. xxxvi. the iiij. Re. xxvi. Eccles. v. a

The. V. Chapter.

BE not haistye with thy mouth/& let not thine herte speake any thinge rashly before God. For God is in heauen/ and thou vpon earth/therfore let thy wordes be fewe. For where muche carefulnes is/there are many dreames: and where many woordes are/ there men may heare foules. † If thou make a vowe vnto God/be not slacke to performe it. As for fooly she vowes/ he hath no pleasure in them. If thou promise any thinge/ paie it: for better it is that thou make no vowe/ then that thou shouldest promise/and not pay. Vse not thy mouth to cause thy flesh for to synne/ that thou saie not before ỹ aungel: It was my foolishnesse is in the faulte. A Deu. xxiij. d Baruc. vj. c

For thẽ God wil be angrye at thy voice/ & destroye al the workes of thine handes. Pagninus legit: Et ne dicas ante angelum quod error sit votum.

And why? where as are many dreames & many many wordes/there are also diuerse vanities:

Eccl.iiij.a But loke that thou feare God. † If thou seyst the poore to be oppressed and wrongeously dealte withal/so that equite and the righte of the lawe is wasted in the lande:marualy not thou at such iudgement/for one great man kepeth touch with another/& the mightye helpe them selfes together. The whole lande also wt the feldes and al that is therin/is in subiection and bondage vnto the kinge.

B He that loueth money wyl neuer be satisfyed with money:& who so delyteth in riches/ shal haue no profyte therof. Is not this also a vayne thinge? Where as many ryches are/ there are many also that spende them awaye. And what pleasure more hath he that possesseth thē/ sauynge that he maye loke vpon thē with his eyes? A labouringe mā slepeth swetely/whether it be litle or much that he eateth/
Job.xx.c † but the aboundaunce of the rich wil not suffre him to slepe.

Yet is there a sore plague/which I haue sene vnder the Sunne (namely) ryches kept to the hurte of him that hath them in possession.
Job.j.c † For oft times they perish with his greate misery and trouble: and if he haue a childe/it getteth nothinge. Lyke as he came naked out of his mothers wombe/ so goeth he thyther againe/and carieth nothing awaie with him
C of all his laboure. This is a miserable plague/ that he shal go awaye euen as he came. What helpeth it him then/that he hath laboured in the winde? All the dayes of his lyfe also must he eate in the darcke/ with great carefulnesse/ sikenesses and sorowe.

Eccls.ij.d † Therfore me thinketh it a better and a fairer thinge a man to eate & drynke/ and to be refreshed of all his labour/ yͤ he taketh vnder yͤ Sunne al the dayes of his life which God geueth him: for this is his porcion. For vnto whome soeuer God geueth riches/ goodes & power/he geueth it him to enioye it/to take it for his porcyō/& to be refreshed of his labour: this is now yͤ gyfte of God. For he thynketh not much how longe he shal lyue/for so much as God fylleth his herte with gladnesse.

The. VI. Chapter.

A There is yet a plague vnder the Sūne/& it is a general thinge amonge men: whan God geueth a man ryches/goodes & honour so yͤ he wanteth nothinge of al that his herte can desyre: & yet God geueth him not leue to enioye thesame/but another mā spendeth thē. This is a vaine thinge & a miserable plague. If a mā beget an hundreth childrē & liue many yeares/so yͤ his dayes are many in numbre & yet can not enioye his good/neither be buried: as for him I saie/that an vntymely birth is better then he. For he commeth to naught/ and goeth his waie into darckenesse/and his name is forgotten. Moreouer/he seith not the Sunne/and knoweth of no rest/ neither here nor there: Yee/though he liued two thousand yeares/yet hath he no good life. Come not all to one place? All the labour that a man taketh B is for himselfe/and yet his desyre is neuer fylled after his minde. For what hath the wyse more thē the foul? What helpeth it the poore/ that he knoweth to walke before the liuinge? The sighte of the eyes is better/ then that the soule should so departe away. Howbeit/ this is also a vain thing/& a disquietnes of minde. What is more excellent then man? yet can he not in the lawe get the victory of him that is mightier thē he: A vaine thinge is it to caste out many wordes: but what hath a man els?

The. VII. Chapter.

A For who knoweth what is good for man in lyuinge/in the dayes of his vayne lyfe/ which is but a shadowe? Or who wyll tell a man/what shal happen after him vnder the Sunne. † A good name is more worth then a Pro.xxij.a precious oyntment/and the daye of death is Cant.j.a better then the daie of byrth.

It is better to go into an house of mourninge/then in to a bancket house. For there is the ende of all men/and he that is liuinge/ taketh it to herte. It is better to be sory then to laugh/for whan the countenaunce is heauy/ the herte is ioyfull. The herte of the wise is in the mourninge house/but the hert of the foolishe is in the house of mirth. † It is better to Pro.xxvij.c geue eare to the chastesninge of a wyse mā/thē to heare yͤ songe of foules. For the laughinge of foules is like yͤ cracking of thornes burning vnder a pot. And that is but a vaine thinge.

B Who so doeth wronge/maketh a wise mā to go out of his wytte/and destroyeth a gētle herte. The ende of a thinge is better then the beginning. The pacient of spryte is better thē the hye minded. Be not haistely angrie in thy minde/for wrath resteth in the bosome of a foule. Saye not thou: What is the cause that the dayes of the olde time were better/then they that be now? for that were no wyse question. Wysedome is better then ryches/ yee/ much more worth then the eye sighte. For wisedome defendeth as well as money/and the excellent knowlege and wisedome geueth life vnto him that hath it in possession. Consydre the worke of God/how that no mā can make thinge straight/ whiche he maketh crocked. Vse well the time of prosperite/and remembre the tyme of myssfortune: for God maketh the one by the other/so that a man canne fynde nothinge els.

C These two thinges also haue I consydred in the time of vanitie: that the iust man perisheth for his righteousnes sake/and the vngodly liueth in his wickednesse. Ro.ij.c † Therfore be neyther to righteous nor ouerwyse/that thou perishe not: be neyther to vnrighteous also nor to foolish/lest/thou dye before the time. It is good for the to take hold of this/and not to let that go out of thy hande. For he that feareth God/shal escape them al.

ij.Reg.xx.c † Wysedom geueth more courage vnto the *Eccl.viij.a wyse/then ten mightie men of the cytie: * for ij.Par.vj.f there is not one iuste vpon earth/that doeth
Luc.xvij.a good and sinneth not. Take not hede vnto euery worde that is spoken/lest/ thou heare thy seruaunt curse the: for thine owne herte knoweth/that thou thy selfe also haste oft times spoken euel by other men. All these thinges Job.xxviij.b haue I proueth because of wysedome: † for I thought to be wyse/but she wente farther from me then she was before: yee/and so depe that
D I mighte not reache vnto her. I applyed my mynde also vnto knowlege/and to seke out science/wysedome and vnderstanding: to know the fooly shnesse of the vngodlye/ and the croure of dotinge foules. Dto.viij.c † And I found/that a woman is bitterer then death: for she is a very angle/her herte is a net/ and her handes are chaynes. Whoso pleaseth God shal escape from her/but the synner wil be take with her.

Beholde/(sayeth the preacher) this haue I diligently searched out and proued/ that I mighte come by knowlege: which as yet I seke and finde it not. Among a thousand men I haue founde one/ but not one woman amonge al. Lo/ this only haue I founde/ † that Gen.j.d God made man iust and right/But they seke diuerse sottyltics/where as noman hath wysedom and vnderstandinge/to geue aunswer therevnto.

The. VIII. Chapter.

Wysedome † maketh a mans face to shine/ A but malyce putteth it oute of fauoure. Pro.xvij.d Kepe the kinges commaundement I warne the & the ooth that thou haste made to God. Be not haistie to go out of his syghte/ and se thou continue in no euell thinge: for whatsoeuer it pleaseth him/ that doeth he. Like as when a kinge geueth a charge/his commaundement is mightie: Euen so/ † who may saye Job.ix.b vnto him: what doest thou? * Who so kepeth *Le.xviij.a the commaundement/shal fele no harme: but a wise mans herte discerneth time and maner: for euery thinge wyl haue opportunite & iudgement/and this is the thinge that maketh men full of carefulnes and sorowe. And why? a mā knoweth not what is for to come. For who wyl tel it him? Neyther is there any man that hath power ouer the spryte/ to kepe still the spryte/ nor to haue any power in the time of death: It is not he also that can make an ende of the battayl/ neyther may vngodlines deliuer him that medleth withal.

All these thinges haue I considereth/ and B applyed my minde vnto euery worke that is vnder the Sunne: howe one man hath lordshippe vpon another to his owne harme. For † I haue oft sene yͤ vngodly brought to their Psa.xxxvj.c graues/ and fallen doune from the hye and glorious place: in so much that they were forgotten in the cytie/where they were had in so hye and great reputacion. This is also a vain thinge. Because now that euel workes are not haistly punished/the herte of man geueth himselfe ouer vnto wickednesse. But though an euel persone offende an hundreth times/ & haue a longe lyfe: yet am I sure/that it shal go well with them that feare God/ Because they haue hym before their eies. Againe/ as for the vngodly/it shal not be wel with him/neyther shal he prolonge his dayes: but euen as a shadowe/so shal he be that feareth not God.

Yet is there a vanytie vpon earth? There be C iust mē/vnto whom it happeneth/as though they they had the workes of the vngodly: Againe there be vngodlye / with whome it goeth as though they had the workes of the righteous. This me thinke also a vaine thinge. Therfore I cõmẽde gladnes/because a mã hath no better thing vnder the Sũne/thẽ to eat & drincke & to be mery: for that shall he haue of his labour al ỹ dayes of his life/which God geueth him vnder the Sunne. When I applied my minde to learne wisdome/and to knowe the trauayle that is in ỹ worlde (and that of suche a fashion/that I suffred not mine eyes to slepe neither daye nor night) I vnderstode of al the workes of God/that it is not possible for a mã to attayne vnto the workes ỹ are done vnder the Sũne: and though he bestow his laboure to seke thẽ out/yet can he not reach vnto thẽ: yee/though a wyse man wolde vndertake to knowe thẽ/yet myghte he not fynde them.

The.IX.Chapter.

A FOr all these thynges purposed I in my minde to seke out. The righteous & wyse: yee/and their workes also are in the hande of God & there is noman that knoweth either the loue or hate of ỹ thinge ỹ he hath before him.

Job.ix.c It happeneth vnto one as vnto another: † It goeth with the righteous as with the vngodly: with the good and cleane as with the vncleane: with him that offereth as with him that offereth not: like as it goeth with the vertreous / so goeth it also with the synner: As it happeneth vnto the periured/so happeneth it also vnto him that is afrayed to be forsworne. Amonge al thinges that come to passe vnder the Sũne/this is a mysery/that it happeneth vnto al alike. This is the cause also that the hertes of men are full of wickednesse / and madde foolishnes is in their hertes as longe as they lyue/vntyl they dye.

B And why? As longe as a man lyueth / he is carelesse: for a quicke dogge (say they) is better then a dead Lion: for they that be lyuinge/ knowe that they shall dye: But they that be dead/know nothynge / neyther deserue they any more. For their memoriall is forgotten/so that they be neyther loued/hated nor enuyed: neither haue they any more parte in ỹ worlde in all that is done vnder the Sũne. Go thou thy waye then/ eate thy breade with ioye/and drynke thy wyne with gladnes/for thy workes please God. Let thy garmentes be alwaie white/ and let thy heade wante no ointmẽt. Matt.vi.c
*Vse thyselfe to lyue ioyfully with thy wyfe whome thou loueste / all the dayes of thy lyfe (which is but vaine) that God hath geuen the Sunne/al ỹ dayes of thy vanitie: for that is thy porcion in this life / of all laboure and trauayle that thou takest vnder the Sunne. Whatsoeuer thou takest in hande to do / that do with all thy power: for amonge the dead (where as thou goest vnto) there is neyther worke/counsail/knowlege/nor wisedom.

So I turned me vnto other thynges vnder the Sunne/and I sawe/ that in running it helpeth not to be swyfte: in battayll it helpeth not to be stronge: to fedynge / it helpeth not to be wyse: to riches / it helpeth not to be subtil: to be had in fauoure/it helpeth not to be cunninge: but that all lieth in time & fortune.

C This wisedome haue I sene also vnder the Sunne/& me thought it a great thing. There was a lytle citie/ and a few men within it: so there came a great kinge & besieged it/ & made great bulwarkes against it. And in the citye there was founde a poore man/ (But he was wise) which with his wisdom deliuered the citie: yet was there no body that had any respecte vnto such a simple man. Then saide I: † wisdome is better then strengthe. Neuertheles/ *a simple mans wisdom is despysed/ and his wordes are not herde. A wise mans counsail that is followed in silence / is farre aboue the crieng of a captaine amonge foules. For † wisdom is better then harnesse: but one vnthrift alone destroyeth much good. Sap.vi.a *ith.R.xxi

The.X.Chapter.

SEade flyes that corruppe swete ointmẽt and make it to stincke / are somthinge more worth then the wisdom and honour of a foule. A wise mãs hert is vpõ the righthãd/ but a foules herte is vpon the left. A dotinge foule thinketh that euery man doeth as foolishly as he him selfe. † If a principal spirete be geuen the to beare rule / be not negligent thẽ in thine office: for so shal great wickednesse be putte doune/as it were with a medicine. Another plague is there which I haue sene vnder the Sunne/namely the ignorauncy that is cõmonly amonge princes: in that a foule sitteth in greate dignitie/ and the riche are set doune beneth: I se seruauntes ryde vpõ horses/and princes goynge vpon their fete as it were seruauntes. † But he that dygged vp a pitte/shal fal therin himselfe: and who so breaketh doune the hedge/a serpent shal bite him. Who so remoueth stones/shall haue trauayll withal: and he that heweth wood/shalbe hurt therwith. Rom.xij.c Eccl.xxviic

B When an yron is blont/ and the poynt not sharpened/it must be whetted again/and that with might: Euen so doeth wisedome folowe diligence. A babler of his tunge is no better/ then a serpent that stingeth without hissyng. The wordes out of a wyse mans mouth are gracious / but the lyppes of a foule wyll destroye him selfe. The beginninge of his talkinge is foolishnesse/and the last worde of his mouth is greate madnesse. A foule is so full of wordes/that a man can not tell what ende he wil make: who wil thẽ warne him to make a conclusion? The laboure of the foolishe is greuous vnto them / while they knowe not how to go into the citie.

C Wo be vnto the (O thou realme & lande) whose kynge is but a childe/ and whose princes are early at their banekettes. But well is the/(O thou realme and lande) whose kinge is come of noblenesse/ & whose princes eate in due season/for strenght and not for lust. Thorowe slouthfulnesse the balkes fall doune / & thorowe ydle handes it raineth in at ỹ house. Psal.ciij.b Meate maketh men to laugh / and † wyne maketh them mery: But vnto money are all thinges obedient. Wyshe the kinge no euel in thy thought/ and speake no hurte of the ryche in thy preuy chaumbre: for a byrde of the ayre shall betraye thy voice / and with her fethers shal she bewraye thy wordes.

The.XI.Chapter.

A SEnde thy vitailes ouer the waters / & ỹ shalt thou fynde them after many yeares. Geue it awaie amonge seuen or eyght/for thou knowest not what miserie shal come vpon earth. When the cloudes are full/ they poure out raine vpon the earth. And whan ỹ tree falleth/(whether it be toward the South or North) in what place soeuer it fall / there it lieth. He that regardeth the winde / shall not sowe: & he that hath respecte vnto the cloudes shal not reape. Now like as thou knowest not the waye of the winde/nor how the bones are fylled in a mothers wombe: Euen so thou knowest not the workes of God/which is the workemaster of all.

Ceasse not thou therfore with thy handes B to sowe thy sede / whether it be in the morninge or in the euenynge: for thou knowest not whether this or that shal prospere / and if they both take/it is the better. The lyghte is swete/and a pleasaunt thinge is it for the eies to loke vpon the Sunne. If a man lyse many yeares/& be glad in them all / let him remẽbre the dayes of darkenesse/which shalbe many: and whan they come / al thynges shalbe but vanitie. Be glad then (O thou yonge man) in thy youth/ and let thyne herte be mery in thy yonge dayes: folowe the wayes of thyne owne herte/and the lust of thine eyes: but be thou sure/that God shal bringe the into iudgement for al these thinges.

The.XII.Chapter.

PVt awaie displeasure out of thy herte / & remoue euel from thy body: for childhode and youth is but vanitie. Remembre thy maker in thy youth/or euer the dayes of aduersite come/and eare the yeares draw nye/whẽ thou shalt saye: I haue no pleasure in them: before the Sunne/ỹ lighte/the Moone & the starres be darckened/and or the cloudes turne again after the rayne: when the kepers of the house shall tremble/and when the stronge men shal bowe them selfes: when the Myllers stande styll / because they be so fewe / and when the sighte of the windowes shall waxe dymme: whan the doores in the stretes shalbe shut/ and whan the voyce of the Miller shall be layed doune: whan men shal ryse vp at the voice of the birde/and whan al the doughters of musike shalbe brought low: whan men shal feare in hye places / and be afraied in the stretes: B whan the Almonde tree shalbe despised / the gresshopper borne out/& whan great pouerte shal breake in: when man goeth to his longe home/& the mourners go aboute the stretes. The. II. Chapter. ✠

I Am the floure of the felde/ and lilie of the A valleyes: as the rose among the thornes: so is my loue amonge the doughters.

Lyke as the appletree amonge the trees of the wood/ so is my beloued amonge the sonnes. My delyte is to syt vnder his shadowe/ for his frute is swete vnto my throte. He bringeth me into his wyne celler/ and loueth me specially well. Refreshe me with grapes/ cõforte me with apples/ for I am sycke of loue. Cant.viij.a † His lefte hande lyeth vnder my heade/ and his

his right hande enbraceth me.

B I charge you (O ye doughters of Jerusalem) by the Roes and hindes of the felde/ that ye wake not vp my loue nor touch her/ tyll she be content her selfe.

Me thinke I heare the voyce of my beloued: lo/ there commeth he hoppynge vpon the mountaines: and leapynge ouer the lytle hilles. My beloued is like a Roo or a yonge hert. Beholde/ he standeth behinde our wall/ he loketh in at ỹ window/ & pepeth thorow ỹ gate.

My beloued aunswered and sayd vnto me: O stande vp my loue/ my doue/ my bewtyfull/ and come: for lo/ the winter is now past/ raine is away and gone. The floures are come vp in the felde/ the twistyng time is come/ ỹ voyce of the turtle doue is herde in oure lande. The sygge tree bringeth forth her sygges/ the wynes beare blossoms/ and haue a good smell.

C O stande vp my loue/ my bewtyfull/ and come (my doue) out of the caues of the rockes/ out of the holes of the walle: O let me se thy countenaunce & heare thy voyce/ for swete is thy voyce and fayre is thy face. ✠ Get vs the foxes/ yee/ the lytle foxes that hurt the vynes/ for oure vynes beare blossoms.

nt.vj.a † My loue is myne/ and I am his/ (which fedeth amonge the lylies) vntill ỹ daye breake/ and tyll the shadowes be gone. Come agayne priuely (O my beloued) lyke as a Roo or a yonge harte vnto the mountaines.

The III. Chapter.

A By nyght in my bedde/ I soughte hym whome my soule loueth: yee/ diligently soughte I hym/ but I founde hym not. I wyll get vp/ (thought I) & go aboute the cytie: vpon the market/ and in all the stretes wyll I seke hym whome my soule loueth/ but whã I sought him/ I founde hym not. The watchmen that go aboute the citie/ founde me. Saw ye not hym/ whome my soule loueth?

So whan I was a litle past them/ I foũde hym whome my soule loueth. I haue gotten holde vpon hym/ and wyll not let hym go/ vntyll I bringe hym in to my mothers house/ and in to her chaumbre that bare me.

nt.vj.b † I charge you (O ye doughters of Jerusalem) by the Roes and hyndes of the felde/ that ye wake not vp my loue nor touche her/ tyll she be content her selfe.

Who is this/ that commeth out of the wil- B

Beholde/ aboute Salomõs bedsteade there stande. ix. valeaunt men of the myghty in Israel. They holde swerdes euery one/ and are expert in warre. Euery man hath his sweard vpon his thee/ because of feare in the night.

Kinge Salomon hath made himselfe a bedsteade of the wood of Libanus/ the pillers are of syluer/ the coucryng of golde/ the seate of purple/ the grounde pleasauntly paued for the doughters of Jerusalem.

Go forth (O ye doughters of Sion) & be- holde kinge Salomõ in the croune/ wherwith his mother crouned him in the day of his mariage/ & in the daye of ỹ gladnesse of his herte.

Thou hast woũded my hert (O my sister/ my spouse) thou hast woũded my hert/ with one of thyne eyes/ & with one cheyne of thy necke. O howe fayre and loucly are thy brestes/ my syster/ my spouse? Thy brestes are more pleasaunt then wyne/ and the smell of thy oyntmẽtes passeth all spyces. Thy lyppes (O my spouse) droppe as the honycombe/yee/ mylke and hony is vnder thy tunge/ and the smell of thy garmentes is lyke the smell of frankencence.

C Thou art a well kepte garden (O my syster/ my spouse) thou arte a wel kepte water spring/ a sealed welle. The frutes that sprout in the/ are lyke a very Paradyse of Pomgranates with swete frutes: as Cypresse/Nardus/ Saffron/ Calmus/ and all the trees of Libanus: Myrre/Aloes/and al the best spyces. Thou art a welle of gardens/ a welle of liuinge waters/ which runne doune from Libanus. Vp thou North winde/ come thou Southwinde/ and blowe vpon my garden/ that the smell therof maye be caried out on euery syde: Yee/that my beloued maye come in to my garden/ and eate of the frutes and appels that growe therein.

The. V. Chapter.

A COme in to my garden O my syster/ my spouse: I haue gathered my myrre with my spyce. I wyll eate my hony and my honycombe/ I wyl drinke my wyne and my mylke/ eat (o ye fredes) drinke & be mery/ o ye beloued.

As I was a slepe/and my hert wakinge/ I herde the voyce of my beloued/whan he knocked. Open to me (sayd he) O my sister/ my loue/ my doue/ my dearlinge: for my heade is ful of dew/ and the lockes of my heere are full of the nyght droppes.

B I haue put of my cote/how can I do it on agayne? I haue washed my fete/ how shall I fyle them agayne? But whan my loue put in his hande at the hole/ my hert was moued towarde hym: so that I stode vp to open vnto my beloued. My handes dropped rb Myrre/ & the Myrre ranne doune my fingers vpon ỹ locke. Neuertheles/whan I had opened to my beloued/ he was departed/ & gone his waye.

Now lyke as afore tyme whan he spake/ my hert coulde not longer refrayne: Euen so now I sought him/but I coulde not fynde him. I C cried vpon him/ neuertheless/ he gaue me no aunswere. So the watchmē ỹ wente about the citye/ founde me/ smote me/ & wouded me: Yee/ they that kepte the walles/ toke away my garment fro me. I charge you therfore (O ye doughters of Jerusalem) if ye fynde my beloued/ that ye tell him/ how ỹ I am sicke for loue.

Who is thy loue aboue other louers/ O thou fayrest amonge women? Or what can thy loue do more thē other louers/ that thou chargest vs so straytly?

As for my loue/ he is whyte and reade coloured/ a singuler persone amōge many thousandes: his heade is the moost fine golde/ the lockes of his heere are bushed/ broune as the eueninge: His eyes are as ỹ eyes of doues by D the water brokes/ washen with mylcke/ and remayninge in a plenteous place: His chekes are like a garden bedde/ wherin the Apothecaryes plante all maner of swete thinges: His lippes droppe as the floures of the moost principal Myrre/ his handes are full of golde ringes & precious stones. His body is as ỹ pure yuory/ decte ouer with Saphires. † His legges are as ỹ pillers of Marbel/ set vpon soketes of golde: His face is as Libanus/ & as the bewty of the Cedre trees: His throte is swete/ yee/ he is altogether louely. Such one is my loue (O ye doughters of Jerusalem) such one is my loue. Eccl. xxj

Whether is thy loue gone thē (O thou fayrest amonge women) whether is thy loue departed/ that we maye seke hym with the?

The VI. Chapter.

MY loue is gone doune in to his garden/ A vnto the swete smelling beddes/ that he may refresh him selfe in the garden/ & gather floures. My loue is myne & I am his/ which fedeth amonge the Lylyes.

Thou art pleasaūt (O my loue) euen as Iuelynesse it selfe/ thou art fayre as Jerusalem/ glorious as an armye of men with their banners (Turne awaye thine eyes fro me/ for they make me to proud). † Thy heery lockes are like Cant.iiij a flocke of goates vpon ỹ mount of Galaad. Thy teeth are lyke a flocke of shepe that be clipped/ which go out of the washing place: where euery one beareth two twynes/ & not one vnfrutefull amonge thē. Thy chekes are like a pece of a Pomgranate/ besydes ỹ which lyeth hyd within. † There are thre score quenes/ foure iij. Re. xj score cōcubines/ & yonge womē without nūbre. But one is my doue/ my dearling. She is B the onely beloued of her mother/ & deare vnto her ỹ bare her. Whan the doughters sawe her/ they sayd she was blessed. Yee/ the quenes and concubines prayse her. What is she this/ that pepeth out as ỹ morninge? fayre as ỹ Moone/ excellent as the Sunne/ glorious an armye of men with their banners?

I wente doune in to ỹ nutgardē/ to se what grewe by the brokes/ to loke if the vyneyarde florysshed/ and if the Pomgranates were shot forth. Then the charrettes of the prince of my people made me sodēly afraied. Turne againe/ turne againe (O thou Sulamite) turne againe/ turne againe/ ỹ we maye loke vpon the.

The VII. Chapter.

A WHat pleasure haue ye more in the Sulamite/ then when she daunceth amonge the men of warre? O how pleasaunt are thy treadinges with thy shues/ thou princes doughter? Thy thees are lyke a fayre iewell/ which is wrought by a cunninge workmayster: Thy nauell is lyke a rounde goblet/ which is neuer without drinke: Thy wōbe is like an heape of wheat/ set about with Lilies: Thy two brestes are like two twynes of yōge Roes: Thy necke is as it were a tower of yuory: Thine eyes are lyke the water poles in Hesebon/ beside the porte of Bathrabbim: Thy nose is lyke the tower of Libanus/ which loketh towarde Damascus: That heade that standeth vpon ỹ is lyke Carmel: The heere of thy heade is lyke the kynges purple folden vp in pleates.

B O how faire & loucly art thou (my dearling) in pleasures? Thy stature is lyke a Date tree/ & thy brestes lyke the grapes. I sayde: I wyll clymme vp in to the Date tree/ & take holde of his braunches. Thy brestes also shalbe as the vynegrapes/ the smel of thy nosthrels lyke the smell of apples/ & thy throte like the best wyne.

This shalbe pure and cleare for my loue/ his lippes & teeth shall haue their pleasure. There wyll I turne me vnto my loue/ & he shal turne him vnto me. O come on my loue/ let vs go forth in to the felde/ and take our lodinge in the villages. In the morninge wyll we ryse by times/ and go se the vyneyarde: if it be sprongе forth/ if the grapes be growen/ & if the Pomgranates be shot out. There wyll I geue the my brestes: There shall the Mādragoras geue their smell besyde our dores: There (O my loue) haue I kepte vnto the all maner of frutes/ both new and olde.

The. VIII. Chapter.

G That I myght fynde the without/ and A kysse the/ whome I loue as my brother/ which sucket my mothers brestes: & that thou woldest not be offended/ if I toke the/ & broughte the in to my mothers house: that thou mightest teache me/ & ỹ I might geue ỹ drinke of spyced wyne/ and of the swete sappe of my Pomgranates. † His lefte hande lyeth vnder Cant.ij. my heade/ and his right hande enbraceth me.

I charge you (O ye doughters of Jerusalem) that ye wake not vp my loue nor touche her/ tyll she be content her selfe. What is she this/ that commeth vp from the wildernes/ & leaneth vpō her loue? I am the same that waked the vp among the apple trees/ where thy mother beare the/ where thy mother brought the in to the worlde.

O set me as a seale vpon thine herte/ and as B a seale vpon thine arme: for loue is mightye as the dearth/ and gelousy as the hell. Her coales are of fyre/ and a very flāme of the Lorde: so that many waters are not able to quench loue/ neyther may the streames droune it. Yee/ if a man wolde geue all the good of his house for loue/ he shoulde counte it nothinge.

When oure loue is tolde oure yonge syster/ whose brestes are not yet growen/ what shall we do vnto her? If she be a walle/ we shall buylde a siluer bolworke therupon. If she be a tower/ we shall festen her with bordes of Cedertree.

If I be a walle/ and my brestes like towres/ C then am I as one that hath founde fauoure in his sight.

Salomon had a vyneyarde at Baal Hamon/ this vyneyarde deliuered he vnto the kepers: that euery one for the frute therof should geue him a thousande peces of siluer. But my vyneyarde (O Salomon) geueth the a thousande & two hūdreth to the kepers of the frute.

Thou that dwellest in the gardens/ O let me heare thy voyce/ that my cōpanions may herken to the same. O get the awaye (my loue) as a Roe or a yōge harte vnto the swete smellinge mountaines.

The XXXVIII. Chapter.

A iiij.Re.xx.a ij.Pa.xxxij.c In those dayes was Ezechias deadsicke. †And the prophet Esay the sonne of Amos came vnto hym / and sayde: Thus commaunded the Lorde: Set thine house in ordre/for thou must dye/ & shalt not escape.

Then Ezechias turned hys face towarde the wall/and prayed vnto the Lorde/and saide: Remembre (o Lorde) that I haue walked before the in trueth and a stedfast herte / and haue done the thinge that is pleasaunt to the. And Ezechias wepte sore. Then sayde God vnto Esay: Go and speake vnto Ezechias. The Lorde God of Dauid thy father sendeth the this worde: I haue herde thy prayer B and consydered thy teares: †Beholde / I wyll Jone.iij.b put xv. yeares mo vnto thy lyfe / and delyuer the and the cytie also from the hande of the kynge of Assiria/for I wyll defende the cytie. †And take the this token of the Lorde / that j.Reg.ij.g he wyl do it as he hath spoken: Beholde / I wyl returne the shadowe of Achas Diall/that now is layed out with the Sunne/and bring it ten degrees backward. †So the Sūne turned ten degrees backward/the which he was Jos.x.c descended afore.

A thankesgeuinge/which Ezechias kyng of Juda wrote/ when he had bene sicke/and was recouered.

C I thought I shoulde haue gone to the gates of hell in my best age / and haue wanted the residue of my yeares.

I spake within my selfe: I shal neuer viset the Lorde God in this life: I shall neuer se man amonge the dwellers of the worlde.

Myne age is folden vp together/and take awaye fro me/like a shepeherdes cotage: my lyfe is hewen of/ like as a weauer cutteth of his webbe.

†I thought I wolde haue lyued vnto the Job.iiij.b morow/But he brusted my bones lyke a Lion/ and made an ende of me in one daye.

I lift vp mine eyes into the height: O Lorde/(saide I) violēce is done vnto me/ be thou suertie for me.

D What shal I speake or say/that he maie this do: that I maie liue out al my yeares / yee/ in the bitternesse of my lyfe?

Verely (Lord) men must liue in bitternes/ and all my life must I passe ouer therin: For thou raisest me vp/and wakest me. But lo/ I wilbe wel content with this bitternesse.

And Esay sayde: take a playster of fygges/ and laye it vpon the sore/so shall it be whole. Then sayde Ezechias: O what a great thinge is this/that I shal go vp into the house of the Lorde?

The XXXIX. Chapter.

A Re.xx.a At the same time Merodach Baladā/ Baladams sonne kinge of Babilon: sent letres and presentes to Ezechias. For he vnderstode how that he had bene sicke/and was recouered againe. † And Ezechias was glad

Then came Esay the prophet to kyng Ezechias/and saide vnto him: What haue the mē saide/and from whence came they vnto the? Ezechias aūswered: They came out of a farre countrie vnto me: out of Babilon. Esay said: what haue they loked vpō in thine house? Ezechias aunswered: Al that is in myne house haue they sene: and there is nothinge in my treasure/but I shewed it them.

B Then saide Esay vnto Ezechias: Vnderstande the worde of the Lorde of hoostes.

R.xxiiij.e †Behold/the time wil come/that euery thing which is in thine house / and all that thy progenitours haue laide vp in stoare vnto this daye/shalbe caried to Babilon/ and nothinge left behynde. This sayeth the Lorde. Yee/ and parte of thy sonnes that shal come of the/and whome thou shalt get/ shalbe caryed hence/ and become gelded chaumberlaynes in the kynge of Babilons courte. Then sayde Ezechias to Esay: Now God prospere his owne counsail/which thou haste tolde me. He saide moreouer: So that there be peace/ and faithfulnesse in my time.

then wil I rote out thesame folke/and destroy them/saieth the Lorde.

The. XIII. Chapter.

MOreouer/ thus sayeth the Lorde vnto A me: Go thy waye and get the a lynnen Breche/and gyrde it aboute thy loynes/and let it not be wette. Then I got me a Brech/accordinge to the commaundemente of the Lorde/and put it aboute my loynes. After this the Lorde spake vnto me againe: Take the Breche that thou hast prepared and put about the/and get the vp/and go vnto Euphrates/
and hyde it in a hole of the rocke. So wente
I/and hydde it/as the Lord commaunded me. And it happened long after this/ that the Lord spake vnto me: Vp/and get the to Euphrates/and fet the Breche from thence/which I commaunded the to hyde there. Thē went I to Euphrates/and digged vp/and toke the Breche from the place where I had hyd it: and behold/the Breche was corrupte/so that it was profytable for nothinge.

Then saide the Lord vnto me: Thus saieth B
the Lord: Euen so wil I corruppe the pride of Juda/and the hye mynde of Jerusalem.

The XIIII. Chapter.

The worde of the Lord shewed vnto Jeremy/concerninge the derth of the frutes.

IJuda shal mourne/men shal not go much A more thorow his gates: the lande shalbe nomore had in reputacion/ and the crie of Jerusalem shal breake out. The lordes shal sende their seruauntes to fetch water/ and whē they come to the welles/they shall fynde no water/
but shal carie their vessels home agayne emp-tie. They shalbe ashamed and cōfounded/ and shal couer their heades. † For the groūd shalbe Jer. xviij. b dried vp/because there cōmeth no rayne vpon
it. The plowmen also shalbe ashamed/ and shal couer their heades. The hynde shal forsake the yonge fawne/ that she bryngeth forth in the felde/because there shalbe no grasse. The wilde asses shal stande in the mosses/ & drawe
in their wynde like the Dragons/their eyes shall fayle for want of grasse.

Soubtles oure owne wickednesse rewarde vs: But Lorde do thou accordinge to thy name/though oure transgressions and sinnes be many. † For thou art the cōforte/ and helpe Esa. xlix. b of Israel in the tyme of trouble. Why wilt Jere. xvj. c thou be as a straunger in the lande/ and as xvij. c one that goeth ouer the felde/ and commeth in onely to remayne for a nyght? Why wilt thou make thy self a cowarde/ and as it were a giaunte that yet maye not helpe? For thou art ours (o Lorde) and we beare thy name/therfore forsake vs not.

Then spake the Lorde/ concerninge thys B

though they offre burntoffringes / and sacri-

I go into the felde / lo / it lieth all full of slayne men: If I come into the citie/lo/they be all fa-meshed of hunger.

Yee/their prophetes also and priestes shalbe led into an vnknowen lande.

O Hast thou then vtterly forsaken Juda:

meth no good: for the tyme of health/ and lo/

fylled me with bytternes. Shal my heauynes vnto me: If thou wilt turne agayne / I shall set the in my seruyce: and if thou wilt take out

The XVI. Chapter.

A MOreouer thus saide the Lorde vnto me:
Thou shalt take the no wife / nor beget are borne in this place / of their fathers that haue begotten them in this lande/thus sayeth

the Lorde: They shall dye an horrible death/

shall bewepe them/ no mã shall clippe or shaue

There shal not one viset another/ to mourne
with them for their dead/ or to comforte them.
One shal not offre another the cuppe of consolacion / to forget their heauynes for father &

may se it.

wordes/and they saye vnto the. † Wherfore Jere. vij. b

for vs: Or what is the offence and synne/ that we haue done against the Lorde oure God:
Then make thou them this aunswere. † Be- Deu. iiij. b cause youre fathers haue forsaken me (saieth
the Lorde) and haue cleued vnto straunge

† Therfore wil I cast you out of this lãde/in- deu. xxviij c to a lande that ye & youre fathers knowe not:
and there shal ye serue straunge goddes daye
and night/there wil I shewe you no fauoure.
Behold/therfore (saieth the Lorde) † the daies Jer. xxiij. b are come / that it shall nomore be sayde: The Lorde lyueth / wihch brought the chyldren of Israel out of the lande of Egypte: but (it shalbe sayde) the Lorde lyueth that brought the chyldren of Israel from the North/and from all landes/ where I had scatred the. For I will bringe them agayne into the lade/ that I gaue vnto their fathers.

Mat. iiij. c Beholde/(sayeth the Lorde) †I wil sende out many fishers to take them / and after that wil I sende out many hunters to hunte them out/ from all mountaines and hylles and out of the caues of stones. For myne eyes beholde all their wayes / and they can not be hyd fro my face / neyther can their wicked dedes be kepte close out of my sight. But first wil I sufficiently rewarde their shamefull blasphemies and synnes / wherwith they haue defyled my lande: Namely / with their stinkinge Idols & abhominacions / wherwith they haue fylled

The Gentiles shall come vnto[the from the endes of the worlde / and saye: Verely oure fathers haue cleued vnto lies / their Idols are but vayne and vnprofitable. How can a mā make those his goddes / which are not able to be goddes? And therfore/ I will once teach them (sayeth the Lord) I will shewe thē my hāde and my power / that they maye knowe / that my name is the Lorde.

The. XVII. Chapter.

A MOure synne (o ye of the trybe of Juda) is written in the table of your hertes/ & grauen so vpon the edges of your aulters with a pēne of yron/ & with an Adamant clawe: that youre chyldren also maye thinke vpon youre aulters/ woodes/ thicke trees/ hie hilles/ mountaines & feldes / †Wherfore / I will make all

Ye shalbe cast out also frō the heretage that I gaue you. And I wil subdue you vnder the heauy bondage of youre enemies / in a lande that ye know not. For ye haue ministred fyre to my indignaciō/ which shal burne euermore.

B Thus sayeth the Lorde: † Cursed be the mā
Ps. xlviij. a Iere. xlvj. c xlviij. a Pro. xj. c Ezec. xxix. c that putteth his trust in man / & ỹ taketh flesh for his arme: and he / whose herte departeth from the Lord. He shalbe like the heeth/ that groweth in the wildernes. As for the good thinge that is for to come/ he shall not se it: but dwell in a drie place of the wildernes / in a salt
Psal. ij. b and vnoccupied lande. † O Blessed is the mā that putteth his trust in the Lorde / & whose hope the Lorde is him self. For * he shalbe as a tree that is planted by the water syde: which spreded out the rote vnto moystnesse/ whome the heate can not harme / when it cōmeth/ but his leaues are grene. And though there growe but litle frute / because of drouth/ yet is he not carefull / but he neuer leaueth of to bringe forth frute. Amonge all thynges lyuinge/ man hath the moost disceatful and vnsercheable hert.

Who shall then knowe it? † Euen I the Lorde ripe out the grounde of the hert / and searche the reynes / * and rewarde euery man accordinge to his wayes / and accordinge to the frute of his counsayls.

†The disceatful maketh a nest/ but bringeth forth no yonge: He cōmeth by ryches/ but not righteously. In the middest of his life must he leaue them behinde him / & at the last be foūde a very foule. But thou (o Lord) whose throne is moost glorious/ excellent / and of moost antiquite / which dwellest in ỹ place of oure holy rest: Thou art the comforte of Israel. ✣ All they that forsake the shalbe confounded. All they that departe frō the/ shalbe writē in earth/ †for they haue forsaken the Lorde / the very conduite of the waters of life.

Heale me (o Lord) & I shalbe whole/ saue thou me/ and I shalbe saued / for thou art my prayse. Behold/ these mē saye vnto me: Where is the worde of the Lorde? Let it come: Where as I neuertheles / leding ỹ flock in thy waies/ haue cōpelled none by violence. For I neuer desyred any mans death / this knowest thou well. My wordes also were right before the. Be not terrible vnto me (o Lord) † for thou Iere. xvij. c art he/ in whome I hope/ whē I am in parel. Let my persecuters be confoūded/ but not me: let them be afrayed/ and not me. Thou shalt bringe vpon thē the tyme of their plague / and shalt destroye thē rightfore. ✣

S Agayne/ thus hath the Lorde sayde vn-
Iere. vij. to me: † Go and stande vnder the gate/ where thorow the people and the kinges of Juda go out and in/ yee/ vnder all the gates of Jerusalem/ and saye vnto them: Heare the wordes of the Lorde / ye kinges of Juda / and all thou people of Juda/ and all ye citiesins of Jerusalem/ ỹ go thorow this gate: Thus the Lorde com-

Deu. iiij. b Deu. v. b commaundeth: † Take hede for youre lyues/ that ye carie no burthen vpō you in the Sabbath/ to bringe it thorow the gates of Jerusalem: ye shall beare no burthen also out of youre houses in the Sabbath: Ye shal do no laboure therein/ but halowe the Sabbath / † as I cōmaunded youre fathers. Howbeit/ the obeyed me not / neyther herkened they vnto me: but were obstinate and stubburne / and neyther obeyed me/ nor receaued my correction.

Neuertheles/ if ye will heare me (sayeth the Lorde) and beare no burthen into the citie thorow this gate vpon the Sabbath: If ye will halowe the Sabbath / so that ye do no worke therein: then shall there go thorow the gates of this citie / kinges and princes / that shall syt vpon the seate of Dauid: They shalbe caried vpon charrettes/ and ryde vpon horses/ both they and their princes: Yee/ whole Juda and all the citiesyns of Jerusalem shal go here thorow / and this citie shal euer be the more & more inhabited. There shal come men also frō the cities of Juda/ from aboute Jerusalē/ and from the lande of Ben Jamin/ from the plaine feldes / from the mountaines / and from the wilderneſſe: which shall bringe burntoffringes/ sacrifices/ oblacions/ and incence/ and offre vp thankesgeuynge in the house of the Lorde. But if ye will not be obedient vnto me / to halowe the Sabbath / so that ye wyll beare youre burthens thorowe the gates of Jerusalem vpon the Sabbath: Then shall I set fyre vpon the gates of Jerusalem / and it shall burne vp the houses of Jerusalem / and no man shalbe able to quench it.

The XVIII. Chapter.

This is another communicacion/ that God had with Jeremy/ sayinge.

A ARise/ & go doune into the potters house / & there shall I tell the more of my mynde. Now when I came to the potters house. I founde him makinge his worke vpon a whele. The vessel that the potter made of claye / brake amonge his handes: So he beganne a new/ and made another vessel / accordinge to his mynde. Then sayde the Lorde thus vnto me: † Maye not I do with you as this potter doeth/ O ye house of Israel: saieth the Lorde. Rom. ix. c Beholde/ ye house of Israel: ye are in my hāde/ Iere. xix. c euen as the claye in the potters hande. Esa. xlv. b

† When I take in hande to rote out/ to destroye / or to waist awaye any people or kingdome/ if that people (agaynst whome I haue thus deuysed) conuerte from their wickednes. Immediatly / I repēte of the plague that I deuysed to bringe vpon them. † Agayne: When I take in hande to builde / or to plante a people or a kingdome: if the same people do euel before me / and heare not my voyce: Immediatly / I repente of the good that I deuised to do for them. Eze. xviij. c xxxiij. c Luc. xv. a j. Reg. xv. Jone iij.

Speake now therfore vnto all Juda / and to them that dwell at Jerusalem: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde / I am deuysinge a plague for you / and am takinge a thinge in hāde agaynst you.

† Therfore / let euery man turne from his euel waye / take vpon you the thinge that is good / and do right. But they saye: No more of this/ * we will folowe oure owne ymaginacions/ and do euery mā accordinge to the wilfulnesse of his owne minde. Jone iij. Jere. xxv. a Jer. xxxv. c * Jer. xviij. b

Therfore thus saieth the Lord: Axe amōge the Heythen/ if any man hath herde such horrible thinges/ as the doughter of Israel hath done. Shal not the snowe (that melteth vpon the stony rockes of Libanus) moysture the feldes? Or maye ỹ springes of waters be so growen awaye / that they runne nomore / geue moystinesse/ not make fruteful? But my people hath so forgotten me/ that they haue made sacrifice vnto vayne goddes. And whyle they folowed their owne wayes/ they are come out of the hie strete/ and gone into a fotewaye/ not vsed to be troden. Where thorow they haue brought their lande into an euerlastinge wilderneſſe and scorne: † So that whoso euer trauayleth therby/ shalbe abashed / & wagge their heades. With an East wynde will I scatre them before their enemies. And when their destruction commeth / I will turne my backe vpon them/ but not my face. B Jere. xix. b xlix. c

Then sayde they: † come / let vs ymagin somthinge agaynst thys Jeremy. Yee / thys dyd euen the priestes / to whom the lawe was committed: the Senatours that were the wy-

fest: and the prophetes / which wanted not the

Let their wyfes be robbed of their chyldren /

out of their houses / when the murtherer com-Jere.xj.d meth sodenly vpon them: † For they haue dig-ged a pit to take me / and layed snares for my fete. Yet Lorde / thou knowest all their coun-sayll / that they haue deuysed to slaye me.
And therfore forgeue them not their wickednes / and let not their synne be put out of thy

The XIX. Chapter.

A MOreouer / thus saide the Lorde vnto Jereny: Go thy waye / & bye the an earthē pytcher / & bringe forth the senatours & chiefe priestes into the valley of the chyldren of En-non / which lieth before the porte that is made of brick / and shewe them there ỹ wordes that I shall tell the / and saye thus vnto thē: Heare

iiij.Re.xxj.c Lorde of hoostes ỹ God of Israel: † Beholde / Jere.vj.c. I will bringe such a plague vpon this place /
that the eares of all that heare it / shall glowe.
And that because they haue forsaken me / and vnhalowed this place / and haue offred in it vnto straunge goddes: whome neyther they / they: fathers / nor the kinges of Juda haue knowen. They haue filled this place also with

† In Tophet shall they be buried / for they Jere.vij.

that dwel therein: yee / I wil do to this citie
as vnto Tophet (For the houses of Jerusalem and the houses of the kinges of Juda are defyled like as Tophet) because of all the houses / in whose parlers they dyd sacrifice vnto all the hooste of heauē / and poured out drinkeoffringes vnto straunge goddes. And so Jeremy came from Tophet / where the Lord had sent him to prophecie / and stode in the courte of the house of the Lord / and spake to al the people:
Thus sayeth the Lord of hoostes the God of Israel: Beholde / I wil bringe vpon this citie /

The XX. Chapter.

WHen Pashur the priest / the sonne of Em- A herde Jeremy preach so stedfastly: † he smote Act.xxiij.

Jeremy / and put him in the stockes / that are Joā.xviij

the Lord. The nexte daye folowinge / Pashur brought Jeremy out of the stockes agayne.
Then sayde Jeremy vnto him: The Lorde shall call the nomore Pashur (that is excellent and

and increacinge) but Magor (that is fearfull and afrayed) euery where. For thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde / I wil make the afrayed / thy self / and all thy fauoure ther: which shal perish with the swearde of their enemies / euen be-

And I will geue al Juda vnder the power of the kinge of Babylō / which shall carie some workes / all costlynesse / and all treasure of the Jere.xiij.c kinges of Juda / will I geue into the handes carie them vnto Babylon. But as for the (o Pashur) thou shalt be caried vnto Babylon with all thine housholde / and to Babylō shalt thou come / where thou shalt dye / & be buried:

thou and all thy fauourers / to whome thou hast preached lies. O Lorde thou makest me Tren.iij.b weake / but thou refreshest me / and makest me stronge agayne. † All the daye longe am I despysed / and laughed to scorne of euery man
because I haue now preached longe agaynst Jere.vj.b malicious Tyranny / and shewed them of destruction. † For the which cause they cast the worde of the Lorde in my teeth / and take me euer to the worst.

C Wherfore / I thought from henceforth not to speake of him / nor to preach any more in his name. But the worde of the Lorde was a Psal.xxx.b very burnynge fyre in my hert and in my bones / which when I wolde haue stopped / I might not. For why / † I herde so many derisions and blasphemies / yee / euen of myne owne companyons / and of such as were conuersaunte with me / which wente aboute to make me afrayed / sayinge: vpon him / let vs go vpon him / to feare him / and make him holde his tunge: that we maye ouercome him / and be auenged of him.

But the Lorde stode by me / like a mighty giaunte: therfore my persecuters fell / and coulde do nothinge. They shalbe sore cōfounded / for they haue done vnwisely / they shall re.xj.d haue an euerlastinge shame. † And now / o
Lorde of hoostes / thou righteous sercher (which knowest the reynes and the very her-tes) let me se them punished / for vnto the I committe my cause.

Synge vnto the Lorde / and prayse hym / &
for he hath delyuered the soule of the oppressed / frō the hāde of the violent. † Cursed be the Job iij.a daye / wherein I was borne: vnhappy be the Jere.xx.b
daye / wherein my mother brought me forth.
Cursed be the man / that brought my father
the tidinges to make him glad / sayinge: thou hast gotten a sonne. Let it happen vnto that man / as to the cities † which the Lorde tur- Gen.xix.b
ned vpside doune (when he had longe herde
the wicked rumoure of them) because he slewe me not / as sone as I came out of my mothers wombe / and because my mother was not my graue her self / that the byrth might not haue come out / but remayned still in her. † Wher- Job x.c
fore came I forth of my mothers wombe: To haue experience of laboure and sorowe: and to lede my life with shame.

The. XXI. Chapter.

THese are the wordes that the Lorde A spake vnto Jeremy / † what tyme as kinge Jer.xxxvij.
Sedechias sent vnto him Pashur the sonne b of Melchia / and Sophonias the sonne of Maasia priest / sayinge: † Axe counsayll at the iiij.re.xxij.b

buchodonosor the kinge of Babylon besegeth Jere.xlij.a vs / if the Lorde (peraduenture) will deale with vs / accordinge to his meruaylous power / and take him from vs.

Then spake Jeremy: Geue Sedechias this aunswere. Thus saieth the Lorde God of Israel: behold / I wil turne backe ỹ weapens that ye haue in youre handes / wherwith ye fight agaynst the kinge of Babylon and the Caldees / which besege you rounde aboute the walles: and I wil bringe thē together into the middest of this citie / and I my self will fight agaynst you / with an outstretched hāde /
and with a mighty arme: in greate displeasure and terrible wrath: and will smyte them that dwell in this citie: yee / both men and cattell shall dye of the pestilence.

† And after this (saieth the Lorde) I shal Jer.xxxix.a deliuer Sedechias the kinge of Juda / and his seruauntes / his people (and such as are escaped in the citie / from the pestilence / swearde / and hunger) into the power of Nabuchodo-nosor kinge of Babylon: yee / into the handes of their enemies / into the handes of those that folowe vpon their lyfes / which shall smyte

thē with the swearde: they shal not pittie thē/ they shall not spare them/ they shall haue no mercy vpon them.

And vnto this people thou shalt saye: Thus Deu.xxx.c sayeth the Lord: † beholde/I laye before you
*Jer.xxj.a the waye of lyfe and death * Whoso abydeth

Jer.xxxij.a gaynst this citie (sayeth the Lorde) to plague it/and to do it no good. It must be geuen into the hande of the kinge of Babylon/ and be brent with fyre.

The XXII. Chapter.

A THus sayde the Lorde also: Go doune into the house of the kinge of Juda/ and speake there these wordes/ and saye: Heare the worde of the Lorde/ thou kinge of Juda/ that sytteste in the kingly seate of Dauid: thou and thy seruauntes and the people/ that go in and out at this gate. And if ye kepe these thinges faithfully/ then shal there come in at ỹ dore of this house/ kinges to syt vpon Dauids seate: they shalbe caried in charrettes/ and ryde vpon horses/ both they & their seruauntes/ & their people. But if ye wil not be obedient vnto these commaun-

He shall neuer come hither agayne/ for he shal dye in the place/ where vnto he is led captiue/ and shal se this lāde nomore. † Wo worth
Esa.v.c him/ that buildeth his house with vnrighte-Aggæj.a ousnes/ and his parlers with the good that he hath gotten by violence: which neuer recompenceth his neyghbours labour/ nor payeth him his hyre. He thinketh in him selfe/ I will

He causeth wyndowes to be hewen therein/ & the sylinges and iastes maketh he of Cedre/ & paynteth them with Zenober. Thinkest thou to raigne/ now ỹ thou prouokest me to wrath with thy Cedretrees?

Syd not thy father eate and drynke/ and prospere wel/ as longe as he dealt with equite and righteousnes? Yee/ whē he helped the oppressed and poore to their right/ then prospered he well.

From whence came this/ but onely because he had me before his eyes? sayeth the Lorde. Neuertheles/ as for thine eyes and thine herte/ they loke vpon coueteousnesse/ to shed inno-to do) alas brother: alas syster: Neyther shall they say vnto hym: Alas syr/ alas for that noble prince. But as an asse shall he be buryed corrupte/ and be cast without the gates of Jerusalem.

D Clymme vp the hyll of Libanus (o thou doughter Sion) lift vp thy voyce vpon Basan/ crie from all partes: for all thy louers are destroyed. I gaue the warninge/ whyle thou wast yet in prosperitie/ But thou saydest: I will not heare. And this maner haste thou vsed frō thy youth/ ỹ thou woldest neuer heare my voyce. All thy hyrdemen shalbe dryuen with the wynde/ and thy derlynges shalbe caried awaye into captiuitie: Then shalt thou be brought to shame and confusion/ because of all thy wickednesse: thou that dwellest vpon Libanus/ and makest thy nest in the Ce-
Esa xlij.b dre trees. † O how greate shal thy mourning

But as for the lande that ye wyll desyre to returne vnto/ ye shall neuer come at it agayne. This man Jechonias shalbe like an ymage robbed and torne in peces/ whiche pleaseth no man/ for all his apparell. Wherfore both he and his sede shalbe sente awaye/ and caste oute into a lande/ that they knowe not.

O thou earth/ earth/ earth: heare the worde of the Lorde: Wryte this man amonge the outelawes/ for no prosperitie shall this man haue all his lyfe longe. Neither shal any of his sede be so happy/ as to syt vppon the seate of Dauid/ and to beare rule in Juda.

The XXIII. Chapter.

A WO be † vnto the shepeherdes that de-Eze.xxxiiij.a stroye/ and scatre my flocke/ sayeth the Lorde. Wherfore/ this is the commaunde-ment of the Lorde God of Israel/ vnto the shepeherdes that fede my people: Ye scatre & thruste oute my flocke/ and loke not vpon thē. Therfore/ howe will I vyset the wickednesse of youre ymaginacions/ sayeth the Lorde: And wil gather together the remnaunte of my flocke/ from all landes that I had driuen them vnto/ and wyll bringe them agayne to their pastures/ that they maye growe and increace. I wyll set shepeherdes also ouer them which shal fede them. They shal nomore feare and drede/ for there shal none of them be lost/ sayeth the Lorde.. ✣ † Beholde/ the tyme

Esa. xj.a with wysedome/ and shall set vp equyte and righteousnes againe in the earth.

In hys tyme shal Juda be saued/ & † Isra-

But the Lorde lyueth/ whiche brought forth/ and led the sede of the house of Israel/ oute of the North land/ and from all countries where I had scatred them/ and they shall dwell in their owne lande againe.

Wo vnto the prophetes/ my herte breaketh in my bodye/ because of the false prophetes/ all my bones shake: I am become lyke a dronckē man (that by the reason of wyne cā take no reste) for very feare of the Lorde/ and of his holy wordes: Because the lande is full of aduouterers/ where thorowe it is destroied and mourneth/ † and the pleasaunt pastures Jere. xxiij.a

fes are poluted ypocrites/ and their wickednes haue I founde in my house/ saieth the Lorde. Wherfore/ their waye shalbe slippery in darckenesse/ wherein they maye stacker and fall. For I wyll bringe a plague vpon them/ euen the yeare of their visitacion/ sayeth the Lord. I haue sene folye amonge the prophetes of Samaria/ & they preached for Baal/ and disceaued my people of Israel. I haue seene also amonge the Prophetes of Jerusalem foule aduoutery/& presumpteous lyes. They take the mooste shamefull men by the hande/ flatteringe them/so that they can not returne from their wickednesse. All these with their cities are vnto me as Sodom/ and as the inhabitours of Gomorra.

C Therfore thus sayeth the Lord of hoostes/ concerninge the prophetes. †Beholde/ I wil fede them with wormwood/and make them drynke the water of gal. For from the prophetes of Jerusalem is the sickenesse of Ypocrisie come into all the lande.

Jere. ix.b

And therfore the Lorde of hoostes geueth you this warning: †Heare not the wordes of the prophetes/ that preache vnto you/ and disceaue you: for they speake the meaning of their owne herte/ and not oute of the mouthe of the Lorde. †They saye vnto them that despyse me: The Lorde hath spoken it: Tushe/ ye shall prospere ryght wel. And vnto all them that walke after the luste of their owne herte/ they saye: Tushe/ there shall no misfortune happen you. For who hath sytten in the counsaill of the Lorde/ that he hath herde and vnderstande/what he is aboute to do? Who hath marked his dewyce/ and herde it: †Beholde/ the stormy wether of the Lorde (that is/his indignacion) shall go forth/ and shall fall doune vpon the heade of the vngodly. And the wrath of the Lorde shall not turne againe/ vntyll he performe/and fulfyll the thought of his herte. †And in the latter dayes ye shal knowe his meaninge.

The. XXVI. Chapter.

A IN the beginninge of the raigne of Joachim the sonne of Josias kynge of Juda/came this worde from the Lorde/ sayinge: Jere. vij. a Thus sayeth the Lorde: † Stande in the come to do worshippe in the Lordes house)

al the wordes that I haue cōmaunde ỹ to say:

vij. b (peraduenture) they wil herken/ and turne euery man from his wicked waye: that I may also repente of the plague/ whiche I haue determined to bringe vpō them/ because of their wicked inuencions.

And after this maner shalt thou speake vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde: if ye wyll
not obeye me to walke in my lawes/ whiche
I haue geuen you/ and to heare the woordes of my seruauntes the prophetes/ whome I sente vnto you/ rysinge vp timely and stil sendinge: If ye wyl not folowe them/ (I saye)
Jere. vij. c then wyl I do to this house/ † as I dyd vnto
Silo/ and wyll make this cytie to be abhorred of al the people of the earth. And the priestes/ the prophetes/ and all the people herde Jeremy preach these wordes/ in the house of the Lorde.

B Now when he had spoken out all the wordes/ that the Lorde commaunded him to preache vnto all the people/ then the priestes/
the prophetes/ and all the people toke holde vpon him/ and sayde: thou shalt dye. Howe darrest thou be so bold/ as to saye in the name of the Lorde: it shal happen to this house as it dyd vnto Silo? and this citie shalbe so waist/ that no man shal dwel therein?

And when all the people were gathered aboute Jeremy in the house of the Lorde/
the prynces of Juda herde of this rumoure/
and they came sone oute of the kinges palayce into the house of the Lorde/ and sat them

Then saide Jeremy vnto the rulers and to-

But this shal ye knowe: if ye put me to death/
† ye shal make your selfes/ this citie/ and al the Mat. xxiij. c

For this is of a trueth: that the Lorde hath sente me vnto you/ to speake all these wordes in youre eares.

Then saide the rulers and al the people vnto the priestes and prophetes: This man may not be condemned to death/ for he hath preD

God. The Elders also of the lande stode vp and saide thus vnto all the people: Micheas
the Morasceite/ † whiche was a prophet vnder Mich. j. a Ezechias kynge of Juda/ spake to all the people of Juda: Thus sayeth the Lord of hoostes: † Sion shalbe plowed like a felde/ Jeru- Mich. iij. c

the Lordes house shalbe turned to an hye

the people of Juda put him to death for this?
No verely/ but rather feared the Lord/ and made their praier vnto him. For the whiche cause also the Lord repented of the plague/ ỹ
he had deuised against them. Should we thē do such a shameful dede against oure soules?
There was a prophet also/ that preacheth stiffly in the name of the Lorde/ called Urias the sonne of Semeia of Cariathiarim: this man E preached also against this citie/ and against this lande/ accordinge to al as Jeremy sayeth.
Now when † Joachim the king with al the e- iij. Re. xvij. d

Then Joachim the kynge sente seruauntes

The. XXVI. Chapter.

A IN the beginninge of the raygne of Joachim the sonne of Josias kynge of Juda/ came this word vnto Jeremy from the Lorde / whiche spake thus vnto me: Make the bandes and chaynes / and put them aboute thy necke/and sende them to the king of Edō/ the kinge of Moab / the kinge of Amon / the kynge of Tirus/and to the kynge of Sidon: and that by the messāgers/which shal come to Jerusalem vnto Sedechias the kinge of Juda/and byd them saye vnto their masters: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel/ speake thus vnto youre masters:

Deu. j. c †I am he that made the earth / the men and the cattel that are vpon the grounde/with my greate power and outstretched arme / & haue geuen it vnto whome it pleased me. †And nowe will I delyuer al these landes into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babylon *my seruaunt. The beastes also of the feld shall I geue him to do him seruice. †And al people shal serue him/and his sonne / & his childes children / vntill the tyme of thesame lande be come also: Yee/many people & greate kinges shal serue him.

Ecclę. j. a Judic. ij. d Jer. xxvij. a San. iiij. c *Jer xxv. b †Jere. xij. b xxviij. a xlij. a Moreouer/that people & kingdome which wil not serue Nabuchodonosor/and that will not put their neckes vnder the yocke of the kinge of Babilon: thesame people wil I viset with swearde/with hunger/ with pestilence/ vntil I haue consumed them in his handes/ saieth the Lorde. †And therfore/folowe not youre prophetes/soythsayers/ expounders of dreames/charmers/& witches/which say vnto you: ye shal not serue the kynge of Babilō. For they preache you lyes/to bringe you farre from youre lande/and that I might cast you out/and destroy you. But the people that put their neckes vnder the yocke of the kynge of Babilon / and serue him / those I will let remaine still in their owne lande (saieth ỹ Lorde) and they shal occupie it/and dwel therin.

B Jere. xxiij. c xxix. b

All these thinges tolde I Sedechias the kinge of Juda/and saydet †Put youre neckes vnder the yocke of the kinge of Babilon / and serue him and his people / that ye maye lyue. Why wilt thou and the people perishe with the swearde/with hunger/with pestilence: like as the Lorde hath deuised for al people/that wil not serue the king of Babilon: †Therfore geue no eare vnto those prophetes/ (that tell you: Ye shal not serue the kinge of Babilon) for they preach you lyes/neither haue I sente them/sayeth the Lorde: howbeit / they are bold/falsely for to prophecie in my name: that I might the sooner driue you oute/& that ye might perish with your preachers.

Je. xxviij. c

Jere. xxiij. c and xxix. b

I spake to the priestes also and to al the people: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Heare not the wordes of those prophetes/ that preache vnto you/and saye: Beholde / †the vessels of the Lordes house shal shortly be broughte hither againe from Babylon: For they prophecie lyes vnto you: Heare them not / But serue the kynge of Babilon / that ye maye lyue. Wherfore will ye make this citie to be destroyed? But yf they be true prophetes in very dede/ and if the woorde of the Lorde be committed vnto them/then let them praie the Lorde of hoostes/that the remnaunt of the ornamentes (whiche remaine yet in the house of the Lord/and in the house of the kynge of Juda and at Jerusalem) be not caryed to Babilon also. For thus hath the Lorde of hoostes spoken concerninge the pyllers/the lauer/ the scare and the residue of the ornamentes/ that yet remayne in this citie/ whiche Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon toke not/ †when he caried awaye Jechonias the sonne of Joachim kinge of Juda / with all the power of Juda and Jerusalem / from Jerusalē vnto Babilon/captiue.

iiij. Reg. xxiiij. d and xxv. a

Yee/ thus hath the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel spoken/as touchinge the residue of the ornamentes of the Lordes house/ of the kinge of Judas house and of Jerusalem: †They shalbe caried vnto Babilon / and there they shal remaine / vntyl I vyset them/ saieth the Lord. †Then wyll I bringe them hither again. And this was done in thesame yeare: euen in the beginninge of the raigne of Sedechias kinge of Juda.

The. XXVIII. Chapter.

A BVt in the fourth yeare of the raygne of Sedechias kinge of Juda in the fyfthe moneth. It happened that Hananias the sonne of Assur the prophet of Gabaon spake to me in the house of the Lorde/ in the presence of the priestes/and of all the people / and sayde: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: I haue broken the yock of the kynge of Babilon/ †and after two yeare wyll I bringe againe into this place / all the ornamentes of the Lordes house/ that Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon caried away from this place vnto Babilon. Yee/ I wil bringe againe Jechonias the sonne of Joachim the kinge of Juda himselfe/with al the prysoners of Juda/ (that are caried vnto Babilon/) saieth the Lorde/ for I will breake the yocke of the kinge of Babilon.

Jer. xxviij. c

B Then the prophet Jeremy gaue aunswere vnto that prophet Hananias/ before the priestes and before al the people/that were present in the house of the Lorde. †And the prophet Jeremy saide: Amen/the Lord do that/ and graunte the thinge/which thou haste prophecied: that he maye bringe againe all the ornamentes of the Lordes house / and restore all the prysoners from Babilon in this place. Neuertheless/herken thou also what I wyll saye/ that thou and all the people maie heare: The prophetes that were before vs in tymes past/whiche prophecied of warre/ or trouble/ or pestilence/ eyther of peace/ vpon many nacions and greate kingdomes/were proued by this (if God had sende them in very dede) †when the thinge came to passe / whiche that prophet tolde before.

And Hananias the prophet toke the chaine from the prophet Jeremias necke/ and brake it: and with that saide Hananias/ that all the people mighte heare: Thus hath the Lorde spoken: Euen so will I breake the yocke of Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babilon/ from the necke of al nacions/ yee/ and that within this two yeare. And so the prophet Jeremy wente his waye. After nowe that Hananias the prophet had taken the chayne from the prophet Jeremias necke/ & broken it: The worde of the Lorde came vnto the prophet Jeremy sayinge: Go/ and tell Hananias these wordes: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Thou hast broken the chaine of wood/ but in steade of wood/ thou shalt make chaynes of yron. For thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: I wil put a yocke of yron vpon the necke of all this people/ that they maye serue Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon/ yee / and so shal they do. And I wil geue him the beastes in the felde. Then sayde the prophet Jeremye vnto the prophet Hananias: †Heare me (I praye the) Hananias: The Lorde hath not sente the/ but thou bringest this people into a false beleue. And therfore thus sayeth ỹ Lorde: Beholde/ I wil sende the out of the lande/ and within a yeare thou shalte dye / because thou haste falsely spoken againste the Lord. So Hananias ỹ prophet dyed thesame yeare in the seuenth moneth.

And when it is tyme / the watchmen vpon
Esa.ij.a the mount of Ephraim shall crie: † Arise / let vs go vp vnto Sion to oure Lorde God / for thus sayeth the Lorde: Reioyce with gladnesse because of Jacob / crie vnto the heade of the Gentiles: speake out / synge / and saye: The Lorde shall delyuer his people / the remnaūt
B of Israel / and make them whole. Beholde / I will bringe them agayne from out of the Northlande / and gather them from the endes of the worlde / with the blynde and lame that are amonge them / with the women that be greate with childe / and such as be also delyuered: and the company of them that come agayne / shalbe greate.

They departed from hence in beauynesse / but with ioye will I bringe them hither agayne. I will lede the by the ryuers of water in a straight waye / where they shall not stūble:
Gen.xxxj.a † For I will be Israels father / and * Ephraim
*Ge.xlviij shalbe my fyrstborne.

Heare the worde of the Lorde (o ye Gentiles) preach in the Iles that lye farreof / and saye: he that hath scatred Israel / shall gather him together agayne / and shall kepe him as a shepherde doeth his flocke. For the Lorde shall redeme Jacob / and rydde him from the hande of the violent. And they shal come / and reioyce vpon the hil of Sion / and shall haue plenteousnes of goodes / which the Lorde shall geue them: Namely / wheate / wyne / oyle / yonge shepe / and calues. And their conscience shalbe as a welwatred garden / for they shall nomore be hungrye.

C Then shal the mayde reioyce in the daunce / yee both yonge and old folkes. For I wil turne their sorow into gladnesse / and will comforte them / and make them ioyfull / euen from their hertes / I will poure plenteousnesse vpon the hertes of the priestes / and my people shalbe satisfied with good thinges / saieth the Lorde.

Jere.iij.c Thus saieth the Lorde: † The voyce of Matth.ij.c heauynes / wepinge and lamentacion came vp into heauen: euen of Rachel mournynge for her chyldren / and wolde not be comforted / because they were awaye.

But now saieth the Lorde: leaue of from wepinge and crienge / witholde thine eyes from teares / for thy labour shalbe rewarded / saieth the Lorde. And they shall come a gayne out of the lande of their enemies: Yee / euen thy posteritie shall haue consolacion in this (saieth the Lord) that thy chyldren shall come agayne into their owne lande.

Moreouer / I herde Ephraim / (that was led awaye captiue) complayne on this maner: † O Lorde / thou hast correcte me / and Ezech.
thy chastenynge haue I receaued as an vntamed calfe. † Conuerte thou me / and I shall Zach.j.
be conuerted / for thou art my Lorde God. Tren.v
Yee / as sone as thou turnest me / I shall repente my self: and when I vnderstande / I shall smyte vpon my thye. For verely I haue committed shameful thinges: O let my youth beare this reproue and confusion.

Vpon this complaynte / I thought thus D
by my self: † is not Ephraim my deare sonne: Ge.xlv
Is he not the childe / with whome I haue had all myrth and pastyme? For sence the tyme that I fyrst commoned with him / I haue him euer in remembraunce: therfore my very herte dryueth me vnto hym: gladly and louyngly will I haue mercy vpon hym / saieth the Lorde. Get the watchmen / prouyde teachers for the: set thyne herte vpon the righte waye that thou shouldest walke / and turne agayne: (o thou doughter of Israel /) turne agayne to these cities of thyne. How longe wilt thou go astraye / o thou shrenkynge doughter? For the Lorde will worke a new thynge vpon earth: A woman shall compasse a man.

For thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: It wil come therto / that when I haue brought Juda out of captiuitie / these wordes shalbe herde in the lande of Juda and in his cities: The Lorde / which is the fayre † brydegrome of righteousnesse / make the fruteFsa.lvij full / o thou holy hyll: And there shall dwell Juda and all her cities / the shepeherdes and housbande men: For † I shall fede the hun- mat.xj.c gry soule / and refresh all fayntе hertes. When I herde this / I came agayne to my self / and mused like as I had bene waked out of a swete slepe.

Beholde / (saieth the Lord) the dayes come / E that I will sowe the house of Israel and the house of Juda with mē and with cattel. † Yee / deut.xxv
it shall come therto / that like as I haue gone g

ye.xviij.a † Then shall it nomore be sayde: the fathers haue eaten a soure grape / and the childrens teeth are set on edge: for euery one shal dye for his owne myssedde / so ỹ who so eateth a soure grape / his teeth shalbe set on ege.

ch.viij. b † Beholde / the dayes come (sayeth ỹ Lorde) that I wil make a new couenaunt with the house of Israel / and with the house of Juda: not after the cōuenaunt that I made with their fathers / whē I toke them by the hande / and ledde them out of the lande of Egypte: which couenaunt they brake / wherfore I punished them sore / saieth the Lorde: But † this

And from thence forth shall no man teach his neyghboure or his brother / & saye: knowe the Lorde: But they shall all knowe me / from the lowest vnto the hyest / sayeth the Lorde. For I will forgeue their misdedes / and will neuer remembre their synnes any more. Thus m.j.b sayeth the Lorde / † which gaue the Sunne to be a light for the daye / and the Moone and sterres to shyne in the night: which moueth the see / so that the floudes therof waxe fearce: his name is the Lord of hoostes. Like as this ordinaunce shall neuer be taken out of my sight / saieth the Lorde: So shall the sede of Israel neuer ceasse / but alwaye be a people before me.

Moreouer / thus sayeth the Lorde: like as the heauen aboue can not be measured / and as the foundacions of the earth beneth maye not om.xj.a be sought out: † So wil I also not caste oute the whole sede of Israel / for that they haue cōmytted / saieth the Lord. Beholde / the dayes Esd.xiij. come saieth the Lorde / that the citie of the Lorde shalbe enlarged from the † tower of Hananeel / vnto the gate of the corner wall.
ch xxxj.b From thence shall the right measure be taken before her vnto the hill toppe of Gareb / and shal come aboute Gaatha / † & the whole val- Jere.xix b

And when it is now buylded / and set vp of this fashion / it shal neuer be broken / nor cast doune any more.

The XXXII. Chapter.

THese wordes spake the Lorde vnto Je- I remy / in ỹ tenth yeare of Sedechias kinge of Juda / which was the xviij. yeare of Nabuchodonosor / what tyme as the kinge of Babylons hooste layed sege vnto Jerusalē. But Jeremy the prophet laye bounde in the courte of the pryson / which was in the kinge of Judas house: where Sedechias the kinge of Juda caused him to be layed / because he had prophecied of this maner: Thus saieth the Lorde: † Beholde / I will delyuer this citie into Jere.xxxj.c
the handes of ỹ kinge of Babylon / which shal xxxvij.a.
take it. As for Sedechias ỹ kinge of Juda he xxxviij.a shal not be able to escape the Caldees / but su- xxxix.a rely he shal come into the handes of the kinge xxxiij.a
of Babylō: which shal speake with him mouth to mouth / and one of thē shall loke another in the face. And Sedechias shalbe caried vnto Babylon / and there shall he be / vntill the tyme that I viset him / saieth the Lord. But if thou takest in hande to fight agaynst the Caldees / thou shalt not prospere.

And Jeremy sayde: Thus hath the Lor- B de spoken vnto me: Beholde / Hananeel the sonne of Sellum / thyne vncles sonne shall come vnto the / and require the to redeme the lande / that lieth in Anathot vnto thy self / † for Leu. xxv. d by reason of kynred it is thy parte to redeme Nu.xxvij.a it / and to bye it out. xxxvj.a Ruth iij.a

And so Hananeel myne vncles sonne came to me in the courte of the pryson / (accordinge to the worde of the Lord) & sayde vnto me: Bye my lande (I praye the) that lieth in Anathot in the cōtrie of Benjamin: for by heritage thou hast right to louse it out for thy self / therfore redeme it. Thē I perceaued that this was the commaundement of the Lorde / and so I lousēd the lande from Hananeel of Anathot / myne vncles sonne / and weyed hym there the money / euen seuen sycles / and ten siluer pens.

I caused him also to make me a writinge and to seale it/ and called recorde thereby / and weyed him there the money vpon the waighes. So I toke the euidence with the copie (when it was orderly sealed and red ouer) and I gaue the euidence vnto Baruch the sonne of Nerias the sonne of Maasia/ in the sight of Hananeel my cosen/ and in the presence of the witnesses/ that be named in the euidence/ and before all the Iewes that were therby in the courte of the pryson.

I charged Baruch also before thē / sayinge: The Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel cōmaundeth the/ to take this sealed euidēce with the copie / and to laye it in an earthen vessel/ that it maye longe continue.

For the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel hath determined/ that houses/ feldes/ and vyneyardes shalbe possessed agayne in this lande.

C Now when I had delyuered the euidence vnto Baruch the sonne of Nerias/ I besought Gene.j.a Iere.x.b the Lorde/ sayinge: O Lorde God. † It is thou that hast made heauen and earth with thy greate power and hye arme / and there is Exo.xxxiiij.a nothinge to harde for ỹ. † Thou shewest mercy vpon thousandes/ thou recompencest the wickednes of the fathers / into the bosome of the children that come after them.

Thou art the greate & mighty God/ whose name is ỹ Lorde of hoostes: greate in counsayl/ and infinite in thought: Thine eyes loke
Rom.ij.a vpon all the wayes of mens children / † to rewarde euery one after his waye / & accordinge to the frutes of his inuēcions. Thou hast done greate tokens and wonders in the lande of Egypte/ (as we se this daye) vpon the people of Israel and vpō thosē mē: to make thy name
Exod.vij. vnto the xv.chapter. greate/ as it is come to passe this daye. † Thou hast brought thy people of Israel out of the lande of Egypte / with tokens/ with wōders/ with a mighty hande / & a stretched out arme/ and with greate terriblenes: and hast geuen thē this lande / like as thou haddest promised vnto their fathers: Namely that thou woldest geue them a lande / that floweth with mylke and honye.

Iud.ij.iij. iij.vj.viij. *Esa.xviij. b. † Now when they came therein / and possessed it/ they folowed not thy voyce/ and walked not in thy lawe: *but all that thou commaundeste them too do / that haue they not done/ and therfore come all these plagues vpon them.

Beholde / there are bulwerkes made now agaynst the citie to take it / & it shalbe wonne of the Caldees that besege it / with swearde/ with hunger and death / and loke what thou hast spoken/ that same shal come vpon them.

For lo/ all thinges are present vnto the: Yet sayest thou vnto me (O Lorde God) and commaundest me / that I shall lose out a pece of lande vnto my self/ and take witnesses therto: and yet in the meane season the citie is delyuered into the power of the Caldees.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto D me/ sayinge: Beholde / I am the Lord God of all flesh/ Is there any thinge then to harde for me? Therfore thus sayde the Lorde: † be- Iere.xxxij.b
holde/ I shall delyuer this citie into the power xxxiij.b
of the Caldees / and into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babylon / they shall take it in: For the Caldees shal come/ & wynne this citie / and set fyre vpon it / and burne it with the gorgeous houses / in whose parlers they haue made sacrifice vnto Baal/ and poured drynkofferinges vnto straunge goddes/ to prouoke me vnto wrath.

For seinge the children of Israel and ỹ children of Juda haue wraught wickednes before me euer from their youth vp / what haue they els done/ but prouoked me with the workes of their owne handes? sayeth the Lord.

Or what hath this citie bene els/ but a prouokinge of my wrath/ euer sence the daye that I buylded it vnto this houre? Wherein I cast it out of my sight / because of the greate blaspheimes of the chyldren of Israel and Juda / which they haue done to prouoke me: yee/ they/ their kinges/ their princes/ their priestes/ their prophetes/ whole Juda/ and all these cities fyns of Jerusalem.

† When I stode vp early / and taught thē/ Iere.xj.d
and instructe thē / they turned their backes to me/ and not their faces. They wolde not heare/ to be refourmed and correcte. † They haue set Iere.vij.c (their goddes in the house) that is halowed d vnto my name / to defyle it. They haue buylded hie places for Baal/ in the valley of the chyldren of Ennon / to vowe their sonnes and doughters vnto Moloch: which I neuer comcommaunded them / neyther came it euer in my thought/ to make Juda to synne with such abhominacion.

Moreouer/ thus hath the Lorde God of Israel spoken/ concernynge this citie / which (as ye youre selfes confesse) shalbe delyuered into the hande of the kinge of Babylon/ when it is wonne with the swearde / with hunger
Deu.xxx.a and with pestilence. † Beholde/ I will gather them together frō all landes/ wherein I haue scatred them in my wrath / in my fearfull and greate displeasure: and will bringe them agayne vnto this place/ where they shall dwell safely. And they shalbe my people/ & I wil be they: God.

Ps.cxviij.c † And I wil geue them one herte/ and one waye/ that they maye feare me all the dayes of their life/ that they and their children after thē Ez.xxxvj.c maye prospere. And † I will set vp an euerlastinge cōuenaunt with them. Namely: that I will neuer ceasse to do them good / and that I will put my feare in their hertes / so that they shal not runne awaye fro me.

Deu.xxxix. † Yee/ I will haue a lust and pleasure to do them good / and faythfully to plante them in Iere.xxxj.e this lande/ with my whole herte/ and with all my soule.

For thus saieth the Lorde: like as I haue brought all this greate plague vpon this people: so will I also bringe vpon them all the good that I haue promysed them. And men shall haue their possessions in this lāde / whereof ye saye now / that it shall neyther be inhabited of people nor of cattell/ but be deliuered into the hādes of the Caldees. Yee/ lāde shalbe bought for money / and euidēces made therevpon/ and sealed before witnesses in the countrie of Ben Jamin/ and rounde aboute Jerusalem: in the cities of Juda / in the cities that are vpon the mountaines/ and in them that lie beneth/ yee/ and in the cities that are in the deserte. For I wil bringe their prysoners hither agayne/ saieth the Lorde.

The XXXIII. Chapter.

Iere.xx.a xxxij.a A Moreouer the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremy on this maner/ † when he was yet bounde in the courte of the pryson: Thus sayeth the Lorde / which fulfilleth the thinge that he speaketh/ the Lord which performeth the thinge that he taketh in hande:
euen he whose name is the Lorde: Thou hast cried vnto me / and I haue herde the: I haue shewed greate and hye thinges / which were vnknowen vnto you.

Thus (I saye) speaketh the Lorde God of Israel / concerninge the houses of this citie/ & the houses of the kinges of Juda: that they shalbe broken thorow the ordinaunce & weapens/ when the Caldees come to besege them: and they shalbe fylled with the dead carcases of men/ whome I will slaye in my wrath and displeasure: when I turne my face from this citie/ because of all her wickednes. Beholde/ (saieth the Lorde) I will heale their woundes/ and make them whole: I wil open them the treasure of peace and trueth.

And I will returne the captiuitie of Juda B and Israel: and will set them vp agayne as they where afore. † From all misdedes (where- Esa.xliij.d in they haue offended agaynst me) I will clense thē: And all their blaspheimes / which they haue done agaynst me/ when they regarded me not/ I wil forgeue them.

And this shall get me a name/ a prayse/ and honoure amonge al people of the earth/ which shall heare all the good that I will shewe vnto them: Yee/ they shalbe afrayed and astonied at al the good dedes and benefites/ that I will do for them. Moreouer/ thus sayeth the Lorde: † In this place / whereof ye saye that it Iere.vij.d
shalbe a wilderneſſe / wherein neyther people nor cattell shall dwell: In like maner in the cities of Juda and without Jerusalem (which also shalbe so voyde / that neyther people nor cattel shall dwell there) shal the voyce of gladnesse be herde agayne / the voyce of the brydegrome and of the bryde/ the voice of them that shall synge: † (Prayse the Lorde of hoostes/ j.Ma.iiij.c
for he is louynge / and his mercy endureth for Psa.cxvij.a euer) and the voyce of them that shal offre vp gyftes in the house of ỹ Lorde. For I will restore the captiuitie of this lāde as it was afore/ saieth the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde of C hoostes. It shall come yet therto/ that in this lande / which is voyde from men and cattel/ and in all the cities of the lande / there shalbe set vp shepeherdes cotages: in the cities vpon the mountaines/ and in the cities that lie vpon the playne/ and in the deserte.

In the lande of Ben Jamin / in the feldes of Jerusalem / and in the cities of Juda shall the shepe be numbred agayne / vnder the hãde of hym that telleth them / sayeth the Lorde.

Jere xxiij.a † Beholde / the tyme cõmeth (sayeth the Lorde) that I wil perfourme that good thynge / which I haue promised vnto the house of Israel / and to the house of Juda. In those dayes / and at the same tyme / I will brynge forth vnto Dauid the braunch of righteousnes / and he shall do equitie and righteousnesse in the lãde.

Esa.xxxij.c In those dayes shall Juda be helped / † and Jerusalem shall dwell safe / and he that shall call her / is euen God oure righteous maker.

j.Reg.ij.g For thus the Lorde promiseth: † Dauid shall neuer want one to syt vpon the seate of the ij.Re.vij.c house of Israel: † neyther shall the priestes and Leuites want one to offre alwaye before me / burntofferinges / to kindle ỹ meatofferinges / and to prepare the sacrifices.

9 And the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremy after this maner: Thus saieth the

Gen.viij.b Lorde: Maye the conuenaunt / † which I haue made with daye and night / be broken that there shoulde not be daye and nyghte in due season: Then maye my conuenaunt also be broken / whiche I made with Dauid my seruaunte / and so he not to haue a sonne to

j.Pet.ij.a raygne in his Trone. † So shall also the priestes and Leuites neuer fayle / but serue me.

Gen.xv.a xxij c † For like as the starres of heauen maye not be numbred / neyther the sande of the see measured: so will I multiplie the sede of Dauid my seruaunte / and of the Leuites my ministers.

Moreouer / the worde of the Lorde came to Jeremy / sayinge: Considrest thou not what this people speaketh? Two kynredes (saye they) had the Lorde chosen / and those same two hath he cast awaye. (For so farre is my people come / that they haue no hope to come together any more / and to be one people agayne.) Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: If I haue made no conuenaunt with daye and nyght / and geuen no statute vnto heauen and earth: then will I also cast awaye the sede of Dauid my seruaunt: so that I will take no prince out of his sede / to rule the posterite of Abraham / Isaac and Jacob. But yet I will turne agayne theyr captiuitie / and be mercifull vnto them.

The. XXXIIII. Chapter.

THese are the wordes whiche the Lorde A spake vnto Jeremy / † what tyme as Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon / (& all his hoostes (out of all the kingdomes ỹ were vnder his power) and all his people fought agaynst Jerusalem / and all the cities therof. Thus saieth the Lorde God of Israel: Go / and speake to Sedechias the king of Juda / & tell hym: The Lorde sendeth the this worde: Beholde / † I will deliuer this citie into the Jer.xxxij.a iiij re xxv.a hande of the kinge of Babylon / he shall burne Jer.xxxij.a it / and thou shalt not escape hys handes / but xxxix.a shalt be led awaye prysoner / and delyuered into his power: Thou shalt loke the kinge of Babylon in the face / and he shall speake with the mouth to mouth / & then shalt thou go to Babylon. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde / o Sedechias thou kinge of Juda: Thus saieth the Lorde vnto the: Thou shalt not be slayne with the swearde / but shalt dye in peace. † Like j.Re.xxij.c as thy forefathers / ỹ kinges / thy progenitours were brent: so shal thou be brent also / and in ỹ mourninge they shall saye: oh lorde. For thus haue I determined / saieth the Lorde.

Then spake Jeremy the prophet all these B wordes vnto Sedechias kinge of Juda in Jerusalem: what tyme as the kynge of Babylõs hooste besieged Jerusalem / and the remnaunt of the cities of Juda. Namely / Lachis and Azecha / which yet remayned of the † stronge de- j.Par.xj.a fenced cities of Juda.

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy the prophet / when Sedechias was agreed with all the people at Jerusalem / that there should be proclaymed † a liberte: so Exod.xxi. that euery man shoulde let go fro his seruãt / Leui.xxv. and handemaide / Hebrue and Hebruesse / and Deut.xv. no Jewe to holde hys brother as a bondemã. In this also dyd all the princes and all the people consente / which agreed vnto this conuenaunt / ỹ euery one shoulde let his seruaunt & his handmayde go fre / and nomore to holde them as bonde. Now as they had consented / euen so they were obediẽt / & let thẽ go fre. But afterwarde they repented / & toke againe ỹ seruauntes & hãdemaydẽs / whome they had letten go fre / and so made them bonde agayne.

For the which cause the worde of ỹ Lorde C came vnto Jeremy from the Lorde him selfe / sayinge:

sayinge: Thus saieth the Lorde God of Israel: I made a conuenaunte with youre fathers / when I brought them out of Egypte / (that they shoulde no more be bondmen / I) sayDeut xv.b inge: † When seuen yeares are out / euery man Exod.xxi.a shall let go fre his bought seruaunt / an Hebrue / if he haue serued him sixe yeares. But your fathers obeied me not / and herkened not vnto me. As for you / ye were now turned and dyd right before me / in ỹ ye proclaymed / euery man to let his neyghboure go fre / & in that ye made a cõuenaunt before me / in the tẽple that beareth my name: But yet ye haue turned your selfes agayne / & blasphemed my name. In this / that euery mã hath required his seruaunt & handemayden againe / whome ye had letten go quyte and fre / and compelled thẽ to serue you agayne / and to be youre bondemen. And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: Ye haue not obeyed me / euery man to proclayme fredome vnto hys brother & neyghbour: wherfore I will call you vnto a fredome / sayeth the Lorde: euen vnto the swearde / to the pestilence / and to hunger / and will make you to be plagued in al the kingdomes of the earth. Yee / those men that haue broken my conuenaunt / and not kepte the wordes of the appoyntmẽt / Gene.xv.b which they made before me: † when they hewed the calfe in two / and when there wente thorow the two halfes therof: the princes of Juda / the princes of Jerusalem / the gelded men / the priestes / and all the people of the lãde (whiche wente thorow the two sydes of the calfe) Those men will I geue into the power of their enemies / and into the handes of them that folowe vpon theyr lyfes.

Psal.xviij.a † And their dead bodyes shalbe meate for Jere.vij. d the fooles of the ayre / and beastes of the felde. As for: Sedechias the kynge of Juda and his princes / I wil delyuer them into the power of theyr enemies / and of them that desyre to slaye them / and into the hande of the kynge of Ba-

Jer.xxxvij. a bylons hooste / † which now is departed from you. But thorow my commaundement (saieth the Lorde) they shall come againe before this citie / they shall fight against it / wynne it / and burne it. Moreouer I will laye the cities of Juda so waist / that no man shall dwel therein.

The XXXV. Chapter.

THe wordes whiche the Lord spake vn- A to Jeremy / (in ỹ raygne of Joiachim the sonne of Josias kinge of Juda) are these: Go to the house of † the Rechabites / & call thẽ out / iiij.Reg.x.c and bringe thẽ to the house of the Lord into some commodious place / and geue thẽ wyne to drynke. Then toke I Jasanias the sonne of Jeremy / the sonne of Habazania / and his brethren / & all his sonnes / & the whole housholde of the Rechabites: and brought them into the house of the Lorde / into the closet of the children of Hanan the sonne of Igdalia the man of God: which was by the closet of the princes / that is aboue the closet of Maasia ỹ sonne of Sellum / which is the chiefe of the treasury. And before the sõnes of the kynred of the Rechabites / I set pottes full of wyne / and cuppes / and sayde vnto them: drinke wyne. But they sayde: we drynke no wyne. For Jonadab the sonne of Rechab oure father commaunded vs / sayinge: Ye and youre sonnes shall neuer drinke wyne / † buylde no houses / sowe Jere.xxxv.b no sede / plante no vynes / yee / ye shall haue no vyneyardes: but for al youre tyme ye shal dwel in tentes / that ye maye lyue lõge in the lande / wherein ye be straungers.

Thus haue we obeyed the commaundemẽt B of Jonadab / the sonne of Rechab oure father / in all that he hath charged vs / & so we drinke no wyne all oure lyue longe: we / our wyfes / our sonnes / & our doughters. Neyther builde we any house to dwell therein / we haue also amõge vs neyther vyneyardes / nor corne lãde to sowe: but we dwel in tentes / we obeye / and do accordinge vnto all that Jonadab our father commaunded vs.

But now / that Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babylon came vp into the lande / we sayde: come / let vs go to Jerusalẽ / ỹ we maye escape the hooste of the Caldees and the Assyrians / & so we dwel now at Jerusalem. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy / sayinge: Thus saieth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: Go and tell whole Juda and al the inhabitours of Jerusalem. Wil ye not be refourmed / to obeye my wordes? sayeth the Lorde. The wordes which Jonadab the sonne of Rechab cõmaunded his sonnes / that they should drynke no wyne / are fast and surely kept: for vnto this daye they drinke no wyne: but obeye their fathers cōmaundement. But as for me/

Jer. xviij. a. xxv. a. † I haue stande vp early/ I haue spoken vnto you / and geuen you earnest warnynge: and yet haue ye not bene obedient vnto me. Yee/ I haue sent my seruaūtes/all the prophetes vnto you/ I rose vp early/ and sent you worde/ sayinge: O turne you/ euery man frō his wicked waye: amende your lyues / and go not after straunge goddes/to worshippe thē: ꝙ ye maye continue in the lāde / which I haue geue vnto you and youre fathers / but ye wolde neyther heare me/nor folowe me.

The children of Jonadab Rechabs sonne haue stedfastly kepte their fathers commaundemēt/that he gaue thē / but this people is not obedient vnto me. And therfore thus saieth ꝙ Lorde of hoostes ꝙ God of Israel: Beholde/ I wil bringe vpō Juda & vpon euery one that dwelleth in Jerusalē / all the trouble ꝙ I haue deuysed agaynst thē. † For I haue spokē vnto Prou. j. f. Esa. lxv. b. Jere. vij. b. thē/ but they wolde not folowe: I haue called vnto thē/neuertheles/ they wolde geue me no aunswere. Jeremy also spake vnto the housholde of the Rechabites. Thus saieth ꝙ Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: For so muche as ye haue obeyed the commaundement of Jonadab your father/and kepte all his preceptes/ and done accordinge vnto al that he hath bidden you: Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of Jere. xxxiij. c. hoostes the God of Israel: † Jonadab ꝙ sonne of Rechab shall not fayle/but haue one out of his flocke/to stande alwaye before me.

The. XXXVI. Chapter.

A AN the fourth yeare of Joachim the sonne of Josias kinge of Juda/came the worde
Jere. xxx. d. of the Lorde vnto Jeremy/sayinge. † Take a boke/ and write therein all the wordes that I haue spoken to the/to Israel / to Juda / and to all the people / from the tyme that I beganne for to speake vnto the (in the raigne of Josias) vnto this daye. That when the house of Juda heareth of the plague / which I haue deuised
Jer. xviij. a. for thē/ they maye peraduenture † turne euery man from his wicked waye / that I maye forgeue they: offences and synnes.

Then dyd Jeremy call Baruch the sonne of Jere. xlv. a. Nerias / † and Baruch wrote in the boke at the mouth of Jeremy / all the wordes of the Lorde/which he had spoken vnto hym. And Jeremy commaunded Baruch sayinge: I am let/so that I maye not come into the house of the Lorde: therfore go thou thither/ and rede the boke that thou hast written at my mouth: Namely / the wordes of the Lorde/ and rede thē in the Lordes house vpon the fastinge daye: that the people/whole Juda/ and al they that come out of ꝙ cities of Juda maye heare. Peraduēture they wil praye meekely before the face of the Lorde/ and turne euery one from his wicked waye. For great is the wrath and displeasure/that the Lord hath taken against this people.

So Baruch the sonne of Nerias dyd ac- B cordinge vnto al that Jeremy the prophet cōmaunded hym / readinge the wordes of the Lord/ out of the boke in the Lordes house. And this was done in the fyfth yeare of Joachim the sonne of Josias kinge of Juda in the Jone iij. a. ix. moneth † when it was commaunded / that all the people of Jerusalem shoulde faste before the Lorde/ and they also that were come from the cities of Juda vnto Jerusalem.

Then red Baruch the wordes of Jeremy out of the boke / within the house of the Lord out of the treasury of Gamarias the sonne of Saphan the scribe / whiche is beſyde the hyer lofte of the † new porte of the Lordes house:
Jer. xxxj. d. that all the people might heare. Now when Micheas the sonne of Gamarias the sonne of Saphan had herde all the wordes of the Lord out of the boke / he wente doune to the kinges palayce into the scribes chaumbre / for there all the princes were set: Elisama the scribe/ Salias the sonne of Semei/ Elnathan the sonne of Achbor / Gamaria the sonne of Saphan/Sedechias the sonne of Hananias/ with all the princes. And Micheas tolde thē all the wordes/ that he herde Baruch rede out of the boke before the people.

Then all the princes sent Jehudi the sonne of Nathanias/the sōne of Salamia/ the sonne of Chusi/vnto Baruch / saying: Take in thine C hande the boke/ wherout thou haste red before all the people/ and come. So Baruch ꝙ sonne of Nerias toke the boke in his hande / & came vnto them. And they sayde vnto him: Syt doune/ and rede the boke/ that we maye heare also. So Baruch red/ that they might heare. Now when they had herde all the wordes/ they were abashed one vpon another / and sayde saide vnto Baruch: We wil certifye the kinge of al these wordes. And they examined Baruch/sayinge/Tel vs/how diddest thou write al these wordes out of his mouth? Then Baruch aunswered them: He spake al these wordes vnto me with his mouth/ & I alone was with him/and wrote them in the boke.

Then saide the princes vnto Baruch: Go thy waye/ and hyde the with Jeremy/so that no man knowe where ye be. And they wente into the kynge to the courte. But they kepte the boke in the chaumbre of Elisama ꝙ scribe/ and tolde the kinge all the wordes that he mighte heare. So the kinge sente Jehudi to ferche him the boke/whiche he brought out of Elisama the scribes chaumbre. And Jehudi red it/that the kyng and al the princes/ which were aboute him/ mighte heare. Nowe the kinge sat in the winter house/for it was in the
j. Mac. j. c. ix. moneth/and there was a good fyre before hym. And when Jehudi had red thre or four leaues thereof/he cut the boke in peces with a penne knyfe/ † and cast it into the fyre vpō the herth/vntil the boke was al brente in the fyre vpon the herth.

Yet no man was abashed thereof / or rente his clothes: neither the kynge him selfe/ nor his seruauntes / though they herde all these wordes. Neuertheless/ Elnathan / Salias & Gamarias besoughte the kinge/that he wold not burne the boke: notwithstandinge / the kynge wolde not heare them/But commaunded Jeramyhel the sonne of Amalech/ Sarias the sonne of Esriel/ and Selamia the sōne of Abdiell to laye handes vpon Baruch the scribe/and vpon Jeremy the prophet: but the D Lord kepte thē out of sight. After nowe that the kinge had brente the boke/and the sermōs which Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremy: The worde of the Lord came vnto Jeremy sayinge: Take another boke/and wryte in it all the foresaide sermons/that were wrytten in the fyrst boke/which Joachim the kinge of Juda hath brente.

And tell Joachim the kinge of Juda/Thus sayeth the Lorde: thou hast brente the boke and thoughtest within thy selfe: Why haste thou wrytten therein/ that the kynge of Babilon shall come/and make this lande waist/ & that he shall make both people and cattel be out of it: Therfore thus the Lorde sayeth of Joachim the kinge of Juda: † There shall iiij. r. xxiij. b none of his generacion syt vpon the seate of Dauid. † His dead corse shalbe caste out/that Jere. xxij. c the heat of the daye/and the frost of the night maye come vpon him: And I wyll vyset the wickednesse of him/of his sede/and of his seruauntes. Moreouer/ al the euell that I haue promised them (thoughe they herde me not) wyll I bringe vpon them/ vpon the inhabitoures of Jerusalem / and vpon all Juda. Then toke Jeremy another boke/ and gaue it Baruch the scribe the sonne of Nerias/ which wrote therein oute of the mouth of Jeremye: all the sermons that were in the fyrste boke/ whiche Joachim ꝙ kinge of Juda dyd burne. And there were added vnto them many mo sermons then before.

The. XXXVII. Chapter.

GEdechias the sonne of Josias/ † (whiche A was made kynge thorowe Nabuchodo- iiij. r. xxiij. d nosor kynge of Babylon) raygned in the lāde of Juda/in the steade of Jechonias the sonne of Joachim. But neyther he / nor his seruauntes/ nor the people in the lande wolde obeye the wordes of the Lord/which he spake by the prophet Jeremye. † Neuertheless/ Se- Jere. xxj. a. dechias the kynge sente Juchal the sonne of xlij. a. Selamia and Sophonias/the sonne of Maasia the prieste to the prophet Jeremy/sayinge: O praye thou vnto the Lord oure God for vs. Nowe Jeremy walked fre amonge the people at that tyme/ and was not put in pryson as yet. † Pharaos hooste also was come Eze. xvij. b oute of Egypte: whiche when the Caldees that beseged Jerusalem perceaued / they departed from thence.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy the prophet/sayinge: Thus saieth the Lorde God of Israel. This aunswere shall ye geue to the kynge of Juda / that sente you B vnto me for counsaill: † Beholde / Pharaos Jere. xlvj. a. hooste which is come forth to helpe you / shal returne to Egypte into his owne lande: But the Caldees shal come againe / and fyghte against this citie/wynne it / and set fyre vpon it. For thus saieth the Lord: Disceaue not your owne myndes / thinkinge on this maner. Tushe/the Caldees go nowe they: waye from vs. No / they shall not go they: waye. For thoughe ye had slayne the whole hooste of the Caldees/that besege you/and euery one of the slaine laie in his tente:yet shoulde they stande vp/and set fyre vpon this citie. Nowe when the hooste of the Caldees was broken vp from Jerusalem/for feare of the Egypcians armye/Jeremy went out of Jerusalem toward the lande of Ben Jamin/to do certaine busy-

C nesse there amonge the people. And when he came vnder Ben Jamins porte/there was a porter called Jerias the sonne of Selamia the Jer. xxxviij.a sonne of †Hananias/which fell vpon him & toke him/sayinge: thy minde is to runne to the Caldees. Then saide Jeremy: It is not so/ I go not to the Caldees. Neuertheles/Jerias wolde not beleue him/but broughte Jeremy bound before the princes. Wherfore ỹ princes were angrye with Jeremy/causynge him to be beaten/and to be layed in prison in ỹ house of Jonathas the scribe. For he was the ruler of the prison. Thus was Jeremy put into the
Jer. xxxviij.c doungeon and prison/and so laye there a longe tyme. †Then Sedechias the king sente for him/and called him/& axed him quietly in his owne house/saying: thinkest thou this busynes (that now is in hande) commeth of the Lorde? Jeremy aũswerde: yea/that it doeth: & thou (sayde he) shalt be delyuered into the kinge of Babilons power.

D Moreouer/Jeremy sayde vnto kinge Sedechias: What haue I offended against the/ against thy seruauntes/or against this people/ that ye haue caused me to be put in prison.
Jere. xxviij xxxvij. †Where are youre prophetes/whiche haue prophecied vnto you & saide/that the kinge of Babilõ shoulde not come against you & this lande? And therfore heare nowe/o my lorde ỹ kinge: let my praier be accepte before the/and sende me nomore into the house of Jonathas the scribe/that I dye not there. Then Sedechias the kinge commaunded to put Jeremy in the forecentrye of the prison/and daylye to be geuen him a cake of bread/& els no dighte meate/vntil al the bread in the citie was eatẽ vp. Thus Jeremy remayned in the forecentry of the prison.

The. XXXVIII. Chapter.

A SAphatias the sonne of Mathan/Godolias the sonne of Pashur/Juchal the sonne of Selamia/& Pashur the sõne of Malchias/perceaued the wordes that Jeremy had spoken vnto all the people/namely on this
Jere. xxj. maner: Thus saieth the Lorde: †Who so remayneth in this citie/shal perishe/eyther xxxvij.a with the sweardc/with hunger/or with pestilence: But who so falleth vnto the Caldees/ shal escape/winning his soule for a praye/and Jere. xxxviij shall lyue. † For thus saieth the Lorde. This citie (no doubte) muste be delyuered into the power of the kynge of Babilon/and he also shall wynne it. Then saide the princes vnto the kinge: Syr/we besech you let this man be put to death. For thus he discourageth the handes of the souldiers that be in this cytie/& the handes of al the people/when he speaketh such wordes vnto thẽ. This mã verely labou-reth not for peace of the people/but mischiefe. Sedechias the kinge aunswered and saide: lo/ he is in youre hãdes/for ỹ king may deny you nothinge. Then toke they Jeremy/& cast him into the doungeõ of Malchias the sonne of Amelech/that dwelt in the forecentry of the prison. And they let doun Jeremy with coardes into a doungeon/where there was no water/
B but myre. So Jeremy stack faste in the myre. Now when Abdemelech the Morian/beyng a chaumberlaine in the kynges courte/vnder-stode that they had cast Jeremy into the dou-geon: he wente oute of the kinges house/and spake to the kinge (whiche then sat vnder the porte of Ben Jamin) these wordes: My lorde the kynge/where as these men medle with Je-remy the prophet/they do him wronge: Na-mely/in that they haue put him in prison/ there to dye of hunger/for there is no more bread in the citie. Then the kynge commaun-ded Abdemelech the Morian/and saide: Take from hence. xxx. men whome thou wilt/and drawe vp Jeremy the prophet out of the dou-geon/before he dye. So Abdemelech toke the men with him/and wente to the house of A-malech/and there vnder an almery he gat ol-de ragges/& woerne clouthes/& let thẽ doune by a coarde/vnto the doungeon to Jeremy.

And Abdemelech the Morian sayde vnto the prophet Jeremy: O put these raggcs and clouthes vnder thine arme holes/betwixte them and the coardes: and Jeremy did so. So they drewe vp Jeremy with coardes/& toke him out of the doungeõ/and he remay-

C dechias the king sente and caused Jeremy the prophet be called vnto him/into the thirde entrye/that was by the house of the Lorde. And the kinge saide vnto Jeremy: I wil axe the somwhat/but hyde nothinge fro me.
Then Jeremye aunswerde Sedechias: If I be plaine vnto the/thou wilt cause me suffre death: if I geue the coũsail/thou wilt not fo-lowe me. So the kynge swore an ooth secret-ly vnto Jeremy/sayinge: As truly as the Lord lyueth/that made vs the soules/I wil not slaye the/nor geue the into the handes of them/that seke after thy life.

Then sayd Jeremy vnto Sedechias. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Is-
Jer. xxxvij. b rael: †If case be that thou wilt go forth vnto the kynge of Babilons princes/thou shalte saue thy life/and this citie shall not be brente/ yee/both thou and thy housholde shall escape with youre lyues. But if thou wilt not go forth to the kinge of Babilons princes/then shall this citie be deliuered into the handes of the Caldees/whiche shal set fyre vpon it/and thou shalte not be able to escape them. And Sedechias saide vnto Jeremy: I am afraide for the Jewes/that are fled vnto the Caldees/ lest/I come in their handes/and so they to haue me in derision.

D But Jeremy aunswered: No/they shall not betraye the: O herken vnto the voice of the Lorde (I beseche the) which I speake vn-to the/so shalt thou be well/and saue thy lyfe. But if thou wilt not go forth/the Lord hath tolde me this plainely: Behold/al the women that are left in the kinge of Judas house/shal go out to the kinge of Babilons princes. For they thinke that thou art disceaued: and that the men in whom thou diddest put thy trust/ haue gotten the vnder/and set thy fete fast in the myre/and gone their waye from the. Therfore al thy wyues with their children shal fle vnto ỹ Caldees/and thou shalte not escape their handes/but shalt be the kynge of Babi-lõs prysoner/and this citie shalbe brent. Thẽ sayde Sedechias vnto Jeremy: loke that no body knowe of these wordes/and thou shalte not dye. But if the princes perceaue that I haue talked with the/and come vnto the/say-inge: O speake/what saide the kinge to the:
hyde it not from vs/and we wil not put the to death. Tell vs (we praye the) what said the kinge to the: Se thou geue thẽ this aunswere: I haue humbly besoughte the kinge/that he wil let my lie nomore in Jonathas house/that I dye not there. Then came all the princes vnto Jeremy/and axed him. And he tolde them/after the maner as the kinge bad him. Then they helde their peace/for they perceaued nothinge. †So Jeremy abode stil in the Jer. xxxix. c forecentry of the prison/vntil the daie that Jerusalem was wonne.

The. XXXIX. Chapter.

NOw †when the citie of Jerusalem was A taken/* for in the ix. yare of Sedechias Jer. xxxij. & king of Juda in the tenth moneth/came Na- *iiij. r. xxv. & buchodonosor the king of Babilon and al his Jere. lij. c hooste/and besèged Jerusalem. And in the xj. yeare of Sedechias in the fourth moneth the ix. daye of the moneth/(the brake into the citie.) Then al the kynge of Babilons princes came in/and sat them doune vnder the porte: Nergal/Sarczer/Samgarnebo/Sarsechim/ Rabsaris/Nergal/Sarczer/Rabmag/with al the other prynces of the kinge of Babilon.
†And when Sedechias the kinge of Juda Je. xxxiij. & with his souldyers sawe them/they fled/and departed out of the citie by night thorowe the kynges garden/and thorow the porte that is betwene the two walles/and so they wente towarde the wilderneſſe.

But the Caldees hooste folowed fast after them/and toke Sedechias in the felde of Je-richo/and brought him prysoner to Nabucho donosor the kinge of Babylon vnto Rebla-tha/that lyeth in the lande of Hemath/where he gaue iudgement vpon him. So the kinge B of Babilon caused the children of Sedechias/ and al the nobles of Juda be slayne/before his face at Reblatha. And made Sedechias eyes be put out/and bounde him with chaynes/& sent him to Babilon.

†Moreouer/the Caldees brent vp the kin- iiij. re. xxv. & ges palayce/with the other houses of the peo- Jer. xxxij. d ple/and brake doune the walles of Jerusalẽ. Now whyle Jeremy laye yet bounde in the fore entry of the pryson / the worde of the Lorde came vnto him saynge: Go/and tell Abdemelech the Morian: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes / the God of Israell: Beholde / the cruell and sharpe plague that I haue deuised for this citie/wil I bringe vpon them / that thou shalte se it: but I wyll delyuer the (sayeth the Lorde) and thou shalte not come in the handes of those men / whome thou feareste. A THis is the maner/howe the Lorde entreated Jeremy / † when Nebuzaradan

The chiefe captayne called for Jeremye / and sayde vnto him: The Lorde thy God spake mightely before of the misery vpon this place: Nowe the Lorde hath sente it/ and perfourmed it/ as he had promised: For ye haue synned against the Lorde / and haue not bene obedient vnto his voyce/ therfore commeth this plague vpon you. Yee/all the Jewes also that dwelt in Moab vnder the Ammonites/in Idumea and in all the countries/whē they herde / ꝑ the kinge of Babilon had made Godolias the sonne of Ahicam the sonne of Saphā/gouernour vpon thē ꝑ were left in Juda: All the Jewes (I say) returned oute of all places where they were fled vnto: & came into the lāde of Juda to Godolias vnto Maspha/ & gathered wyne and other

D Moreouer/ Johanna the sonne of Carea & al the captaynes of the hoste/that were scatred on euery syde in the lande/ came to Godolias in Maspha/ & saide vnto him: knowest thou not ꝑ Baalis kyng of the Ammonites hath sent Ismael the sonne of Nathanias/ to slay the? But Godolias the sonne of Ahicam beleued them not. Their sayde Johāna the sonne of Carea vnto Godolias in Maspha these wordes secretly: Let me go (I praie the) and I wil slaye Ismael the sonne of Nathanias/ so that no body shal know it. Wherfore wil he kil the/that al the Jewes which resorte vnto the/ might be scatred/ and the remnaunt in Juda perishe? Thē sayde Godolias the sonn of Ahicam to Johanna the sonne of Carea: Thou shalt not do it/ for they are but lies that men saye of Ismael.

The. XLI. Chapter.

And when they returned/they came to Johanna the sonne of Carea. But Ismael the sonne of Nathanias fled from Johāna with eyght of his swome companions/ and wente to the Ammonites. B And after ten dayes came the worde of the Lord vnto Jeremy. Then called he Johanna the sonne of Carea/ and al the captaines of the people that were with him: Yee/ & all the people frō the least to the moost/ and saide vnto them: Thus saieth the Lord God of Israel/ vnto whome ye sent me/ to lay forth youre praiers before him: † If ye will dwell in this lande/ I shal builde you vp/ & not breake you doune: I shal plante you/ & not rote you out: for I am pacifyed/ as concerninge the trouble that I haue done to you. Feare not the kinge of Babilō/ of whom ye stand in awe: O be not afrayed of him/ saieth the Lord: For I wil be with you to helpe you/ and deliuer you frō his hande. I will pardon you/ I wyl haue mercy vpon you/ and bringe you againe into youre owne lande.

C Neuertheless/ if ye purpose not to dwel in this land/ nor to folowe the voice of the Lorde youre God: but will saye thus: we will not dwell here/ but go into Egypte: where we shall neyther se warre/ heare the noyse of battail/ nor suffre hunger/ there wil we dwel. Then heare the worde of the Lorde/ o ye rēnaunt of Juda. Thus saieth the Lorde of hooستes the God of Israel: † If ye be whole purposed to go into Egipte/ and to be there as straungers: the swearde † that ye feare shal ouertake you in Egypt/ & the hunger whereof ye be here afrayed/ shal hange vpon you in to Egipte/ and there ye shal dye. For al they/ that of set purpose vndertake to go into Egipte/ there to ease them selfes of their misery/ shal perish with the swearde/ with hunger & pestilence: not one of them shal remaine/ there shal none escape the plague that I wil bringe vpon them.

Jere. xxvj.a
Jere. xlij.c
Deu. xxviij.

For thus sayeth the Lorde of hooستes the God of Israel: like as my wrath and indignacion is come vpon the inhabitours of Jerusalem/ so shall my displeasure go forth vpon you also/ if ye go into Egipte: For there ye shalbe reuyled/ abhorred/ brought to shame and confusyon: and as for this place/ ye shall neuer se it more. The Lorde forbydden you (o ye remnaunt of Juda) that ye shall not go into Egypte. And forget not that I haue warned you earnestly this daye/ els shall ye begyle youre selfes. † For ye sente me vnto the Lorde youre God/ and sayde: O praye thou the Lorde oure God for vs: and loke what aunswere the Lorde oure God geueth the/ that bringe vs againe/ and we shall do thereafter. Nowe haue I shewed/ and declared vnto you the voyce of the Lord youre God/ for the whiche cause he hath sente me to you. † If ye will not folowe it/ be sure that ye shall dey by the swearde/ with hunger and pestilence: euen in the same place/ where youre lust was to go and dwel.

The. XLIII. Chapter.

NOwe when Jeremy had ended all the A wordes of the Lord God vnto the people/ (for their sakes to whome God had sente hym) Asarias the sonne of Osias/ and Johanna the sonne of Carea/ with al the proude persones/ saide vnto Jeremy: † Thou liest/ the Lord oure God hath not sente the to speake vnto vs/ that we shoulde not go into Egipte/ and dwel there: But Baruch the sonne of Nerias prouoketh the against vs/ that he might bringe vs into the captiuitie of the Caldees: that they might slaye vs/ and carie vs awaye prysoners vnto Babilon.

Jere. xlij.

So Johanna the sonne of Carea/ and all the

the captaynes of the hooste/ and all the people folowed not the cōmaundement of the Lorde: Namely/ to dwell in the lande of Juda: But Johanna the sonne of Carea and all the captaines of the hoste/ carried awaie al the rēnaunt in Juda/ † that were come together againe from the Heithen (among whome they had bene scatred) to dwel in the lande of Juda: Men/ women/ children/ the kinges doughters: al these that Nabusaradan the chiefe captaine had lefte with Godolias the sonne of Ahicam. They caried awaie also the prophete Jeremy/ Baruch the sonne of Nerias/ and so came into Egipte: for they were not obedient vnto the commaundemente of God. Thus came they to Taphnis.

Jere. xliij.c

B And in Taphnis the worde of the Lorde happened vnto Jeremy/ sayinge: Take greate stones in thine hande/ and hyde them in the brick wal/ vnder the gate of Pharaos house in Taphnis/ that al the men of Juda may se/ and saie vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lord of hooستes the God of Israel: † Beholde/ I wil send and cal for Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon my seruaunt/ and wil set his seate vpon these stones that I haue hyd/ and he shal spred his tente ouer them.

Jere. xlvj.c

And when he commeth/ he shall smyte the lande of Egipt with slaughter/ with [illegible] ment/ and with the swearde. He shal set fyre vpon the temples of the Egypcians goddes/ and burne them vp/ & take them selfes prysoners. Moreouer/ he shal araye him self with the lande of Egypt/ like as a shepeherde putteth on his cote/ and shal departe awaye from thence in peace. The pyllers also of the temple of the Sunne that is in Egypt/ shal he breake in peces/ and burne the temples of the Egypcians goddes.

The. XLIIII. Chapter.

A THis is the woorde that was shewed to Jeremye/ concerninge all the Jewes/ whiche dwelte in Egypte at Magdall/ at Taphnis/ at Memphis/ & in the lande of Patures. Thus saieth the Lorde of hooستes the God of Israel: Ye haue sene al ỹ misery that I haue brought vpon Jerusalem/ and vpon all the cities of Juda: so that this daye they are desolate/ and no man dwellinge therin: & that because of the greate blaspheimies/ which they committed/ to prouoke me vnto anger: In that they wente backe to do sacrifyce/ and worshippe vnto straung goddes: whom neither they/ nor ye/ nor your fathers haue knowen. Howbeit/ I sent vnto them my seruaūtes al the prophetes: † I rose vp early/ I sente vnto them/ & gaue them warninge: O do no suche abhominable thinges/ & thinges that I hate. But they wolde not folowe nor herken/ to turne from their wickednes/ and to do no more sacrifice vnto straunge goddes.

xxix.c

Wherfore my indignacion & wrathe was kyndled/ and it brente vp the cities of Juda/ the feldes with the stretes of Jerusalem: so that they were made waiste and desolate/ as it is come to passe this daye. Nowe therefore thus sayeth the Lorde of hooستes the God of Israel: Howe happeneth it/ that ye do so greate euell vnto youre owne soules/ thus to destroye the men & women/ children and babes of Juda: so that none of you is lefte/ because ye prouoke me vnto wrath with the workes of youre owne handes: when ye offre vnto straunge goddes in the lande of Egypte/ where as ye be gone to dwell: That ye might B vtterly perishe/ and that ye mighte be reuyled and shamfully intreated of all nacions. Or haue ye nowe forgotten the wickednesse of youre forefathers/ the wickednesse of the kynges of Juda and their wifes/ the wickednes that ye youre selfes and youre wyfes haue done in the lande of Juda/ in the citie and in the lande of Jerusalem?

Yet are ye not sory this daye/ ye feare nor neither walke ye in my lawe and in my commaundementes/ that I haue geuē vnto you and youre forefathers.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde of hooستes the God of Israel: I am stedfastly aduysed and determined/ to punyshe you/ and to rote out al Juda. As for the remnaunt of Juda that purposely wente into Egypte/ there to ease them of their misery: I wyll take them/ † & they shall al be destroyed. In the lande of Egypte shall they perishe/ beynge consumed with the swearde and with hunger. For from the leest vnto the moost/ they shal perish with the swearde and with hunger. Moreouer/ they shalbe reuyled/ abhorred/ shamed/ and confoūded. For I wil visit them that dwel in

Then al the men which knewe that their wifes had offred vnto straunge goddes/ and a great sorte of wifes that stode there/yee/ and al the people that dwelt there in Egypte in the citie of Natures/aunswered Jeremy/ and saide: As for the wordes that thou hast spoken vnto vs in the name of the Lorde/ we wyll in no wyse heare them: But whatsoeuer goeth out of oure owne mouth/that wil we do: We wil do sacrifice/and offre oblacions vnto the Moreouer/Jeremy spake vnto all the people & to all the women: Heare the worde of ỹ Lord all Juda/ye that be in the lande of Egypte: Thus saieth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: Ye and your wifes haue spoken with youre owne mouth/the thinge that ye haue fulfilled in dede.

And al the remnaunt of Juda/ that are gone into Egypte there to dwel/shal knowe whose wordes shalbe founde true/theirs or myne. Take this for a token/ that I wil visit you in this place (saieth the Lord) and that ye maye knowe/howe that I (without doubte) wyll performe my purpose vpon you to punishe you. The. XLV. Chapter. A

THese are the woordes that Jeremy the Jer. xxxvj. a prophet spake vnto Baruch the sonne of Nerias/†after that he had written these Sermons in a boke at the mouth of Jeremy/ In the fourth yeare of Joachim the sonne of Josias kinge of Juda.

Thus saieth the Lorde God of Israel vnto ỹ/O Baruch: In so muche as thou thoughtest thus (when thou wast wrytinge.) Wo is me/the Lorde hath geuen me payne for my trauaile: I haue wearied my selfe wt sighinge/ and shall I fynde no rest? Therfore tell him

And sekest thou yet promocion? Loke not for it/and desyre it not. For I will bringe a miserable plague vpon all flesshe/saieth the Lord.

Fearfulnesse is fallen vpon euerychone of them/saieth the Lorde. The lightest of fote shall not fle awaye/ and the worthies shal not escape.

B Towarde the North by the water of Euphrates they shall stomble and fall. But what is he this that swelleth vp/ as it were a floude roaringe & ragynge like the streames of water? It is Egypte that ryseth vp lyke the floude/ and casteth oute the waters with so great noyse.

For they saye: We will go vp/and wil couer the earth: we will destroye the cities/ with thẽ that dwell therein. Get you to horse backe/ roll forth the charrettes/come forth ye worthies/ye Morians/ye Libeãs with youre bucklers/ye Lideans with youre bowes: So shal this daie be vnto the Lord God of hoostes/ a daye of vengeaunce/ ỹ he maye auẽge hym of his enemies. But in vayne shalt thou go to surgery/ for thy wounde shal not be stopped. The Heythẽ shall heare of thy shame/ and the lande shalbe full of thy confusion: for one stronge man shall stomble vpon another/ how then should they not fall both together?

† These are the wordes that the Lorde C

How happeneth it that thy mighty worthies are fallen? why stode they not fast? Euen because the Lorde thrust them doune. The slaughter was greate/for one fell euer still vpon another. One cried vpon another: Vp/ let vs go agayne to oure owne people/ and to oure owne natural countrie/ from ỹ sweard of oure enemie.

Crie euen there: O Pharao kinge of Egypte/ the tyme will bringe sedicion. As truly as

They also shall fle awaye together/ and not abyde: for the daye of their slaughter/ and the tyme of their visitacion shal come vpon them.

C Where as the spirete led them / thither they Ezech.i.c wente / †& turned not aboute in their goyinge.

The fashion and countenaunce of the beastes was like hote coales of fyre / euē as though burnynge cresshettes had bene amonge the beastes: and the fyre gaue a glistre / and out of the fyre there wente lightninge. When the beastes wente forwarde and backwarde / one wolde haue thought it had lightened. ✠ Now when I had well considered the beastes / I sawe a worke of wheles vpon the earth with foure faces also like the beastes.

D The fasshion and worke of the wheles was like the see. The foure wheles were ioyned and made (to loke vpon) as it had bene one whele in another. When one wente forwarde / they went all foure / and turned thē not aboute in their goyinge. They were large / greate / and horrible to loke vpon.

Their bodies were full of eyes rounde aboute them all foure. Whē the beastes wente / the wheles wente also with them: And when the beastes lift thē selfes vp from the earth / the wheles were lift vp also. Whythersoeuer the spirete wente / thither wente they also / and the wheles were lift vp and folowed thē / for the spirete of life was in the wheles. When the beastes wente forth / stode still / or lift themselfes vp from the earth then the wheles also wente / stode still and were lift vp / for the brethe of life was in the wheles.

E Aboue ouer the heades of the beastes there was a firmament / which was fasshioned as it had bene of the moost pure cristall / and that was spred out aboue vpon their heades: vnder thesame firmament were their wynges layed abroade / one towarde another / and two wynges couered the body of euery beast. And when they wente forth. I herde the noyse of their wynges / like the noyse of greate waters / as it had bene the voyce of the greate God / & a russhinge together as it were of an hoost of mē. And when they stode still / they let doune their wynges. Now when they stode still / and had letten doune their wynges / it thondred in the firmament that was aboue their heades.

Aboue the firmament that was ouer their heades / there was the fasshion of a seate / as it had bene made of Saphir. Vpon the seate there sat one like a man: I behelde him / and he was like a cleare light / as it had bene all of fyre within from his loynes vpwarde.

And beneth when I loked vpon him vnder the loynes / me thought he was like a shyninge fyre / that geueth light on euery syde. Yee / the shyne & glistre that lightened rounde aboute / was like a raynbowe / which in a raine daye appeareth in the cloudes. Euen so was the similitude / wherein the glory of the Lord appeared. When I sawe it / I fell vpon my face / and herkened vnto the voyce of him that spake.

The. II. Chapter.

THen sayde he vnto me: Stande vp vpon A thy fete (O thou sonne of mā) and I will talke with the. †And as he was commoninge Eze.iij.a with me / the spirete came into me / & set me vp vpō my fete: so that I marked the thynge that he saide vnto the. And he sayde: Beholde / thou sonne of man: I will sende the to the children of Israel / to these runnagates and obstinate people: for they haue taken parte agaynst me / and are runne awaye fro me: † both they and Exo.xxxij their forefathers / vnto this daye.

Yee / I will sende vnto ỹ a people that haue rough vysages & stif stomackes: vnto whome thou shalt saye on this maner: This the Lorde God him self hath spoken / ỹ whether they be obedient or no (for it is a frowarde housholde) they they maye knowe yet that there hath bene a prophet amonge them.

B †Therfore (thou sonne of man) feare them Ezech.ij.c not / neyther be afrayed of their wordes: for they shall rebell agaynst the / and despise the. Yee / thou shalt dwell amonge scorpions: but feare not their wordes / be not abashed at their lokes / for it is a frowarde housholde.

Se that thou speake my wordes vnto them / whether they be obediēt or not / for they are obstinate. Therfore (thou sonne of man) obeye thou all thinges / that I saye vnto the / and be not thou stiffnecked / like as they are a stiffnecked housholde. Open thy mouth / and eate that I geue the.

So as I was lokinge vp / beholde / there Apoc.v.a was sent vnto me an hande / wherein was a closed † boke: and the hande opened it before me / and it was written within and without / full of carefull mourninges: alas and wo.

The III. Chapter.

AND sayde he vnto me: thou sonne of mā / Apoc.v.c †eate that whatsoeuer it be: Yee / eate that Esd. closed boke / and go thy waye / and speake vnto iiij.c the childrē of Israel. So I opened my mouth / Apoc.x.b and he gaue me the boke for to eate / and sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man / thy belly shall eate / and thy bowels shalbe fylled with the boke that I geue the. Then dyd I eate ỹ boke / Ezech.xviij.b †and it was in my mouth sweter then hony. Ezech.xviij.n

And he sayde vnto me: *thou sonne of Apoc.x.b man / get the sone vnto ỹ house of Israel / and Jere.j.c shewe them the wordes that I commaunde the: for I sende the not to a people that hath a straunge / vnknowen / or harde speache / but vnto the house of Israel: Not to many nacions / which haue diuerse speaches and herde Ezech.iij.a languages / whose wordes thou vnderstandest not: † Neuertheles / if I sent the to those Ezech.iij.b people / they wolde folowe the: But the house of Israel will not folowe the / for they wil not folowe me: Yee / all the house of Israel haue Ezech.iij.b stif foreheades and harde hertes. † Beholde therfore / I wil make thy face preuayle against their faces / and harden thy foreheade against Esa.l.b their foreheades / so that thy foreheade shalbe harder then an † Adamant or flyntstone: that thou mayest feare them the lesse / and be lesse afrayed of them / for they are a frowarde housholde.

He sayde moreouer vnto me: thou sonne of B man / take diligent hede with thine eares / to the wordes that I speake vnto the / fastē them in thine herte: and go to the prysoners of thy people / speake vnto them / and saye on this maner.

Thus the Lorde God hath spoken: Whether ye heare / or heare not. With that the spirete toke me vp. And I herde the noyse of a greate russhinge and remouynge of the moost blessed glory of the Lorde / out of his place.

I herde also the noyse of the wynges of the beastes / that russhed one against another / yee / and the ratlynge of the wheles that were by them / which russhinge and noyse was very greate.

†Now when the spirete toke me vp / and Ezec.viij.& caried me awaye / I wente with an heauy and xj.d and a sorowfull mynde / but the hande of the Lorde comforted me right sone.

And so in the beginninge of the moneth Abib. I came to the prysoners / † that dwelt Ps.cxxxvj.a by that water of Cobar / and remayned in that place where they were: and so continued I amonge them seuen dayes / beynge very sory.

And when the seuen dayes were expyred / C the Lorde sayde vnto me: † Thou sonne of Ez.xxxiij.b man / I haue made the a watchman vnto the house of Israel: therfore take good hede to the wordes of my mouth / and geue them warnynge at my commandement.

If I saye vnto the / concerninge ỹ vngodly man / that (without doubte) he must dye / and thou geuest him not warninge / nor speakest vnto him / that he maye turne from his euel waye / and so to lyue: Then shall thesame vngodly man dye in his owne vnrighteousnesse but his bloude wil I require of thyne hande. Neuertheles / if thou geue warninge vnto thē wicked / and he yet forsake not his vngodlynesse: thē shal he dye in his owne wickednesse / but thou hast discharged thy soule.

Now / if a righteous man go from † his Ezec.xviij.& righteousnesse / and do the thinge that is euel: I wil laye a stomblinge blocke before him / & he shall dye / because thou hast not geuen him warninge: Yee / dye shall he in his owne synne / so that the vertue / which he dyd before / shal not be thought vpon: but his bloude will

I require of thine hande.

Neuertheles / if thou exhortest the righteous that he synne not / and so the righteous do not synne: Then shall he lyue / because he hath receaued thy warnynge / and thou hast discharged thy soule. And there came the hãde of the Lord vpõ me / and he sayde vnto me: Stãde vp / and go into the felde / that I maye there talke with the.

So when I had rysen vp / and gone forth into the felde: Beholde / the glory of the Lord
Ezech.j.a stode there / † like as I sawe it afore by the water of Cobar.

Ezech.ij.a † Then fel I downe vpon my face / and the spryte came into me / which set me vp vpõ my fete / & sayde thus vnto me: Go thy waye / and spare thy self in thine house. Behold / (O thou sonne of man) there shall chaynes be brought for the / to binde the withal / so that thou shalt not escape out of them. And I will make thy tunge so to cleue to the rofe of thy mouth / that thou shalt be domme and not be as a chider with them: for it is an obstinate housholde.

But when I speake vnto the / then open thy mouth / and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: whoso heareth / let him heare: whoso will not / let him leaue: for it is a frowarde housholde.

The IIII. Chapter.

A THou sonne of man: take a tyle stone / and laye it before the / and describe vpõ it the citie of Jerusalem: how it is besieged / how bulworkes & stronge diches are grauen on euery syde of it: describe also tentes / and an hooste of men rounde aboute it.

Moreouer / take an yron panne / and set it betwixte the and the citie / in steade of an yron wall. Thẽ set thy face towarde it / besege it / and laye ordinaunce agaynst it / to wynne it. This shalbe a token vnto the house of Israel. But thou shalt slepe vpon thy left syde / & laye the synne of the house of Israel vpon the.

Certaine dayes appoynted shalt thou slepe
Dan.ix.d vpon that syde / and beare their sinnes. † Neuertheles / I will appoynte the a tyme (to put of their synnes) and the numbre of the dayes: Thre hundreth and xc. dayes must thou beare the wickednesse of the house of Israel. Whẽ thou hast fulfilled these dayes lye downe agayne / and slepe vpon thy right syde xl. dayes / and beare the synnes of the house of Juda.

† A daye for a yeare / a daye (I saye) for a B

set now thy face agaynst that besieged Jerusalem / & discouer thine arme / that thou mayest prophecie agaynst it.

Behold / I will laye chaynes vpon the / that thou shalt not turne the from one syde to another / till thou hast ended the dayes of thy sege.

Wherfore / take vnto the wheate / barly / beanes / lentylles / mylle and fitches: and put these together in a vessel / and make the loaues of bread thereof / accordinge to the numbre of the dayes that thou must lye vpon that syde / that thou mayest haue bread to eate for thre hundreth and xc. dayes.

And the meate that thou eatest / shall haue a certayne waight appoynted: Namely twẽty sycles euery daye. This appoynted meate shalt thou eate dayly / from the beginninge to the ende.

Thou shalt drynke also a certayne measure of water: Namely / the sixte parte of an Hin shalt thou drynke dayly from the begynninge to the ende. Barly cakes shalt thou eate / yet shalt thou fyrst strake them ouer with mans dounge / that they maye se it. And with that / sayde the Lorde: † Euen thus shal the chil- C

Then sayde I: O Lorde God. Behold / my soule was yet neuer stayned: for fro my youth vp vnto this houre / I dyd neuer eate of a dead carcase / or of ỹ which was slayne of wilde beastes / neither came there euer any vncleane flesh in my mouth.

Where vnto he aunswered me / and sayde: Well than / I will graunte the to take kowes dounge / for the dounge of a man / and to strake the bread ouer withall before them.

And he sayde vnto me: Behold / thou sonne of man / † I will mynishe all the prouysion of Eze.v.d

bread / & eate it with scarcenesse. But as for wa- iiij.re.xx

The V. Chapter.

A TAke the then a sharpe knyfe (O thou sõne of man) namely / a rasoure. Take that / and shaue the heere of thy heade and beerd. Then take the scales and the waight / and deuyde the heere asunder. And burne the thirde parte therof in the fyre in the myddest of the citie / whan the dayes of the sege are ended / and cut ỹ other thirde parte in peces with a knyfe.
xxij.d † As for the thirde parte that remayneth / cast it in the wynde / & then shewe the bare knyfe.

Yet afterwarde take a litle of thesame / and bynde it in thy cote lappe. Then take a curtsy of it / and cast it in the middest of the fyre / and burne it in the fyre. Out of thesame fyre shall there go a flame vpon the whole house of Israel.

B Moreouer / thus sayde the Lorde God: This same is Hierusalẽ. I set her in the middest of the Heythen and nacions / that are rounde aboute her / but she hath despised my iudgementes more then the Gentiles themselues / and broken my commaundementes more then the nacions / that lye rounde aboute her: For they haue cast out myne ordinaunces / and not walked in my lawes. Therfore thus

I will also come vpon the / for in the myddest of the wil I syt in iudgement / in the sight of the Heythen / and will handle the of such a fashion / as I neuer dyd before / and as I neuer will do from that tyme forth / and that because of all thy abhominacions. † For in the / Re.vj.f Such a courte will I kepe in the / & the whole remnaunt will I scatre into all the wyndes.

C Wherfore / as truly as I lyue (saieth the Lorde God) seynge thou hast defyled my Sanctuary / with all maner of abhominaciõs / and with all thy shamefull offences. For this cause will I also destroye the. My eye shal not pytie the / neyther will I spare the.
xxv.a † One thirde parte within the / shall dye of the pestilence and of hunger: Another thirde parte shalbe slayne downe rounde aboute the with the swearde: The other thirde parte that remayneth / will I scatre abroade towarde all the wyndes / and drawe out the swearde after them. Thus will I perfourme my indignacion / and set my wrath agaynst them / and ease my self. So that when I haue fulfilled myne anger agaynst them / they shall knowe that I am the Lorde / which with a feruent gelousy haue spoken it.

Moreouer / I will make the wayst / and ab- D

Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it / and it shall come to passe / when I shute amonge thẽ the parlous dartes of hunger / which shalbe but death: Yee / therfore shall I shute thẽ / because I will destroye you. † And I wil en- Eze.iiij.c
creace hunger / and mynish all the prouysion of bread amonge you.

Plagues and mysery will I sende you / yee / and wilde beastes also to destroye you. Pestilence and bloudshed dinge shall come vpon you / and the swearde will I bringe ouer you. Euen I the Lorde haue sayde it.

The VI. Chapter.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me / A sayinge: Thou sonne of man / turne thy face to the † mountaynes of Israel / that thou Ex.xxxvj.a mayest prophecie vnto them / and saye: Heare the worde of the Lorde God / o ye mountaines of Israel: Thus hath the Lorde God spoken to the mountaines / hilles / valleyes / and dales:

Behold / I wil bringe a swearde ouer you / and destroye youre hye places: I will cast doune youre aulters / and breake doune youre temples. Youre slayne men will I laye before youre goddes / & the dead carcases of the children of Israel wil I cast before their ymages / youre bones wil I strowe roũde aboute youre aulters and dwellinge places.

The cities shalbe desolate / the hillchappels layed waist: youre aulters destroyed and broken: youre goddes cast doune & taken awaye/ your tempels layde eauen with the grounde/ youre owne workes clene roted out. Youre slayne men shall lie amonge you/that ye maye learne to knowe how that I am the Lorde.

B Those that amonge you haue escaped the swearde/ will I leaue amonge the Gentiles/ for I will scatre you amonge the nacions. And they that escape from you/ shall thinke vpon me amonge the Heythen/ where they shalbe in captiuitie.

As for that whorish and vnfaithfull herte of theyrs/ wherwith they runne awaye fro me. I will breake it: yee/ and put out those eyes of theyrs that committe fornicacion with their Idols.

Then shall they be ashamed/ and displeased with their selfes/ for the wickednesses and abhominacions/ which they haue done: and shal learne to knowe how that it is not in vayne/ that I the Lorde speake to bringe such misery vpon them.

C The Lord sayd moreouer vnto me: Smyte thine handes together/ and stampe with thy fete/ and saye: Wo worth all the abhominacions and wickednesses of the house of Israel/ for: because of them/ they shall perish with the swearde/ with hunger/ and with pestilence. Who so is farreof/ shall dye of the pestilence/ he that is at hande/shal dye with the swearde: & the other that are beseged/shall dye of hunger.

Thus will I satisfie my wrothfull displeasure vpon the. And so shal ye learne to knowe/ that I am the Lorde/ when youre slayne men lye amonge youre goddes/ and aboute youre aulters: vpon all hye hilles and toppes of mountaines/amonge al grene trees/amonge all thicke Okes: euen in the places/ where they dyd sacrifice to all their Idols. I will stretch myne hande out vpo them/ and will make the lande waist: So that it shall lye desolate and voyde/ from the wildernesse of Seblat forth/ thorow all their habitacions: to learne the for to knowe/that I am the Lorde.

The. VII. Chapter.

A THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me on this maner: The I call/ O thou sonne of man. Thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto the lande of Israel: The ende commeth/ yee/ verely the ende commeth vpon the foure corners of the earth.

But now shall the ende come vpon the: for I will sende my wrath vpon the/ and wil punysh the: accordinge to the wayes/ & rewarde the after all thy abhominacions. † Myne eye Ezec. viij. ij. c shall not pytie the/ neyther will I spare the: but rewarde the/ accordinge to thy wayes/ and declare thy abhominacions. Then shall ye knowe that I am the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde/ one misery and plague shall come after another: the ende is here. The ende (I saye) that wayteth for the/ is come already/ the houre is come agaynst the that dwellest in the lande.

The tyme is at hande/ the daye of sedicion B is hard by/ and no glad tidinges vpon the mountaynes. Therfore/ I will shortly poure out my sore displeasure ouer the/ and fulfill my wrath vpon the. I will iudge the after thy wayes/ and recompence the all thy abhominacions.

† Myne eye shall not pytie the/ neyther will Ezec. viij.
I spare the: but rewarde the after thy wayes/ ij. c and shewe thy abhominacions: to learne you for to knowe/ how that I am the Lorde that smyteth. Beholde/ the daye is here/ the daye is come/ the houre is runne out/ the rodde florisheth/ wylfulnesse waxeth grene/ malicious violence is growen vp/ & the vngodly waxen to a staffe. Yet shall there no complaynte be made for them/ nor for the trouble that shall come of these thinges.

The tyme commeth/ the daye draweth nye: † Who so byeth/ let him not reioyce: he that i. Cor. vij. c seller shall not come agayne to ỹ byer/ for neyther of the both shall lyue. For the vision shall come so greatly ouer all/ the it shal not be hindred: No mā also with his wickednesse shalbe able to saue his owne lyfe.

The trompettes shal ye blowe/ & make you all ready/ but no man shal go to the battail/ for I am wroth with all the whole multitude.

The swearde shalbe without: pestilence and hunger within: so that who so is in the felde/ shalbe slayne with the swearde: and he that is in the citie/ † shall perish with hunger and Deu. xxij.

And

And such as escape and flye from amonge them/ shalbe vpon the hilles/ like as the doues in the felde: euery one shalbe afrayed because of his owne wickednesse.

wickednes: because they † made therof not onely costly ieweles for their pompe & pryde/ but also abhominable ymages and Idols. For this cause will I make them to be abhorred. Moreouer/ I will geue it into the handes of the straūgers to be spoyled: and to the wicked for to be robbed/ and they shall destroye it.

My face wil I turne from the/ my treasury shalbe defyled: for the theues shall go into it/ and suspende it. I wil make cleane riddaunce/ for the lande is whole defyled with vnrighteous iudgement of innocent bloude/ and the citie is full af abhominacions.

E Wherfore/ I will bringe the moost cruel tyrauntes from amonge the Heythen/ to take theyr houses in possession. I will make the pompe of the proude to ceasse/ and they shall take in their Sanctuary. When this trouble commeth/ they shall seke peace/ but they shall haue none. One mischiefe and sorowe shal folowe another/ and one rumoure shal come after another: † Then shall they seke visions in Jer. xxviij vayne at theyr prophetes. The lawe shalbe gone from the priestes/ and wysdome frō the elders. The kinge shall mourne/ the princes shalbe clothed with heauynesse/ and the handes of the people in the lande shall tremble for feare. I will do vnto them after their owne wayes/ and accordinge to their owne iudgementes will I iudge them: to learne them for to knowe that I am the Lorde.

The VIII. Chapter.

A IT happened/ that in the sixte yeare/ the fifth daye of the sixte moneth I sat in my house/ and the lordes of the counsayll of Juda with me: and the hande of the Lord God fell euen there vpon me.

And as I loked vp/ I sawe as it were a likenesse of fyre from his loynes dounwarde/ and from his loynes vpwarde/ it shyned maruaylous cleare.

† This similitude stretched out an hande/ Ezc. iij. b and the sprete lift me vp betwixt heauen and earth: and God brought me in a vision to Jerusalem/ into the courte of the inwarde porte that lieth towarde the North: there stode an ymage/ with whiche he that hath all thinges in his power/ was very wroth.

And beholde/ the glory of the God of Israel was in the same place: euē † as I had sene Ezech. j. a it afore in the felde. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man. O lift vp thine eyes/ and loke towarde the North. Then lift I vp myne eyes towarde ỹ North/ & beholde: Beside the porte Northwarde/ there was an aulter made vnto the ymage of prouocacion/ in the very entringe in.

And he sayde furthermore vnto me: Thou sōne of mā/ Seiest thou what these do? Seest thou the greate abhominations that the house of Israel cōmitte in this place? whiche ought not to be done in my Sanctuary?

But turne the aboute/ & thou shalt see yet greater abhominacions. And with ỹ brought he me to the courte gate: and when I loked/ beholde/ there was an hole in the wall.

Then saide he vnto me: Thou sonne of mā/ B
dygge thorow the wall. And when I dygged thorow the wall/ beholde/ there was a dore. And he sayde vnto me: go thy waye in/ & loke what wicked abhominacions they do there.

So I wente in and sawe: and behold/ there were all maner ymages of wormes and beastes/ all Idols and abhominacions of the house of Israel/ paynted euerychone rounde aboute the wall.

There stode also before the ymages † lxx Exo. xviij. d and in the myddest of them stode Jaasanias the sonne of Saphan: And euery one of them had a censoure in hys hande/ and out of the incence/ there were vp a smoke/ as it had bene a cloude.

Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of mâ/ hast thou sene what the Senatours of the house of Jsrael do secretly / euery one in hys chaumbre: † For they saye: Tush/the Lorde seyeth vs not / the Lorde regardeth not the worlde. And with that/ he brought me to the dore of the porte of the Lordes house/ toward the North. And beholde/ there sat women mourninge for Thamus. Then sayde he vnto me: C haist thou sene this/thou sonne of man? Turne the about / and thou shalt se yet greater abhominacions. And so he brought me into the inwarde courte of the Lordes house: and beholde / at the porte of the Lordes house/ betwixte the forecentrie and the aulter there were fyue and twenty men / that turned their backes vpon the tempel of the Lorde/ & their faces towarde the East/and these worshipped the Sunne.

And he sayde vnto me: hast thou sene this thou sonne of man? Thinketh the house of Juda that it is but a trifle / to do the abhominacions here? Shoulde they fyll the lande full of wickednesse / & vndertake to prouoke me vnto anger? Yee/and purpously to cast vp their noses vpon me? Therfore will I also do some thinge in my wrothfull displeasure / so that myne eye shall not pytie them / neyther will I spare them. † Yee/& though they crie in myne eares with a loude voyce / yet will I not heare them.

And beholde/ the man that had the lynnen raymẽt vpon him/ and the writers ynkehorne by hys syde: tolde all the matter how it happened / and sayde: Lorde / as thou haste commaunded me/so haue J done.

The. X. Chapter.

AND as J loked / beholde / Jn the firma- A ment that was aboue the Cherubins/ there appeared the similitude of a seate of Saphir vpon thẽ: † Then saide he that sat therein/ to him that had the lynnen raiment vpn him: Crepe in betwene the wheles that are vnder the Cherubins / and take thine hande full of hote coales out from betwene the Cherubins/ and caste them ouer the citie. And he crepte in/ that J might se.

Now the Cherubins stode vpon the righte syde of the house/when the man wente in/and the cloude fylled the ynnermer courte. † But the glory of the Lorde remoued from the Cherubins / and came vpon the thresholde of the house: so that the temple was full of cloudes / and the courte was full of the shyne of the Lordes glory. Yee / and the sounde of the Cherubins wynges was herde into the forecourte / like as it had bene the voyce of the almighty God/ when he speaketh. Now whẽ he had bydden the man that was clothed in B lynnen / to go and take the hote coales from the myddest of the wheles / which were vnder the Cherubins: he wente and stode besyde the wheles. Then the one Cherub reached forth his hande from vnder the Cherubins / vnto the fyre that was betwene the Cherubins/and toke therof / and gaue it vnto hym (that had on the lynnen raymente) in his hande: whiche toke it/and wente out. And vnder the winges of the Cherubins / there appeared the lyknesse of a mans hande: J sawe also foure wheles besyde the Cherubins/so that by euery Cherub there stode a whele. And the wheles were (to loke vpon) after the fashion of the precious stone of Tharsis: Yet (vnto the sight) were they fashioned and lyke / as if one whele had bene in another.

When they wente forth / they wente all iiij. together / not turnynge aboute in their goynge. But where the fyrst wente/thither wente they after also / so that they turned not aboute in theyr goynge Their whole bodies / their backes / their handes and wynges / yee/ & the wheles also were all full of eyes rounde aboute them all foure. And J herde him call the wheles/Galgal (that is a rounde bouk. † Euery one of them had foure faces: so that the one face was the face of a Cherub / the seconde of a man / the thirde of a Lyon / the fourthe of an Aegle/ and they were lifted vp aboue. This is the beast that J sawe at the water of Cobar. C Nowe when the Cherubins wente / the wheles wente with thẽ: and when the Cherubins shoke their wynges to lift thẽ selfes vp warde/ the wheles remayned not behynde / but were with them also. Shortly/whẽ they stode/ these stode also: And when they were lift vp / the wheles were lift vp also with them / for the spirete of life was in the wheles.

† Then the glory of the Lorde was lift vp from the thresholde of the temple / and remayned vpon the Cherubins: And the Cherubins flackred with their wynges / and lift them selfes vp from the earth: so that J sawe when they went / and the wheles with them. And they stode at the Eastesyde of the porte/ that is in the house of the Lord. So the glory of the God of Jsrael was vpon thẽ. This is the beast that J sawe vnder the God of Jsrael/by the water of Cobar. And J perceaued that it was the Cherubins. Euery one had foure faces/and euery one foure wynges / and vnder their winges/as it were mens handes. Now the figure of their faces/ was euen as J had sene them by the water of Cobar / and so was the countenance of thẽ: Euery one in his goyinge wente straight forwarde.

MOreouer/ the spirete of the Lord lift me A vp/ and brought me vnto the Eastporte of ỹ Lordes house. And beholde/ there were xxv. men vnder the dore: amonge whome J sawe Jaasanias the sonne of Asur/ and Pheltias the sonne of Banias / the rulers of ỹ people. Then saide the Lorde vnto me: Thou sonne of man: These men ymagin mischiefe/ and a wicked counsayl take they in this citie/ sayinge: Tush/there is no destruccion at hãde/ let vs buylde houses: This Jerusalem is the cauldron/ and we be the flesh. Therfore shalt thou prophecie vnto them/yee/ prophecie shalt thou vnto them / O sonne of man. And with that fel the spirete of the Lorde vpon me/and sayde vnto me: Speake/thus sayeth the Lorde: On this maner haue ye spokẽ (O ye house of Jsrael) and J knowe the ymaginacions of youre hertes. Many one haue ye murthured in thys citie / and filled the stretes full of the slayne.

C Now when I preached / Pheltias ỹ sonne of Banias dyed. Then fell I downe vpon my face / and cried with a loude voyce: O Lorde God / wilt thou then vtterly destroye all the remnaunt in Israel? And so the worde of the Lorde came to me on this maner. Thou sonne of man: Thy brethren / thy kynssolke / & the whole house of Juda / which dwel at Jerusalem / saye: They be gone farre from the Lord / but the lande is geuē vs in possessiō. Therfore tell them / thus sayeth the Lorde God: I will sende you farre of amonge the Gentiles / & scattre you amonge the nacions / and I will halow you but a litle / in the lādes where ye shall come. Tell them also / thus sayeth the Lord God: I will gather you agayne out of the nacions / and bring you frō the countries where ye be scatred / & wil geue you the lande of Israel agayne: and thither shall ye come. And as for all impedimentes / and all your abhominacions: I will take thē awaye.

But loke whose hertes are disposed to folowe their abhominacions and wicked liuinges: Those mens dedes will I bringe vpon theyr owne heades / sayeth the Lord God. After this dyd the Cherubins lift vp theyr wynges / and the wheles wente with them / and the glory of the God of Israel was vpon them. † So the glory of the

The. XII. Chapter.

THe worde of the Lord came vnto me / saying: Thou sonne of man / thou dwellest in the middest of a frowarde housholde: † which haue eyes to se / and yet se not: eares haue they to heare / and yet heare they not / for they are an obstinate housholde. Therfore (O thou sonne of man) make thy geare ready too flyt / and go forth by fayre daye light / that they maye se. Yee / euen in their sight shalt thou go from thy place to another place: if peraduenture they will considre / that they be a disobedient housholde / thy geare ỹ thou haste made ready to flyt withall / shalte thou beare out by fayre daye light / that they maye se / & thou thy self shalt go forth also at euen in their sight / as a man doeth when he flitteth.

Dygge thorow the wall / that they may se / and beare thorowe it thesame thynge / that thou tokest vp in their sight. As for thy selfe thou shalt go forth in the darcke. Hyde thy face that thou se not ỹ earth / for I haue made the a shewetoken vnto the house of Israell.

B Now as the Lord cōmaunded me / so I did: the geare that I had made ready / brought I out by day. At euē I brake downe an hole thorow the wall with my hande: and when it was darcke / I toke the geare vpon my shoulders / and bare them out in their sight.

And in the morninge came the worde off the Lorde vnto me / sayinge: Thou sonne of man / if Israell that frowarde housholde aske the / and saye: what doest thou there? Then tell them: Thus sayeth the Lord God: Thys punishment toucheth the chief rulers at Jerusalem / and al the house of Israel that dwel amonge them: Tell them: I am youre shewtoken: like as I haue done / so shall it happen vnto you: Flyt shal ye also and go into captiuitie. † The chiefest that is amonge you / shall lade his shoulders in the darcke / & get him awaye. He shal breake downe the wall / to carie stuf there thorow: He shal couer his face / that he se not the grounde with his eyes.

† My lyne will I sprede out vpon him / & catch him in my nette / and carie him to Babilon / in the lande of the Caldees: which he shall not se / and yet shall he dye there. As for al his helpers / and all his hoostes that be aboute him: I will scattre them towarde all the wyndes / and drawe out a swearde after them.

Eze. xv. b. xxj. b † So when I haue scatred them among the Heythen / and strowed them in the landes: they shall knowe that I am the Lorde. But I will leaue a litle numbre of them / from the swearde / hunger and pestilēce: to tell all their abhominations among the Heythen where they come: that they maye know / how that I am the Lorde.

Moreouer / the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man: with a fearful trembling shalt thou eate thy bread / with carefulnesse & sorow shalt thou dryncke thy water. And vnto the people of the lande / speake thou on this maner: Thus sayeth the Lord God / to them that dwel in Jerusalē / & to the lāde of Israel: Ye shal eat your bread in sorowe / and dryncke youre water with heauinesse: Yee / the lande with the fulnesse thereof shalbe layde waist / for the wickednesse of them that dwell therein. And the cities that now be well occupied / shalbe voyde / and the lande desolate: that ye maye knowe / how that I am the Lord.

Q Yet came the woorde of the Lorde vnto me agayn / saying: Thou sonne of man / what maner of by worde is that / which ye vse in the
2. Pet. iij. b. lande of Israel / saying: Tush / † seyng that the dayes are so slacke in commynge / all the visions are of none effecte: Tell them therfore / thus sayeth the Lord God: I wil make that by worde to ceasse / so that it shall nomore be commonly vsed in Israel.

But saye this vnto them: The dayes are at hande / that euery thinge whiche hathe bene prophecied / shalbe fulfilled. There shall no vision be in vayne / neyther any prophecie fayle amonge the children of Israel: For it is I the Lorde that speake it: and whatsoeuer I the Lord speake / it shalbe persourmed / and not be slacke in comminge.

Yee / euen in youre dayes (O ye frowarde housholde) will I deuise some thing / & bring it to passe / sayeth the Lorde God. And the worde of the Lord came vnto me sayinge: Beholde / thou sonne of man: The house of Israell saye in this maner: Tushe / as for the vision that he hath sene / it wil be many a day or it come to passe: It is farre of yet / the thing that he prophecieth. Therfore say vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lord God: All my wordes shal nomore be slack: Loke what I speake thatsame shall come to passe / sayeth ỹ Lord God.

The. XIII. Chapter.

THe worde of the Lord came vnto me / saynge: Thou sonne of man / Speake prophecie against those prophetes that preach in Israel: and saye thou vnto them that prophecie out of their owne hertes: Heare the worde of the Lorde / thus sayeth the Lord God: † Wo be vnto those folishe prophetes / Ez. xxxiiij. a that folow their owne spirete / & speake where they se nothinge. O Israel / thy prophetes are like the foxes vpon the drye felde: For they stande not in the gappes / neyther make they an hedge for the house of Israel / that men might abyde the parell in the daye of the Lorde. Vaine thinges they se / and tell lies / † to Jer. xxvij. a maintein their preachinges withal. The Lorde (saye they) hath spoken it / when in very dede the Lorde hath not sent them. Therfore / thus sayeth the Lord God: Be- B

Myne handes shall come vpon the prophetes / that loke out vaine thinges / and preach lyes: he shall not be in the counsaill of my people / nor writte in the boke of the house of Israel / neither shall they come in the lande of Israel: that ye maye knowe / howe that I am the Lord God. And that for this cause: they haue deceaued my people / † and tolde Jere. viij. b them of peace where no peace was. One setteth vp a wal / & they daube it with louse claie. Therfore tell them whiche daube it with vntempered morter / that it shall fall. † For Matt. vij. c there shall come a greate shower of rayne / greate stones shall fall vppon it / and a sore storme of wind shal breake it / so shal the walle come doune. Shall it not then be sayde vnto you: where is nowe the morter / that ye daubed it withall? Therfore thus saieth the Lorde God: I wyll breake out in my worthfull C displeasure with a stormye wynde/so that in myne anger there shall come a mighty shower of rayne/and hale stones in my wrath/to destroye withall.

1 Sam. As for the wall that ye haue daubed wyth vntempered morter / I will breake it doune/ and make it euen with the grounde: so that ꝑ foundacion therof shall remoue/& it shall fall/ yee/& ye youre selfes shall perish in the middest therof: to learne you for to knowe/ that I am the Lorde. Thus will I perfourme my wrath vpon this wal/and vpon them ꝑ haue daubed it with vntempered morter/and then will I saye vnto you: The wall is gone / and the daubers are awaye. These are the Prophetes of Israel/whiche prophecie vnto the citye of Jerusalem / and loke oute visions of peace for theym / where as no peace is / sayeth the Lord God. Wherefore (o thou sonne of mā) set thy face against the doughters of thy people/whiche prophecie oute of their owne hertes: and speake thou prophecie agaynste them and saye/thus sayeth the Lord God: Wo be vnto you/that sowe pillowes vnder all armeholes/ and bolsters vnder the heades both of yonge and olde/ to catch soules withall. † For when ye haue gotten the soules of my people in youre captiuitie/ ye promise them lyfe / and dishonoure me to my people for an handefull of barly/& for a pece of bread: when ye kyll the soules of them that dye not: and promyse lyfe to them that liue not. Thus ye dissemble with my people that beleueth your lyes.

Esa.v.c. Mich.iij.b.

Wherefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde/I will also vpō the pillowes/wherewith ye catch the soules in flyenge: them will I take from your armes / & let the soules go/ that ye catch in flyenge. Youre bolsters also will I teare in peces / and deliuer my people out of your handes: so ꝑ they shal come nomore in your handes to be spoyled/ & ye shall know that I am the Lorde. Seynge that with your lyes ye discomforte the herte of the righteous/whom I haue not discōforted: Agayn. For so much as † ye courage the hande of the wicked / so that he maye not turne from hys wicked waye and lyue: therefore shall ye spye out nomore vanitie/nor prophecie your owne gessinges: for I will deliuer my people out of your hande/that ye maye knowe/ how that I am the Lorde.

The. XIIII. Chapter.

A THere † resorted vnto me certayne of the elders of Israel/ and sat doune by me. Ezc.xx.a. Then came the worde of the Lord vnto me/ sayinge: Thou sonne of man/these men beare their Idols in their hertes/ and go purposely vpon the stombling blocke of their owne wickednesse: how darre they then axe counsayl at me? Therfore speake vnto them and saye: thus sayeth the Lorde God: Euery man of the house of Israel that beareth his Idols in his herte/purposinge to stomble in his owne wickednesse/& commeth to a prophet/ to enquere any thing at me by him: vnto that man will I the Lorde my selfe geue aunswere/accordinge to the multitude of his Idols: that the house of Israel maye be snared in their owne hertes/because they be clene gone fro me / for their Idols sakes.

Wherfore/tell ꝑ house of Israel: thus sayeth the Lorde God: † Be conuerted / forsake your Idols / and turne youre faces from all youre abhominacions. For euery man (whether he be of the house of Israell / or a straunger/that sciourneth in Israel) whiche departeth fro me / and carieth Idols in hys herte/ purposinge to go still stumbling in his owne wickednesse/and commeth to a prophete / for to axe counsayll at me thorow hym: vnto that man wil I ꝑ Lord geue aunswere by myne owne selfe. Ezc.xx.c

B I will set my face agaynste that man/ and wil make him to be an example for other/ yee/ and a commō by worde: and wil rote him out of my people/ that he maye know how that I am the Lord. † And if that prophete be deceaued/when he telleth hym a worde: then I the Lord my selfe haue deceaued that prophet/and will stretch forth myne hande vpon him/ to rote hym out of my people of Israell: and they bothe shalbe punished for their wickednesse. iij.reg.xxij. Job.xij.c

According to the synne of hym that axeth/ shall the synne of the prophet be/ that ꝑ house of Israell be led no more fro me thorowe errours: & be no more defyled in their wickednesse: but that they maye be my people/and I their God/sayeth the Lorde God. C Ezc.iiij.d. b Jere.xxv.a

If I bringe noysome beastes into the lande/to waist it vp/and it be so desolate/ that no man maye go therin for beastes: yf these thre men also were in the lande / as truly as I lyue (saieth the Lord God) they shal saue neyther sonnes nor doughters /but be onely delyuered them selfes: and as for the lande / it shalbe wayst.

Or / yf I bringe a swearde into the lande/ and charge it to go thorowe the lande: so that I slaye doune man & beast in it / and yf these thre men were therin: As truly as I lyue (saieth the Lorde God) they shall delyuer neyther sonnes nor doughters / but onely be saued them selfes.

D If I sende a pestilence into the lande / and poure out my sore indignacion vpon it in blonde / so that I rote out of it both man and beast / and yf Noe / Daniel / and Job were therin: As truly as I lyue (saieth the Lorde God) they shall delyuer neyther sonnes nor doughters / but saue their owne soules in theyr righteousnesse.

Jer.xxvij.b

Moreouer / thus saieth the Lorde God: Though I sende my † four trublous plagues vpon Jerusalem: the swearde/hunger/perylous beastes/and pestilence / to destroye man and beast out of it: yet shall there a remnaunt be saued therin/which shal bringe forth theyr sonnes and doughters. Beholde/ they shall come forth vnto you/and ye shal se their way/ and what they take in hande / and ye shalbe comforted/as touchinge all the plagues that I haue brought vpon Jerusalem.

They shal comforte you / when ye se their waye and workes: and ye shall knowe howe that it is not without a cause / that I haue done so against Jerusalem as I dyd / sayeth the Lorde God.

The. XV. Chapter.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me/ sayinge: Thou sonne of man/what commeth of the vyne amonge all other trees: and of the wyne stocke / amonge all other tymbre of the groue? Do mē take wood of it to make any worke withall? Or maye there a nayle be made of it / to hange any thinge vpon? Beholde/it is cast in the fyre to be brent / the fyre consumeth both the endes of it/ the middest is brente to asshes. Is it mete then for any worke? No.

Seinge then/that it was mete for no worke beinge whole / muche lesse maye there any thinge be made of it/when the fyre hath consumed and brente it. And therfore thus saieth the Lorde God: Like as I cast the vyne into the fyre for to be brent/as other trees of the woode: Euen so will I do with them that dwell in Jerusalem/and set my face against them: they shall go onte from the fyre/and yet the fyre shall consume them: † Then shall ye knowe that I am the Lord/when I set my face agatnst them/and make the lande wayst: Because they haue so sore offended / sayeth the Lorde God. Thou hast not ben as another whore / that maketh boaste of her winnynge / but as a wyfe that breaketh wedlocke / and taketh other in steade of her housbande. Giftes are geuen to all other whores/ but thou geuest rewardes vnto all thy louers: and offrest them giftes/ to come vnto the out of all places / and too committe fornicatiō with the. It is come to passe with the in thy whordomes/ contrary to the vse of other women/ yee/ there hath no such fornication ben committed after the/ seynge ỹ thou profferest giftes vnto other/ and no rewarde is geuen the: this is a contrary thing. Therefore heare the worde of the Lorde / o thou D harlot: Thus sayeth the Lord God: For so muche as thou haste spēt thy money/ & discouered uered thy shame / thorowe thy whordome with all thy louers/ and with all the Idols of thy abhominations and the bloude of the chyl- iiij.re.xvj.a. dren/ † whome thou haste geuen them: Be- xvij.c holde therfore / I will gather together all thy louers/ vnto whome thou hast made thy selfe common/ yee/ and all them whome thou fauoureste/ and euery one that thou hatest: & will † discouer thy shame before them / that they Esa.xlvij.a all maye se thy filthinesse. Naum.iij.a

* Moreouer/ I will iudge the as a breaker *Eze.xxiij.f of wedlocke and a murtherer/ and recompēce the thine owne bloude in wrath and gelousy/ I will geue the ouer into their power / that shall breake doune thy stewes / and destroye thy brodelhouses: they shall stripe the oute of thy clothes/ all thy fayre and beutifull iewels shall they take from the / and so let the sit na- Leuit.xx.b. ked and bare: † Yee/ they shall bring the com- mon people vpon the/ which shall stone the/ & iij.re.xxv.b slaye the doune with their swerdes. † They shall burne vp thy houses/ and punishe the in the sight of many women. Thus wil I make thy whordome too ceasse/ so that thou shalte geue out no more rewardes.

Shoulde I make my wrath to be still/ take my gelousy from the/ be content/ and no more to be displeased: seinge thou remembrest not the dayes of thy youth/ but hast prouoked me to wrath in all these thinges? Beholde therfore/ I will bring thine owne wayes vppon thine head/ sayeth the Lord God: howbeit/ I neuer did vnto the/ accordinge to thy wickednesse and all thy abhominaciōs. Beholde/ all they that vse common prouerbes/ shall vse this prouerbe also agaynste the: Suche a mother/ suche a doughter.

E Thou art euen thy mothers owne doughter/ that hath cast of her housbande & her chil- dren: Yee/ thou art ỹ sister of thy sisters/ which forsoke their housbandes and their children. Eze.xvj.a. † Your mother is a Hethite/ & your father an Ammonite / thine eldest sister is Samaria / she and her doughters that dwell vpon thy left hande.

But thy yongest sister that dwelleth on the right hande/ is Sodoma & her doughters. Yet hast thou not walked after their wayes/ nor done after their abhominaciōs: But in al thy waies ỹ hast ben more corrupt then they.

As truly as I lyue/ sayeth the Lord God: † Sodoma thy sister with her doughters/ Ge.xviij.xix hath not done so euell/ as thou and thy dough- ters. Beholde/ the synnes of thy sister Sodoma were these: Pryde / fulnesse of meate/ aboundance/ and ydelnesse: these thinges had she and her doughters. Besydes that/ they reached not their hāde to the poore and nedy/ but were proude/ and did abhominable thin- ges before me: therefore I toke them awaye when I had sene it. Neyther hath Samaria done half of thy synnes/ yee/ thou hast excea- Jere.iij.c ded them in wickednesse: In so much that in cōparison of al ỹ abhominations/ which thou haste done/ ỹ hast made thy systers good wo- mē. Therfore beare thine owne shame/ thou ỹ in synne haste ouercome thy systers: seinge ỹ hast done so abhominably/ that they were bet ter then thou. Be ashamed therefore (I saye) and beare thine owne confusion / thou that makest thy sisters good women.

As for their captiuitie/ namely the captiui- F tie of Sodoma and her doughters: the capti- uitie of Samaria and her doughters I will bringe them agayne / so will I also bringe a- gayne thy captiuitie amonge them: that thou mayest take thine owne confusion vpon the/ & be ashamed of all that thou hast done / and to comforte them.

Thus thy sisters (namely) Sodoma and her doughters: Samaria and her dough- ters with the self / and thy doughters shalbe brought agayne to your olde estate. When thou wast in thy pryde / and before thy wic- kednesse came to light: thou woldest not heare speake of thy sister Sodoma / vntill the tyme that the Syrians with all their tounes/ & the Philistines with all that lye roūde about thē/ brought the to shame and cōfusion: that thou mightest beare thine owne fylthines & abho- mination/ sayeth the Lorde.

For thus sayeth the Lorde God: I shoulde (by right) deale with the/ as thou hast done. Thou hast despised the oothe / and bro- ken the conuenaunt. Neuertheles/ I will re- membre my conuenaunte/ that I made with the in thy youth/ in so muche that it shalbe an euerlastinge conuenaunt: So that thou also remembre thy waies/ and be ashamed of thē/

then shalt thou receaue of me thy elder & yōger sisters / whome I will make thy doughters/and that besyde thy conuenaunt. † And Jere.xxxj.e Heb.viij.b so I will renue my conuenaūt with the / that thou mayest know that I am the Lord/that thou mayest thinke vpon it/be ashamed/ & excuse thine owne confusion nomore: when I haue forgeuen the all that thou hast done/sayeth the Lorde God.

The.XVII. Chapter.

A THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me/ sayinge: Thou sonne of man / put forthe
Eze.xxiiij.a †a darcke speaking & a parable vnto the house of Israel/& say: Thus sayeth the Lord God.
Dan.vij.a. There came a great †Aegle with great wynges/yee/with mighty long wynges) and full of fethers of diuerse coloures/ vpon the mount of Libanus/and toke a braunche from a Cedre tree / and brake of the toppe of his twygge / & caried it into the lande of Canaan/and set it in a citie of marchauntes. He toke also a braunch of the lande/ and plāted it in a fruteful groūd/ he brought it vnto great waters/ and set it as a willye tree therby. Then did it grow/ & was a great wyne stocke/But lowe by the ground: thus there came of it a vyne / and it broughte forth blossomes/and spred out braunches.

But there was another Aegle/a great one/ which had great wynges and many fethers: and beholde/the rotes of this vyne had an hūger after him/and spred out his braunches towarde hym to water his frutes: Neuertheles/ it was planted vpon a good grounde besyde great waters: so that(by reason)it should haue brought out braūches and frute / & haue bene a goodly vyne. Speake thou therfore/thus
B sayeth the Lord God: Shal this vyne prospere: shal not his rotes be pluckt out/his frute broken of/his grene braunches wythered and fade awaye: yee/without eyther stronge arme or many people / shall it be plucked vp by the rotes. Beholde/ it was planted: shall it prospere therfore? Shall it not be dryed vp & wythered/yee/euē in the shutting out of his blossomes/as soone as the East wynde bloweth?

Moreouer/ the worde of the Lorde came vnto me saying: Speake to ỹ frowarde housholde: know ye not what these thinges do signifie? Tell them: Beholde/† the king of Babi-iij.re.xxiiij.c lon came to Jerusalem/and toke the king and his princes/and led them to Babylon.

He toke the kinges sede/and made a cōuenaunt with him/and toke an ooth of him: the princes of the lāde toke he with him also / that the lande might be holden in subiection/ and not to rebelle/but kepe the conuenaunt & fulfill it. But he fell from him/and sent his Ambassatours into Egipte / that he might haue C horses and much people. Shoulde that prospere? Shoulde he be kepte safe that doeth such thinges? Or shoulde he escape that breaketh his conuenaunt.

As truely as I lyue/ saieth the Lord God: He shall dye at Babilon/in the place where ỹ kyng dwelleth that made him kinge: whose ooth he hath despised/& whose cōuenaunte he hath broken. Neyther shall Pharao with hys great hoost & multitude of people/maintayne him in the warre: when they cast vp diches/ & set vp bulworckes to destroye mucke people. For seinge he hath despised the ooth/ and broken the conuenaunt(where as he yet gaue his hande thereupon) and done al these thinges/ he shall not escape.

Therfore thus saieth the Lorde God: As truly as I lyue/ I will bring myne ooth that he hath despised/and my conuenaunt that he hath broken vpon his owne head. † I wil cast Eze.xij.b. my net about him/ & catche him in my yarne. xxxij.a.
To Babylon wil I cary him/there wil I punish hym/because of the greate offence that he D made me. As for those that flye from hym out of the hoost/ they shalbe slayn with ỹ sweard. The residue shalbe scatred toward all ỹ wyndes: and ye shall knowe/that I ỹ Lord haue spoken it.

Thus saieth the Lorde God: I will also take a braunch from an hie Cedre tree/and wil set it/and take the vppermost twigge/that yet is but tendre/ and plante it vpon an hye hyll: Namely / vppon the hye hill of Syon will I plante it/that it maye bringe forth twygges/ and geue frute / and be a greate Ceder tree: so that all maner of fooles maye byde in it / and make their nestes vnder the shadowe of hys braunches.

And all the trees of the felde shall knowe ỹ I the Lord haue brought doun the hye tree/ and set the lowe tree vp: that I haue dryed vp the grene tree/& made the drye tree to florisher:

Euen

Euen I the Lorde that spake it/ haue also brought it to passe.

The XVIII. Chapter.

A THe worde of the Lord came vnto me on this maner: What meane ye by this cōmon prouerbe/that ye vse in the lāde of Israel/
Jere.xxxj.e saynge: † The fathers haue eatē soure grapes/

Psal.xxiij.a Beholde / † all soules are myne. Like as the fathers is myne/so is the sonne mine also. The Deu.xviij.a soule that synneth / shall dye. † If a man be godly/and do the thinge that is equal & right/ He eateth not vpon the hilles: he lifteth not his eyes vp to the Idols of Israel: he defyleth not his neyghbours wife: he medleth with no menstruous woman: he greueth no body: he

Rom.x.a righteous man/† he shall surely lyue saieth the Lorde God.

B If he now get a sonne that is a murthurer/a shedder of blonde: if he do one of these Jacob.iij.b thinges(† though he do not all) he eateth vpō the hilles: he defyleth his neyghbours wife: he greueth the poore and nedy: he robbeth & spoyleth: he geueth not the detter his pledge agayne: he lifteth vp his eyes vnto Idols/and medleth with abhominable thinges: he lēdeth vpon vsury/and taketh more ouer. Shall this man lyue? He shall not lyue. Seinge he hath done all these abhominacions/he shall dye: his blonde shalbe vpon him.

Now if this man get a sonne also/that seith all his fathers synnes which he hath done: & feareth/neyther doeth such like: Namely/he eateth not vpon the mountaines: he lifteth not his eyes vp to the Idols of Israel: he defyleth not his neyghbours wife: he vexeth no man: C he kepeth no mans pledge/he neyther spoyleth no: robbeth any man: he dealeth his meate with the hungry: he clotheth the naked: he oppresseth not the poore / he receaueth no vsury/ not any thinge ouer: he kepeth my lawes / and walketh in my commaundementes: This mā shall not dye in his fathers synne/but shal lyue without fayle. As for his father: because he oppressed and spoyled his brother / and dyd wyckedly amonge his people: lo / he is dead in his owne synne. And yet saye ye: Wherfore then shoulde not this sonne beare his fathers synne? Therfore / because the sonne hath done equyte and right / hath kepte all my cōmaundementes/ and done thē: therfore shall he lyue in dede.

✠ The same soule thath synneth / shall dye.
† The sonne shall not beare ỹ fathers offence/ Deu.xxiiij.c

Lorde God / but rather that he cōuerte and lyue.

Againe: if the righteous turne awaye from his righteousnes/and do iniquite/accordinge to all the abhominacions that the wickedman doeth: shall he lyue? All the righteousnes that he hath done/ shall not be thought vpon: but in the faulte that he hath offended withall/ and in the synne that he hath done he shall dye.

And yet ye saye: Tush/the waye of the Lorde is not indifferent. Heare therfore ye house of Israel: Is not my waye right? Or are not youre wayes rather wicked? † When a righte-

And yet sayeth the house of Israel: Tush / the waye of ỹ Lorde is not equal. Are my wayes vnright / o ye house of Israel? Are not youre wayes rather vnequal? As for me / I will iudge euery man / accordinge to his wayes. O ye house of Israel / sayeth the Lorde God.

The XIX. Chapter.

A BVt mourne thou for the princes of Israel / and saye: Wherfore laye thy mother that Lyonesse amonge the Lyons? and norished her yongeones amõge the Lyons whelpes? One of her whelpes she brought vp / and it became a Lyon: it learned to spoyle / and to deuoure folke. The Heithen herde of him / and toke him in their nettes / and brought him in chaynes vnto the lande of Egypte.

Now whẽ the dãme sawe / that all her hope and comforth was awaye / she tokẽ another of her whelpes / and made a Lyon of him: which wente amonge the Lyons / & became a fearce Lyon: learned to spoyle / and to deuoure folcke: he destroyed their palayces / and made their cities waist: In so much that the whole lande and euery thinge therein / were vtterly desolate / thorow the very voyce of his roaringe.

Then came the Heithen together on euery syde out of all countries agaynst him / layed their nettes for him / & toke him in their pytte.

iiij.re.xxv.a Jer.xxxix.c † So they bounde him with chaynes / and brought him to the kinge of Babylon: which lij.a put him in pryson / that his voyce shoulde nomore be herde vpon the mountaynes of Is-

B rael. As for thy mother / she is like a vyne in thy bloude / planted by the water syde: her frutes and braunches are growen out of many waters / her stalkes were so stronge / that men might haue made staues therof for officers: she grew so hie in her stalkes.

So when men sawe that she exceaded the heith and multitude of her braunches / she was roted out in displeasure / and cast doune to the grounde. The East wynde dryed vp her frute / her stronge stalkes were broken of / wytherd and brent in the fyre. But now she is planted in the wilderneesse / in a drye & thurstie groũde. And there is a fyre gone out of her stalkes / which hath brent vp her braunches and her frute: so that she hath nomo stronge stalkes / to be staues for officers. This is a pitcous & miserable thinge.

The. XX. Chapter.

IN the vij. yeare the x. daye of the v. Moneth / † it happened that certayne of the A Eze.viij elders of Israel came vnto me for to axe counsayll at the Lorde / and sat thẽ doune by me. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me on this maner: Thou sonne of man / Speake to the elders of Israe / & saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God. Are ye come hither to axe any thinge at me? As truely as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde) I will geue you no aunswere. Wilt thou not reproue them (thou sonne of man) wilt thou not reproue them? Shew them the abhominacions of their forefathers / and tel them. Thus sayeth the Lorde God / † In the daye when I chose Israel / Exod.iij and lift vp myne hande vpon the sede of the house of Jacob / and shewed my self vnto them in the lande of Egypte. But they rebelled agaynst me / and wolde B not folowe me / to cast awaye euery man the abhominacions of his eyes / and to forsake the Idols of Egypte. The XXI. Chapter.

A The worde of the Lorde came to me/ sayinge: Thou sonne of man/ set thy face towarde Jerusalem/ speake agaynst the Sanctuary/ and prophecie agaynst the lande of Israel/ saye to the lande of Israel: Thus saieth ỹ Lorde God: Beholde/ I will vpon the/ and will drawe my swearde out of the sheath/ and rote out of the both of the righteous and the wicked. Mourne therfore (o thou sonne of man) that thy loynes cracke withall/ ye mourne bitterly for thē: And if they saye/ wherfore mournest thou? Beholde/ it commeth and shalbe fulfilled/ sayeth the Lorde God.

B Againe/ the worde of the Lorde came vnto me/ sayinge: Thou sonne of man/ prophecie and speake: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: speake/ ỹ swearde is sharpened and well scoured. Smyte thou vpō thy thee/ for wherfore shoulde not the plague and staff of iudgement come? Prophecy thou sonne of mā/ and smyte thine hādes together: make the swearde twoegged/twoegged/ yee/ make it threegged/ that manslayers swearde/ that swearde of the greate slaughter/ which shall smyte them/ euē in their preuy chaumbres: to make them abashed and faynte at the hertes/ and in all gates to make some of them fall. O how bright and sharpe is it/ how wel dight and mete for the slaughter? Get the to some place alone/ other vpon the right hande or on the lefte/ whiter soeuer thy face turneth. I will smyte my handes together also/ and satisfie my wrothfull indignacion: euen I the Lorde haue sayde it.

C The worde of the Lorde came yet vnto me agayne/ sayinge: Thou sonne of man make the two stretes/ that the swearde of the kinge of Babylon maye come. Both these stretes shall go out of the lāde. He shall set him vp a place/ at the heade of the strete shall he chose him out a corner. Make the a strete/ that the swearde maye come towarde Rabath of the Ammonites/ and to the stronge citie of Jerusalem. For the kinge of Babylon shall stande in the turninge of the waye/ at the heade of the two stretes: to † axe counsayll at the soythsayers/ casting ỹ lottes with his arowes/ to axe counsayll at the Idols/ and to loke in the lyuer. But the soythsayinge shall poynte to the rightsyde vpon Jerusalem/ that he maye set men of warre/ to smyte it with a greate noyse/ to crie out Alarum/ to set battellrammes agaynst the gates/ to graue vp dyches/ and to make bullworkes.

Neuertheles/ as for the soythsayinge/ they shall holde it but for vanitie/ euen as though a iest were tolde them: Yee/ and they them selfes remembre their wickednesse/ so that by right they must be takē and wonne. Therfore saieth the Lorde God: For so much as ye youre selfes shewe youre offence/ and haue opened youre wickednesse/ so that in all youre workes men may se youre synnes: Yee/ in so much (I saye) that ye youre selfes haue made mencion therof/ ye shalbe taken by violence.

D O thou shamefull wicked gyde of Israel/ whose daye is come euen the tyme that wickednesse shall haue an ende: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: take awaye the mytre/ and put of the croune/ and so is it awaye: the humble is exalted/ and the proude brought lowe. Punish/ punish/ yee/ punysh them wil I/ and destroye them: and that shall not be fulfilled vntill he come/ to whome the iudgement belongeth/ and to whome I haue geuen it. And thou (o sonne of man) prophecy/ and speake: Thus sayeth the Lorde God to the children of † Ammon/ and to their blasphemy speake thou: The swearde/ the swearde is drawē forth already to the slaughter/ and scoured that it glistreth (because thou hast loked the out vanities/ and prophecied lyes) that it maye come vpon thy necke/ like as vpō the other vngodly/ which be slayne: whose daye came when their wickednesse was full. Jere.xlix.c Ezec.xxv.a Amos j.c

Though it were put vp agayne into the sheath/ yet will I punysh the/ in the lande where thou wast norished and borne/ & poure my indignacion vpon the/ and wil blowe vpon the in the fyre of my wrath/ and delyuer the vnto cruel people/ which are learned to destroye. Thu shalt fede the fyre/ and thy blonde shalbe shed in the lande/ that thou mayest be put out of remembraunce. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it.

The XXII. Chapter.

A Moreouer/ the worde of the Lorde came vnto me/ and saide: Thou sonne of man/ wilt thou not reproue this bloudthursty citie? Shewe them their abhominacions/ and tell them: Thus saieth the Lord God/ O thou citie/ that sheddest blonde in the myddest of the/ that thy tyme maye come also: and makest the Idols to defyle the withal. Thou hast made thy self gilty/ in the bloud that thou hast shed: and defyled the in the ydols/ which thou hast made. Thou hast caused thy dayes to drawe nye/ and made the tyme of thy yeares to come. Therfore will I make the to be confounded amonge the Heythen/ and to be despised in all the landes/ whether they be nye or farre from the: they shal laugh ỹ to scorne/ thou that hast gotte ỹ so foule a name/ & art ful of myschefe. Behold/ ỹ rulers of Israel haue brought euery man his power/ to shed bloude in the. † In the haue they despysed father and mother/ in the haue they oppressed the straunger/ in the haue they vexed the wydowe/ and the fatherlesse. And the worde of the Lorde came vnto Esa. j. f me/sayinge: Thou sonne of man/† the house of Israel is turned to drosse. All they that shoulde
C be brasse/tynne/yron & leade/are in the fyre become drosse. Therfore thus saieth the Lorde God: For so much as ye all are turned into drosse/beholde: I wil bringe you together vnto Jerusalem/like as syluer/brasse/yron/ tynne and leade are put together in the fornace/ and en so will I gather you/put you in together/

and melt you in my wrath and indignacion.
I wil bringe you together/ and kindle the fyre
of my cruel displeasure vnder you/ ẏ ye maye
be melted therein.

Like as the syluer is melted in ẏ fyre/ so shall ye also be melted therein: that ye maye knowe/how that I the Lorde haue poured my wrath
vpon you.

And ẏ worde of the Lorde came vnto me/
sayinge: Thou sonne of man/tell her: Thou art

the lande for a man that wolde make vp the

Therfore wil I poure out my cruel displeasure vpon them/ and burne them in the fyre of my wrath: their owne wayes will I recompence

The XXIII. Chapter.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me/ A sayinge: Thou sonne of man/ there were two wome that had one mother: These (whē they were yonge) beganne to playe the har-lottes † in Egypte. There were their brestes Eze. xxiij.a bruised/ and the pappes of their maydenheade destroyed. The eldest of thē was called Oola/and her yongest syster Ooliba. These two were myne/ and bare sonnes and doughters.
Their names were Samaria/ and that was Oola: and Jerusalem/ that was Ooliba. As for Oola/ she beganne to go a whoringe/ whē
I had taken her to me. † She was set on fyre iiij. Reg. xv.b vpon her louers the Assyrians/ which had to do with her: euen the princes and lordes/ that were decke in costly araye: fayre yonge men/lusty ryders of horses.

Thus thorow her whordome/ she cleued vnto all the yonge men of Assyria: Yee/ she was madde vpon them/and defyled her self with al their Idols. Neyther ceassed she frō the fornicacion that she vsed with the Egypcians: for in her youth they laye with her/ they bruised ẏ brestes of her maydenheade/ and poured their whordome vpon her. Wherfore † I delyuered iiij. Reg. xv.b
her in to the hādes of her louers/ euen the Assyrians.

syrians whome she so loued. These discouered her shame/ toke her sonnes and doughters/& slewe her with the swearde: An euel name gat she of all people/ and they punished her.

B † Her sister Ooliba sawe this/and destroyed Jere. iij.b her self with inordinate loue more then she/ & iiij. re. xvj. exceaded her sister in whordome/ * she loued
the Assyrians (which also laye with her) na-Eze. xvj. c mely/ the princes and greate lordes that were clothed with all maner of gorgius apparell/al lusty horsamē and fayre yonge persones. Then I sawe that they both were defyled alike. But she increaced still in whordome: for when she sawe men paynted vpon the wall/the ymages
of the Caldees set forth with fresh colours/
with fayre gyrdles aboute them/ and goodly bonettes vpō their heades/lokinge al like princes (after the maner of the Babylonians and Caldees in their owne lande/ where they be borne)/ Immediatly/as soone as she sawe thē/
she brent in loue vpon them/ and sent mes-saungers for them into the lande of the Caldees.

Now when the Babylonians came to her/they laye with her/ and defyled her with their whordome/ and so was she polluted with thē.
And when her lust was abated from them/
Esa. xlvij. a † her whordome and shame was discouered
Naum iij.d and sene: then my herte forsoke her like as my Eze. xvj. c herte was gone from her sister also. Neuertheles/she vsed her whordome euer the lōger the more/and remembred the dayes of her youth/
wherein she had played the harlot in ẏ lande Eze. xvj. c of Egypte: † she brent in lust vpon thē/ whose flesh was like the flesh of asses/ and their sede lyke the sede of horses. Thus thou hast renued
the filthynesse of thy youth/ when thy louers bruised thy pappes/ and marred thy brestes in Egypte.

C Therfore (o Ooliba) thus saieth the Lorde
God. I wil rayse vp thy louers (with whome thou hast satisfied thy lust) agaynst the/ & gather them together roūde aboute the: Namely/the Babylonians/and all the Caldees: Pecod/Schoa/ and Coa/ with all the Assyrians: all yonge and fayre louers/ princes and lordes/knyghtes and gentelmen/ which be all good horsmen: These shall come vpon the with horses/ charrettes/ and a greate multitude of people: which shalbe harnessed aboute ẏ on euery
syde/with brestplates/ shyldes/ and helmettes.
I will punysh the before them/ yee/ they them selfes shall punyshe the/ accordinge to their owne iudgment. I wil put my gelousy vpon the/so that they shal deale cruelly with ẏ. They shall cut of thy nose and thine eares/ and the remnaunt shall fall thorow the swearde. They shall cary awaye thy sonnes and doughters/and the residue shalbe brent in the fyre. They shall strype the out of thy clothes/ and carry thy costly iewels awaye with them.

Thus will I make an ende of thy fylthy- S nesse & whoredome/ which thou hast brought out of the lande of Egypte: so that thou shalt turne thyne eyes nomore after them/ and cast thy mynde nomore vpon Egypte. For thus sayeth the Lorde. Beholde/ I will delyuer the into the handes of them/ whome thou ha-test: yee/ euen into the handes of them/ with whome thou hast fulfylled thy lust/which shall deale cruelly with the. All thy laboure shall they take with thē/ and leaue thy naked and bare/and thus the shame of thy fylthy whoredome shall come to light. All these thinges shall happen vnto the/ because of thy whoredome/which thou hast vsed amonge the Gentiles/ with whose Idols thou hast defyled thy self. Thou hast walked in the waye of thy syster/ therfore will I geue the her cuppe in thy hande.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Thou shalt drinke of thy sisters cuppe/ how depe & farre soeuer it be to the bottome. Thou shalt be laughed to scorne/ and had as greatly in derision as is possible. Thou shalt be full of dronkennesse and sorowe/ for the cuppe of thy sister Samaria is a cuppe of destruccion an way-stinge: thesame shalt thou drinke/ and suppe it out euen to the dregges/yee/thou shalt eate vp
the broken peces of it/ and so teare thine owne brestes: For euen I haue spoken it/ saieth the Lorde God.

Therfore thus saieth the Lorde God. For E so much as thou hast forgotten me/ and cast me a syde/so beare now thine owne, fylthinesse and whoredome. The Lord sayde moreouer vnto me: Thou sonne of man/ wilt thou not reproue Oola/ and Ooliba: Shewe them their abhominations: namely/ that they haue broken their wedlocke/ & stained their handes

with bloude: yee/euen with their Idols haue iiij. re. xxj. a they committed aduoutry/† and offred them Ezec. xvj. c their owne children (to be deuoured) whome they had borne vnto me. Yee/& this haue they done to me also: they haue defyled my Sanctuary in that same daye/ and haue vnhalowed my Sabbath. For when they had slayne their children for their Idols/ they came the same daye into my Sanctuary to defyle it. Lo/ this haue they done in my house. Besyde all this/thou hast sent thy messaungers for men out of farre countries/ and whē they came/ thou hast bathed/ trymmed/ and setforth thy self of the best fasihion/ thou sattest vpon a goodly bed/
and a table spred before the: wherupon thou
Exo. xxx. d hast set myne † incence and myne oyle.

F Then was there greate cheare with her/ and the men that were sent from farre countries
ouer the deserte: vnto these they gaue bracheletes vpon their handes/ and set glorious crounes vpon their heades. Then thought I:
no doubte/ these will vse their harlottry also with yonder olde whore. And they wente into her/ as vnto a common harlot: Euen so wente they also to Oola and Ooliba/ those fyl-thy women.

O ye al that loue vertue and righteousnes/Leuit. xx. b iudge thē/ punysh them: † as aduoutrers and Ezec xvj. d murtherers ought to be iudged and punyshed. For they are breakers of wedlocke/ and their bloude is in their hādes. Wherfore/ thus saieth the Lorde God: bringe a greate multitude of people vpon them/ and make them be sca-tred and spoyled/ these shall stone them/ and goare them with their swearde. They shall slaye their sonnes and doughters/ and burne vp their houses with fyre.

Thus wil I destroye all such filthynesse out of the lande/ that all women maye learne/ not to do after your vnclennesse. And so they shall laye your filthynesse vpon youre owne selfes/and ye shalbe punyshed for the synnes/ that ye haue cōmitted with youre Idols/ and ye shall knowe/ that I am the Lorde.

The. XXIIII. Chapter.

A IN the ix yeare/ in the x. moneth/ the x. daye
of the moneth came the worde of the Lord
vnto me/ sayinge: O thou sonne of mā/ wryte vp the name of this daye/ yee/ euen the houre of this present daye: when the kinge of Babylon set him self against Jerusalem. Shew that obstinate housholde a † parable/ and speake Eze. xvij. b
vnto them: Thus saieth the Lorde God:
Set the a † pot/ set it on/ and poure water Ezech. xj. a into it/ put all the peces together in it/ all the good peces: the loyne and the shoulder/and fyll it with the best bones. Take one of the best shepe/ and an heape of bones withall:
let it boyle well/ and let the bones seeth well therein.

With that/ sayde the Lorde God on this maner: † Wo be into the bloudy citie of the Naum iij. c pot/ wherupon the rustynesse hangeth/ and is Abac. ij. a not yet scoured awaye. Take out the peces that are in it/ one after another: there nede no lotes
be cast therfore/ for the bloude is yet in it.
Upon a playne drye stone hath she poured it/and not vpon the grounde/ that it might be couered with dust. And therfore haue I letten B her poure/ her bloude vpō a playne drye stony rocke/ because it shoulde not be hid/ and that I might bringe my wrothfull indignacion and vengeaunce vpon her.

Wherfore/ thus sayeth the Lorde God: O/
wo be vnto that bloudthy: sty citie/ for whome
I will prepare a heape of woode: beare thou
the bones together/ kindle thou the fyre/ seeth
the flesh/ let all be well sodden/ that the bones maye be suckte out. Moreouer/ set ỹ pot emptye vpon the coales/ that it maye be warme/ &
the meet all hote: that the filth and rustynesse maye be consumed. But it wil not go of/ there is so much of it: the rustynesse must be brent out. Thy filthinesse is abhominable/ for I haue clensed the/ but thou woldest not be clensed.
Thou canst not be pourged frō thine vncle-nesse/ till I haue poured my wrothfull indig-nacion vpon the. Euen I the Lorde haue so deuysed: Yee/ it is come therto allready that I will do it. I wil not go backe/ I wil not spare/
I wil not be intreated: but accordinge to thy wayes and ymaginacions/ thou shalt be punyshed/ saieth the Lorde God.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto C me/ sayinge: Thou sonne of man/ beholde/ I wil take awaye the pleasure of thine eyes with a plague: yet shalt thou neyther mourne nor wepe/ nor water thy chekes therfore: thou maieste mourne by thy selfe alone/ but vse no deadly lamētacīō. Holde on thy bonet/ & put on thy shues vpon thy fete/ couer not thy face/and eate no mourners bread. So I spake vnto the people bytimes in the morning/ and at euen my wyfe dyed: then vpon the nexte mo-row/ I did as I was commaunded. And the people sayde vnto me: wilt thou not tell vs

what that signified/ which thou doest? I aū-swered them the worde of the Lorde came vnto me/ sayinge: Tel the house of Israel/ thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde/ I will suspende my Sanctuary: euen the glory of your power/ the pleasure of youre eyes/ and the thinge that ye loue: youre sonnes and doughters whome ye haue lefte/ shall fall thorowe
the swearde.

D Like as I haue done/ so shal ye do also: Ye shal not hyde your faces/ ye shal eate no mour ners bread/ youre bonettes shal ye haue vpon youre heades/ and shues vpon youre fete/ Ye shall neither mourne nor wepe/ but in youre synnes ye shalbe sorowfull/ and one repente with another. Thus Ezechiel is youre shewe-token. For loke as he hath done/ so (when this commeth) ye shal do also/ that ye maye learne to knowe/ that I am the Lorde God. But beholde/ O thou sonne of man/ In the daye when I take from them their power/ their ioye and honoure/ the luste of their eyes/ the burthen of their: bodyes/ namely/ their son-nes and doughters. Than shall there one escape/ and come vnto the/ for: to shewe the. In that daye shal thy mouth be opened to him/which is escaped/ that thou maiest speake/ and be nomore domme. Yee/ and thou shalte be their shewtoken/ that they maie knowe/ howe
that I am the Lorde.

The. XXV. Chapter.

A THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me/
sayinge/ Thou sonne of man/ set thy face

God. For: so muche as thou speakest ouer my ded: and ouer the lande of Israel/ I trowe it be nowe desolate: yee/ and ouer the house of Juda/ I trowe they be nowe led awaye prysoners. Beholde/ I wil delyuer the to the people of the East/ that they maye haue the in vp thy mylke. As for: Rabath/ I will make of of it a stall for: camels/ and of Ammon a shep-

Lorde.

For thus sayeth the Lorde God: Inso much as thou haste clapped with thine hā-

Thus saieth the Lord God: For: so muche

the Ammonites shal nomore be had in remē-

I punish Moab also/ that they maye knowe

people of Israel/ will I auenge me againe
vpon Edom: they shall handle him/ accordinge to my wrath and indignacion/ so that they shall knowe my vengeaunce sayeth the Lorde God.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: For: so much as the † Philistines haue done this: namely/ Esa. xiij. e taken vengeaunce with despytefull stomac- Jer. xlvij. a

The. XXVI. Chapter.

A IT happened / that in the xj. yeare / the first daye of the moneth / the worde of Lord came vnto me: saying: †Thou sonne of man / Esa. xxiij. a Jer. xlvij. b Ezec. xxvij. xxviij. Because that Tyre hath spoken vpon Jerusalem. Aha / nowe I trowe the portes of the people be broken / and she turned vnto me / for I haue destroyed my belly ful. Yee / therfore sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde O Tyre / I wil vpon the / I wil bringe a great multitude of people against the / like as when the see aryseth wt his waues: These shall breake the walles of Tyre / and cast doune her towers: I wil scrape the grounde from her / and make her a bare stone / yee / as the drienge place / where the fyshers hange vp their nettes by the see side. Euen I haue spoken it / sayeth the Lorde God. The Gentiles shall spoyle her / her doughters vpon the felde shal perish with the swearde / that they maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

B For thus saieth the Lord God: Beholde / I wil bringe hither Nabuchodonosor (which is the kinge of Babilon / & a kynge of kinges) from the North / vpon Tyre / with horses / charettes / horsmen / and with a greate multitude of people. Thy doughters that are in the land / shall he slaye with the swearde. But againste the / he shal make bulworkes and graue vp diches aboute the / & lifte vp his shilde againste the. His slinges and battaillrammes shall he prepare for thy walles / and with his weapõs breake doune thy towers. The dust of his horses shall couer the / they shalbe so many / thy walles shall shake at the noyse of the horsmen / charrettes and wheles / when he commeth to thy portes / as mẽ do into an open citie. With ỹ hofes of his horse fete / shal he treade doune all thy stretes.

He shal slaye thy people with the swearde / and breake doune the pillers of thy strenght. They shall waist awaye thy riches / and spoyle thy marchaundise. Thy walles shall they breake doune / & destroye thy houses of pleasure. Thy stones / thy tymbre and foundacions shal they cast in the water. †Thus wil I bring the melody of thy songes / and the voice of thy minstrelsy to an ende / so that they shal nomore be herde. Jer. vij. b

C I will make a bare stone of the / yee / a dryenge place for nettes / & thou shalt neuer be builded againe. For euen I the Lorde haue spoken it / saieth the Lorde God / thus hath the Lorde God spoken concerninge Tyre. The Iles shalbe moued at the noyse of thy fal / and at the crie of the slayne / that shalbe murthured in the. All kynges of the see shal come doune from their seates regall: they shall laye awaye their roabes / and put of their costly clothinge: Yee / with tremblinge shall they be clothed / they shal syt vpon the groũde: they shalbe afrayed at thy suddane fall / and be abashed at the.

They shall mourne for the / and saye vnto the: †O thou noble citie / ỹ hast bene so greatly occupyed of olde / thou that hast bene the strõgest vpõ ỹ see wt thine inhabitours / of whome all men stode in feare: Howe art thou now so vtterly destroyed? Now at the time of thy fall the inhabitours of the Iles / yee / and the Iles them selfes shal stande in feare at thine ende. Trem. j. & For thus saieth the Lorde God: when I D make ỹ a desolate citie (as other cities be / that no man dwelleth in) & whẽ I bring the depe vpon the / that great waters maye couer the: Then will I caste the doune vnto them / that descẽde into the pytte: vnto a people that hath bene longe dead / and set the in a lande ỹ is beneth / like the olde wilderneſſe / with them which go doune to their graues / so that nomã shal dwel more in the. And I wil make the to be no more in honoure / in the lande of the lyuinge. I will make an ende of the / and thou shalt be gone. Though thou be sought for / yet shalt thou not be founde for euermore / sayeth the Lorde God.

The. XXVII. Chapter.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me / A sayinge: O thou sonne of man / make a lamentable complaynte vpon †Tyte / and saye vnto Tyre / which is a porte of the see / that occupieth with muche people and many Iles: thus speaketh the Lord God: O Tyre / thou haste saide: I am a noble citie. Thy borders are in the middest of the see / and thy builders Ezech. xxvij. xxviij.

haue made the maruaylous goodly. All thy rables haue they made of Cipre trees of the mount Senir. From Libanus haue they take Cedre trees / to make the maste: and the Okes of Basan to make the owers.

The boardes haue they made of yuery / & of costly wood out of the Ile of Cethim. Thy sayle was of whyte small nedle worke oute of the lande of Egypt / to hange vpon thy mast: and thy hãginges of yalow sylke and purple / out of the Iles of Elisa. They of Sidon & Aruad were thy maryners / & the wyseſt in Tyre were thy shipmasters. The eldest and wyseſt at Gebal were they / that mẽded and stopped thy shippes.

All shippes of the see with their shipmen occupied their marchaundise in the. The Perses / Lydians / and Lybians were in thyne hooste / and helped the to fyght: these hanged vp their shildes and helmettes with the / these set forth thy beuty.

They of Aruad were with thine hooste roũd aboute thy walles / & were thy watchmen vpõ thy towers: these hanged vp their shildes B roundе aboute thy walles / & made thy maruailous goodly. Tharsis occupied with the in all maner of wares / in syluer / yrõ / tynne / and lead / and made thy market greate. Jauan / Tuball and Mesech were thy marchaũtes / which brought the men and ornamentes of metall for thy occupyinge. They of the house of Thogarma brought vnto the at the time of thy marte / horse / horsmẽ and mules. They of †De- Ezec. xxv. e dan were thy marchaũtes: & many other Iles that occupied with the / brought the wethers / Elephant bones and Peycockes for a present. The Sirians occupieth with the / because of thy diuerse workes / and increaced thy marchaundise with Smaragdes / with scarlet / thnedle worke / with whyte lynnen clothe / with sylke / and with Chastal.

Juda and the lande of Israel occupyed with the / and brought vnto thy markettes / wheate / balme / hony / oyle / & triacle. Damascus also vsed marchaundise with the / in the best wyne and whyte woll: because thy occupienge was so greate / and thy wares so many. Dan / Jauan / and Mensal haue brought vnto thy markettes / yrõ redy made / with cassia and calamus / according to thine occupienge. Sedan occupied with the in sayre tapestry worke and quyshins. Arabia and all the princes of Cedar haue occupied with the / in shepe / wethers / and goates.

The marchauntes of Seba & Rema haue occupied also with the / in all costly spices / in all precious stones and golde / whiche they brought vnto thy markettes. Haran / Chene and Eden / the marchauntes of Saba / Assiria and Chelmad / were al doers with the / and occupied with the: In costly raymẽt / of yalow sylke & nedle worke (very precious / & therfore packte & bounde together with roapes.) Yee / and in Cedre woode / at the tyme of thy markettes. The shippes of Tharsis were the chiefe of thy occupyinge.

Thus thou art ful / and in greate worship / euen in the myddest of the see. Thy maryners were euer brynginge vnto the oute of many waters. But the Easte wynde shal ouerbeare the into the middest of the see: so that thy wares / thy marchaundise / thy ryches / thy maryners / thy shipmasters / thy helpers / thy occupiers (that brought the thinges necessary) the men of warre that are in the: yee / and all thy cõmons shall perish in the middest of the see / in the daye of thy fall. The suburbes shall shake at the loude crie of thy shipmen. All whirrymen / and all maryners vpon the see / shall leape out of boates / and set them selfes vpon the lande. They shal lifte vp their voyce because of the / and make a lamentable crye. They shall caste duste vppon their heades / and lye doune in the asshes. They shal shaue them selfes / and put sackecloth vpõ them for thy sake.

They shall mourne for the with hertefull sorowe / and heauy lamentacion / yee / their children also shall wepe for the: Alas / what citie hath so bene destroyed in the see as Tyre is? When thy wares & marchaundise came frõ the sees / thou gauest al people ynough. The kinges of the earth hast thou made riche / thorow the multitude of thy wares and occupienge: But now art thou caste doune into the depe of the see / al thy resorte of people is perished with the. All they that dwel in ỹ Iles are abashed at the / & all their kinges are afrayed / yee / their faces haue chaunged coloure. The marchaũtes of the nacions wondre at the: In that that thou art so clene brought to naught/and commest nomore vp.

The.XXVIII. Chapter.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me/
sayinge: Thou sonne of man/tell ỹ prince Ezec. xxvj. xxvij. of †Tyre: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Because thou hast a proude hert/ and hast saide:
*Esa. xiiij. c *I am a God/I haue my seate in the mid-

With thy wisedome and thy vnderstanding/thou hast gotten the greate welthinesse/ and gathered treasure of syluer and golde. With thy greate wisedome and occupienge/ haste thou increaced thy power/ and because of thy great riches thy hert is proude.

Therfore thus saieth ỹ Lorde God: For so much as thou hast lifte vp thine herte/ as though thou weres god: behold/I wil bring enemies vpon the/euen the tyrauntes of the Heithen: these shall drawe oute their sweardefyle thy glory. They shall caste the doune to the pytte/so that thou shalt dye in the middest of the see/as they that be slayne. Let se/yf thou am God: where as thou art but a man/ and not God/in the handes of them that slay the.

Dye shalt thou/euen as the vncircumcised in the hãdes of the enemies: for I my selfe haue spoken it/saieth the Lorde God.

Moreouer/the worde of the Lorde came vnto me/sayinge: Thou sonne of man/ make a lamentable complainte ouer the kynge of Tyre/& tell him: Thus saieth the Lorde God:
Thou art a scale of a lykenesse/full of wisdome and excellent beuty. Thou haste bene in the pleasaũt garden of God: thou art decte with al maner of precious stones: ih Ruby/Topas/
Christall/ Iacyncte/ Onyx/ Iaspis/ Saphir/
Smaragde/Carbuncle & golde. Thy beutye
& the holes that be in the/were set forth in the day of thy creacion. Thou art a fayre Cherub/stretched wyde out for to couer.

I haue set the vpon the holy mounte of God/there hast thou bene/and walked amõg
the fayre glisteringe stones. From the tyme of thy creacion thou haste bene righte excellent/tyl wickednesse was fõunde in the. †Be- C

Therfore will I caste the from the mounte of God/ (O thou coueringe Cherub) and de-stroye the among the glisteringe stones. Thy hert was proude in thy fayre beuty/ and tho-row thy beuty thou haste destroyed thy wise-dom: I wil cast ỹ doune to the ground/& that in the sight of kinges. Thou haste defyled thy Sanctuary/with the great wickednes of thy vnrighteous occupyinge. I wil bringe a fyre from the middest of the/ to consume the: and wil make the to asshes/in the sight of al them that loke vpon the. All they that haue bene acquainted with the amonge the Heithen/shal be abashed at the: seynge/ thou arte so cleane brought to naught/ & commest no more vp.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me/sayinge: Thou sonne of man/ set thy face against †Sidõ/Prophecie vpõ it/and speake: Ioel. iij. a Thus saieth the Lorde God: Beholde o Si- Zach. ix. a don/I wil vpon the/& get me honoure in the Lorde/whẽ I punish her/ & get me honoure

in her. For I wil sende pestilence and bloude shedding into her stretes/so that those which be slayne with the swearde/shal lye rounde a-boute in the middest of her: & they shal know/ 9 that I am the Lorde. She shal nomore be a pryckinge thorne/and an hurtinge brere vnto
the house of Israell/ nor vnto them that lye rounde aboute her/ and hate her: and they shal knowe/that I am the Lorde.

Thus saieth the Lorde God: whẽ I gather the housholde of Israel together againe/from the nacions amonge whome they be scatred: then shal I be sanctified in thẽ/in the sight of the Gentiles: & they shal dwel in the lande/that I gaue to my seruaũt Iacob. They despyse them rounde aboute: and then shall they knowe/that I am the Lorde their God.

there/neither shall it be inhabited. I wil make the lande of Ægypte to be desolate amonge o-

I wil scatre the Ægipcians amonge the Hei-

Heithen. They shal nomore be an hope vnto the house of Israel/neither prouoke them any more to wickednesse/ to cause them turne backe/ and to folowe them: and they shall knowe/that I am the Lorde God.

In the xxvij. yeare/the first daye of the first C me/ sayinge: Thou sonne of man Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon hath made his hooste/with greate trauayle and laboure to come before Tyre: that euery heade maye be balde/and euery shoulder bare. Yet hath Tyre geuen neither him nor his hooste any reward/

for the great trauaile that he hath taken there.
Therfore thus saieth the Lorde God: Be-holde/I will geue the lande of Ægipte vnto Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon/ that he maye take awaie all her substaunce/ robbe
her robberies/and spoyle her spoiles/ to paye his hooste their wagies withall. I will geue him the lande of Ægypte for his laboure/ that he toke for me before Tyre. At thesame tyme wil I cause the horne of the house of Israel to growe forth/and open thy mouth agayne amonge them: that they maye knowe/ howe
that I am the Lorde.

The. XXX. Chapter.

MOreouer/the worde of the Lorde came A vnto me/sayinge: Thou sonne of man/
prophecy and speake/ thus saieth the Lorde God: Mourne/ wo worth this daie/ for the daye is here/the daie of the Lorde is come:
the darke daye of the Heithen/the houre is at hande/the swearde commeth vpon Ægipte.
When the wounded men fall doune in Ægipte/ when her people are taken awaye/ and when her foundacions are destroyed: the Morians lande shalbe afrayed: yee/ the Morians lande/Lybia and Lydia/all their comon people/and Ehub/ and all that be confederate vnto them/shall fall with them thorowe the swearde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: The mainteyners of the lande of Ægypte shal fall/ the pryde of her power shall come doune: euen vnto the tower of Syenes shal they be slayn doune ih B
the swearde/saieth the Lorde God: among other

other desolate cõuntries they shalbe made desolate / and amonge other waiste cities they shalbe waisted. And they shal knowe that I am the Lord/when I kindle a fyre in Egipte/and when al her helpers are destroyed.

At that time shall messaungers go forth fro me in shippes/ to make the cakelesse Morians afraied: and sorowe shall come vpon thẽ in the day of Egipt/for doubtles it shal come. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I will make an ende of the people of Egypte/thorowe the hande of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilõ. He and his people with him /yee/ and the cruel tyrauntes of the Heithẽ shalbe brought to destroye the lande. They shall drawe oute their swerdes vpon Egipte / and fyll the lande full of slaynemen. I will drye vp their floudes of water / and sell the lande into the handes of wicked people. The lande and all that is therin/wil I destroye thorow the enemies. Euen I the Lord haue saide it.

C And thus saieth the Lord God: †I will
Zach. xiij.a destroye the Idols / and bringe the ymages of Noph to an ende. There shall nomore be a prince of Egypte / and a fearefulnesse wyll I sende into the Egypcians lande. As for Pathures/I will make it desolate / and kyndle a fyre in Zoan. Alexandria will I punishe / and poure my wrothfull indignacion vpon Sin/ which is the strenght of Egypte. All the substaunce of Alexandria wil I destroye/& kindle a fyre in Egypte.

Sin shalbe in greate heauynesse / Alexandria shalbe roted oute / and Noph shall haue daylye sorowe. The best men of Heliopolis & Bubasto shalbe slayne with the swearde/ and caried awaye captiue. At Taphnis the daye shalbe darke / when I breake there the cepter of the lande of Egypte/and when the pompe of her power shal haue an ende. A cloude shal couer her/and her doughters shalbe ledde awaye into the captiuitie. Thus will I punish Egypte/that they maye knowe / howe that I am the Lord.

D It happened in xj. yeare/vpon the seuenth daye of the fyrst moneth / that the Lordes worde came vnto me/saying: Beholde/thou sonne of mã/I wil breake the arme of Pharao kyng of Egipte: and lo/it shal not be bounde vp to be healed / neither shall any plaistre be layed vppon it / for to ease it / or to make it so stronge/as to holde a swearde. Therfore/thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde/ I wil vpon Pharao the kinge of Egipt/& bruse his stronge arme (yet is it but a broken one) & will smyte the swearde out of his hande.

As for the Egipcians / I wil scatre them amonge the Heithen/ & strowe them in the landes about. Againe I wil strenght ỹ arme of the king of Babilõ/& geue him my swearde in his hande: but I wil breake Pharaos arme so that he shall holde it before him piteously/ like a wounded man.

Yee/ I wil stablish the kinge of Babilons arme/& the armes of Pharao shal fal doune: that it maye be knowẽ/that I am the Lord/ which geue the kinge of Babilon my swearde in his hande/that he maye drawe it out vpon the lande of Egipte: & that when I scatre the Egipcians amonge the Gentiles/and strowe them in the landes aboute / that they maye knowe that I am the Lord.

The. XXXI. Chapter.

A MOreouer/it happened in the xj. yeare the first daye of the third moneth/ that the worde of the Lorde came vnto me/ saynge: Thou sonne of man/speake vnto Pharao the kynge of Egypte/& to all his people: Whome art thou lyke in thy greatnesse? Beholde / Assur was lyke a Cedre tree vpon the mounte of Libanus/with fayre braunches: so thicke that he gaue shadowes / and shot oute very hye. His toppe reached vnto the cloudes. The waters made hym greate/ and the depe set hym vp an hye. Rounde aboute the rotes of him ranne there floudes of water / he sente oute his litle ryuers vnto all the trees of the felde. Therfore was he hyer then all the trees of the felde / and thorowe the multitude of waters that he sente from him / he optayned many and longe braunches. All fooles of the ayre made their nestes in his braunches/vnder his bowes gendred all the beastes of the felde / & vnder his shadowe dwelte all people. Fayre and beutifull was he in his greatnesse / and in the lenghte of his braunches / for his rote stode besyde greate waters: no Cedre tree mighte hyde him. In the pleasaunt garden of God/there was no Fyre tree like his braũches/the plaine trees were not lyke the bowes of of him. All the trees in the garden of God mighte not be compared vnto him in his beuty: so fayre and goodly had I made hym with the multitude of his braunches: In so much/that all the trees in the pleasaunte garden of God/had enuye at him. Therfore/thus

B sayeth the Lorde God: For so much as he hath lift vp him selfso hie/& stretched his toppe into the cloudes / & seinge his hert is proude in his highnesse: I will deliuer him into the handes of the mightiest amonge the Heithẽ/ which shall rote him oute. Accordinge to his wickednes wil I cast him away / the enemies shal destroye him / & the mighty men of the Heithen shal so scatre him/ that his braũches shal lye vpon al mountaines & in all valleys: his bowes shalbe broken doune to the groũd thoroweout the lande. Then al the people of the lande shal go from his shadowe/ and forsake him. When he is fallen/all the fooles of ỹ ayre shal syt vpon him/and al wilde beastes of the felde shall go aboute amonge his braunches: so that from henceforth / no tree in the water shal attayne to his hyghnes/nor reache his toppe vnto the cloudes/neither shall any tree of the water stande so hie as he hath done. For vnto death shall they all be delyuered vnder the earth/and go doune to the graue lyke other men.

C Moreouer / thus saieth the Lorde God: In the daye when he goeth doune to the graue/I wil cause a lamentacion to be made. I will couer the depe vpon him/ I wil stauch his floudes/ and the great waters shalbe restrayned. I shall cause Libanus to be sorowfull for his sake / and all the trees of the felde shalbe smytten. I wil make the Heithẽ shake at the sounde of his fall / when I caste him
Esa. xiiij.c doune to †hell/ with them that descende into
Eze. xxxij.c the pytte. All the trees of Eden / with all the chosen and best trees of Libanus/yee / and all they that are planted vpon the waters / shall mourne with him also in the lower habitacions: for they shal go doune to hel with him/ vnto them that be slaine with the swearde/& dwelt afore vnder the shadowe of his arme amonge the Heithen. To whome shalte thou be lykened/ that art so glorious and greate amonge the trees of Eden? Yet art thou caste doune vnder the earth (amonge the trees of Eden) where thou must lye amongẽ the vncircumcised/with them that be slaine with ỹ swearde. Euen thus is it with Pharao & all his people/saieth the Lorde God.

The XXXII. Chapter.

A IN the xij. yeare / the firste daye of the xij.
moneth/ the worde of the Lorde came vnto me/ sayinge: Thou sonne of man/ take vp a lamentacion vpon † Pharo the kinge of Ezec. xxx. Egypte / and saye vnto him: Thou art repu- xxx. xxxj. ted as a Lyon of the Heythen/ and as a walfish in the see. Thou castest thy waters aboute the / thou troublest the waters with thy fete/ and stampest in their floudes. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: †I wyl spreade my net ouer Ezec. xij. b the / namely / a greate multitude of people: xvij. c these shal drawe the into my yarne/for I wyl cast the vpon the lande/and let the lye vpõ the felde/that al the fooles of the ayre maye sit vpon the: I wil geue all the beastes of the felde ynough of ỹ. Thy flesh wil I caste vpõ the hilles/ and fyll the valleys with thy highnesse. I wil water the lande with the aboundaũce of thy bloude/ euen to the mountaynes/ and the valleys shalbe full of the.

When thou arte put oute/I will couer the B
heauen / & make his starres dymme. †I will Esa. xiij. b spreade a cloude ouer the Sũne/and ỹ Moone shal not geue her light. Al the lightes of heauen wil I put out ouer the/and bring darkenesse vpon thy lande/saieth the Lord God. I wil trouble the hertes of many people: whẽ I bringe thy destruccion amonge the Heithẽ and coũtries/whome thou knowest not. Yee/ I will make many people with their kinges so afrayed thorow ỹ/that their heere shal stãde vp/when I shake my swearde at their faces. Sodenly shal they be astonyed/ euery man in him selfe/at the daie of thy fall.

For thus saieth the Lorde God: the kinge of Babilons swearde shal come vpon the / ẅ the sweardes of the worthies will I smyte doune thy people. All they that be mightye amonge the Gentiles/ shal waiste the proude pompe of Egypte/and bringe doune all her people. All the cattell also of Egipt wil I destroye / that they shall come nomore vpon the waters: so that neither mans fote nor beastes clawe shal stere thẽ any more. Thẽ wil I make C their waters cleare / & cause their floudes to

runne lyke oyle/saieth the Lorde God: whē I make the lande of Egipte desolate/ and when the countrie with all that is therein/ shalbe laide waist: and when I smyte al them which dwel in it/that they maye knowe/ that I am the Lord. This is the mourning/that the doughters of the Heithen shal make: Yee/ a sorowe and lamentacion shall they take vp vpon Egipte and all her people/ saieth the Lorde God.

In the xij. yeare/the xv. daie of the moneth came the worde of the Lorde vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man. Take vp a lamentacion vppon the people of Egypte/ and caste them doune/ yee/ and the mighty people of the Heithen also/euen with them † that dwel beneth: and with them that go doune into the graue. Doune (how fayre soeuer thou be) and laye the with the vncircumcised. Amōge those that be slayne with the swearde/ shall they lye. The swearde is geuen already/ he shalbe drawen forth and all his people. The mighty worthies and his helpers/ that be gone doune and lye with the vncircumcised/ and with them that be slain with the sweard shall speake to him out of the hell.

Assur is there also with his company/ and their graues rounde about/which were slain and fel al with the swearde/whose graues lye besyde him in the lowe pytte. His commons are buried rounde aboute his graue: altogether wounded and slaine with the swearde/ which men afore time brought feare into the lande of the lyuinge.

There is † Elam also with all his people/ and their graues rounde aboute: whiche all beynge wounded and slain with the sweard/ are gone doun vncircūcised vnder the earth/ which neuertheles somtime brought feare in to the lande of the liuinge: for the which cause they beare their shame/ with the other that be gone doune to the graue.

Their buryall is geuen them and all their people/amonge them that be slaine. Their graues are rounde aboute all them/ which be vncircumcised/and with them that be slaine thorow the swearde: for seynge that in times past they made the land of the lyuing afraied/ they must now beare their owne shame/with them that go doune to the pytte/ and lye amonge them that be slaine.

There is Mesech also/ and Tubal/ & their people/and their graues rounde about. These all are amonge the vncircumcised/ and them that be slaine with the swearde/ because afore time they made the lande of the lyuinge afraied.

Shoulde not they then lye also amonge ỹ worthies/and vncircūcised Giauntes: which with their weapons are gone doune to hell: whose sweardes are laied vnder their heades/ whose wickednesse is vpon their bones/ because that as worthies/ they haue brought feare into the lande of the liuinge: Yee/amōge the vncircumcised shalte thou be destroyed/ & slepe with them that perished thorowe the swearde.

There is the lande of † Edom with her kinges and princes also/whiche with their strengthe are layed by them that were slaine with the swearde/ yee/ amonge the vncircumcised/ and thē which are gone doune into the pitte. Moreouer/there be all ỹ princes of the North with all the Sidonians/ whiche are gone doune to the slaine.

With their feare and strēgth they are come to confusion/and lye there vncircumcised/ amonge those that be slaine with the swearde/ and beare their owne shame/with them that be gone doune to the pytte. Now when Pharao seyth this/he shalbe comforted ouer al his people that is slaine with the swearde: both Pharao and al his hooste/ saieth the Lorde God. For I haue geuen my feare in the lāde of the lyuinge. But Pharao and all his people shall lye amonge the vncircumcised/ and amonge them that be slaine with the sweard/ saieth the Lord God.

The. XXXIII. Chapter.

AGaine/the worde of the Lord came vnto me/saying: Thou sonne of mā/Speake to the children of thy people/ and tell them: When I sende a swearde vpon a lande/ if the people of the lande take a man of their countrie/ and set him to be their † watchman: the same man (whan he seyth the swearde come vpon the lande) shal blowe the trompet/ and warne the people.

If a man now heare the noyse of the trōpe/ and wil not be warned/and the sweard come and take him awaye: hys bloude shalbe vpon his owne heade: For he herde the sounde of the trompe/ and wolde not take hede/ therfore his bloude be vpon him. But if he will receaue warninge/he shall saue his life. Agayne/if the watchman se the swearde come/ and shewe it not with the trompe/ so that the people is not warned: if the swearde come then/ & take any man from amonge thē/ thesame shalbe taken awaye in hys owne synne/but his bloude will I require of the watchmans hande.

† And now (O thou sonne of man) I haue made the a watchman vnto the house of Israel: that where as thou hearest any thinge out of my mouth/ thou mayest warne them on my behalfe. If I saye vnto the wicked: thou wicked/ thou shalt surely dye: and thou geuest him not warnynge/ that he maye beware of his vngodly waye: then shall the wicked dye in his owne synne/but his bloude wil I require of thy hande. Neuertheles/ if thou warne the wicked of his waye/ to turne from it/ where as he yet wil not be turned from it: then shal he dye because of his synne/but thou hast delyuered thy soule.

Therfore (O thou sonne of man) speake vnto the house of Israel/ Ye saye thus: Oure offences and synnes lye vpon vs/ and we be corrupte in them: how shoulde we then be restored vnto life? Tell them: † As truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde God) I haue no pleasure in the death of the wicked/ but muche rather that the wicked turne from his waye and lyue. Turne you/ turne you frō your vngodly wayes/o ye of the house of Israel. Oh/ wherfore will ye dye?

Thou sonne of man/ tell the children of thy people: † The righteousnesse of the righteous shall not saue him/ whansoeuer he turneth awaye vnfaithfully: Againe/the wickednesse of the wicked shall not hurte him/ whansoeuer he conuerteth from his vngodlynesse:

And the righteousnesse of ỹ righteous shall not saue his life/ whensoeuer he sinneth. If I saye vnto the righteous/ that he shall surely lyue/ & lo/ he trust to his own righteousnesse/ and do synne: then shall his righteousnesse be nomore thought vpon/ but in the wickednesse that he hath done/he shall dye.

† Agayne/if I saye to the wicked: thou shalt surely dye: and so he turne from his synnes/ & do the thinge that is lawfull and righte: In so much that thesame wicked man geueth the pledge agayne/ restoreth that he hath taken awaye by robbery/ walketh in the commaundementes of life/and doeth no wronge:

Then shall he surely lyue/and not dye. Yee/ the synnes that he had done/ shall neuer be thought vpō: For in so much as he doeth now the thynge that is lawfull and right/ he shall lyue. And yet the children of thy people saye: Tush/ the waye of the Lorde is not right/ where as their owne waye is rather vnright.

When the righteous turneth frō hys righteousnesse/ and doeth the thynge that is wicked/ he shall dye therfore. But if the wicked turne from his wickednesse/doinge the thinge that is lawfull and right/he shal lyue therfore. Yet ye saye: † the waye of the Lorde is not equal. O ye house of Israel/ * I wil iudge euery one of you after his wayes.

In the xij. yeare/the v. daye of the x. moneth of our captiuitie/ it happened/ that one which was fled out of Jerusalem/ came vnto me/ & sayde: the citie is destroyed. Now the hande of the Lorde had bene vpon me/ the eueninge afore this man (which was escaped) came vnto me/ and had opened my mouth vntill the morninge that he came to me: Yee/ he opened my mouth/ so that I was nomore domme. Then came the worde of the Lord vnto me/ and sayde: Thou sonne of man/these that dwel in the waysted lande of Israel/saye: Abraham was but one man/and he had the lāde in possession: now are we many/and the lande is geuen vs to possesse also. And therfore tell them: Thus saieth the Lorde: † In the bloude haue ye eaten/ your eyes haue ye lift vp to Idols/ and * haue shed bloude: shall ye then haue the lande in possession?

Ye leane vpon youre sweardes/ ye worke abhominaciōs/ euery one defyleth his neyghbours wife: and shal ye then possesse the lāde? Saye thou these wordes vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: As truly as I lyue/ all ye that dwell in this wilderneſſe/ shalbe slayne with the swearde: what so is vpon the felde/ will I geue vnto beastes to be deuoured: those that be in stronge holdes and dennes/ shall dye of the pestilence. For I wil make the lande desolate and waist / and the pompe of her strength shall come to an ende. The mountaynes in Israel shalbe so wayste that no man shall trauayle therby.

F †Then shal they learne to knowe/that I am Ezec.xxv.c the Lord / whē I make the lande waist & desolate/ because of all their abhominacions that they haue wrought. And thou sonne of man/ the childrē of thy people that talke of the/ by the walles & in the dores of their houses / sayinge one to another: come/let vs heare what worde is gone forth from the Lorde: These come vnto the/after ỹ maner of a greate people: yee/ my people syt doune before the / and heare thy Esa.xix.c wordes / but they do not therafter. † For in Matt.xv.a their mouthes they shewe them selfes / as though they were feruēt/ but their herte goeth after their owne coueteous lucre. And as a ballet that hath a swete tune / and is pleasaunt to synge/so shalt thou be vnto them: thy wordes shall they heare/ but they will not do therafter. When this commeth to passe (for lo / it commeth in dede) then shal they knowe/ that there hath bene a prophet amonge them.

The. XXXIIII. Chapter.

A AND the worde of the Lorde came vnto me/sayinge: Thou sonne of man / prophecye agaynst the shepeherdes of Israel / prophecy/and speake vnto them: Thus saieth the Eze.xiij.a Lorde God: † Wo be vnto the shepeherdes Iere.xxiij.b of Israel that fede thē selfes. Shoulde not the xxiij.a shepeherdes fede the flockes?

Ye haue eaten vp the fatte / ye haue clothed you with the wol: ỹ best fedde haue ye slayne/ but the flocke haue ye not norished: The weake
Luc.iiij.b haue ye not holden vp / † the sicke haue ye not healed: the broken haue ye not bounde together/ ỹ outcastes haue ye not brought againe: the lost haue ye not sought / † but churlishly
1.Pet.v.a and cruelly haue ye ruled thē. Thus are they scatred here and there without a shepeherder yee/all the beastes of the felde deuoure them/ and they go astraye.

My shepe go wandringe vpō all mountaines / and vpon euery hye hill/ yee/ they be scatred abroade in all feldes / and there is noman that careth for them/or seketh after them.

B Therfore o ye shepeherdes / heare the worde of the Lorde) Thus saieth the Lorde God: As truly as I lyue / for so much as my shepe are robbed/and deuoured of all the wilde beastes of the felde / hauynge no shepeherde/ and seynge that my shepeherdes take no regarde of my shepe/but fede them selfes only/and not my shepe: Therfore heare the worde of the Lorde/ o ye shepeherdes: Thus saieth ỹ Lorde God: Beholde / I my self will vpon the shepeherdes/and requyre my shepe from their handes / and make thē ceasse from fedinge of my shepe: yee/ the shepeherdes shall fede them selfes nomore: For I will delyuer my shepe out of their mouthes/ so that they shall not deuoure them after thys.

For thus saieth the Lord God: † Beholde/ I Joan.x.c I will loke to my shepe my self/ & seke thē. Like Hebr.xiij as a shepeherde amonge the flocke seketh after j.Pe.ij.c the shepe that are scatred abroade/ euen so wil I seke after my shepe / and gather them together out of all places / where they haue bene scatred in the cloudy and darke daye. I will bringe them out from all people / and gather them together out of all landes. I will bringe them into their owne lande/& fede them vpon the mountaines of Israel / by the riuers / and in all the places of the countrie. I wil fede them in righte good pastures / and vpon the hye mountaynes of Israel shall their foldes be. There shall they lye in a good folde / and in a fat pasture shal they fede: euen vpō ỹ mountaines of Israel.

I will fede my shepe my self / and bringe C them to their rest / saieth the Lorde God.
† Such as be lost / will I seke: such as goo a-Luc.xiij.b straye/will I bringe agayne: such as be woun-Joan.x.a ded/ wil I bynde vp: such as be weake/ will I make stronge: such as be fat and well lykinge/ those will I preserue / and fede them with the thinge that is lawfull. And as for you (o my Mat.xxv shepe) saieth the Lorde God: † I wil put a difference amonge the shepe/amonge the wethers and the goates. Was it not ynough for you to eate vp the good pasture / but ye must treade doune ỹ residue of youre pasture with youre fete also: Was it not ynough for you to drynke cleare water / but ye muste trouble the residue also with youre fete?

Thus my shepe must be fayne to eate the thinge that ye haue troden doune with your fete/and to drinke/ that ye with your fete haue defyled.

Therfore/

Therfore/thus saieth the Lorde God vnto them: Beholde / I will seuer the fat shepe from the leane: for so muche as ye haue shot the weake shepe vpon the sydes and shoulders / and runne vpon them with youre hornes/ so longe till ye haue vtterly scatred them
D abroade. I will helpe my shepe / so that they shall nomore be spoyled: yee / I wil discerne one shepe from another. I will rayse vp vnto them one onely shepeherde/ euen my seruaunt xxxiv.b † Dauid/he shall *fede thē/and he shalbe their j.c shepeherde. I the Lorde wil be their God/xxxvij.a and my seruaunt Dauid shalbe their prince. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it.

Moreouer / I wil make a cōuenaūt of peace with them/ and dryue all euel beastes out of ỹ lande: so that they maye dwel safely in the wildernesse/ and slepe in the woodes / Good fortune and prosperite wil I geue them / & vnto
xxxiv.b all that be rounde aboute my hyll. † A prospe-xxxij.b rous shower & rayne will I sende them in due season/ that the trees in the wood maye bringe forth their frutes / & the grounde her increace. They shalbe safe in their lāde/ and shall knowe that I am the Lorde/which haue brokē their yocke / and deliuered them out of the handes of those that helde them in subiection.

They shall nomore be spoyled of the Heythen/nor deuoured with ỹ beastes of the lāde: but safely shall they dwell / and no man shall fraye them/ I wil set vp an excellent plant for them/ so that they shal suffre nomore hunger in the lande / neyther beare the reprofe of the Heythē any more. Thus shal they vnderstāde/ that I the Lorde their God am with them/ and that they (euen the house of Israel) are my xxxiiij.b people/ saieth the Lorde God. Ye men are a my flocke/ † ye are the shepe of my pasture: and I am youre God/saieth the Lorde God.

The XXXV. Chapter.

A MOreouer/ the worde of the Lorde came vnto me / sayinge: Thou sonne of man/ turne thy face towarde the mount † Seir/
xxxiij prophecy vpon it / & saye vnto it: Thus saieth xlix.a the Lorde God: Beholde / (o thou mount xxv.b Seir) I will vpon the/ I will reach out myne
f. hande ouer the / yee/ waist and desolate wil I a make the. Thy cities will I breake doune/and xx.c thou shalt lye voyde: that thou mayest knowe/
ij.a how that I am the Lorde. * For so much as thou beareſt an olde enemyte against the children of Israel / and with a cruel hande hast made them afrayed / what tyme as they were troubled and punyshed for their synne: Therfore / as truely as I lyue (saieth the Lorde God) I will prepare the vnto blonde / yee/ blonde shall folowe vpon the: † seinge thou j.Mac.v.c layest waite for blonde / therfore shal blonde persecute the. Thus will I make the mount Seir desolate and waist / and bringe to passe that there shall no man go thither / nor come from thence. His moūtaines will I fyll with his slayne men: thy hilles / dales / and valleys shall lye full of them that are slayne with the swearde. I wil make the a perpetual wildernesse/ so that noman shall dwell in thy cities: ỹ ye maye knowe/how that I am the Lorde.

And because thou hast sayde: what / both B these nacions and both these landes must be myne / and I will haue them in possession/
Exo.xxv.c † where as the Lorde was there. Therfore/ thus sayeth the Lorde God: As truly as I lyue/I will hādle the accordinge to thy wrath & gelousy/lyke as thou hast dealt cruelly with them: that I maye be knowen amonge them/ how I haue punyshed the. Yee/and that thou also mayest be sure / that I the Lorde haue herde all thy despytefull wordes / which thou hast spoken against the mountaines of Israel/ sayinge: Lo / they are made waist/ and geuen vs to deuoure.

Thus with your mouthes ye haue made youre boast against me / yee / and multiplied youre proude wordes against me / which I haue herde altogether. Whereunto/thus saieth the Lorde God: when the whole worlde is Ezec.xxv.c in wealth / thē wil I make the wayst. † And xxvj.a like as thou (o mount Seir) waste glad/ because the heretage of the house of Israel was destroyed: euen so wil I do vnto the also/ that thou and whole Edom shalbe destroyed / and knowe that I am the Lorde.

The. XXXVI. Chapter.

THou sonne of man / prophecie vpon the A mountaines of Israel/ & speake: † Heare Ezech. vj. c the worde of the Lorde / o ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus saieth the Lorde God: Because your enemie hath sayde vpon you: Aha/ the hye euerlastynge places are now become ours: prophecy therfore & speake: thus saieth

the Lorde God: Seinge ye be wayſted and trodē doune on euery ſyde / and become a poſſeſſion vnto the reſidue of the Gentiles / which haue brought you into mens mouthes & vnto an euel name amonge the people: Therfore / heare the worde of ỹ Lorde God / o ye mountaynes of Iſrael: Thus ſaieth ỹ Lorde God vnto the mountaines and hilles / valleys / and dales / to the voyde wilderneſſes and deſolate cities / which are ſpoyled / and had in derision on euery ſyde / amonge the reſidue of the Heythen: Yee / euen thus ſaieth the Lorde God: In the fyre of my gelouſy haue I taken a deuice / againſt the reſidue of the Gentiles / and Ezc xxxv.a againſt all † Edom: which haue taken in my lāde vnto thē ſelfes for a poſſeſſion: which also reioyced from their whole herte with a deſpitefull ſtomacke / to waiſt it / and to ſpoyle it.

B Prophecy therfore vpon the lande of Iſrael / ſpeake vnto the mountaines and hilles / to the valleys & dales / thus ſaieth the Lorde God: Beholde / this haue I deuiſed in my gelouſy and terrible wrath: For ſo much as ye haue ſuffred reproſe of the Heithen / therfore thus ſaieth the Lorde God: I haue ſworne / that the Gentiles which lye aboute you / ſhall beare youre confuſion them ſelfes. And as for you (o mountaines of Iſrael) ye ſhal ſhute out youre braunches / and bringe forth youre frute to my people of Iſrael / for it is harde by that it will come.

Beholde / I come vnto you / and vnto you will I turne me / that ye maye be tilled and ſowen. I will ſende you much people / which ſhalbe al of ỹ houſe of Iſrael / the cities ſhalbe inhabited / and the decayed places ſhalbe repayred againe. I wil prouyde you with much people and cattel / which ſhall increace & bringe frute. I will reſtore you alſo to your old eſtate / and ſhew you more kindneſſe thē euer ye had before: wherby ye ſhall knowe / that I am the Lord. Yee / people wil I ſend vnto you (o my folke of Iſrael) which ſhall haue the in poſſeſſion / and thou ſhalt be their inheritaunce / ſo that thou ſhalt nomore be without them. A-
C gayne / thus ſaieth ỹ Lorde God: For ſo much as they ſay vnto you / thou art an eater vp of men / & a wayſter of thy people: therfore thou ſhalt eate no mo mē / neyther deſtroye thy people any more / ſaieth the Lorde God. And I will not ſuffre the / for to heare thine owne confuſion amonge the Gentiles from henſforth. Thou ſhalt not beare the reproſe of the nacions / nor caſt out thine owne people any more / ſaieth the Lorde God.

Moreouer / the worde of the Lorde came vnto me / ſayinge: O thou ſonne of mā / when the houſe of Iſrael dwelt vpon their owne grounde / they defyled them ſelfes with their owne waies and ymaginacions / ſo that in my ſighte their waye was like the vnclennes of a menſtreous woman. Wherfore I poured my wrothfull diſpleaſure vpon them / becauſe of the bloude that they had ſhed in the lande / and becauſe of their Idols / wherwith they had defyled them ſelfes. I ſcatred thē alſo amonge the Heithen / ſo that they were ſtrowed about in the landes. Accordinge to their wayes and after their owne inuēcions / ſo dyd I punyſh them.

† Now whē they were gone vnto the Hei- D
then / and came in amonge them / they diſho- Rom.ii.c

them: Are theſe the people of God / and muſt go out of their owne lande? Then ſpared I my holy name / which the houſe of Iſrael had diſhonoured amonge the Gentiles / to whome they came. Therfore tell the houſe of Iſrael: Thus ſaieth the Lorde God: I do not this for your ſakes (O houſe of Iſrael) but for my holy names ſake / which ye diſhonoured amōge ỹ Heithē / when ye came to thē. ✝ Therfore / I will halowe my great name agayne / which amonge the Gentiles is euel ſpoken of / for ye youre ſelfes haue diſhonoured it amōge them. And the Gentiles ſhall knowe / that I am the Lorde / when I am honoured in you before their eyes / ſaieth the Lorde God.

As for you / I wil take you frō amonge the Heithē / & gather you together out of all countries / and bringe you againe into youre owne lande. † Then wil I poure cleare water vpon Eſa.xlij
you / & ye ſhalbe cleane: Yee / from all youre vn- Iere.xx clenneſſe & frō all your Idols ſhal I cleſe you. E † A new herte alſo wil I geue you / and a new Ezech.xi
ſprete wil I put into you. As for ỹ ſtony hert / xviij.e
I wil take it out of youre body / & geue you a fleſhy herte. I wil geue you my ſprete amōge you / † & cauſe to walke in my commaūdemen- Deu.viij tes / to kepe my lawes / and to fulfill them.

And

And ſo ye ſhall dwell in the lande that I gaue to your forefathers / & ye ſhalbe my people / and I wil be your God. F I wil helpe you out of all youre vnclenneſſe / I wil call for the corne / and wil increace it / and wil let you haue no hunger. I will multiplie the frutes of the trees / and the increace of the felde for you / ſo that ye ſhall beare nomore reproſe of hunger amonge the Heythen. Then ſhall ye remēbre your owne wicked wayes / and youre ymaginacions / which were not good: ſo that ye ſhall take diſpleaſure at your owne ſelfes / by reaſon of youre ſynnes and abhominacions.

F But I will not do this for youre ſakes (ſayeth the Lorde God) be ye ſure of it. Therfore (o ye houſe of Iſrael) be aſhamed of youre ſinnes. Moreouer / thus ſaieth the Lorde God: what tyme as I ſhall clenſe you from all your offences / then will I make the cities to be occupied againe / and wil repayre the places that be decayed. The deſolate lande ſhalbe buylded agayne / whiche afore tyme laye wayſt / in the ſight of all them that wente by. Then ſhall it be ſayde: This wayſt lande is become like a garden of pleaſure / and the voyde / deſolate / and broken doune cities / are now ſtronge and fenſed agayne. Thē the reſidue of the Heithen that lye rounde aboute you / ſhall knowe that I am the Lord / which repayre that was broken doune / and plante agayne that was made wayſt. Euen I the Lorde haue ſpokē it / and will do it in dede.

Thus ſaieth the Lorde God: I will yet once be founde agayne of the houſe of Iſrael / and do this for thē: † I ſhall increace them as ere.l.a a flocke of men. Like as the holy flocke / and the flocke of Ieruſalē are in the hie ſolempne feaſtes: ſo ſhal alſo the wilde waiſted cities be fylled with flockes of men: and they ſhall knowe that I am the Lorde.

The XXXVII. Chapter.

A THe hande of the Lorde came vpon me / and caried me out in the ſprete of ỹ Lorde / and let me doune in a playne felde that laye full of bones / & he led me rounde aboute by them: and beholde / the bones that laye vpon the felde / were very many / and maruaylous drye alſo. Then ſayde he vnto me: Thou ſonne of man: thinkeſt thou theſe bones maye lyue agayne? I aunſwered: O Lorde God / thou knoweſt. And he ſayde vnto me: Prophecy thou vpon theſe bones / and ſpeake vnto them: Ye drye bones / heare the worde of the Lorde. Thus ſayeth the Lorde God vnto theſe bones: Beholde / I will put brieth into you that ye maye lyue: I will geue you ſynowes / and make fleſh grow vpon you / and couer you ouer with ſkynne: and ſo geue you † brieth that ye maye lyue / and knowe that I Gen.ij.b am the Lorde.

So I prophecied / as he had commaunded me. † And as I was prophecienge / there came j.Cor.xv.b a noyſe and a great mocion / ſo that the bones ranne euery one to another. Now when I had loked / beholde / they had ſynowes / and fleſh grewe vpon them: and aboue they were couered with ſkynne / but there was no brieth in them. Then ſayde he vnto me: Thou ſonne B of man / prophecie thou towarde the wynde: prophecy / and ſpeake to the wynde: Thus ſayeth the Lord God: Come (o thou ayre) from the foure windes / and blowe vpō theſe ſlaine / that they maye be reſtored to life. So I prophecied / as he had commaunded me: Then came the brieth vnto them / and they receaued life / and ſtode vp vpon their fete / a maruaylous greate ſorte.

Moreouer / he ſayde vnto me: Thou ſonne of man / theſe bones are the whole houſe of Iſrael. Beholde / they saye: oure bones are dryed vp / oure hope is gone / we are cleane cut of. Therfore prophecie thou / and ſpeake vnto thē. Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: Beholde / I will open youre graues (o my people) and take you out of youre ſepulchres / and bringe you into the lande of Iſrael agayne. So ſhall ye knowe the I am the Lorde / when I open youre graues / & bringe you out of them. My ſprete alſo wil I put in you / and ye ſhall lyue / I will ſet you agayne in youre owne lande / & ye ſhall knowe that I am the Lorde / which haue ſayde it / and fullfilled in dede.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me / C ſayinge: Thou ſonne of man / take a ſticke and wryte vpon it: Vnto Iuda and to the chyldren of Iſrael his cōpanyons. Then take another ſticke / and wryte vpon it: Vnto Ioſeph the ſtocke of Ephraim / and to all the houſholde of Iſrael hys companyons. And than take both theſe together in thine hande / ſo ſhall there be one stycke therof. Now if the chyldren of thy people saye vnto the: wilt thou not shewe vs

what thou meanest by these: Then geue them
this aunswere: Thus saieth the Lorde God: Osee j.b Beholde, † I will take the stocke of Joseph/which is in the hande of Ephraim / and of the trybes of Israel hys fellowes / and will put them to the stocke of Juda/ and make the one stocke/ and they shalbe one in my hande. And the two stickes whereupon thou writest /shalt thou haue in thine hande that they maye se/
and thou shalt saie vnto them:

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: beholde / I will take awaye the chyldren of Israel from amonge ỹ Heythē/ vnto whom they be gone/and will gather them together on euery syde/
and bringe them agayne into their owne lāde:
yee/ I will make one people of thē in the lāde/vpon the mountaynes of Israel / and they all

two peoples from hensforth/ neyther be deuyded into two kyngdomes: they shall also defyle thē selfes nomore with their abhominā-cions / Idols and all their wicked doynges.
I will helpe thē out of all their dwellinge places / wherein they haue synned: and will so clense them/ that they shalbe my people/ and I their God.

Dauid my seruaunt, shalbe their kinge/ and

uaūt / where as youre fathers also haue dwelt.
Yee/ euen in the same lande shal they/ their children / & their childers children dwell for euermore: and my seruaunt Dauid shalbe their euerlastinge prince. Moreouer/ I will make a bonde of peace with them / which shalbe vnto them an euerlastinge conuenaunt. I wil sattle thē also / and multiplie them / my Sanctuary will I set amonge thē for euermore.

Leu. xxvj. b † My dwellinge shalbe with thē/ yee/ I wil be their God / & they shalbe my people. Thus the Heithen also shal knowe/ that I the Lorde am ỹ holy maker of Israel: whē my Sanctuary shalbe amonge thē for euermore.

The XXXVIII. Chapter

A AND the worde of the Lorde came vnto me / sayinge: Thou sonne of man / turne thy face towarde Gog in the lande of Ma-gog/ which is the chiefe prince at Mesech and Tubal: prophecy agaynst hym/ and saye: Thus saieth the Lorde God: † O Gog/ thou chiefe Eze. xxxix.
prince of Mesech and Tubal: beholde / I will Apo. xx.
vpon the/ and wil turne the aboute/ and put a byt in thy chawes: I will bringe the forth and all thine hooste/ both horse and horsmen/ which be all weapened of the beste fashion: a greate
people that hādle altogether speares / shyldes and sweardes: the Perses/ Morians and with them the Lybians which all beare shyldes and helmettes: Gomer/ and all his hoostes: the house of Thogorma out of ỹ North quarters/and all his hoostes/ yee/ and much people with the.

Therfore prepare the / set thy self in araye &
all thy people / that are come vnto the by heapes/ & be thou their defence. After many dayes thou shalt be visited / and in the latter yeares thou shalt come into the lande / that hath bene destroyed with the swearde/ & now is replenished agayne with diuerse people vpō ỹ moun-taynes of Israel / which haue lōge lyē wayst.
Yee/ they be brought out of the nacions / and dwel all safe. Thou shalt come vp like a stormy wether to couer the lande/ & as it were a darke cloude: thou with all thine hoostes / & a greate multitude of people with the.

Moreouer thus sayeth the Lorde God: B
At the same time shall many thinges come in to thy mynde/ so that thou shalt ymagin mis-chiefe / and saye: I will vp too yonder playne
lande/ seyng they sit at ease/ and dwell so safely (for they dwell all without any walles / they haue neyther barres nor dores) to spoyle thē/to robbe them/ to laye hande vpon their/ so wel inhabited wildernesses against that people/ ỹ is gathered together from amōg the Heythē/which haue gotten cattell & good/ and dwel in the middest of the lande. Then shall Saba & Sedan and the marchauntes of Tharsis with all their worthies/ say vnto the: Art thou come to robbe? Haste thou gathered thy people together/ because thou wilt spoyle? to take siluer and golde: to cary awaye cattel and good: and so haue a great praye?

Therfore/ o thou sonne of man / thou shalte
prophecie/ and saye vnto Gog: Thus sayeth ỹ Lorde God: In that daye thou shalt knowe that

that my people of Israel dwelleth safe: & shalt come from thy place / out of the North partes:
thou and much people with the / which ryde vpon horses / wherof there is a greate multitude and innumerable sorte. Yee / thou shalt come vpon my people of Israel/ as a cloude to couer the lande. This shall come to passe in the latter dayes: I will bringe the vp into my lande / that the Heythen maye knowe me/when I get me honoure vpon the (o Gog)
before their eyes.

Thus saieth the Lorde God: Thou art he/of whome I haue spoken afore tyme / by my seruaūtes the prophetes of Israel / which pro-C phecied in those dayes and yeares / that I shoulde bringe the vpon them. At thesame tyme/ when Gog commeth vp into the lande of Israel (sayeth the Lorde God) shall my indignacion go forth in my wrath. For in my gelousy and hote displeasure / I haue deuysed
Dan. xij. a † that there shalbe a greate trouble in the lāde
Mat. xxiij. b of Israel at that tyme. The very fyshes in the Luce xxj. c see/ the fooles of the ayre/ the beastes of ỹ felde/and all the men that are vpon the earth / shall tremble for feare of me.

The hilles also shalbe turned vpsidedoune/
the stayers of stone shall fall / and all walles shall syncke to the grounde. I will call for a swearde vpon them in all my mountaines/sayeth the Lorde God: so that euery mans swearde shalbe vpon another. With pestilence and blonde will I punysh him: stormy rayne and haleستones / fyre and brymstone will I cause to rayne vpon him and all hys heape/yee/ and vpō all that great people that is with him. Thus wil I be magnified / honoured / & knowen amonge the Heythen: that they maye be sure/ how that I am the Lorde.

The. XXXIX. Chapter.

A THerfore o thou sonne of man / prophecie against Gog/ and speake: Thus saieth the Ezech. xxviij. Lorde God: † Beholde/ o Gog: thou chiefe prince at Mesech and Tubal/ I will vpon the/and turne the aboute / and carie the forth/ and lede the from the North partes/ and bringe the vp to the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy bowe / I will smyte it oute of thy lefthande/and cast thine arrowes oute of thy rightehande. Thou with all thine heape/ and all the people that is with the / muste fall vpon the mountaynes of Israel. Then will I geue the vnto the fooles and wilde beastes of the felde/to be deuoured: there muste thou lye vpon the felde: for euen I the Lorde haue spoken it/sayeth the Lorde God.

Into Magog/ and amonge those that sitte B so careles in the Iles: will I sende a fyre/ and they shall know that I am the Lorde. I will make also the name of my holynesse to be knowen amonge my people of Israel: and I will not let my holy name be euell spoken of any more: but the very Heithen also shall knowe/
that I am the Lorde/ the holy one of Israel.
Beholde / it commeth / and shalbe fulfilled in dede/ saieth the Lord God. This is the daye/wherof I haue spoken: They that dwell in the cities of Israel / shall go forth and set fyre vppon the weapens / and burne them: shyldes and speares/ bowes and arrowes / bylles and clouddes: seuen yeares shall they be burninge therof / so that they shall els brynge no stickes frō the felde / neyther haue nede to hew doune any out of the wood: For they shall haue wea-pens ynough to burne. They shal robbe those that robbed them / and spoyle those that spoy-led them/ sayeth the Lorde God.

At thesame tyme wil I geue vnto Gog a C place to be buried in / in Israel: euē the valley/where thorow mē go from the Easte to ỹ seawarde. Those ỹ trauayle therby / shall abhorre
it. There shall Gog and all hys people be buried: and it shalbe called the valley of the people of Gog. Seuen monethes longe shall the house of Israel be burienge of them/ that they maye clense the lande. Yee/ all the people of the lande shall burye them. O/ it shalbe a glorious daye/ when I get me that honoure / saieth the Lord God. They shal ordayne men also to be deadburiers / euer goynge thorow the lande/and appoynte them certayne places to bury those in / which remayne vpon the felde / that the lande maye be clensed. From ende to ende shall they seke / and that vij. monethes longe.
Now those that go thorow the lande / where they se a mans bone / they shall set vp a token by it / till the deadburiers haue buried it also in the valley of the people of Gog. And the name of the citie shalbe called Hamona: Thus shall they make the lande cleane.

And thou sonne of man: thus saieth the D

Lorde God: Speake vnto all the fooles and euery byrde/ yee/ and to all the wilde beastes of the felde: heape you together/ and come gather you rounde aboute vpon my slaughter / that I haue slayne for you: euen a greate slaughter
Apo. xix. d vpon the mountaynes of Israel: † eate flesh/ and drynke blonde. Ye shall eate the flesh of the worthies/ & drynke the blonde of the princes of the lande: of the wethers/ of the lambes/ of the goates/ and of the oxen that be all slayne at Basan. Eate the fat youre belly full/ and drynke blonde / till ye be dronke of the slaughter/ which I haue slayne vnto you. Fyll you at my table with horses and stronge horsmen: with captaynes and all men of warre / saieth the Lorde God.

I will bringe my glory also amōge ỹ Gentiles / that all the Heithen maye se my iudgement that I haue kepte/ and my hande which I haue layed vpon them: that the house of Israel maye knowe/ how that I am the Lorde
E their God from that daye forth. And ỹ Heithen shall knowe / that where as the house of Israel were led into captiuite: it was for their wickednes sake/ because they offended me:

For the which cause I hyd my face frō them/ and delyuered them into the handes of their enemies / that they myght all be slaine with the swearde. Accordinge to their vnclennesse and vnfaithfull dealinges / so haue I entreated them/ and hyd my face from them. Therfore thus saieth the Lorde God: Now wil I bringe againe the captiues of Jacob / & haue mercy vpon the whole house of Israel/ and be gelous for my holy names sake. All their confusion and offence that they haue done against me/ shalbe taken awaye: and so safely shall they dwell in their lande / that no man shall make them afrayed. And whēn I haue brought them againe from amonge the people / when I haue gathered them together out of their enemyes landes / and am praysed in them before many Heythen: then shall they knowe/ that I am the Lorde their God / which suffred them to be led into captiuitie amonge the Heythen / but now haue brought thē agayne into their owne lāde/ and not left one of them yonder.

After that will I hyde my face nomore frō
Ez. xxxvj. d them/ † but will poure out my spirite vpon the house of Israel/ saieth the Lorde God.

The XL. Chapter.

A In the xxv. yeare of oure captiuitie / in the begynninge of the yeare/ the x. daye of the moneth that is the xiiij. yeare/ after that the citie was smyttē doune: the same daye came the hande of the Lorde vpon me/ and caried me forth: euen into the lande of Israel brought he me / in the visions of God: and set me doune vpon a maruaylous hie mountaine / wherupon there was a buyldinge (as it had bene of a citie) toward the South.

Thither he caried me/ & beholde/ there was a man/ whose similitude was like brasse/ which had a threde of flax in his hande / and a meetrodde also. He stode in the dore/ & sayde vnto me: marcke wel with thine eyes/ herkē to with thine eares/ and fasten it in thine hert / whatsoeuer I shall shewe the / for to the intent that they might be shewed the/ therfore art thou brought hither. And whatsoeuer thou seyest/ thou shalt certifie the house of Israel therof.

Beholde / there was a wall on the outsyde rounde aboute the house: the meetrodde that he had in his hande/ was six cubites lōge and a spanne. So he measured the bredth of the B buyldinge/ which was a meetrodde / and the heyght also a meetrodde. Then came he vnto the East dore / and wente vp the stayers / and measured the postes of the dore: Wherof euery one was a meetrodde thicke. Euery chaūbre was a meetrodde longe and broade: betwene the chaumbers were fyue cubites. The poste of the dore within the porche was one meetrodde. He measured also the porche of the ynnermer dore / which conteyned a meetrodde. Thē measured he ỹ entrie of the dore that conteyned eyght cubites / and his pillers two cubites: and this entrie stode inwarde.

The chaūbres of the dore Eastwarde / were three on euery syde: alike broade and longe. The pillers also that stode of both the sydes/ were of one measure. After this/ he measured the wydenesse of the dore: which was x. cubites / and the heyght of the dore xiij cubites. The edge before the chaumbres was one cubite broade vpon both the sydes / and the chaumbres six cubites wyde of either syde. He measured the dore from the rygge of one chaumbre to another/ whose wydenesse was xxv. cubites / and one

one dore stode against another. He made pillers also lx. cubites hie/ round about the court dore. Before the inwarde porte vnto the forecentre of ỹ ynnermer dore/ were fiftie cubites. The chaumbers & theyr pillers within/ roūde aboute vnto the dore had syde wyndowes: So had the fore entries also / whose wyndowes wente rounde aboute within. And vpon the pillers there stode Datetrees.

C Then brought he me into the fore courte/ where as where chaumbres & paued workes/ made in the fore courte rounde aboute xxx. chaumbres vpon one paued worke. Now the paued worke was a longe besyde the dores/ & that was the lower paued worke. After this/ he measured the bredth from the lower dore/ vnto ỹ ynnermer court of the outside/ whiche had an hundreth cubites vpon the East and the North parte. And the dore in the vttermost courte toward the North / measured he after the lenght and bredth: his thre chaumbres also on either syde / with his pillers and fore entries: which had euen the measur of the fyrst dore. His heyght was fyftie cubites/ the bredth xxv. cubites: his wyndowes and porches with his Datetrees/ had euen like measure as the dore toward the East: there where viij. steppes to go vp vpō/ and their porche before thē. Now the dore of the ynnermer court stode straight ouer against the dore that was towarde the Northeast. From one dore to another/ he measured an C. cubites.

After that/ he broughte me to the South side/ where there stode a dore toward ỹ South whose pillers and porches he measured/ these had the fyrst measure/ and with theyr porches they had wyndowes rounde aboute / like the fyrst wyndowes. The heyght was fyftie cubites/ the bredth xxv. with steppes to go vp vpon: his porche stode before hym / with his pillers and Datetrees on either side. And the dore of the ynnermer courte stode towarde the South/ and he measured from one dore to D another an C. cubites. So he broughte me into the ynnermer courte / thorowe the dore of the South syde: which he measured/ and it had the measure aforesayde. In lyke maner his chaumbres/ pillers / and forecentries/ had euen the foresayde measure also. And he had with his porches rounde aboute / windowes of fyftie cubites hye/ and xxv cubites broade. The porches rounde aboute were xxv. cubites longe/ and v. cubites broade: & his porche reached vnto the vttermost courte: vpon his pillers there were Datetrees/ and viij. steppes to go vp vpon.

He brought me also into the ynmost court vpon the East syde/ and measured the dore/ accordinge to the measure afore saide. His chaumbers/ pillers and porches had euen the same measure as the first had: & with his porches he had wyndowes rounde aboute. The heyght was l. cubites/ the breth xxv. cubites. His porches reached vnto ỹ vttermost court/ his pillers also had Datetrees on either syde/ & viij. steppes to go vp vpō. And he broughte
E me to the North dore/ and measured it/ which also had the foresayde measure. His chaumbres/ pillers and porches had windowes roūd aboute: whose heyght was l. cubites/ and the bredth xxv. His pillers stode towarde the vttermost court/ & vpon them both were Datetrees/ and viij. steppes to go vp vpon. There stode a chaumbre also/ whose intraunce was at the dore pillers/ and there the burntoffringes were wasshed.

In the dore porche/ there stode on either side two tables for the slaughtinge: to slaye the burntoffringes/ synoffringes and trespasseoffringes therupon. And on the outsyde as men go forth to the North dore / there stode two tables. Foure tables stode on eyther syde of the dore/ that is viij. tables/ wherupon they slaughted. Foure tables were of hewen stone for the burntoffringes/ of a cubite and a halfe longe and broade/ and one cubite hye: wherupon were layed the vessels and ornamentes/ which were vsed to the burnt and slayne offeringes/ whē they were slaughted. And within there were hokes foure fyngers broade/ fastened rounde aboute/ to hange flesh vpon/ & vpon the tables was layed the offringe flesh. On the outsyde of the ynnermer dore were the syngers chaumbers/ in the inwarde court besid the North dore ouer against the South. There stode one also besyde the Easte dore Northwarde.

And he sayde vnto me: This chaumbre on F the South syde belongeth to the priestes that kepe the habitacion: and this towarde the North/is the priestes that wayte vppon the ¶.Da.xxv.a ¶.Re.¶.f aulter: which be the sonnes of * Sadoch/that do seruice before the Lorde in steade of the children of Leui. So he measured ỹ forecourt/whiche had in lengthe an C. cubites/and as much in bredth by the foure corners. Now the aulter stode before the house. And he brought me to the forecentre of the house/and measured the walles by the entre dore: whiche were fyue cubites longe on eyther syde. The thickenesse also of the dore on eyther syde was thre cubites. The lenght of the porche was xx. cu-bites/the bredth xj. cubites/and vpon steppes went men vp to it: By the walles also were pil lers/on eyther syde one.

The XLI. Chapter.

A AFter this he brought me to the temple/& measured the postes: whiche were of both the sydes vj. cubites thicke/accordinge to the wideneesse of the tabernacle. The bredth of the dore was x. cubites/and the walles of the dore on eyther syde fiue cubites. He measured the length thereof/which conteyned xl. cubites/and the bredth xx. Then wente he in/ and measured the dore postes/whiche were two cubites thicke: but the dore it selfe was sixe cubites/& the bredth of the dore was vij. cubites. He measured the length and bredth thereof/which were euery one xx. cubites before the temple.

And he sayde vnto me: this is the holyest of all. He measured also the wall of the house/ whiche was sixe cubites. The chaumbres that stode roundeaboute the house/were eueryone foure cubites wyde/and one stode harde vpon another/wherof there were xxxiij. And there stode postes beneth by the walles round aboute the house/to beare them vp: but in B the wall of the house they were not fastened: The syde chaumbres were the hyer/the wyder/and had steppes thorowe them round aboute the house. Thus was it wyder aboue/ that from the lowest/men mighte go to the hyest and mydde chaumbers. I sawe also that the house was very hye rounde aboute. The foundacion of the syde chaumbers was a meeterodde (that is sixe cubites) broade. The thickenesse of the syde wal without/conteyned fyue cubites/and so did the outwal of the chaumbers in the house.

Betwene the chaumbers/was the wydenes xx. cubites rounde aboute the house. The chaumbre dore stode ouer agaynste the outewall/the one dore was towarde the North/ the other towarde the South: and the thickenesse of the outwall was v. cubites rounde aboute. Now the buildinge that was separated towarde the West/was lxx. cubites wide: the wall of the buildinge was fyue cubites thicke rounde aboute/and the lengthe foure
C score cubites and ten. So he measured the house which was an C. cubites longe/and the separated building with the wall were an C. cubites longe also. The wydenesse before the house/and of it that was separated towarde the East/was an C. cubites.

And he measured the lengthe of the Bul-ding before and behind with the chaumbers vpon both the sydes/and it conteyned an C. cubites. The ynnermer temple/the porche of the forecourte/the syde postes/these thre had syde windowes/& pillers rounde aboute ouer against the postes/from the ground vp to the windowes: The windowes them selfes were syled ouer with bordes: & thus was it aboue the dore vnto the ynmost house/and without also: Yee/the whole wall on euery syde/both within and without was syled ouer with greate bordes. There were Cherubins and Satetrees made also/so that one Satetree stode euer betwixte two Cherubin: One Cherub had two faces/the face of a man lokinge
D aside towarde the Satetree/& a Lyons face on the other syde. Thus was it made rounde aboute in all the house: Yee/the Cherubins & Satetrees were made from the grounde vp aboue the dore/and so stode they also vpon the wall of the temple.

The byposties of the temple were fouresquared/and the fashion of the Sanctuarye was/†euen as it appeared vnto me afore in the vision. *The table was of wood/thre cu-bites hie/and two cubites longe: his corners/ the lenght/and the walles were of woode. And he sayde vnto me: This is the table/that shal stande before the Lord. The temple and the holyest of all had eyther of them two dores/and euery dore had two litle wickettes/ which were folden in one vpon another/on euery syde two. And vpon the dores of the temple

Ezech.j. *Ex.xxv.d

temple there were made Cherubins and Sa-tetrees/like as vpon the walles: and a greate thicke balke of woode was before on the out-syde of the porche. Vpon both the sydes of the walles/of the porche there were made depe wyndowes and Satetrees/hauinge beames and balkes like as the house had.

The. XLII. Chapter.

A THen caried he me oute into the forecourt towarde the North/and brought me into the chaumbre that stode ouer againste the backbuildinge Northwarde/which had the length of an C. cubites/whose dore turned to-warde the North. The wydenesse conteyned l. cubites ouer againste the xx. cubites of the ynnermer court/and against the paued worke that was in the forecourt. Besyde al these thre there stode pillers one ouer against another. And before this chaumbre there was a gale-ry of x. cubites wyde/and within was a waye of one cubite wyde/and their dores towarde the North. Thus the hyest chaumbres were al-waye narrower then the lowest and middel-most of the buildinge/for they bare chaumbre vpon chaumbre/& stode thre together one vppō another/not hauynge pillers like the fore-courte: therfore were they smaller then those beneth and in the middest/to reken from the grounde vpwarde.

B The wall without that stode by the chaumbres/towarde the vttermost courte vpon the foresyde of the chaumbres/was fyftie cubites longe: for the length of the vttermost chaum-bers in the forecourte was fyftie cubites also/ but the length thereof before the temple was an C. cubites. These chaumbres had vnder them an entraunce of the East syde/wherby a man mighte go into them oute of the fore-courte/thorowe the thicke wall of the fore-courte towarde the East/righte ouer against the separated buildyng. Before thesame buil-dynge vpon this syde there were chaumbers also/whiche had a waye vnto them/like as the chaumbers on the North syde of thesame length and wydenesse.

They: entraunce/fashion and dores were all of thesame maner. Yee/euen lyke as other chaumber dores were/so were those also of the South syde. And before the waye towarde the syngers steppes on the East syde/there stode a dore to go in at. Then sayde he vnto me: The chaumbers towarde the North and the South/whiche stande before the backe buildinge: those be holy habitacions/wherin the priestes that do seruice before the Lorde/ must eate the moost holy offringes: and there must they late the moost holy offringes/meat-offringes/synneoffringes/and trespasseof-fringes/for it is an holy place. When the priestes come therin/they shal not go out into the forecourte: But (seynge they be holy) they shal leaue the clothes of their ministracion/and put on other garmentes/when they haue any thinge to do with the people.

Now when he had measured al the ynner-
S mer house/he broughte me forth thorowe the East porte/and measured thesame rounde a-boute. He measured the East syde with the meeterodde/which rounde aboute conteyned v. C. meeteroddes. And the North syde measured he/which conteyned rounde aboute euē so much. The other two sydes also toward the South and the West (which he measured) cōteyned eyther of them v. C. meeteroddes. So he measured all the foure sydes where there wente a wall rounde aboute v. C. meetero-d-des long/and as broade also/which separated the holy from the vnholy.

The. XLIII. Chapter.

SO he broughte me to the dore that tur-
A neth towarde the East. Beholde/then came the glory of the God of Israell from out of the East/whose voyce was lyke a greate noyse of waters/and the earth was lightened with his glory. His syghte to loke vpon was †lyke the fyrst that I sawe/when I wente in/ Ezech.x.xj. what tyme as the citie shoulde haue bene destroyed: † and like the vision that I sawe by Ezech.j.a the water of Cobar. Then fel I vpon my face/ x.c.xj.d but the glorye of the Lorde came into the house thorowe the East dore. So a winde toke me vp/and broughte me into the ynnermer courte: and beholde/the house was full of the glory of the Lord.

I herde one speakynge vnto me out of the house/and there stode one by me/that sayde vnto me: O thou sonne of man/†this rowe Esa.vj.a me is my seate/and the place of my foresteppes: where as I wil dwell amonge the chyldren of Israel for euermore: so that the house Apoc.xxj.a

of Israel shal nomore defyle my holy name: neyther they nor they: kinges / thorowe they: whordome/thorowe they: hie places/and thorow the dead bodies of their kinges: whiche haue builded they: thresholdes in maner hard vpon my thresholdes/and their postes almost at my postes: so that there is but a bare wall betwixte me and them.

B Thus haue they defyled my holy name with they: abhominacions that they haue committed. Wherfore I haue destroyed them in my wrath: But nowe they shall put away their whordome/and the dead bodies of their kinges oute of my syght / that I maye dwell amonge them for euermore. †Therfore (o thou sonne of man) shewe thou the housholde of Israell a temple / that they maye be ashamed of their wickednesse/ and measure them selfes an example therat.

Zach. ij.a

And when they be ashamed of all they: workes/then shewe them the fourme and fassion of the temple: the commynge in / the goynge oute/ all the maner and descripcion thereof / yee / all the vses and ordinaunces of it/and describe it before them / that they maye kepe and fulfill all the fashions and customes thereof.

C This is the descripcion of the house: Aboue vpon the mount rounde about al the corners/ it shalbe the holyest of all. Beholde/ that is the descripcion and fashion of the house. This is the measure of the aulter (after the true cubite: which is a spāne longer then another cubite) his bottome in the middest was a cubite lōge and wyde/and the ledge that went rounde aboute it/was a spanne broade. This is the heyght of the aulter: From the ground to the lower steppes/the lenght is two cubites/ and the bredth one cubite: and frō the lower steppes to the higher are foure cubites / and the bredth but one cubite.

Ex. xxvij.a

D †The aulter was foure cubites hye / and from the aulter vpwarde stode foure hornes/ and it was/xij. cubites longe and xij. cubites broade vpon the foure corners: the coueringe of the aulter was. xiij. cubites lōge and broad vppon the foure corners / and the ledge that wente rounde aboute/had halfe a cubite: and the bottome therof rounde about one cubite: his steppes stode towarde the Easte. And he said vnto me: Thou sonne of man: thus saieth the Lorde God: these are the ordinaunces & lawes of the aulter / in the daye when it is made to offre burntoffringes/and to sprenkle bloude therupon. To the priestes/ to the Leuites that be of the sede of †Sadoch/and treade before me to do me seruice/sayeth the Lorde God: Vnto these geue thou a yonge bullocke for a synoffringe: and take the bloude of him/ and sprenkle his foure hornes withal/and the foure corners of the aulter coueringe / with the ledge that goeth rounde aboute: here with shalte thou clense it / and reconcile it.

Eze. xliij.c

†Thou shalte take the bullocke also of the synoffringe / and burne him in a seuerall place without of the Sanctuary.

Leuit. xvj.f

E The nexte daye/ take a goatbock withoute blemish for a synoffering/to reconcile the aulter withall: like as it was reconciled with the bullock. Now when thou hast made it clean/ then offre a yonge bullocke † without blemishe/and a ramme out of the flocke without blemish also: Offre them before the Lorde/ & let the priest cast †salt therupon/and geue the so vnto the Lorde for a burntofferinge. Seuen dayes shalt thou bring euery daie a goatbocke. A yonge bullocke and a ramme of the flocke (both without blemish) shal they offre. Seuen dayes shall they reconcile and clense the aulter / and offre vppon it. When these dayes are expired/then vpon the viij. day and so forth/the priestes shal offre their burntofferinges/and healthofferinges vpon the aulter: so wil I be mercyfull vnto you/saiet ỹ Lorde God.

Leuit. xxij.a

Leuit. xxiij.b

The. XLIIII. Chapter.

AFter this/ he broughte me agayne to the outwarde dore of the Sanctuary on the East syde/and that was shut. Then saide the Lorde vnto me: This dore shalbe styll shut/ and not opened for any man to go thorowe it/ But onely for the Lorde God of Israell: yee/ he shall go thorowe it/ cls shall it be shut still. The prynce him selfe shall come thorowe it/that he maye eate bread before the Lorde. At the porche shall he come in / and there shall he go oute againe. Then broughte he me thorowe the dore vpon the North syde of the house. And as I loked aboute me / beholde/ †the glorye of the Lorde fylled the house:

Exod. xl.c and xxiij.d

and I fell downe vpon my face. So the Lorde spake vnto me. O thou sonne of man / fasten this to thine herte/beholde/ and take diligent hede to all the ordinaunces of the Lorde/and all his lawes: ponder well with thine herte the commynge in of the house / and the goynge forth of the Sanctuary/and tel that obstinate housholde of Israel. Thus saieth the Lorde God/O house of Israel/ye haue nowe done ynough with al youre abhominacions/ seynge that ye haue broughte into my Sanctuary straungers / hauinge vncircumcised hertes and flesh/where thorow my Sanctuary is defyled/when ye offre my bread/fatt and bloude.

Thus withall youre abhominacions ye haue broken my conuenaunt / and not kepte the holy ordinaunces of my Sanctuary: but set kepers of my Sanctuary/euen after youre owne mynde. Therfore thus saieth the Lorde God: Of all the straungers that dwell amonge the children of Israel / no straunger (whose herte and flesshe is not circumcised) shall come within my Sanctuary: No / nor the Leuites that be gone backe fro me/ and haue deceaued the people of Israel with erroures / goynge after their Idols: therfore shall they beare their owne wickednesse. WHen ye deuyde the lande by the lott/ye shal put asyde one †parte for the Lord to be holy from other landes: namely xxv.M. meeteroddes longe/and x.M. broade. This shalbe holy/as wyde as it is rounde aboute. Of this parte there shalbe longe vnto the Sanctuary v.C. meeteroddes in all the foure corners/and l. cubytes wyde rounde aboute to the suburbes. And from the measure/ namely of xxv. M. meeteroddes longe/ and x. M. broade/ thou shalte measure/ wherein the Sanctuary and the holiest of all maye stande.

The residue of that holy grounde shalbe the priestes/which do seruice in the Sanctuary of the Lorde/and go in before the Lord to serue him/that they maye haue roume to dwell in.

As for the Sanctuary it shall stande for it selfe: and to the Leuites that serue in the house/ there shalbe geuen .xx. habitacions of the. xx v. M. lenghte/ and x. M. bredth. Ye shall geue also vnto the citie a possession of v. M. meeteroddes broade/and xxv. Eze.xlviijd

This shalbe his owne lande in Israel/that my princes be nomore chargeable vnto my people. And suche as remayneth yet ouer in ỹ lande/shalbe geuen to the house of Israel accordinge to their trybes. Thus sayeth the

Leuit. xix.g Deu.xxv.c Pro. xx.b

The Epha and the Bat shal be alyke. One Bat shal conteyne the tenth parte of an Homer/and so shall one Epha do: their measure shalbe after the Homer. † One sycle maketh xx. Geras. So xx. sycles/and xxv. and xv. sycles make a pounde. This is the heaueofferinge/ that ye shall geue to be heaued: namely/the xvj. parte of an Epha/oute of an Homer of wheat/and the. xvj. parte of an Epha/ oute of an Homer of barly. The oyle shalbe measured with the Bat: euen the x. parte of one Bat oute of a Chor.

Ten Battes make an Homer: for one Homer maketh ten Battes. And one lambe from two hundreth shepe oute of the pasture of Israell/ for a meatofferynge/ burntofferinge/ and healthoffringe/ to reconcile them/ sayeth the Lorde God. All the people of the lande shall geue this heaueoffrynge with a fre will. Agayne/ it shalbe the princes parte to offre burntoffringes/ meatoffringes and drynkeofferinges vnto the Lord/in the holy dates/ newe moones/ Sabbathes/ and in all the hye feastes of the house of Israell. The synoffringe/ meatofferinge/ burntofferinge/and

So the priest shall take of the bloude of the synofferynge/and sprenkle it vpon the postes of the house/ and vpon the foure corners of the aulter/ with the dorepostes of the ynnermer courte. And thus shalte thou do also the seuenth daye of the moneth (for suche as haue synned of ignorance/ or beynge deceaued) to reconcyle the house withall. †Vpon the xiiij. daye of the fyrst moneth ye shall kepe Easter. Vpon thesame daye shall the prynce geue for him selfe/and all the people of the lande/ a bullocke for a synofferinge. And in the feaste of the seuen dayes he shall offre euery daye a bullocke and a ram/that are without blemish for a burntofferinge vnto the Lord: and an hegoate daily for a synoffering. For the meatofferynges he shall geue euer an Epha/to a bullocke/ an Epha to a ram/and an Hin of oyle to an Epha. Vpon the xv. daye of the seuenth moneth/ he shall kepe the seuen dayes holy holy one after another/ euen as the other vij. dayes: with the synofferinge/burntofferinge/ meatofferinge/and with the oyle.

The. XLVI. Chapter.

A THus sayeth the Lorde God: the dore of the ynnermer court towarde the East/ shalbe shutte the vj. worke dayes: But in the Sabbath and in the daye of the newe moone/ it shalbe opened. Then shal the prynce come vnder the dore porche/ and stande stil without by the dore poste. So the priestes shal offre vp his burnt and healthofferynges. And he shal worshippe at the dore post/ and go his waye forth againe: but the dore shal nomore be shut till the euenynge.

On thesame maner shall the people of the lande also do their worshippe before the Lorde/ without this dore vpon the Sabbathes and newe moones. This is nowe the burntofferinge/that the prince shal bringe vnto the Lorde vppon the Sabbath: sixe lambes without blemyshe/and a ram without blemishe/ and an Epha for a meatoffringe with the ram. As for the lambes/ he maye geue as many meatofferinges to them as he wil/and an Hin of oyle to an Epha. In the daye of the newe moneth/it shalbe a yonge bullocke without blemysh/ sixe lābes and a ram also without blemyshe. With the bullocke he shal geue an Epha/ and with the ram an Epha also for a meatofferinge: But to the lambes/ what he maye come by: And euer an Hin of oyle to

But when the people of the lande come before the Lorde in the hye solempne feaste/ as many as come in by the North dore to do worshippe/ shall go oute agayne at the South dore. And they that come in at the South dore/shal go forth againe at the North dore. There shal none go out at the dore where he came in/but shal go forth right ouer on the other syde/and the prynce shal go in and out amonge them.

Vpon the solempne and hye feaste dayes/ this shalbe the meatoffringe: An Epha to a bullocke/and an Epha to a ramme: and to the lambes as many as he will/ but euer an Hin of oyle to an Epha. Nowe when the prince bringeth a burntoffering or an healthofferinge with a fre wyll vnto the Lorde/ the East dore shalbe opened vnto him/that he maye do with hys burnte and healthofferinges/as he doeth vpon the Sabbath: & when he goeth forth/ the dore shalbe shut after him agayne. He shall dayly bringe vnto the Lorde a lambe of a yeare olde without blemishe for a burntofferynge: this shall he do euery morynynge. And for a meatofferinge he shall geue the sixte parte of an Epha/ and the thirde parte of an Hin of oyle (to myngle with the cakes) euery morninge. Yee/ this shalbe a daily meatofferinge vnto the Lorde/ for an euerlastinge ordinaunce: and thus shall the lambe/ the meatofferinge and oyle be geuen euery morynynge for a dayly burntofferinge.

Moreouer/ thus sayeth the Lorde God: If the prynce geue a gifte vnto any of his sonnes/ then shall it be his sonnes heretage perpetuall/ that he may possesse it. But if he will geue one of his seruauntes some of his heretage/ it shalbe his to the †fre yeare/ and then to returne agayne vnto the prynce: for his heretage shalbe his sonnes onely. * The prynce also shall take none of the peoples enherytaunce/ nor put them from their possession: but to his owne sonnes shall he geue his possession/ that my people be not scatred abroade/but that euery mā maie haue his owne.

Nowe whan the man that had the meeterodde in his hande/ wente oute vnto the East dore/ he measured a M. cubites/ and then he broughte me thorow the water/ euen to the ancles: so he measured yet a thousande/ and broughte me thorow the water againe vnto the knees: yet measured he a thousande/ and brought me thorowe the water vnto the loynes. After this he measured a thousande agayne/ then was it suche a ryuer/ that I mighte not wade thorowe it: The water was so depe/ that it was nedefull to haue swymmed/ for it might not be waded ouer. The first Chapter.

IN the thirde yeare of the raygne of Joachim kinge of Juda/came Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babylon vnto Jerusalem / and beseged it:† and the Lorde delyuered Joachim ỹ kinge of Juda into his hande / with certayne ornamentes of the house of God / which he caried awaye vnto the lande of Sennar/to the house of his god / and there brought them into his gods treasury. And the kynge spake vnto Asphenes the chiefe chaumberlayne/ỹ he shoulde bringe hym certayne of the chyldren of Israel / that were come of the kynges sede and of princes / yonge spryngaldes without any blemish/ but fayre and welfauoured/instruete in all wisdome / cunnynge and vnderstandinge: whiche were able to stande in the kinges palayce / to reade & to learne[for to speake Caldeish.

Vnto these the kinge appoynted a certaine porcion of his owne meate and of the wyne/ which he dranke him self / so to norish thē thre yeare:that afterwarde they might stande before the kinge. Amonge these now were certayne of the children of Juda:namely Daniel/ Ananias/Misael/and Azarias. Vnto these the chiefe chaumberlaine gaue other names/ and called Daniel/Balthasar: Ananias/Sydrac: Misael / Misac & Asarias/Abdenago. But Daniel was at a poynt with him self/ † that he wolde not be defyled thorow ỹ kynges meate/ nor the wyne which he dranke. And this he desyred of the chiefe chaūberlaine / lest/ he shoulde defile him self. So God gaue Daniel fauoure & grace before the chiefe chaumberlaine/that he saide vnto him:I am afrayed of my lorde the kinge / which hath appoynted you youre meate and drinke:lest/ he spye youre faces to be worse lykinge then the other spryngaldes of youre age / and so ye shall make me loose my heade vnto the kinge.

Gen.xl.b Tob.j.b Judith.j.

Thē Daniel aunswered Melassar/ whome the chiefe chaumberlayne had set ouer Daniel/ Ananias/Misael and Asarias/ and sayde: O proue but ten dayes with thy seruauntes/ and let vs haue pottage to eate / & water to drinke: then loke vpon oure faces / and theirs that eate of the kinges meate. IN the seconde yeare of the raigne of Nabuchodonosor / had Nabuchodonosor a dreame / † where thorow his sprete was vexed / and his slepe brake frō him. Then the king cōmaunded to cal togither al the soythsayers/ charmers/ witches and Caldees / for to shewe the kinge his dreame. So they came/and stode before the kinge. And the kinge saide vnto thē: I haue dreamed a dreame/ & my sprete was so troubled therwith/ that I haue cleane forgotten what I dreamed. Vpon this/ the Caldees aunswered the kinge in the Syrians speach: O kinge / God saue thy life for euer. Shewe thy seruauntes the dreame/ and we shal shewe the what it meaneth. The kinge gaue the Caldees their aunswere/and sayde: It is gone fro me: If ye will not make me vnderstande the dreame with the interpretacion therof/ ye shal dye / and youre houses shalbe prysed. But if ye tell me the dreame and the meanynge therof/ ye shall haue of me giftes/ rewardes and greate honoure: onely / shewe me the dreame and the significacion of it: They aunswered agayne / and sayde: the kynge must shewe his seruauntes the dreame/ and so shall we declare what it meaneth.

Then the kinge aunswerde/sayinge: I perceaue of a trueth / that ye do but prolonge the tyme: for so much as ye se / that the thinge is gone fro me. Therfore/if ye will not tel me the dreame/ye shall all haue one iudgement. But ye faine & dissemble with vain wordes/ which ye speake before me to put of the tyme. Therfore tell me the dreame/and so shal I knowe/ if ye can shewe me what it meaneth. Vpō this/ the Caldees gaue aūswere before the king and sayde:there is no man vpon earth that can tel the thinge/ which the kinge speaketh of: Yee/ there is neyther kinge / prince nor lorde / that euer axed such thinges at a soythsayer / charmer or Caldeer: for it is a very harde matter that the kyng requireth. Neyther is there any that can certifie the kinge therof / excepte the goddes: whose dwellinge is not amonge the creatures.

For the which cause the kinge was wroth with great indignacion / & cōmaunded to destroye al the wyse men at Babylon:and ỹ proclamacion wente forth/ ỹ the wyse mē shoulde be slayne. They sought also to slaye Daniel with his cōpanyons. Then Daniel enquered Arioch the kinges stewarde/ of the iudgement and sentence that was gone forth already to kill such as were wyse at Babylon. He aunswered and sayd vnto Arioch beinge then the kinges debite: Why hath ỹ kinge proclaymed so cruel a sentence? So Arioch tolde Daniel the matter. Vpon this wente Daniel vp/ and desyred the kinge that he might haue leysoure to shewe the king the interpretacion: and then came he home againe and shewed the thinge vnto Ananias/ Misael & Asarias his companions:that they should beseke the God of heauen for grace in this secrete / that Daniel and his felowes with other such as were wyse in Babylon/ perished not. Thē was the mystery shewed vnto Daniel in a visiō by nyght. And Daniel praysed the God of heauē/Daniel also cryed loude/& sayde: O that the name of God might be praysed for euer & euer / for wisdome and strength are his owne: † he chaungeth the tymes and ages: *he putteth doune kinges/ he setteth vp kinges: † he geueth wisdom vnto the wyse & vnderstādinge to those that vnderstāde:he openeth the depe secretes: he knoweth the thinge that lyeth in darkenesse / * for the light dwelleth with him. I thāke the / and prayse the (O thou God of my fathers) that thou hast lent me wysdome and strength/and hast shewed me the thinge that we desyred of the / for thou hast opened the kinges matter vnto me.

Vpon this wente Daniel in vnto Arioch/ whome the king had ordeyned to destroye the wyse at Babylon:he wente vnto him / & saide: destroye not such as are wyse in Babylō/ but bringe me in vnto the king / and I shal shewe the kinge the interpretacion. Then Arioch brought Daniel into the kinge in all the haist/ and saide vnto him: I haue founde a man amonge the prysoners of Juda/that shal shewe the king the interpretacion. Thē aunswered ỹ kinge/ & sayde vnto Daniel whose name was Balthasar: Art thou he that cāst shewe me the dreame which I haue sene / and ỹ interpretacion therof? Mat.xj.c †Onely God in heauē can open secretes/and he it is that sheweth the king Nabuchodonosor/what is for to come in the latter dayes.

Thy dreame/and that which thou haste sene in thine heade vpon thy bed/is this: O kinge/ thou diddest cast in thy mynde/what shoulde come hereafter: So he that is the opener of mysteries/telleth the what is for to come. As for me/this secrete is not shewed me for any wisdome that I haue/more thē any other

Thou kinge sawest/& beholde: there stode before the a greate ymage/whose figure was maruaylous great/ and his vysage grymme. The ymage heade was of fyne golde/hys brest and armes of syluer/his body and loynes were of copper/hys legges were of yrō/his fete were parte of yrō/ and parte of earth.

This thou sawest/till ỹ tyme that (without

Luc.xx.b smote the ymage vpon the fete/that were both of yron and earth/& brake thē to poulder: then was the yron/the earth/the copper/ỹ syluer & golde broken altogether in peces: and became like the chaffe of corne/that the winde bloweth awaye from the sommer floures/that they can nomore be founde. But the stone that smote ỹ ymage/became a great mountaine/which fulfylleth the whole earth: This is the dreame. And now wil we shewe before the kinge what it meaneth.

Dan.v.d †O kynge/thou arte a kynge of kynges: For the God of heauen hath geuē the a kingdome/ryches/strength and maiestey: and hath delyuered the all thinges that are amonge the chyldren of men: the beastes of the felde/& the fooles vnder the heauen/and geuen the domi-

The fourth kingdome shalbe as stronge as yron. For lyke as yron bruseth and breaketh all thinges: Yee/euen as yron beateth euery thinge doune/so shall it beate doune and destroye.

Where as thou sawest the fete and toes/ parte of earth and parte of yron: that is a deuyded kyngdome/whiche neuertheles shall haue some of the yron grounde mixte with it/ for so much as thou hast sene the yron mixte with the claye.

The toes of the fete that were parte of yron and parte of claye/signifieth: that it shalbe a kingdome partely stronge and partely weake. And where as thou sawest yron mixte with claye: they shall myngle them selues with the sede of symple people/& yet not contynue one with another/like as yron will not be soulde-red with a potsherde.

In the dayes of these kinges/shall the God G of heauen set vp an † euerlastinge kingdome Esa.ij.b
which shall not perish/and his kingdome shal not be geuen ouer to another people: Yee/the same shall breake and destroye all these kingdomes/but it shall endure for euer.

And where as thou sawest/that without any handes there was cut out of the † mount Heb:p

Then the kynge Nabuchodonosor † fell Act.pviij
doune vpon his face/and bowed him self vn-to Daniel/and cōmaunded that they shoulde offre meat offringes and swete odoures vnto him.

The kynge aunswerde Daniel and sayde: Yee/of a trueth/youre God is a God aboue all goddes/a Lorde aboue all kynges/and an opener of secretes: seynge thou canst disco-uer this mystery. So the kynge made Daniel a greate man/and gaue him many and greate giftes.

†He made him ruler of all the countries of Gen.xli

The. iij. Chapter.

NAbuchodonosor the kinge caused a golde A ỹ ymage to be made/which was lx cubites hye

hye/and six cubites thicke. This he made to be set vp in the valley of Suran in the lande of Babylon/and sent out to gather together the dukes/lordes and nobles/the iudges and of-ficers/the debites and shrefes/with all the ru-lers of the lande: that they might to the dedi-cacion of the ymage/which Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp. So the dukes/lordes and nobles/the iudges and officers/debytes and shrefes/with all the rulers of the lande gathered them together/and came vnto the dedicatinge of the ymage/that Nabuchodo-nosor the kynge had set vp.

Now when they stode before the ymage/ which Nabuchodonosor set vp/the bedel cried out with all his might: O ye people/kynred-des and tunges/to you be it sayde: that when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes/which shalbe blowen/with ỹ harpes/shawmes/psal-teries/symphonies and all maner of musick: ye fal doune and worshippe the goldē ymage/
B that Nabuchodonosor the kinge hath set vp. Who so then falleth not doune and boweth him self/shall euen thesame houre be cast in-to an hote burninge ouen. Therfore/when all the folke herde the noyse of the trōpettes that were blowē/with the harpes/shawmes/psal-teries/symphonies and all kynde of melody: then all the people/kynreddes and nacions fell doune/and bowed them selues vnto the goldē ymage/that Nabuchodonosor the kinge had set vp.

Now were there certaine men of ỹ Caldees/ that went euen then and accused the Iewes/ and saide vnto kinge Nabuchodonosor: O king/God saue thy lyfe for euer. Thou beinge kynge hast geuen a commaundement/that all men when they heare the noyse of the trom-pettes/harpes/shawmes/psalteries/sympho-nies/& all the other melodies: shall fall doune & bowe them selues towarde the goldē ymage: who so then fell not doune & worshipped not/ that he shoulde be cast into an hote burninge an.ij.g ouen. Now are there certaine Iewes/† whom thou hast set ouer the offices of the lāde of Ba-bylon: namely/Sydrac/Misac/and Abdena-go. These men (o kinge) regarde not thy com-maundement/yee/they wil not serue thy god-des/nor bowe them selues to the goldē ymage that thou hast set vp.

Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruel wrath & C displeasure/cōmaunded that Sidrac/Misac/ and Abdenago shoulde be brought vnto him. So these men were brought before the kinge. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them/and sayde: what: o Sydrac/Misac and Abdena-go/will not ye serue my goddes: nor bowe youre selfes to the golden ymage that I haue set vp: wel/be ready hereafter/when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes blowen with the harpes/shawmes/psalteries/symphonies and all the other melodies: that ye fall doune/and worshippe the ymage which I haue made. But if ye worshippe it not/ye shalbe cast im-mediatly into an hote burninge ouen. Let se/ what god is there/that maye delyuer you out of my handes.

Sydrac/Misac and Abdenago aunswered the kynge/and sayde: O Nabuchodonosor/we ought not to cōsente vnto the in this matter/ for: why: oure God whome we serue/† is able Nu.xvj.c to kepe vs from the hote burninge ouen (O kynge) and can right well delyuer vs out of thy handes. And though he wil not/yet shalt thou knowe (o kynge) that we will not serue thy goddes/nor do reuerence to the ymage which thou hast set vp. Thē was Nabuchodo- D nosor full of indignacion/so that the counte-naunce of his face chaunged vpon Sidrac/ Misac/and Abdenago. Therfore he charged and commaunded/that the ouen shoulde be made seuen tymes hoter then it was wonte to be: & spake vnto the strongest worthies that were in his hooste/for to bynde Sidrac/Mi-sac/and Abdenago/and to cast them into the hote burninge ouen.

So these men were bounde in their cotes/ hosen/shues/with their other garmentes/and cast into the hote burnynge ouen: for the kin-ges commaundement was so strayte/and the ouen was exceadynge hote. As for the men that put in Sydrac/Misac/and Abdenago/ the flame of the fyre destroyed them. And these thre men Sydrac/Misac and Abdenago fell doune in the hote burnynge ouen/beynge fast bounde.

Then Nabuchodonosor the kynge maruay-led/and stode vp in all haist: he spake vnto his counsayl and sayde: dyd not ye cast these thre men bounde into the fyre? They aunswered/and sayde vnto the kinge: Yee/o kinge. He aunswered and sayde: lo/for all that/yet do I se foure men goinge louse in the myddest of Dan.x.a the fyre/and nothinge corrupte: † & the fourth is lyke an aungel to loke vpon. Vpon this wente Nabuchodonosor vnto the mouth of the hote burnynge ouen: he spake also / and sayde: O Sydrac/ Misac/ and Abdenago/ ye seruaũtes of the hye God: go forth / and come hither. And so Sydrac / Misac and Abdena-fyre had no maner of power in their bodies:

In so much that the very heere of their heade

The. IIII. Chapter.

A I Nabuchodonosor beynge at rest in myne house/ and floryshinge in my palaice/ sawe
a dreame / which made me afrayed / and the thoughtes that I had vpon my bed/ with the Dan.ij.a visions of myne heade / troubled me. † Then sent I out a cõmission / ỳ all they which were of wisdome at Babylon shoulde be brought before me / to tell me the interpretacion of the dreame. So there came the soythsayers/ charmers / Caldees ad coniurers of deuels: to whom I tolde the dreame/ but what it betoke-ned / they coulde not shewe me: till at the last/there came one Daniel (otherwyse called Balthasar / accordinge to the name of my God) which hath the spirite of the holy goddes in him: to whom I tolde the dreame/ sayinge: O Balthasar / thou prince of soythsayers: For so much as I knowe / that thou hast the spirite of the holy goddes/ and no secrete is hyd frõ the:
tell me therfore / what the vision of my dreame (that I haue sene) maye signifie. I sawe a vision in my heade vpon my bed: and beholde/there stode a tree vpõ the grounde/ which was very hye/ greate and mighty: the heyght reached vnto the heauen/ and the bredth extended to all the endes of the earth: his leaues were fayre/ he had very much frute/ so that euery mã had ynough to eate thereon.

The beastes of the felde had shadowes vnder it/ & the fooles of the ayre dwelt in the bowes therof. Shortly / all creatures fed of it. I sawe in my heade a vision vpon my bed: and beholde/ a watcher (euen an holy aungel) came
B doune from heauẽ/ & cried myghtely/ sayinge:
Hew doune the tree/ breake of his braunches/
shake of his leaues / & scatre his frute abroade:
that all the beastes maye get them awaye frõ
vnder hym / and the fooles from his braunches. Neuertheles / leaue the grounde of his rote still in the earth/ and bynde him vpon the playne felde / with chaynes of yron and stele.
With the dew of heauẽ shall he be wet/ and he shall haue his parte in the herbes of ỳ groũde
with other wilde beastes.

That mans herte of his shalbe taken from him/ and a beastes herte shalbe geuen him/ till seuen yeares be come and gone vpon him.

This erande of the watcher/ is a commaun-dement grounded and sought out in ỳ coun-sayll of hym/ that is moost holy: to learne men for to vnderstande / that the hiest hath power ouer the kyngdomes of men / and geueth thẽ/to whome it liketh hym / and bringeth the very outcastes of men ouer them. This is the dreame / that I kynge Nabuchodonosor haue
sene.

Ther-

Therfore o Balthasar / tell thou me what it signifieth: for so much as all the wyse men of my kingdome are not able to shewe me what it meaneth. But thou canst do it/ for the spirite of the holy goddes is in the.

C Then Daniel (whose name was Balthassar) helde his peace by the space of an houre/and his thoughtes troubled hym. So the kynge spake/ and sayde: O Balthasar/ let neyther the dreame nor the interpretacion therof feare the. Balthasar aunswered / sayinge: O my Lorde/ this dreame happen to thyne enemies / and the interpretacion to thyne aduer-saries. As for the tree that thou sawest / which was so greate and mighty/ whose heyght reached vnto the heauen / and his bredth into all the worlde / whose leaues were fayre / and the frute much/ vnder the which the beastes of the felde had their habitacion / and vpon whose braunches the fooles of the ayre dyd syt.

Euen thou (o kynge) art the tree / greate and stronge. Thy greatnesse increaceth / and reacheth vnto the heauen / so doeth thy power to the endes of the earth. But where as the kynge sawe a watcher / euen an holy aungel that came doune from heauen/ and sayde/ hew doune the tree / and destroye it / yet leaue the grounde of the rote in the earth / and bynde hym vpon the playne felde with chaynes of yron and stele. He shalbe wet with the dew of heauen/ and his parte shalbe with the beastes of the felde / till seuen yeares be come and gone vpon hym. This (o kynge) is the interpretacion/ yee/ it is the very deuyce of him that is hyest of all / and it toucheth my lorde the kynge.

Thou shalt be cast out fro men/ & thy dwel-linge shalbe with the beastes of the felde/ with grasse shalt thou be fed like an oxe. Thou must be wet with the dew of the heauen / yee/ seuen an.iij.f yeares shall come and go vpon the / till thou
.xxxvij.a knowe / † that the hyest hath power vpon the D kyngdomes of men/ and geueth thẽ to whom he lyst. Moreouer/ where as it was sayde/ that the rote of the tree shoulde be left still in the grounde: it betokeneth/ that thy kingdom shal remayne whole vnto the / after thou hast learned to knowe that the power commeth from heauen. Wherfore (o kynge) be content with my counsayll/ that thou mayest louse thy syn-nes with righteousnesse / † and thine offences Eccle.xix.b with mercy to poore people: for such thinges shall prolonge thy peace. All these thinges touch the kynge Nabuchodonosor.

So after xij. monethes/ the kinge walked vp and doune in the palayce of the kingdome of Babylon/ and sayde: This is the greate citie of Babylon/ which I my selfe (with my power & strength) haue made a kynges courte / for the honoure of my maiesty. Whyle these wordes were yet in ỳ kynges mouth/ there fell a voyce from heauen/ sayinge: O kynge Nabuchodo-nosor/ to the be it spoken: Thy kyngdome shall departe from the/ thou shalt be cast out of mẽs company: thy dwellinge shalbe with the beastes of the felde / so that thou shalt eate grasse lyke as an oxe / till seuen yeares be come / and gone ouer the: euen vntill thou knowest / that the hyest hath power vpon the kingdomes of men/ and that he maye geue thẽ/ vnto whome
it pleaseth him.

The very same houre was this matter ful- E filled vpon Nabuchodonosor: so that he was cast out of mens cõpany / & dyd eate grasse like an oxe. His body was wet with the dew of heauẽ/ till his heeres were as greate as Aegles
fethers/ and his nayles like byrdes clawes.

When this tyme was past/ I Nabuchodo-nosor lift vp myne eyes vnto heauen / and myne vnderstandinge was restored vnto me agayne. Then gaue I thankes vnto the hiest.
I magnified and praysed hym that lyueth for euermore / † whose power endureth alwaye/ Dan.iij.f
and hys kyngdome from one generacion to another: in comparison of whome / all they that dwell vpon the earth/ are to be reputed as nothinge.

† He handleth accordinge to his wil/ amõge Ps. cxxxiij.
the powers of heauen and amonge the inha- a bitours of the earth: & there is none that maye resiste his hande/ or saye: what doest thou? † At Job xlij.b
the same tyme was myne vnderstandinge geuen me againe/ and I was restored to the ho-noure of my kyngdome / to my dignitie / and to myne owne shape agayne. My great estates and princes sought vnto me / and I was set in my kyngdome agayne/ so that I had yet greater worshippe.

Then dyd I Nabuchodonosor loue/ magnifie and prayse the kynge of heauen: for all his workes are true/ and his wayes right. As for those ỹ go on proudly / he is able to bringe them doune.

The V. Chapter.

A BAlthasar the kinge made a greate banket to his thousande lordes/ with al these thousande he made greate chere/ and when he was dronken with wyne / he commaunded to ij.Pa.xxxvj bringe him the golde and syluer vessel/ †which his father Nabuchodonosor had taken out of the temple at Jerusalem: that the kinge and his lordes (with his quene and concubines) myght drinke therout.

So they brought the goldē vessel/ that was taken out of the temple of the Lordes house at Jerusalem. Then the kinge and his lordes with his quene and concubines dronke out of them. They dronke wyne and prayſed their Idols of golde/ syluer / copper/ yron/ woode/ and stone.

In ỹ very same houre there appeared fyngers/as it had bene of a mans hāde writinge/ right ouer agaynst the candelsticke / vpon the playne wall in the kinges palayce/& the kinge
Jere.l.a sawe the palme of the hāde that wrote. †Then chaunged the kinge his coūtenaunce / and his thoughtes troubled him: so that the ioyntes of his body shoke/ and his knees smote one a-

The kinge spake also to the wyse men of Babylon/ and saide: Who so can rede this writinge/ & shewe me the playne meanynge therof: shalbe clothed with purple/ haue a chayne of golde aboute his necke / and rule the thirde parte of my kingdome.

Vpon this came all the kinges wyse men: but they coulde neyther rede the writinge/nor shewe the kynge what it signified. Then was the kinge sore afrayed / in so much that his colloure chaunged/ and his lordes were sore vexed. So by reason of this matter/that had happened to the kinge and his lordes / the quene went vp her self into the banket house/& spake vnto the kynge / sayinge: O kinge/ God saue thy lyfe for euer: Let not thy thoughtes trouble the / & let not thy countenaunce be chaunged. For why: there is a mā in thy kingdome/ that hath the spirite of the holy goddes within him/as it was sene in thy fathers dayes. He hath vnderstandinge and wysdome lyke the goddes. Yee/ the kinge Nabuchodonosor thy father made this mā chiefe of the soythsayers/ charmers / Caldees and deuel conjurers: be- C cause that such an aboundaunt spirite / knowlege and wysdome (to expounde dreames/ to open secretes / and to declare harde doubtes) was foūde in him: yee/euen in Daniel/ whom the kynge named Balthasar. Let this same Daniel be sente for / and he shall tell what it meaneth.

Then was Daniel brought before the kynge. So the kynge spake vnto Daniel/ and sayde: Art thou that Daniel / one of the prysoners of Juda / whome my father the kinge brought out of Jewry? I haue herde speake of the / that thou hast the spirite of the holy goddes/ experience and vnderstandinge/ and that there hath bene greate wysdome founde in the. Now haue there bene brought me/ wyse and cunnynge charmers to rede this writinge / and to shewe me the meanynge therof: But they coulde not tell me what this matter signified. Then herde I saye/ that thou canst expounde darcke thinges / and declare harde doubtes. Well than / if thou canst rede this writinge / and shewe me the meaninge therof: thou shalt be clothed with purple / haue a chayne of golde aboute thy necke / and rule the thirde parte of my kingdome.

Daniel aunswered/& saide before the kinge: O
† As for thy rewardes / kepe them to thy self/ iiij.Re.v
or geue thy rych giftes to another / yet not the Mat.x.
lesse/ I will rede the writinge vnto the kinge/and shewe hym the interpretacion therof. † O Dan.ij.c
kynge/ God the hyest gaue vnto Nabuchodonosor thy father the dignitie of a kynge / with worshippe and honour: so that all people/kynreddes and tunges stode in awe and feare of him / by reason of the hye estate that he had lent him. For why: he slewe whome he wolde: he smote whome it pleased him. Agayne: whome he wolde/he set vp: and whome he list/ he put doune. † But because his herte was Dan.iij so proude / and his stomacke set fast vnto wylfulnesse / he was deposed from his kyngly trone / and his maiesty was taken from him. He was shut out from amonge men / hys herte

herte was like a beastes herte / and his dwellinge was with the wilde asses: he was faine to eate grasse like an oxe / and his body was wette with the dew of the heauē: til he knewe ỹ the hyest had power vpō the kingdomes of men/and setteth ouer them whome he list.

E And thou his sonne (o Balthasar) for all this haste not submitted thine herte/ thoughe thou knewest al these thinges: but haste magnified thy self aboue the Lord of heauen/so that the vessels of his house were brought before the: that thou and thy lordes / with thy quene and concubines/ mighte drinke wyne therout. And hast prayſed the Idols of siluer and golde / copper and yron / of woode and stone/which can neither se/nor heare/nor vn-
Act.xvij.b derstande. As for the God/ †in whose hande consisteth thy breth and all thy waies: thou hast not prayſed him.

Therfore is the palme of this hande sente hither from him / to token vp this writinge. And this is the scripture that is written vp:
מנא מנא †Mane/Thekel/Phares. Nowe the interpre-תקל tacion of the thinge is this: Mane/God hath פרסין numbred thy kingdome/ and brought it to an ende. Thekel/Thou art weied in the balaunce/ and art founde to lyght. Phares / Thy kingdome is delt in partes/and geuen to the Medes and Perses.

Then commaunded Balthasar to clothe Daniel with purple/to hange a chayn of gold aboute his necke/ and to make a proclamacion concernynge him: that he shoulde be the ruler of the thirde parte of his kyngdome.
Esa.xlvij.b †The very same nighte was Balthasar the

The VI. Chapter.

A IT pleased Darius to set ouer his kyngdome an C. and xx. lordes/ which shoulde be in all his kingdome aboute. Aboue these he set three princes (of whome Daniel was one) that the lordes might geue accomptes vnto them/and the kinge to be vndiseased.

But Daniel exceaded all these princes and lordes / for the spirite of God was plenteous in him: so that the kinge was minded to set him ouer the whole realme. Wherfore the princes and lordes soughte to pycke oute in Daniel some quarell agaynste the kyngdom/ yet coulde they fynde none occasion nor faulte vpon him. For why / he was so faithfull/ that there was no blame nor dishonesty foūd in him.

Then sayde these men / we shal get no quarell agaynst this Daniel/ excepte it be in the lawe of his God. Vpon this wente the princes and lordes together vnto the kinge/ and sayde thus vnto him / kinge Darius / God saue thy life for euer.

All the greate estates of the realme / as the B princes/dukes/senatours and iudges/are determined to put oute a commaundement of the kynge/and to make a sure statute/namely/ that who so desyreth any peticion/eyther of any god or man (with in this thyrtie dayes) excepte it be onely of the. O kinge/the same persone maye be caste into the Lyons denne. Wherfore/o king/ confirme thou this statute/ and make a writtinge: that the thinge which the Medes and Perses haue ordeyned/be not altered nor broken.

So Darius made the writinge /and confirmed it. Nowe when Daniel vnderstode that the writynge was made / he wente in to his house: and the wyndowes of his hall towarde Jerusalem stode open. There kneled he doune vppon his knees / thre tymes a daye: there made he his peticion/and prayſed his God lyke as his maner was to do afore tyme.

Then these men made searche / and founde C
Daniel makinge his peticion / and prayinge vnto his God. So they came to the kinge / & spake before him concerninge his commaundement/sayinge: O kinge/hast thou not subscribed the statute/that within xxx. daies whoso requireth his peticion of any god or man/ but onely of thy selfe/o kinge: he shalbe cast into the denne of the Lyons? The kynge: aunswered/and saide: yea/it is true. It must be as a lawe of the Medes and Perses/ that maye not be broken.

Then aunswered they and sayde vnto the kynge: Daniel one of the prysoners of Juda (o kynge) regardeth neyther the/nor thy statute that thou haste made: but maketh his peticion thre tymes a daye. When the kynge herde these wordes/he was sore greued / and wolde haue excused Daniel to deliuer him/ and put of the matter/vnto the Sunne went doune/to the intent that he might saue him.

These men perceauynge the kinges minde saide vnto him: knowe this (O kynge) that the lawe of the Medes and Perses is/ that the commaundement and statute which the king maketh/ maye not be altered. †Then the kinge bad them bringe Daniel/ and they caste him into the Lyons denne. Dan.xiiij.a

The kynge also spake vnto Daniel/ and said: Thy God/ whome thou alwaye seruest/ euen he shal defende the. And there was broughte a stone/ and layed vpon the hole of the denne: this the king sealed with his owne ringe/ and with the signet of his princes: that the kinges commaundemēt concerning Daniel/ should not be broken. D

So the kynge wente into his palayce/ and kepte him sober all nighte/ so that there was no table spred before him/ neyther could he take any slepe. But betymes in the mornynge at the breake of the daye/ the kynge arose/ and wente in all haiste vnto the denne of the Lyons.

Nowe as he came nye vnto the denne/ he cried with a piteous voyce vnto Daniel: Yee/ the kynge spake/ and sayde vnto Daniel: O Daniel/ thou seruaunt of the lyuinge God: Is not thy God (whome thou alwaye seruest) able to delyuer the from the Lyons? Daniel sayde vnto the kynge: O kinge/ God saue thy lyfe for euer.

†My God hath sent his aungel/ *whiche hath shut the Lyons mouthes/ so that they might not hurte me. For why: myne vngiltynesse is founde out before him. And as for the (o kinge) I neuer offended the. Dan.iij.c Act.xij.c *Iu.xiiij.c j.Re.xvij.b Heb.xj.f E

Then was the kynge exceadynge glad/ and commaunded to take Daniel oute of the denne. So Daniel was broughte oute of the denne/ and no maner of hurte was founde vppon hym. For he put his trust in his God. And as for those men which had accused Daniel/ the kynge commaunded to bringe thē/ and to cast them in the Lyons denne: them/ their children/ and their wyfes. †So the Lyons had the mastry of them/ and brake all their bones asonder/ or euer they came at the grounde. Heb.xj.b Dan.xiiij.g

†After this/ wrote kynge Darius vnto all people/ kynredes and tunges/ that dwelte in all landes: peace be multiplied with you: My commaundement is in all my dominion and kingdome/ that men feare and stande in awe of Daniels God. Dan.vj.f

†For he is the lyuinge God/ whiche abydeth euer: * his kyngdome shall not fayle/ and his power is euerlastinge. †It is he that delyuereth/ and saueth: he doeth wonders and maruaylous workes in heauen and in earthe: he had preserued Daniel from the power of the Lyons. The.VII. Chapter.

IN the fyrst yeare of Balthasar kynge of Babilon/ sawe Daniel a dreame/ and a visyon was in his heade vpon his bedde. Which dreame he wrote/ and the summe of the matter is this: Daniel spake/ and saide/ I sawe in my visiō by night/ and beholde: the foure wyndes of the heauen stroue vpon the see/ and foure great beastes came vp from the see/ one vnlike another.

The fyrst was a †Lyon/ and yet had he *Aegles wynges. I sawe that his wynges were pluckte from him/ and he taken awaye from the earth: † so that he stode vppon his fete as a man/ and that there was geuen him a mās herte. Jer.iiij.a.f *Ezec.j.b r.b †Ezech.xvij.

Beholde/ the seconde beaste was lyke a †Beer/ and stode vpon the one syde. Among his teeth in his mouth he had.iij. greate long teeth/ and it was sayde vnto him: Arise/ eate vp much flesh. pro.xxviij.

Then I loked/ and beholde/ there was another lyke vnto a Leoparde: this had wynges as a foole/ †euen foure vpon the backe. This beast had foure heades/ and there was power geuen him. After this I sawe in a vision by nyghte/ and beholde: the fourth beast was grimme and horrible/ and maruaylous stronge. It had greate yron teeth/ it deuoured and destroyed/ and stamped the residue vnder fete. It was farre vnlyke the other beastes that were before it: for it had †ten hornes/ wherof I toke good hede. Dan.vij.b †j.a B j.Mac.j.a Apoc.xiij.c xvij.c

And beholde/ there came vp amonge them another lyke horne/ before whome there were thre thre of the fyrst hornes plucte awaye. Behold/ this horne had eyes lyke a man/ and a mouth speakynge presumpteous thinges. †I loked till the seates were prepared/ and tyll the olde aged sat him doune. His clothing was as white as snowe/ and the heeres of his head lyke the pure wol. Apoc.j.c xiij.a.xx.b Dan.x.a

His trone was lyke the fyry flame/ and wheles as the burnynge fyre. There drewe forth a firy streame/ and wente out from him. †A thousande tymes a thousande serued him x.M. tymes ten thousande stode before him. The iudgement was set/ and the bokes opened. Then toke I hede thereunto/ because of the voyce of the proude wordes/ which that horne spake. Apoc.v.b

I beheld till the beaste was slayne/ and his body destroyed/ †and geuen ouer to be brent in the fyre. Mat.xxv.d Apoc.xix.d

As for the power of the other beastes also/ it was taken awaye/ but they: lyfes were prolonged for a tyme and season. I sawe in a vysion by nighte/ and beholde: †there came one in the cloudes of heauen lyke the sonne of a man/ which wente vnto the olde aged/ before whome they broughte hym: Then gaue he hym †power and dignitie regall/ that all people/ trybes and tunges shoulde serue him. †His power is an euerlastinge power/ which shall neuer be put doune: *and his kingdom endureth incorrupte. My herte was vexed/ and I Daniel had a troubled sprete within me/ and the visyons of my heade made me afrayed/ tyll I gat me vnto † one of them that stode by to knowe the trueth/ concerninge all these thinges. So he tolde me/ and made me vnderstande the interpretacion of these thinges. Mat.xxvi.c Actu.j.b Apoc.j.a C Phil.ij.a mat.xxviij.c Joha.xij.d *Da.vij.f Dan.iij.d

These foure greate beastes are foure kinges/ whiche shall aryse oute of the earth. These shall take in the kyngdome of the saynetes of the moost hyest/ and possesse it styll more and more for a longe season. After this I requyred diligently to knowe the trueth/ concerninge the fourth beaste/ whiche was so farre vnlyke the other beastes/ & so horrible: whose teeth were of yron/ and his nayles of brasse: which deuoured and destroyed/ and stamped the residue vnder his fete. I desyred also to knowe the trueth/ as touchynge the † ten Apoc.xij.a xvij.c

hornes that he had vpon his heade/ and this other whiche came vp afterwarde/ before whose face there fell doune thre: whiche horne had eyes and a mouth that spake presumpteous thinges/ and loked with a grimmer visage then his fellowes.

I beheelde/ and the same horne made battail against the sainctes/ yee/ and gat the victorye of thē: vntil the tyme that the olde aged came/ that the iudgment was geuen to the chiefeste sainctes: and til the tyme that the sainctes had the kingdome in possession.

He gaue me this aunswere: That fourth beast shalbe the fourth kyngdom vpon earth/ it shalbe more then all other kyngdomes/ it shal deuoure/ treade doune/ and destroye all other landes. D

The ten †hornes are ten kynges that shall aryse out of that kingdom/ after whome there shal stande vp another/ whiche shalbe greater then the first. Zach.j.c

He shall subdue thre kynges/ and shall speake woordes agaynste the hyest of all: he shall destroye the saynctes of the moost hiest/ †and thynke that he maye chaunge tymes and lawes. They shalbe geuen vnder his power/ †vntyll a tyme/ two tymes/ and halfe a tyme. Dan.vij.c Apoc.xij.d

But the iudgemente shalbe kepte/ so that his power shalbe taken from hym/ for he shalbe destroyed/ and perysshe at the last. As for the kyngdome/ power and all might that is vnder the heauen/ it shalbe geuen to the holy people of the moost hyest/ †whose kingdome is euerlastynge/ yee/ all powers shall serue and obeye hym. Thus farre extende the wordes. Luce.j.c Dan.xiiij.f

Neuertheles/ I Daniel was so vexed in my thoughtes/ that my countenaunce chaunged/ †but the wordes I kepte stil in my herte. Luc.ij.c

The.VIII. Chapter.

IN the thyrde yeare of the raigne of kinge Balthasar/ there appeared a vysion vnto me Daniel/ after that I had sene the firste. I sawe in a vysyon (and when I saw it/ I was at Susis in the chiefe citie which lyeth in the lande of Elam) and in the vision/ me thought I was by the ruer of Ulay. A

Then I loked vp/ and sawe: and beholde there

there stode before the ryuer a ramme / whiche had hornes: and these hornes were hye / but one was hyer then another / and the hyest came vp last. I saw that this ramme pushed with his hornes agaynste the West / against the North / and against the South: so that no beastes mighte stande before hym / nor defende them from his power: but he dyd as him lysted / and waxed greatly. I toke hede vnto this / and then came there an hegoate frō the West ouer the whole earthe / and touched not the grounde.

This goate had a maruailous goodly horne betwixte his eyes / and came vnto the ramme that had the two hornes (whome I had sene afore by the ryuer syde) and ranne fearcely vpon hym with his might. I saw him drawnye vnto the ramme / beynge very fearce vpon him / yee / he gaue him suche a stroke / that he brake his two hornes.

Neyther had the ramme so much strength as to stande before hym: but he caste hym doune: trode hym vnder his fete: and no man was able to delyuer the ramme out of his power.

B The goate waxed exceadinge greate / and when he was at the strongest / his great horne
Dan. viij. a and xj. a j. Mac. j. a was broken also. Thē grew there † other foure suche lyke in the steade / towarde the four windes of the heauen. Yee / out of the least of these hornes there came vp yet another horn / which waxed maruaylous greate: towarde the East towarde the South / and towarde the fayre pleasaunt lande. It grewe vp to the hooste of heauen / wherof it dyd cast some doune to the grounde / and of the starres also / and trode thē vnder fete.

Yee / it grewe vp vnto the prynce of the hooste / from whome the daily offerynge was taken / and the place of his Sanctuarye casten doune. And a certayne season was geuen vnto it / agaynste the dayly offeringe (because of wickednesse) that it might cast doune the veritie to the grounde / and so to prospere in all thinges that it wente aboute. Upon this I herde one of the sayncte speakynge / whiche sayncte saide vnto one that axed this question.

Howe longe shall this vision of the dayly sacrifice / and of the waystinge abhominacion endure: that the Sanctuary and the power shall so be troden vnder fote? And he aunswered him: Vnto the euenynge and the morninge / euen two thousande and three hundreth dayes: then shall the Sanctuarye be clensed againe.

C Nowe when I Daniel had sene this visyon / and soughte for the vnderstandinge of it: beholde / there stode before me a thinge lyke vnto a man. And I herde a mans voyce in the ryuer of Ulay / whiche cryed / and sayde: O Gabriel make this man vnderstande the visyon. So he came / and stode by me. But I was afrayed at his commynge / & fel doune vpon my face.

Then sayde he vnto me: O thou sonne of man / marcke wel / for in the last time shall this vision be fulfylled. Now as he was speakinge vnto me / I waxed faynte / so that I sancke doune to the grounde. But he toke holde vpon me / and set me vp againe / sayinge: Beholde / I will shewe the what shal happen in the laste wrathe: for in the tyme appointed it shalbe fulfilled.

The ramme whiche thou sawest with the two hornes / is the kynge of the Medes and Perses: But the goate is the kynge of Grekelande: the great horne that stode betwixte his eyes / that is the principal king. But where as it brake / and foure other rose vp in the steade: it sygnifyeth / that out of this people shal stād vp † foure kyngdomes / but not so mighty as it. j. Mac. ij. a D After these kyngdomes (whyle vngodlynesse is a growinge) there shall aryse a kynge of an vnshamefast face / whiche shalbe wyse in darcke speakinges.

He shalbe mighty and stronge / but not in his own strēgth. He shal destroy aboue measure / and al that he goeth about / shal prospere: he shal slaye the stronge and holy people. And thorowe his craftines / falshede shal prospere in his hande / his herte shalbe proude / & many one shal he put to death in his welthinesse. He shal stande vp against the prince of princes / † But he shalbe destroyed without hande. And this vision that is shewed vnto the / is as sure as the euenynge and the morninge. † Therfore wryte thou vp this sighte / for it wilbe longe or it come to passe. Dan. viij. c ij. Mac. iij. d ij. Upon this was I Daniel very faynte / so that I laye sicke certayne dayes: But whan I rose vp / I wente aboute the kynges busynes / and maruayled at the vision / neuertheles / no man knewe of it.

Thus shall he turne a-gaine to his owne lande/stomble and fal/and be nomore founde: so he that came vpon him/ and dyd him violence/shal stand in his place/ and haue a pleasaunt kyngdome: and after few dayes he shalbe destroyed/and that neyther in wrath nor in battayll. In his steade there shall aryse a vyle persone / not holden worthy of a kynges dignitie: this shall come in craftely/ and optayne the kyngdome with fayre woordes: he shall fyghte agaynste the armes of the myghtye (and destroye them) yee / and agaynste the prynce of the conuenaunt.

So after that he hath take truce with him/ he shall handle deceatfully/ that he maye get vp/ and ouercome him with a small flocke: and so with craftinesse to get him to the fattest place of the lande/and to deale otherwyse/ then either his fathers or graundfathers did. For he shall destroye the thinge that they had robbed and spoyled/yee/& all they: substaunce: ymagenynge thoughtes agaynst the stronge holdes/ and that for a tyme. And why/†the shippes of Cythim shall come vpon him / that he maye be smytten and turne againe / that he maye take indignacion against the conuenaunt of holynes/to medle against it. Yee/he shal turne him/ and drawe suche vnto him as leaue the holy conuenaunt.

He shall set mightye men to vnhalowe the E Sanctuary of strengthe / to put doune the dayly offeringe/ and to set vp the abhominable desolacion. And suche as breake the conuenaunt / shall he flatter with fayre woordes. But the people that will knowe theyr God/ shall haue the ouerhande and prospere. This shal he do/sekynge helpe and succour F at the mightye Idols and straunge goddes. Such as will receaue him/ and take hym for God/he shall geue them greate worshippe & power: yee/and make them lordes of the multitude / and geue them the lande with rewardes. In the latter tyme shall the kynge of the South stryue with hym / and the kynge of the North in lyke maner shal come against him with charrettes/horsmen/ & with greate many of shippes. The XII. Chapter.

AT the tyme will come also / that the † greate prince Michael / which standeth on thy peoples syde/shal aryse vp/for *there shal come a tyme of trouble / such as neuer was/ sence there begāne to be any people / vnto thatsame tyme. Then shall thy people be delyuered/ yee/ all those that be founde wrytten in the boke. † Many of thē that slepe in ỳ dust of the earth shal awake: some to euerlastinge lyfe / some to perpetual shame and reprose. *The wyse (such as haue taught other) shall glister/ as the shyninge of heauen: and those that haue instructe the multitude vnto godlynesse / shalbe as the starres/worlde without ende.

B And thou o Daniel/ shut vp these wordes/ and seale the boke til the last tyme. Many shal go aboute here and there/and then shal knowlege increace. So I Daniel loked / & beholde/ there stode other two: one vpon thys shore of the water / the other vpon yonder syde. And one of thē sayde vnto him/which was clothed in lynnyn and stode aboue vpon the waters of the floude: How longe shal it be to the ende of these wonderous workes: † Then herde I the man with the lynnyn clothes / which stode aboue vpon the waters of the floude: when he helde vp hys ryghte and left hande vnto heauen/ and sware by him which lyueth for: euer: † that it shall tary for a tyme / two tymes / and half a tyme: and when the power of the holy people is cleane scatred abroade / then shall all these thinges be fulfilled.

C I herde it well / but I vnderstode it not. Then sayde I: O my lorde/ what shall happē after that? He aunswered: Go thy waye Daniel/for these woordes shalbe closed vp and sealed till the last tyme: & many shalbe purified/ clensed and tried. But the vngodly shall lyue wickedly / † and those wicked (as many of thē Mat.xiij.b as they be) shall haue no vnderstandinge: as for suche as haue vnderstādinge/ they shall regarde it. And from that tyme forth the dayly offeringe shalbe put doune / and the abhominable desolacion set vp / there shalbe a thousande two hundreth and xc. dayes. O well is him that wayteth / and commeth to the thousande thre hundreth and fyue & thyrtye dayes. Go thou thy waye now till it be ended: take thy reste / & byde in thy lot / till the dayes haue an ende.

The ende of the prophet Daniel.

The Prophet Oseas.

This is the worde of the LORde

DE / that came vnto Oseas ỳ sonne of Beeri/ † in the dayes of Osias/Joathan/Achas and iiij.Re.xv. Ezechias kinges of Juda: and in the tyme of xv.xvj.xvij Jeroboam the sonne of Joas kinge of Israel.

The fyrst Chapter.

Irst/when ỳ Lorde spake A vnto Oseas/ he sayde vnto hym: † Go thy waye/take Leu.xxi.b an harlot to thy wyfe / and Eze.xliij.d get chyldren by her: for the lande hath cōmitted greate whoredome agaynste the Lorde. So he wente / and toke Gomer the doughter of Deblaim: which conceaued / and brought forth a sonne. Then *iij.re.xxj.b will I breake the bowe of Israel / in the valley of Jesrael.

B She cõceaued yet agayne/ & bare a doughter. And he saide vnto him: Cal her name Loruhama (that is/ not opteynynge mercy) for

C Now when she had weened Loruhama/ she conceaued agayne / and bare a sonne. Thē sayde he:call his name Lo Ami(that is to saye/ not my people) For why? ye are not my people/therfore will not I be yours. And though

The IIII. Chapter.

A HEare the worde of the Lorde / o ye children of Israel: For the Lorde must punyth them that dwell in the lande. And why? There is no faythfulnesse / there is no mercy/ there is no knowlege of God in the lande:but swearinge / lyenge / manslaughter / theft and aduoutry haue gotten the ouerhande/and one bloudgiltynes foloweth another. Therfore shall the lande be in a miserable case / and all they that dwell therein/ shal mourne The beastes in the felde / the fooles in the ayre/ and the fishes in the see shall dye. Yet is there none that will chastē nor reproue another. The priestes which should reformme other men/are become like the people.

The V. Chapter.

HEare this/ o ye priestes: take hede/o thou A

The VI. Chapter.

The VII. Chapter.

WHen I vndertake to make Israel whole/ A thē the vngraciousnesse of Ephraim and ỹ wickednes of Samaria cōmeth to light: thē go they about with lyes. At home they be theues: and without they fall to robbinge. They cōsidre not in their hertes that I remēbre all their wickednes. They go about with their owne inuencions/ but I se them wel ynough. They make the kinge and the princes to haue pleasure in their wickednes and lyes. All these burne in aduoutry/ as it were an ouen that ỹ baker heateth when he hath lefte kneadinge/ till the dowe be leuended. Euen so goeth it this daye with oure kinges and princes/ for they begynne to be woode dronken thorow wyne/ they vse familiarite with suche as deceaue them. They with the ymaginacion of B their hert are like an ouen/ their slepe is all the night like the slepe of a baker/ in the morninge is he as hote as the flame of fyre: they are altogether as hote as an ouen.

They haue deuoured their owne iudges/ all their kinges are fallē: yet is there none of thē ỹ calleth vpon me. Therfore must Ephraim be mixte amonge ỹ Heithē. Ephraim is become like a cake ỹ no man turneth: straungers haue deuoured his strēgth/ yet he regardeth it not: he waxeth ful of gray hecres/ yet wil he not knowe it: & ỹ pride of Israel is cast doune before their face/ yet will they not turne to the Lorde their God/ nor seke him for all this.

Where as they come together/ it is but for meate and drynke/ & me will they not obeye. I haue taught them/ and defended their arme/ yet do they ymagin mischefe against me. They turne them selfes/ but not a right/ and are become as a broken bowe. Their princes shalbe slayne with the swearde/ for the malice of their tūges/ such blasphemies haue they learned in the lande of Egypte.

B Their sede shall beare no corne/ there shall no meel be made of their increace: though there be/ yet shall straungers deuoure it vp. Israel shall perish/ the Gentiles shall entreate him as a foule vessel. Sence they wente vp to the Assyrians/ they are become like a wilde asse

The. III. Chapter.

HEare what the Lorde speaketh vnto A

C Therfore/ thus sayeth the Lorde God: This lande shalbe troubled and beseged rounde aboute/thy strẽgth shalbe pluckte from the/and thy palaices robbed. Thus sayeth the Lord: lyke as an hyrdeman taketh two legges / or a pece of an eare oute of the Lyons mouth: Euen so the children of Israell (that dwell in Samaria/ hauinge their couches in

As for the wynter house / and sommer house / I wyll smyte them doune: and the houses of yuery/yee / and many other houses shall perysshe / and be destroyed sayeth the Lorde.

The. IIII. Chapter.

A HEare this worde/o ye fat kine/that be vpon the hil of Samaria: yee/that do poore men wronge/and oppresse the neady: ye that saye to youre lordes: Bringe hyther / let vs drynke. The. VII. Chapter.

A THe Lorde God shewed me siche a vigresshoppers/ euen when the corne was shu-

Nowe when they vndertoke to eate vp all the grene thinges in the lande/ I sayd: O Lord God be merciful/ I beseche the: who shoulde els helpe vp Jacob that is broughte so lowe?
So the Lorde was gracious therein/ and the Lorde sayde: well/ it shall not be. A-

was breakinge doune molberies/ and goyvnto my people of Israell. And therfore/heare thou nowe the worde of the Lorde.

Thou sayest: prophecye not against Israell/and speake nothinge against the house of Issaac. Wherfore thus sayeth the Lorde.
Thy wyfe shalbe defyled in the citie/ thy sōn-

The IX. Chapter.

A I Sawe the Lorde standinge vppon the aulter/and he sayde: smyte the dore cheke that the postes maye shake withall. The Prophet Jonas.

The fyrst Chapter.

A The worde of the Lorde came vnto † Jonas the iiij.re.xiiij.e sone of Amithay sayinge:
Jon.iij.a †Aryse/and get the to Nimue that *greate citie:and
*Gen.x.b preach vnto the/how that Gen.xviij.c †their wickednesse is come before me. And Jonas made him ready to flye vnto Tharsis from the presence of the Lord/ & gat hym doune to Joppa: where he founde a shippe ready for to go vnto Tharsis. So he payed his fayre/and wente aborde/that he myght go with them vnto Tharsis/from the presence of the Lorde. But the Lorde hurled a greate wynde into the see/and there was a mighty tempest in the see: so that the shippe was in ieoperdy of goynge in peces. Then ỹ maryners were afrayde/and cried euery man vnto his God/& the goodes that were in the shippe/they cast it into the see to lighten it of them. But Jonas gat hym vnder the hatches/ where he layed hym doune and slombred.

B So the master of the shippe came to him and sayde vnto hym: why slombrest thou? Vp/call vpon thy God:if God (happly) will thinke vpon vs/that we perysshe not. And they sayde one to another: come/let vs cast lottes: that we maye knowe for whose cause we are Josue vij.c thus troubled. † And so they cast lottes/and the lot fell vpon Jonas.

Then sayde they vnto him:tell vs for whose cause are we thus troubled? what is thine occupacion? whence commest thou? what countreman art thou/& of what nacion? He aunswered them: I am an Hebrue/and I feare the Lorde God of heauen/which made both the see and drye lande. Thē were the men exceadingly afrayed/and sayde vnto hym: why dyddest thou so? (for they knewe that he was fled from the presence of the Lorde/because he had tolde them) and sayde moreouer vnto hym: What shall we do vnto the/that the see maye ceasse from troublinge vs? (for the see wrought and was troublous) he aunswered thē: Take me/and cast me into the see/so shall it let you be in rest: for I wote it is for my sake/ that this greate tempest is come vpon you.

Neuertheles/the mē assayed with rowyng to bringe the shippe to lande: but it wolde not be/because the see wrought so/and was so troublous agaynst them. Wherfore they cried vnto the Lord/and sayde: † O Lord/let vs Deu.
not perysh for this mans death/neyther laye thou innocent blonde vnto oure charge: for thou (o Lorde) hast done/euen as thy pleasure was.

So they toke Jonas/and cast hym into the see/and the see lefte ragynge. And the men feared the Lorde exceadingly/doyng sacrifices/and makynge vowes vnto the Lorde.

The II. Chapter

A But the Lorde prepared a greate fyshe to Mat.
swalow vp Jonas. † So was Jonas in the belly of the fysh thre dayes and thre nyghtes. And Jonas prayed vnto the Lorde his God/out of the fyshes belly/and sayde:
Psal.c † In my trouble I called vnto the Lorde/ & he herde me out of the belly of hell I cried/ and thou herdest my voyce. Thou dyddest cast me doune depe in the myddest of the see/and the floude compassed me aboute:yee/† all thy Psal.
waues and roules of water went ouer me/I thought that I had bene cast awaye out of thy syght:but I will yet agayne loke towarde thy holy temple.

The waters compassed me/euen to the very B soule:the depe laye aboute me/and the wedes were wrapte aboute myne heade. I wente doune to the bottome of the hilles/and was barred in with earth for euer. But thou (o Lorde Lorde my God) hast brought vp my lyfe agayne out of corrupcion. Whē my soule fainted wythin me/I thought vpon the Lorde: and my prayer came in vnto the/euen into thy holy tēple/They that holde of vayne vanities/ will forsake his mercy. But I will do the sacrifice with the voyce of thankesgeuynge/and will paye that I haue vowed: for why? saluacion commeth of the Lorde/And the Lord spake vnto the fysh/and it cast out Jonas agayne vpon the drye lande.

The III. Chapter.

A Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto
Jonas agayne/sayinge: †vp/and get the to Nimue that greate citie/and preach vnto thē the preachinge which I bad the. So Jonas arose/and wente to Nimue at the Lordes commaundement. Nimue was a greate citie vnto God/namely/of thre dayes iourney.

And Jonas wente to/and entred into the citie:euen a dayes iourney/and cried/sayinge: There are yet xl.dayes/and then shall Nimue xxxviij. be ouerthrowen. †And the people of Nimue beleued God/and proclaymed fastinge/and arayed them selfes in sackecloth/as well the greate as the small of them. And the tydinges came vnto the kinge of Nimue/which arose out of his seate/and put his apparell of/and put on sackecloth/& sat him doune in asshes.

B And it was cried and commaunded in Nimue/by the auctorite of the kynge and his lor-iij.Re.xxi.d des/sayinge: † se that neyther man or beast/ ore nor shepe/tayst ought at all: and that they neyther fede nor drinke water: but put on sackecloth both mā and beast/and crye mightely

Who can tell? God maye turne and repēte/ and ceasse from his fearce wrath/that we perysh not. And when God sawe theyr workes/ how they turned from theyr wicked wayes:
xxxviij † he repented on the euel/which he sayde he wolde do vnto them/and dyd it not.

The IIII. Chapter.

A Wherfore Jonas was sore discontent and angrie. And he prayed vnto the Lorde/ and sayde: O Lorde/was not this my sayinge (I praye the) when I was yet in my countrey? therfore I hasted rather to flye vnto Tharsis/† for I knewe well ynough that thou Psal.xxxv.c art a mercyfull God/full of compassion/longe sufferinge/and of greate kyndnesse/& repentest when thou shouldest take punyshment.
† And now o Lorde/take my lyfe fro me (I Joel.ij.c beseche the) for I had rather dye then lyue. iij.Re.xix.c
Then sayde the Lorde: art thou so angry? And Jonas gat hym out of the citie/and sat doune on the East syde therof:and there made hym a bothe/and sat vnder it in the shadow/ till he myght se what shoulde chaunce vnto the citie.

And the Lorde God prepared a wylde vyne/which sprange vp ouer Jonas/that he myght haue shadowe aboue his heade/to delyuer hym out of his payne/and Jonas was exceadinge glad of the wylde vyne. But vpon the nexte morow against the springe of ỹ daye/ B
the Lorde ordeyned a worme/which smote the wylde vyne/so that it wethered awaye. And when the Sunne was vp/God prepared a feruent East wynde/& the Sunne bette ouer the heade of Jonas/that he faynted agayne/and wysshed vnto his soule that he might dye/and sayde: It is better for me to dye then to liue. And God layde vnto Jonas: Art thou so angry for the wylde vyne. And he sayde: yee/very angry am I euen vnto death. And the Lorde sayde/thou hast compassion vpon a wilde vyne/whereon thou bestowedest no labour/nor maydest it growe: which sprāg vp in one nyght/& perysshed in another: And shoulde not I then haue compassion vpon Nimue that greate citie/wherein there are aboue an C. and xx thousande persones/ that knowe not theyr ryght hande from the lefte/besydes much cattel?

This is the heauy burthen of Niniue/ wchich Naũ of Elchos dyd wryte/ as he sawe it.

THe Lorde is a gelous God/ and a taker of vngeaunce: yee/ a taker of vengeaũce is ỹ Lorde/and wrothfull. † The Lorde taketh vengeaunce of his enemies/ & reserueth displeasure for his aduersaries. † The Lord suffreth longe/ he is of greate power/ and so innocent † that he leaueth no mã faultesse before him. The Lorde goeth forth in tempest & stormy wether/ the cloudes are the dust of hys fete. When he reproueth the see/ he driueth it vp/ and turneth all the floudes to drye lãde. Basan is desolate/ Carmel and the pleasure of Libanus waisteth awaye. The mountaynes tremble for him/ the hilles consume. At the sight of him/ the earth quaketh: yee/ the whole worlde/ and all that dwel therein. † Who maye endure before his wrath? Or who is able to abyde his grimme displeasure. His anger taketh on lyke fyre/ and the harde rockes burst in sunder before him.

Ful gracious is the Lorde/ and a stronge holde in tyme of trouble/ he knoweth thẽ that put their trust in him: when ỹ flonde renneth ouer/ and destroyeth the place/ and when the darckenesse foloweth still vpon his enemies. What do ye ymagin then agaynst the Lorde on this maner? (Tush/ whẽ he hath once made an ende/ there shall come no more trouble.) For lyke as the thornes that sticke together/ & as the drye strawe/ so shall the dronkardes be consumed together/ euen when they be full. Therfore thus saieth the Lorde: Let them be as well prepared/ yee/ and as many as they can/ yet shall they be hewen doune/ and passe awaye. A THis is the heauy burthē/ whiche the prophet Abacuc dyd se. O Lorde/
Psal.xcj.c †how longe shall I crye/ and thou wylt not heare:
Job.xix.a †How long shal I complaine vnto the suffringe wronge/ and thou wilt not helpe? Why letteste thou me se weryenesse and laboure? Tyranny and violēce are before me/power ouergoeth righte: for the lawe is tome in peces/ and there can no right iudgement go forth.
And why? the vngodly is more set by thē the

Thou makest men as the fish in the see/& like as the creping beastes ꝯ haue no gyde. They take vp al with their angle/ they catch it in their net/& gather it in their yarne: wherof they reioyce and are glad. Therfore offre they vnto their net/and do sacrifice vnto their yarne: because that therow it their porcion is become so fat/ and their meate so plenteous. The. III. Chapter.

¶ A prayer of the prophet Abacuc for the ignoraunces.

A O Lorde/when I herde speake of the/ I was afrayed. The worke that thou haste taken in hande/ shalt thou perfourme in hys tyme/ O Lorde: and when thy tyme commeth/thou shalt declare it. In thy very wrath thou thinkest vpon mercy. God commeth frō Theman/and the holy one from the mount of Pharan. Sela.

His glory couereth the heauens/ and the earth is ful of his praise. His shine is as the Sunne/& beames of light go out of his handes/there is his power hid. Destrucciō goeth before him/and burninge cressettes go from his fete. †He standeth/& measureth the earth: Amos ix.a
He loketh/ & the people consume awaye/ the mountaynes of the worlde fal doune to poulder/and the hilles are faine to bowe them selfes/ for his goyinges are euerlastinge & sure.

I sawe that the pauilions of the Morians/ and the tentes of the lande of Madian were vexed for weerinesse. Wast thou not angry (o Lorde) in the waters? was not thy wrath in the floudes/and thy displeasur in the see? yes/when thou satteste vpon thine horse/ and whē thy charrettes had the victory. Thou shewdest thy bowe openly/ like as thou haddest promysed with an oeth † vnto the tryGen. xlix.c
bes. Sela.

Thou diddest deuide the waters of ꝯ earth: B
When the mountaines saw the/they were afrayed/the water stream went away/the depe made a noyse at the liftinge vp of thine hāde.
The †Sūne & Moone remayned stil in their Josu.x.c habitacion. Thine arrowes wente out glysteringe/and thy speares as the shine of the lightninge. †Thou trodest doune the lande in Jos.xj.a thine anger/and diddest throshe the Heithen in thy displeasure. Thou cameste forth to helpe thy people/to helpe thine anointed. Thou smotest doune the heade in the house of the vngodly/& discouerdest his foundacions/ euen vnto the necke of him. Sela.

Thou cursest his scepters/ the captaine of his men of warre: whiche come as a stormy winde to scatre me abroade/& are glad when they may eat vp the poore secretly. Thou makest a waie for thine horses in the see/euē in the moude of great waters. When I heare this/ my body is vexed/ my lippes tremble at the voice therof/ my bones corrup/ I am afraied where I stande. O that I mighte reste in the daye of trouble/ that I mighte go vp vnto oure people/which are already prepared.

For the fygge trees shal not be grene/ and the vynes shall beare no fruite. The labourr

of the olyue shalbe but lost/ and the lande shal bringe no corne: the shepe shalbe taken oute of the folde/ and there shalbe no cattell in the stalles. But as for me/ I will be glad in the Lorde/ and will reioyce in God my Sa-Psal.xvij.d uioure. †The Lord God is my strength/ he shall make my fete as the fete of hartes: and he whiche gcueth the victorye/ shall bringe me to my hye places/ synginge vpon my psalmes.

THis is the worde of the Lord/

yee/ the Lorde hath prepared a slayne offeringe/ and called his gestes therto. And thus struccion and misery/ a darcke and glomynge daye/ a cloudy and stormy daye/ a daye of the noyse of trompettes and shawmes/ against the strong cities and hye towers. I wil bring the people in such vexacion/ that they shall go about like blinde men/ because they haue syn-

The first. Chapter.

A j. Esd. vj. a Dan. v. e vj. a IN the seconde yeare of king †Darius/in the vj. moneth the fyrste daye of the moneth/came the worde of the Lorde (by the prophet †Aggeus) vnto *Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel the prince of Juda/and to Jesua the sonne of Josedec the hye priest/sayinge: Thus speaketh the Lorde of hoostes/and sayeth: This people doeth saie: The tyme is not yet come to builde vp the Lordes house. Then spake the Lord by the prophet Aggeus and saide: †Ye your selfes can fynde time to dwell in syled houses/and shal this house lye waist? Considre nowe youre owne wayes in youre hertes (sayeth the Lord of hoostes) †ye sowe muche/but ye bringe litle in: Ye eate/but ye haue not ynough: ye drinke/but ye are not fylled: ye decke youre selfes/but ye are not warme: and he that carneth any wages/putteth it in a broken purse.

Thus sayeth the Lord of hoostes: Consydre youre owne wayes in youre hertes/get you vp to the mountayne/fetche woode/and builde vp the house: † that it maye be acceptable vnto me/and that I maye shewe myne honour/saieth the Lord. Ye loked for much/and lo/it is come to lytle: and thoughe ye bringe it home/yet do I blowe it awaye. And why so sayeth the Lorde of hoostes? Euen because that †my house lyeth so waist/ and ye renne euery man vnto his own house. Wherfore the heauen is forbidden to geue you any dewe/and the earth is forbydden to geue you encreace. †I haue called for a drouth both vpon the lande/and vpon the mountaines/vpon corne/vpon wyne and vpon oyle/vpon euery thinge that the ground bringeth forth/vpon men and vpon cattel/yee/and vpon al handy laboure.

Nowe when Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel/and Jesua the sonne of Josedec the hye priest with the remnaunt of the people/herde the voyce of the Lorde their God/and the wordes of the prophet Aggeus (lyke as the Lorde their God had sent him) the people dyd feare the Lorde. Then Aggeus the Lordes aungel sayed in the Lordes message vnto the people: †I am with you/saieth the Lorde. * So the Lorde waked vp the spirete of Zorobabel the prynce of Juda/and the spirete of Jesua the sonne of Josedec the hye prieste/and the spirete of the remnaunt of all the people: that they came and laboured in ỹ house of the Lord of hoostes their God.

A UPon the xxiiij. daye of the sixte moneth/in the seconde yeare of kynge Darius/the xxj. daye of the seuenth moneth/came the worde of the Lorde by the prophet Aggeus sayinge: speake to Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel prynce of Juda/and to Jesua the sonne of Josedec the hye priest/ and to the residue

Agg. j. e (sayeth the Lorde of hoostes) lyke as I agreed with you/when ye came oute of the lande of Egypt: and my spirete shalbe among you/feare ye not.

B For thus saieth the Lord of hoostes. †Yet

The xxiiij. daye of the ix. moneth in the seconde yeare of kynge Darius/came the worde of the Lorde vnto the prophet Aggeus/ sayinge: Thus saieth the Lord God of hoostes: Axe the priestes concerninge the lawe/& saye: If one beare †holy flesh in his cote lappe/& with his lappe do touche the bread/pottage/wyne/oyle/or any other meate: shall it be holy also? The priestes aunswered/and sayde: No. Then saide Aggeus: Now if one beynge defiled with a dead carcase/touch any of these shal it also be vncleane? The priestes gaue aunswere and saide: †yee/it shalbe vncleane. The Aggeus aunswered/and saide: Euen so is this people and this nacion before me/sayeth Leuit. v. a the Lorde: and so are all the workes of their g. d handes/yee/and al that they offre is vncleane. Viu. x. x. d

And now (I praye you) consydre from this daye forth/and how it hath gone with you afore: or euer there was layed one stone vpō a- C nother in the tempe of the Lord: † that whē Agg. j. a ye came to a corne heape of xx. bushels/there were scarce ten: and that when ye came to the wynepresse for to poure out l. pottes of wyne/ there were scarce xx. For I smote you with heate/blastinge/and hayle stones in all the labours of youre handes: yet was there none of you that wolde turne vnto me/saieth the Lorde. Consydre then from this daye forth/ and afore/namely/from the xxiiij. daye of the ix. moneth/vnto the daye that the foundacion of the Lordes temple was layed: Marcke it well. † Is not the sede yet in the barne? haue not the vynes/the fyggetrees/the pomgranates/and olyue trees bene yet vnfrute- Zach. viij. full? But from this daye forth/I shall make them to prospere.

Moreouer/the xxiiij. daye of the moneth came the worde of the Lorde vnto Aggeus againe/sayinge: Speake to Zorobabel the prince of Juda/and say: I wil shake both heauen and earth/and ouerthrow the seate of the kingdomes/yee/and destroy the mighty kingdome of the Heithen. I will ouerthrowe the charrettes/and those that syt vpon them/so that both horse and man shal fal doune/euery man thorow his neighbours swearde. And as for the/o Zorobabel (saieth the Lorde of hoostes) thou sonne of Salathiel/my seruaūt: I will take the (saieth the Lord) at the same time/and make the as a seale/ for I haue chosen the/saieth the Lord of hoostes.

And saye thou vnto them: thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes. †Turne you vnto me (saieth the Lorde of hoostes) and I wyll turne me vnto you/ saieth the Lorde of hoostes. †Be not ye like youre forefather/ vnto whome the prophetes cried afore tyme/ sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of hoostes: †Turne you from youre euell wayes/ and frō youre wicked ymaginacions. *But they wolde not heare/ nor regarde me/ sayeth the Lorde. What is now become of your forefathers and the prophetes? are they yet stil a liue? But dyd not my wordes and statutes (whiche I commaunded by my seruauntes the prophetes) touche your forefathers? A AND the aungel that talked with me/ came againe/ and waked me vp (as a man that is rayse out of his slepe) and saide vnto me: What seist thou? For he that hath bene despysed a litle season/ shall reioyce/ when he seyth the tinne weight in Zorobabels hande. The vij. eyes are ỹ Lordes/ which go thorow ỹ whole worlde.

Then aunswered I / & saide vnto him: What are these two olyue trees vpon the right and left syde of the candelsticke? I spake moreouer / & saide vnto him: what be these ij. olyue braūches / which (thorow the two golden pipes) empty them selfes into the golde? He aunswered me/and sayde: knowest thou not what these be? And I sayde: No my lorde. Then saide he: † These are the two olyue braunches / that Apoc.xj.a stande before the ruler of the whole earth.

The V. Chapter.

A GO I turned/me liftinge vp myne eyes/ and loked/& beholde/a flienge boke. And he saide vnto me: what seist thou? I aunswered/I se a flienge boke of xx. cubites longe and x. cubites broade. Then saide he vnto me: This is the curse that goeth forth ouer the whole earth: For all theues shalbe iudged after this boke / & all swearers shalbe iudged accordinge ij.Thes. ij.b to thesame. † I will bring it forth (saieth the Rom.j.d Lorde of hoostes) so that it shall come to the house of the these/and to the house of him/that falsely sweareth by my name: & shall remaine in his house / and consume it with the tymbre & stones therof. Then the aungel that talked with me/wente forth / and sayde vnto me: lifte vp thine eyes and se / what this is that goeth forth. And I sayde: what is it? He aūswered: this is a measure goyinge out. He sayde moreouer: Euen thus are they (that dwell vpon B the whole earth) to loke vpon. And beholde/ there was lift vp a talent of leade: & lo / a woman sat in the myddest of the measure. And he sayde: This is vngodlynesse. So he cast her into the myddest of the measure / and threwe the lompe of leade vp into an hole.

Then lift I vp myne eyes/& loked: and beholde/ there came out ij. women / & the wynde was in their wynges (for they had wynges like the wynges of a Storke) and they lift vp the measure betwixte the earth and the heauen. Thē spake I to the aūgel that talked with me: whether wil these beare the measure? And Gen.x.b he sayde vnto me: into the lande of † Synear / to buylde them an house / whiche when it is prepared / the measure shalbe set there in his place.

The VI. Chapter.

A MOreouer I turned me / lifting vp myne eyes/& loked/and behold/ there came iiij. charrettes out frō betwixte two hilles / whiche hilles were of brasse/In the fyrste charret were † reade horse/ In ỹ second charret were blacke Zach.j.b horse. In the thirde charret were whyte horse/ Apoc.vj. In the fourth charret were horses of diuerse colours and stronge. Then spake I/and sayde vnto the aungel that talked with me/ O lorde/ what are these? The aungel aunswered/& saide vnto me: These are the iiij. wyndes of the hea- Jere.xlix. uen/whiche be come forth to stande before the ruler of all the earth. That with ỹ blacke horse went into the lande of the North/and ỹ whyte folowed thē / & the speckled horses wente forth towarde the South. These horses were very stronge/ and went out: and sought to go and take their iourney ouer the whole earth. And he saide: get you hence/ & go thorow ỹ worlde. So they wente thorowout the worlde. Then cried he vpon me/and spake vnto me/sayinge: Behold/these that go towarde ỹ North / shall still my wrath in the North countrie.

And ỹ worde of the Lord came vnto me/ B sayinge: Take of the prysoners that are come from Babylon: namely/ Heldai/Tobias / and Idaia: & come thou thesame daye/ & go into ỹ house of Iosias the sonne of Sophony. Then take golde and syluer / & make crounes therof/ & set them vpon the heade of Jesua the sonne of Josedec the hye priest / & speake vnto him: Thus saieth the Lord of hoostes: Behold/the man whose name is the † braunch: and he that Zach.iij. shall springe vp after him/* shall builde vp the *Psal.cx. temple of the Lord/ yee / euen he shall builde vp the temple of the Lorde. † He shal beare Apoc.iii. the prayse/ he shall syt vpō the Lordes trone/ v.b and haue the dominacion.

† A priest shall he be also vpon his trone/ & Psal.cix.a a peaceable coūsayll shalbe betwixte thē both. Heb.v. And the crounes shalbe in the temple of the vij.viij.c Lord/for a remembraunce vnto Helem/Tobias/Idaia/and Hen the sonne of Sophony. And suche as be farre of/ shal come and builde the temple of the Lorde: that ye maye know/ how that the Lorde of hoostes hath sent me vnto you. And thys shall come to passe / if ye will herken diligently vnto the voyce of the Lorde your God.

The. VII. Chapter.

IT happened also in the fourth yeare of A Kinge Darius/that the worde of ỹ Lord came came vnto Zachary in the fourth day of the ix. moneth/whiche is called Casleu: what time as Sarasar and Rogomelech / and the men that were with them sent vnto Bethel for to praye before the Lorde: and that they shoulde saye vnto the priestes / whiche were in the house of the Lorde of hoostes / and to the prophetes: re.xxv.b Shoulde I wepe in the † fyfte moneth / and absteine as I haue done now certaine yeares? Then came the worde of the Lord of hoostes vnto me/sayinge: Speake vnto all the people of the lande/and to the priestes: and saye: when re.xlj.a ye fasted and mourned in the v. and † vij. mo- re.xxv.d neth (now this lxx. yeares) dyd ye faste vnto me? When ye dyd eate also and drinke/ dyd ye not eate and drynk for your owne selfes. Are not these the wordes/ which the Lorde spake by his prophetes afore tyme/when Jerusalem was yet inhabited and welthy / she and the cities rounde about her: whē there dwelt men/ both towarde the South and in the playne countries?

B And the worde of the Lord came vnto Za- B chary / sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde of ch.vij.c hoostes: † Execute true iudgement: shewe xx.xxij.c mercy and louynge kyndnesse / euery man to iii.j.g his brother: So the wydowe/the fatherlesse/ b xxiiij.a the straunger/and poore no wrong/ and let no re.vij.a man ymagen euel agaynste hys brother in his Jer.vij.c hert.* Neuertheles/they wolde not take hede/ but turned their backes / and stopped their eares/that they should not heare. Yee/they made their hertes as an Adamant stone / lest / they Oct.j.d shoulde heare the lawe and wordes / † whiche the Lorde of hoostes sente vnto them in his holy spirite by the prophetes afore tyme.

Wherfore the Lorde of hoostes was very re.xj.b wroth at them. And thus is it come to passe/ that † like as he spake/& they wolde not heare: euen so they cried / and I wolde not heare (sayeth the Lorde of hoostes) but scatered them amōge all Gentyles/ whom they knewe not. Thus the lande was made so desolate/ that there trauayled no man in it/neyther to nor fro / for that pleasaunt lande was vtterly layed waist.

The. VIII. Chapter.

A SO the worde of the Lorde came vnto me/sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes: I was in a greate gelousy ouer Siō/ yee / I haue bene very gelous ouer her in a greate displeasure / † thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes: I will turne me agayne vnto Siō/ and will dwell in the myddest of Jerusalem: † so that Jerusalem shalbe called a faithfull & Esa.j.b true citie/the hill of the Lord of hoostes/ yee/ an holy hill.

Thus saieth the Lorde of hoostes: There shal yet olde men & women dwel again in the stretes of Jerusalē: yee/& suche as go with staues in their handes for very age. The stretes of the citie also shalbe full of yonge boyes and damsels / playinge vpon the stretes.

Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes: if the residue of this people thynke it to be vnpossible in these dayes/† shoulde it therfore be vn- Mat.xix.b possible in my sight / sayeth the Lord of hoo- B stes? Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes: Behold/ I will delyuer my people from the lāde of the East and West / and will bringe them agayne: that they maye dwell at Jerusalem. † And they shalbe my people / and I will be Jere.xxxj.f their God / in trueth and righteousnesse. & Heb.viij.c Thus saieth the Lorde of hoostes: let youre Apoc.xxj.b handes be stronge / ye that now heare these wordes by the mouth of the prophetes / which be in these dayes that the foundacion is layed vpon the Lorde of hoostes house / that the temple maye be buylded. For why? † before Agg.j.a these dayes neyther men nor cattel coulde wynne any thynge / neyther might any man come in and out in reste for trouble: but I let euery man go agaynst his neyghboure.

Neuertheless/I will now intreate the residue of this people nomore/as afore time (saieth the Lord of hoostes/) † but they shalbe a sede Agg.ij.c of peace. And it shall come to passe / that like C as ye were a curse amonge the Heithen. (O ye house of Juda/and ye house of Israel) Euen so will I delyuer you / ỹ ye shalbe a blessinge: feare not/but let youre handes be stronge.

For thus saieth the Lorde of hoostes / like as I deuised to punysh you / what tyme as youre fathers prouoked me vnto wrath/ (saieth the Lorde of hoostes) and spared not: Euen so am I determined now in these dayes / for to do well vnto the house of Juda and Jerusalem/therfore feare you not. Now the thinges

Thus sayeth the Lorde my God: Fede the shepe of the slaughter / whiche shalbe slayne of those that possesse them: yet they take it for no
synne/but they that sell them/saye: The Lord be thanked/I am ryche: Yee/theyr owne shepe-smyte the lande / and out of their handes will

I my self fedde the slaughter shepe (a poore B flocke verely) and toke vnto me two staues: the one I called louynge mekenesse / the other I called wo/and so I kepe the shepe. Thre shepemight not awaye with them/neither had they any delyte in me. Thē sayde I: I will fede you brake it / that I myght disanull the † conue- Osee ij.c

it was broken in that daye.

Then the poore symple shepe that had a respecte vnto me / knewe therby that it was the worde of the Lord. And I sayde vnto them:
if ye thynke it good / bringe hyther my price:
if no/then leaue. † So they wayed doune xxx. C syluer pens / the value that I was prysed at. Mat. xxvij And the Lord sayde vnto me: cast it vnto the a potter (a goodly price for me to be valued at of thē) and I toke the xxx syluer pens/and cast them to the potter/in the house of the Lorde.

Then brake I my other staf also (namely wo) that I myght louse the brotherheade be-twixte Juda and Jsrael. And the Lord sayd vnto me: Take to the also the staf of a foolysh shepeherde: for lo/I will rayse vp a shepeherde into the lande / which shall not seke after the thynges that be lost / nor care for such as go a-straye: he shall not heale the wounded/ he shall not norysh the thynge that is whole: but he shall eate the flesh of such as be fat / and teare their clawes in peces.

O Idol shepeherde/that leaueth the flocke.

The swearde shall come vpon his arme / and vpon his right eye. His arme shalbe cleane dryed vp/& his right eye shalbe sore blinded.

The fyrst Chapter.

The heauy burthen which the Lorde sheweth agaynst Israel by Malachy.

A Gen.xxv.c

I Haue loued you/saieth the Lorde: & yet ye saye: wherein hast thou loued vs? † Was not Esau Jacobs brother/ saieth the Lorde? † yet haue I loued Jacob/ and hated Esau: * Yee / I haue made his hilles waist/and his heretage a wylderneſſe for Draggons. And though Edom sayde: well/ we are destroyed / we will go buylde vp agayne the places that be wayſted: yet (sayeth the Lorde of hooستes) † what they buylded / that brake I doune: so that it was called a cursed lande/and a people whome the Lorde hath euer bene angry withall.

Rom.ix.b *Josue xxiij.a Ge.xxxvj.a Abdy.j.a

Youre eyes haue sene it / and ye youre selfes must confeſſe / that the Lorde hath brought Exod.xx.a his lande of Israel to greate honour. † Shoulde not a sonne honoure his father? and a seruaũt deu.xxxij.a his master / † if I be now a father/ where is myne honour? if I be the Lorde/ where am I feared? sayeth the Lorde of hooستes.

B Now to you prieſtes that despyse my name. And if ye saye: wherein haue we despyſed thy name? In this/ that ye offre vncleane bread vpon myne aulter. And if ye wil saye: Wherin haue we offered any vncleane thynge vnto the? in this that ye saye the aulter of the Lorde is not Leu.xxij.c to be regarded. † If ye offre the blynde/ is not Eze.xliij.c that euel? and if ye offre the lame & syckę/ is not that euel? offre it vnto thy prince / shal he be content with the? or accepte thy persone/ sayeth the Lorde of hooستes?

And now make youre prayer before God/ that he maye haue mercy vpõ vs: for such thinges haue ye done. Shal he regarde youre perſones (thinke ye) sayeth he Lorde of hooستes? Yee / what is he amonge you that will do so much as to shut the doores/ or to kyndle the fyre vpõ myne aulter for naught? I haue no pleaſure in you/ sayeth the Lorde of hooستes: † and Esa.j.b as for the meatofferinge / I will not accepte it C at youre handę. † For from the ryſynge vp of Psal.cxiij.a the Sunne vnto the goynge doune of the ſame/ my name is greate amonge the Gentiles: Yee / in euery place shall there sacrifice be done / and a cleane meatofferinge offred vp vnto my name: for my name is greate amõge the Heythen / sayeth the Lorde of hooستes. But ye haue vnhalowed it/ in that ye saye: the aulter of the Lorde is not to be regarded/ and the thynge that is set therupon / not worthy to be eaten.

Now saye ye: It is but laboure and trauayle / and thus haue ye thought scorne at it/ (saieth the Lorde of hooستes) offeringe robbery/ yee/ the lame & the syckę. Ye haue brought me in a meatofferinge / shoulde I accepte it of youre handę/ sayeth the Lorde? Cursed be the diſſembler/ which hath in his stocke one that is male/ and when he maketh a vowe / offereth a spotted one vnto the Lorde. For I am a greate kynge (sayeth the Lorde of hooستes) and my name fearfull amonge the Heithen.

The II. Chapter.

A Nd now (o ye prieſtes) this commaundement toucheth you: if ye will not heare it/ nor regarde it / to geue the glory vnto my name (sayeth the Lorde of hooستes) † I will Deut. send a curſe vpon you / and will curse youre xxviij.b blessinges: yee/ curse them will I if ye do not take hede. Beholde / I shall corruppe youre sede/ and cast dounge in youre faces: euen the dounge of youre solempne feaſtes / and it shall cleue fast vpon you. And ye shall knowe/ that I haue sent this commaundement vnto you: that my † couenaunt which I made with Nu.xxv.c Leui / myght stande / sayeth the Lorde of hooستes.

I made

I made a cõuenaunt of lyfe and peace with him: this I gaue him/ that he myght stande in awe of me: and so he dyd feare me/ and had my name in reuerẽce. The law of trueth was in his mouth/ and there was no wickednesse founde in his lippes. He walked with me in peace and equite/ and dyd turne many one a- Osee.iiij.b waye from theyr synnes. † For the prieſtes lippes shoulde be sure of knowlege/ that mẽ may seke the lawe at his mouth/ for he is a messaũ- B ger of the Lorde of hooستes. But as for you/ ye are gone clene out of the way / & haue caused the multitude to be offended at the lawe: De.xxxiij.b † ye haue broken the cõuenaunt of Leui/ saieth the Lorde of hooستes. Therfore wil I also make you to be despyſed/ and to be of no reputacion amõg al the people: Because ye haue not kepte my wayes/ but bene parcial in the lawe.

Ephe.iiij.a *Jac.vij.b viij.c

† Haue we not al one father? Hath not one God made vs? * why doeth euery one of vs then despyse his owne brother/ & so breake the cõuenaunt of our fathers? Now we hath Juda offended: yee/ the abhominaciõ is done in Is- j.Esd.ix.a racl and in Jerusalem/ † for Juda hath defyled the Sanctuary of the Lorde/ which he lo- Leuit.xxj.c ued/ and hath kepte the doughter of a straung God. But the Lorde shal destroye the man that doeth this (yee/ both the mayster and the scolar) oute of the tabernacle of Jacob / with him that offreth vp meatofferinge vnto the Lorde of hooستes. Now haue ye brought it to this point agayn/ that the aulter of the Lorde is couered with teares / wepinge & mourninge: so that I wil nomore regard the meat- offeringe/ neyther wil I receaue or accepte any thinge at youre handes.

C And yet ye saye: wherfore? Euen because that were as the Lorde made a conuenaunt betwixte the & the wife of thy youth/ thou hast Gene.ij.d despyſed her: † Yet is she thine owne compa- nyon and married wyfe.

The one: This the in terpreters reken to be spoken of Abraham. De.xxiiij.a Jere.iij.a

So dyd not he the one/ & yet had he an excel- lent spirete. What dyd thẽ the one? He sought the sede promiſed of God. Therfore loke well to your spirete/ & let no mã despyse the wyfe of his youth. If thou hatest her/ † put her away/ sayeth the Lorde God of Israel/ & geue her a cloring for the scorn/ saieth the Lorde of hoo- stes. Loke wel thẽ to your spirete/ & despyse her not. Ye greue the Lorde with your wordes/ & yet ye saie wherwithal haue we greued hym? In this/ that ye saie: All that do euel/ are good in the syght of God/ & such please him. Or els where is the God that puniſheth?

The.III. Chapter.

APOCRIPHA

The bokes and treatises which amonge the fathers of olde are not rekened to be of like authoritie with the other bokes of the Byble/ neyther are they founde in the Canon of the Hebrue.

The translatoure vnto the reader.

THese bokes (good reader) which be called Apocrypha/ are not iudged among the doctoures to be of lyke reputacion with the other scripture/ as thou mayest perceaue by S. Jeronyme in Epistola ad Paulinū. And the chiefe cause therof is this: there be many places in them/ that seme to be repugnaunt vnto the open and manyfest trueth in the other bokes of the Byble. Neuertheles/ I haue not gathered them together to the intent that I wolde haue them despysed/ or litle set by/ or that I shoulde thinke them false/ for I am not able to proue it: Yee/ I doubte not verely/ if they were equally conferred with the other open scripture (tyme/ place and circumstaunce in all thinges consydered) they shoulde neyther seme contrary/ nor be vntruly and peruersly aledged. Trueth it is: A mans face can not be sene so well in a water/ as in a fayre glasse: neyther eā it be shewed so clearly in a water that is stered or moued/ as in a styl water: These & many other darcke places of scripture haue bene sore stered and myxte with blynd and coueteous opinions of mē/ which haue cast such a myst afore the eyes of the symple/ that as longe as they be not conferred with the other places of scripture/ they shall not seme otherwyse to be vnderstande/ then as coueteousnes expoundeth them. But whosoeuer thou be that readest scripture/ let the holy ghoost be thy teacher/ and let one text expounde another vnto the: As for suche dreames/ visyons and darcke sentēces as be hyd from thy vnderstandinge/ commytte them vnto God/ and make no articles of them: But let the playne text be thy gyde/ and the spirite of God (whiche is the author therof) shal lede the in al trueth.

As for the prayer of Salomon (which thou fyndest not herein) the prayer of Azarias/ and the swete songe that he and his two fellowes songe in the fyre: the fyrst (namely the prayer of Salomon) readest thou in the eyght chapter of the thirde boke of the kinges/ so that it appeareth not to be Apocryphum: The other prayer and songe (namely of the thre children) haue I not founde amonge any of the interpreters/ but onely in the olde latyn texte/ whiche reporteth it to be of Theodorions translacion. Neuertheles/ both because of those that be weake and scrupulous/ and for their sakes also that loue suche swete songes of thankesgeuinge: I haue not left them out: to the intent that the one shoulde haue no cause to complayne/ and that the other also myghte haue the more occasyon to geue thankes vnto God in aduersyte/ as the thre chyldren dyd in the fyre.

Grace be with the. Amen.

The thirde boke of Esdras.

The fyrst.Chapter.

And Josias †helde ỹ feaste of Easter in Jerusalē vnto the Lorde / & slew the Passeouer the fourtenth day of ỹ fyrst moneth. Be set ỹ priestes also in ordre (according to their dailye courses) being arayed in longe garmentes in the temple of the Lorde. And he spake vnto ỹ Leuites ỹ holy ministers of Israell / that they should halow them selfes vnto the Lorde / to set ỹ holy Arke of the Lorde / in the house that king Salomon the sonne of Dauid had builded and saide: Ye shal nomore beare the Arke vpon your shoulders. Now serue your Lorde & take the charge of his people of Israel / after your villages and youre tribes: accordinge as king Dauid the king of Israel hath ordeined / & accordinge as Salomon his sonne hath honorably prepared: Yee / loke ỹ ye all do seruyce in the temple / accordinge to the ordring & distribucion of the principal mē / whiche are appointed out of the tribes / to do seruice for the †childrē of Israel. †Byl ỹ Passeouer / & prepare offeringes for your brethrē / & do accordinge to ỹ cōmaundement of ỹ Lorde / which he gaue vnto Moses. And vnto ỹ people ỹ was fōūd / Josias gaue thirty thousād of shepe / lambes / kyddes & goates / & thre thousand oxen. These the kyng (of his kingly liberality) gaue vnto the people / according as he had promised: & to the priestes (for the Passeouer) he gaue two thousand shepe & an hundreth oxen. Moreouer Jechonias / & Semeias and Nathanaell brethrē / & Hasabias / Jehiel / & Josabad / gaue them to the Passeouer / fyue thousande shepe & fyue hundreth bullockes.

And whan these thinges were brought to passe / the priestes and the Leuites stode goodly in their ordre / and had the vnleuēded bread thorowout the tribes. And after the ordringe of the principal men in the trybes / they offred vnto the Lorde in the syghte of the people / accordinge as it is wrytten in the boke of Moses / †and so they rosted the Easterlamb / as accordinge was. As for the thankeofferinges & the other / they dight them in kettels & pottes / & set them before the people with good will / and afterwarde before thē selfes and the priestes. For the priestes offred the fat / vntyll the tyme was expyred / but the Leuites prepared for them selfes / and for their brethren the chyldren of Aaron. The syngers also the chyldren of Asaph stode in theyr ordre / accordinge as Dauid had deuysed. So dyd Asaph / Zacharyand Jedithun / which were appoynted by the king. Moreouer the porters and porekepers stode by ỹ dores and ỹ diligently / so that none wente out of his standinge and seruice for theyr brethren (the Leuites) prepared for them. Thus were all thinges perfourmed / that belonged to the offringe of the Lorde. In that daye they helde the Passeouer / and offred thankeofferinges beside the sacrifyce of the Lorde / accordinge to the commaundement of kynge Josias.

So the childrē of Israel which were then present / helde an honorable Passeouer / and ỹ feast of swetebread seuē daies longe. Yee / such a Passeouer was not kepte in Israel / from the tyme of the prophet Samuel. And al the kinges of Israel helde not such an Easter / as this which kyng Josias helde / and the priestes / the Leuites / the Jewes / and all Israel of all thē ỹ were at Jerusalē. In the eyghtenth yeare of ỹ raygne of Josias was this Passeouer kepte. And with a perfecte herte dyd kynge Josias ordre all his workes (before the Lorde) & the thinges that were wrytten of hym in tymes past / concerning those that sinned & were vngodly agaynst the Lorde before all people / & that sought not the worde of the Lorde vpon Israel. †After all these actes of kyng Josias / Pharao the kynge of Egypte wente vp / & came towarde Carcamis by Euphrates / and Josias wente to mete him. Then sente the kynge of Egypte vnto Josias / saying: What haue I to do with the / o kynge of Juda? I am not sent of the Lorde to fight against the / for my warre is vppon Euphrates / go thou thy waye home agayne in all the haiste. And Josias wolde not turne agayne vpon his charrette / But vndertoke to fyght agaynst him: & herkened not vnto ỹ worde of the prophet / which he tolde him out of the mouth of God / but pitched a battayl against him in the felde of Mageddo. And the prynces preassed to kynge Josias. Then saide the kynge vnto his seruauntes: †Cary me awaye oute of the battayl / for I am sore wounded. And immediatly his seruauntes toke hym awaye oute of the front of the battayll. Then sat he vp vpon the seconde charret / came to Jerusalem / dyed / and was buried in hys fathers sepulchre. And in all Jewry they mourned for Josias / yee / ỹ rulers also with their wyfes made lamentacion for him vnto this daie: And this was done euer still in Israel.

These thinges are wrytten in the boke of the stories of the kinges of Juda: namely / all the actes and workes of kynge Josias / his kinglye power and maiesty / his vnderstandinge in the lawe of God / and what he dyd yee / and thinges which are not wrytten in the boke of the kinges of Israel and Juda. †And the people toke Jechonias the sonne of Josias / and made him kinge in the steade of Josias his father whan he was thre and thirtie yeare olde. And he raigned ouer Israel thre monethes. And the kynge of Egypt put him doune / that he shoulde not raigne in Jerusalem / and rayséd vp a taxing of the people: namely an hundreth talentes of syluer / & one talent of golde. The king of Egypte also made Joachim his brother kynge of Juda and Jerusalem. As for them of the kinges counsaill with the kynge him selfe and Jaraceles his brother / he toke them / and caried them awaie prysoners into Egypte. Fyue and twentye yeare olde was Joachim whan he was made kynge in the lande of Juda and Jerusalem / and he dyd euel before the Lorde. †After this / Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon came vp / bounde him with bandes of yron / & caryed him vnto Babilon. Nabuchodonosor also toke all the †vessell that were halowed in the temple of the Lorde / and all the iewels / & caried them vnto Babilon / and brought thē into his owne temple at Babilon. Of his vncleances and vngodlines / it is wrytten in the boke of the actes of the kynges. And Joachim his sonne raygned in his steade: He was made kyng beinge eyghtene year olde / and raigned but thre monethes and ten dayes in Jerusalem / and dyd euell before the Lorde. So after a yeare / Nabuchodonosor sent and caused him to be brought vnto Babilon with the holy vessels of the Lorde / and made Sedechias his brother kyng of Juda and Jerusalem / whan he was one and twenty yeare olde: and he raigned eleuen yeare.

And he dyd euel also in the sight of ỹ Lorde / & cared not for the wordes †that were spoken vnto him by the prophete Jeremye at the mouth of the Lorde. And were as he had made an ooth vnto kynge Nabuchodonosor / he forswore him selfe / & fel from him / hauing a stif necke & hert / & transgressed al the statutes & ordinaunces of the Lorde God of Israel. The rulers also and heades of the people of ỹ Lorde dyd much euel / and became vngodly more thē the Heithē / being defyled in al maner of abhominacions: Yee / & defyled ỹ holy temple of ỹ Lorde at Jerusalē. And the God of their fathers sente his messaungers vnto them / to turne them backe / & to cal thē againe from their synnes: for he wold fain haue spared them for his holy tabernacles sake. Neuertheles / they had his messaungers in derision: & loke what God spake vnto thē by his prophetes / they made but a sporte of it. This drew on so longe / tyl the Lorde was wrath with his people for their vngodlinesse / and tyll he caused the kinges of the Caldees to come vp / which slew their yonge mē with the sweard / yee / euen in the compasse of their holy temple / †and spared no body / neither yonge nor olde / neither maiden nor yonge mā: but they were al delyuered into the power of the kinges of the Caldees / & al the holy vessels of ỹ Lorde / and the kynges treasures toke they / and caried them vnto Babilon. As for the house of the Lorde / they brent it / and brake doune the walles of Jerusalem / set fyre vpon her towres / destroyed all her noble buildinges / and brought them to naught / and the people that were not slaine with the sweard / they caried vnto Babilon.

Thus became they the pryfoners & bōde mē of the kyng of Babilon / tyl they were delyuered / & raygned for them selfes / when the wordes of the Lorde were fulfilled / †whiche he and promised.

promyſed them by the mouth of the prophete Jeremy/and tyl the lande had her reſt: namely/ all the tyme that it laye wayſt/had it reſte and quietnes ſeuen and ſeuentye yeares.

A NOwe whan kynge Cyrus raygned ouer the Perſians/& whan the Lord wolde perfourme the worde that he had promyſed By the mouthe of the prophete Jeremye: the Lord rayſed vp the ſprete of Cyrus/ the kinge of the Perſians/ſo that he cauſed this writing to be proclayned thorowoute his whole realme: ſayinge: Thus ſayeth the kyng of ỹ Perſians: The Lorde of Iſrael that hye Lorde hath made me kyng of the lande/& commaũded me to Builde him an houſe at Jeruſalem in Jewry. If there be any nowe of youre people/the Lord be with him/ and go vp with him to Jeruſalem. And all they that dwell rounde aboute that place/ ſhall helpe them/ whether it be with golde/ with ſyluer/ with giftes/ with horſes & neceſſary cattell/and all other thinges that are brought with a fre wil to the houſe of the Lord at Jeruſalem.

B Then the principall men out of the trybes and villages of Juda and Ben Jamin ſtode vp: ſo did ỹ prieſtes alſo & the Leuites (whom the Lord had moued) to go vp/ & to buylde the houſe of the Lorde at Jeruſalem. And they that were about them/helped them with all maner of golde and ſyluer/and cattell alſo/ and with many liberall giftes: and this did many one/whoſe mynde was ſtered vp therto. Kynge Cyrus alſo brought forth the † veſſels and ornamentes/that were halowed vnto the Lorde (whiche Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of Babilon had caried awaye from Jeruſalem/ and conſecrated them to his Idoll and ymage) and delyuered them to Mithridatus his treaſurer/ and by him they were deliuered to Salmanaſar the debyte in Jewry. And this was the numbre of the: Two thouſande and iiij.C. ſyluer boules. xxx. ſyluer baſens xxx baſens of golde ij M. and iiij.C. veſſels of ſyluer/and a thouſande beſyde. All the veſſels of golde and ſiluer were v. M. viij.C. and lx. Theſe were numbred vnto Salmanaſar/and them that were come agayne with him to Jeruſalem out of the captiuitie of Babilon. Now in the tyme of kynge Artaxerſes the kynge of Perſia/theſe men: Balenus/and Mithridatus/ Sabellius/ Rathimus/ Balthemus/ Semelius the ſcribe/and other that dwelt in Samaria/ & in other places vnder ỹ dominion thereof. Wrote a letter vnto kynge Artaxerſes/ wherein they complayned vnto the kynge of them in Jewry and Jeruſalem. The letter was made after this maner.

C Syr/thy ſeruauntes Rathimus the ſtory wryter/Sabellius the ſcrybe/and other iudges of thy courte in Celoſyria and Phenices. Be it knowen & manifeſt to our lord the king/ that the Jewes which are come vp from you vnto vs into the rebellious and wicked citie/ beginne to Builde it againe/ and the walles aboute it/and to ſet vp the temple of the new. Nowe if this citie and the walles thereof be ſet vp again/they ſhal not onely refuſe to geue trybutes and taxinges/But alſo rebell vtterly agaynſt the kynge. And for ſo muche as they take this in hande nowe aboute the temple/ we thought it reaſon/to thinke no ſcorne of it/ But to ſhewe it vnto our lorde the kynge/and to certifye him thereof: to the intent that if it pleaſe the kyng/he maye cauſe it be ſought in the bokes of olde: and thou ſhalte fynde ſuche warninge writte/and ſhalt vnderſtande/that this citie hath alwaye ben rebellious and diſobedient/ that it hath ſubdued kinges and cities/and that the Jewes which dwell therin/ haue euer bene rebellious/obſtinate/vnfaithfull/and fightinge people/for the which cauſe this citie is waſted. Wherfore nowe we certifye oure lorde the kynge/ that if this citie be Builded and occupied againe/and the walles thereof ſet vp a new/thou canſte haue no paſſage into Celoſyria and Phenices.

D Then wrote the kynge to Rathimus the ſtory wryter/to Balthemus/ to Sabellius the ſcribe/and to the other officers and dwellers in Syria and Phenices/after this maner: I haue red the epiſtle whiche thou ſenteſt vnto me/and haue commaunded to make diligent ſearch/ and haue founde that the citie hath euer reſiſted kynges/ that theſame people are diſobedient/& haue cauſed much warre/ and the mighty kinges haue raigned in Jeruſalē/ which alſo haue rayſed vp taxinges of Syria and Phenices. Wherfore/I haue commaunded thoſe people/that they ſhal not buylde the citie/ that they make no more in it/ and that they procede no further with the buildinge: for ſo muche as it might be the cauſe of warre and diſpleaſure vnto kinges.

Nowe whan Rathymus and Sabellius the ſcribe and the rulers in the lande had red the wryting of kynge Artaxerſes/ they gat them together/and came in all the haiſt to Jeruſalem with an hooſt of horſemen/and with muche people of fotemen/and forbad them to Builde. And ſo they left of from buyldinge of the themple/vnto the ſeconde yeare of kynge Darius.

The III. Chapter.

A KYnge Darius made a greate feaſte vnto his ſeruauntes/vnto all his courte/and to all the officers of Media and Perſia/yee/and to all the debytes and rulers that were vnder hym/ from India vnto Ethiopia/ an hundreth and xxvij. countries. So whā they had eaten and dronken/beinge ſatiſſyed/and were gone home againe/Darius the kynge wente into his chaumbre/layed him doune to ſlepe/ and ſo awaked.

Then the thre yonge men that kepte the kynges perſone/and watched his body/ commoned amonge them ſelfes/and ſpake one to another: Let euery one of vs ſaye some thing/ and loke whoſe ſentence is wyſer and more excellent than the other/vnto him ſhall kynge Darius geue greate gyftes/ and clothe hym with purple. He ſhal geue him veſſels of gold to drynke in/ clothes of golde and couerinʒes: he ſhall make him a coſtly charret and a bridle of golde/he ſhall geue him a bonet of whyte ſylke/ and a chayne of golde about his neck: yee/ he ſhalbe the ſeconde and principal nexte vnto kynge Darius/ and that becauſe of his wiſdome/and ſhalbe called the kinges kynſman.

B So euery one wrote his meaninge/ ſealed it/and layed it vnder the kinges pelowe/ and ſaide: whan the kynge aryſeth/ we wyll geue him oure wrytinges: and loke whoſe worde the kynge and hys chiefe lordes iudge to be the mooſt wyſely ſpoken/ theſame ſhall haue the victorye. One wrote: wyne is a ſtronge thinge. The ſeconde wrote: The kyng is ſtrōger. The thirde wrote: women haue yet more ſtrenghte/ But aboue all thinges the trueth beareth awaye the victorye. Nowe whan the kinge was ryſen vp/they toke their writinges and delyuered them vnto him/ and ſo he red them. Then ſente he forth to call all his chiefe lordes/all the debites and rulers of the countries of Media and Perſia. And whan they were ſet doune in the counſaill/the writinges were red before them. And he commaunded to call for the yonge men/that they might declare their meaninges them ſelfes By mouth. So when they were ſent for/and came in/the kyng ſaide vnto them: ſhewe vs and make vs to vnderſtande/what the thynges are that ye haue wytten.

C Then beganne the firſt (which had ſpoken of the ſtrength of wyne) and ſaide: O ye men/ Twyne is maruaylous ſtronge/& ouercōmeth them that drinke it: it deceaueth the mynde/ & bringeth both the poore man & the kynge to dotage and vanitie. Thus doeth it alſo with the bondmā and with the fre/ with the poore and rich: it taketh away their vnderſtanding/ and maketh them careles and mery/ ſo that none of them remembreth any heauines/ det/ or duetie: It cauſeth a man to thinke alſo ỹ the thinge which he doeth/is honeſt & good: & remembreth not that he is a kynge/ nor that he is in auctorite/ & that he ought not to do ſuch thinges. Moreouer/whan men are drinkinge/they forget all frendſhip/all brotherly faithfulneſſe & loue: but as ſoone as they are dronken/they drawe oute the ſweard and wil fyght: & whan they are layed doune from the wyne/& ſo ryſen vp againe/ they can not tell what they dyd. Judge ye now/ Is not wyne the ſtrongeſt? For who wolde els take in hāde to do ſuche thinges? And whan he had ſpokē this/he helde his tunge.

Pro. xx. a

The. IIII. Chapter.

A THen the ſeconde (whiche had ſayde that the kynge was ſtronger) beganne to ſpeake/ſayinge: O ye men/ are not they the ſtrongeſt and mooſt excellent/ that conquere the lāde & the ſee/& all that is in the ſee & in the earth? Now is the kyng lord of all theſe thinges/& hath dominion of thē all: & loke what he commaundeth/it is done. If he ſende his men forth a warfare/ they go & breake doune hilles/walles & towers. They are ſlaine/and ſlaye (other men) them ſelfes/& ouerpaſſe not the

the kynges worde. If they get the victory/they bringe the kynge all the spoyle. Likewise/ the other that medle not with warres and fyghtinge/but tyll the grounde: whan they reape they bringe tribute vnto the kynge. And if the kynge alone do but commaunde to kyll/ they kyl: if he commaund to forgeue/they forgeue: if he commaunde to smyte / they smyte: if he byd dryue awaye/they dryue awaye: if he commaunde to buylde/they buylde: if he commaunde to breake doune/ they breake doune: if he commaunde to plante/they plante. The common people and the rulers are obedient vnto him. And the kyng in the meane season sytteth him doune/eateth an drinketh/and taketh his rest: then kepe they watch rounde aboute the kynge / and not one of them darre get him out of the waye to do his owne busynes/but muste be obedient vnto the kynge at a word. Judge ye now o ye men/ how should not he go farre aboue / vnto whome men are thus obedient? And whan he had spokē this/B he helde his tunge. The thirde (whose name was Zorobabel/which had spoken of women and of the trueth) beganne to saye after this maner: O ye men/it is not the great kynge/ it is not the multitude of men / neyther is it wyne that excelleth. Who is it then/that hath the lordshippe ouer them? Haue not women borne the kynge / and all the people that rule these thinges? Haue not womē borne them/ and brought them vp that plante the vynes/ whereoute the wyne commeth? They make garmentes for all men/they geue honour vnto all men/and without women can not men lyue. If they gather golde and syluer and all precious thinges / and se a fayre and welfauoured woman / they leaue altogether / and turne their eyes onely vnto the woman/ and gape vpon her / and haue more desyre vnto her/then vnto the syluer and golde/or any maner of precious thinge. †A man leaueth his father that broughte hym vp / he leaueth his owne natural countrye/and cleueth vnto the woman: yee / he ieoperdeth his lyfe with the woman/ and remembreth neyther father/nor mother/nor countrye. By this then ye muste nedes knowe / that women haue the dominion ouer you.

Doeth it greue you? A man taketh his sweorde and goeth his waye to steale/ to kyll/ to murther/to sayle vpon the see/and seyth a Lyon/and goeth in the darcknesse: and when he hath stolen/deceaued and robbed/he brengeth it vnto his loue. Agayne/ a man loueth his wyfe better then father and mother: yee/ many one there be that renne oute of theyr wyttes/and become bondmen for theyr wyfes sakes: many one also haue perysshed / and haue bene slayne/ and haue synned because of women.

And nowe beleue me / I knowe a kynge C which is greate in his power / and all landes stande in awe of hym/and no man darre laye hande vpon hym: yet dyd I se / that Apame (the doughter of the greate kyng Bartacus) the kynges concubyne / sat besyde the kynge vpon the right hande/and toke of his croune from his heade/and set it vpō her own heade/ and smote the kynge with her lefte hande. Moreouer/ the kynge loked vppon her with open mouth: if she laughed vppon him / he laughed also: but if she toke any displeasure with hym/the kyng was fayne to flatter her/ and to geue her good wordes/tyl he had gotten her fauoure agayne.

O ye men/are not women then stronger? Greate is the earth/& hye is the heauen that do these thinges. Then the kynge and the princes loked one vpon another. So he beganne to speake of the trueth: O ye men / are not women stronger? Greate is the earthe/ hye is the heauen/swyfte is the course of the Sunne/he compasseth the heauen rounde about/†and fetcheth his course agayne to his Eccle. j. c owne place in one daye. Is he not excellente that doeth this? yee/ greate is the trueth / and stronger then al thinges. All the earth calleth vpon the trueth / the heauen prayseth it / all workes shake and tremble at it / and with it is not vnrighteous thinge. Wyne is vnrighteous/the kynge is vnrighteous/women are vnrighteous/al the children of men are vnrighteous / yee / all their workes are vnrighteous/and there is no trueth in them/in their vnrighteousnes also shal they be destroyed & perisshe. †As for the trueth it endureth/and is Esa. xl. a alwaye strongest it lyueth and conquereth for Psal. cxvij euermore worlde without ende.

The trueth acceptyth no persones/it putteth no

no difference betwixte rych or poore/betwixte the myghty or symple / but doeth right vnto euery man/ whether they be euel or good/and all men are louyngly dealt withal in the workes of it. In the iudgement of it there is no vnrighteous thynge/ but strength/kingdom/ and power and maiestie for euermore. Blessed be the God of trueth.

And with that he helde his tunge/ & all the people cried and saide: Greate is the trueth/& aboue all. Then saide the kinge vnto hym: Axe what thou wilt / more then is appoynted in ỹ wrytinge/ and I shall geue it the/ for thou art founde wyser then thy cōpanyons: thou shalt syt nexte me/and be my kynsman. Then saide he vnto the kinge: Remembre thy promyse & vowe/ which thou hast vowed and promysed (in the daye whan thou camest to the kingdome) to buylde vp Jerusalem / and to sende agayne all the vessels and Jewels / that were taken awaye out of Jerusalem: which Cyrus separated/whā he offred in Babylon/ & wolde sende them agayne. And thy mynde was to buylde vp the temple / which the Edomytes brent/ whan Jerusalem was destroyed by the Caldees. This onely (O kinge) is the thynge that I require / this is the maiestey / which I desyre and axe of the: that thou perfourme the vowe / which thou with thyne owne mouth hast made vnto the kynge of heauen.

E Then Darius the kynge stode vp / and kyssed hym / † and wrote a letter vnto all the debytes and shrefes / to al the lordes and nobles/ that they shoulde conueye him forth/and all them that wolde go vp with hym. He wrote a letter also vnto all the shrefes that were in Celosyria & Phenyces / and vnto Lybanus / that they shoulde harle cedretrees from Lybanus vnto Jerusalem / to buylde the citie withall. Moreouer he wrote vnto all the Jewes that were gone out of his realme into Jewry because of the fredome/ that no officer/nor ruler/ nor shrefe shoulde come to theyr dores: and that all their lande / which they had conquered / shoulde be fre / and not trybutary: And that the Edomytes shoulde geue ouer the cities and vyllagies of the Jewes / which they had taken in: yee/ and that they shoulde yearly geue xx talentes to the buyldinge of ỹ temple/ vntyl the tyme that it were fynyshed: and to the dayly halowinge of the brentofferinges (as it is commaunded) ten talentes yearly also: And that all they which come from Babylon to buylde the citie / shoulde haue fre libertie / they and their chyldren / and all the priestes.

He wrote the greatnesse also/and cōmaunded that the holy garment shoulde be geuen F them/wherein they ministred: and wrote that commaundementes shoulde be geuen to the Leuites / vntill the daye that the house were fynished and Jerusalem buylded vp: and cōmaunded that all they that watched the citie/ shoulde haue their porcions and wages.

He gaue ouer also all the vessel that Cyrus had separeted from Babylon: and all that Cyrus had geuen in commaundement / thesame charged he also / that it shoulde be done & sent vnto Jerusalem. Now whan this yonge man was gone forth / he turned his face towarde Jerusalem / and praysed the kinge of heauen/ and sayde: Of the commeth victory / † of the Eccli. j. a cōmeth wysdome and clearnesse / and I am thy seruaunt. Blessed art thou/ which hast geuen me wysdome/the will I prayse/O Lorde/thou God of oure fathers.

And so he toke the letters / and wente vnto Babylon: And whan he came there / he tolde this vnto all his brethren that were at Babylon/and they praysed the God of their fathers/ that he had geuen them refresshing & liberte to go vp/and to buylde Jerusalē and the tēple (which is there called after the name of the Lorde) and they reioyced with instrumentes and gladnesse seuen dayes longe.

Phaspha/ the sonnes of Malmon. All these ministred in the Sanctuary/& were seruauntes of Salomon: euen iiij C. and lxxxij.

D These folowinge are they/ that wente vp frō Chelmellat Thelarsa (whose princes were Carmelā/ and Careth) and myght not shewe forth their cities and kynredes/how they were of Israel: The sonnes of Salarus/ the sonnes of Tuben/the sonnes of Nechodiacus. Of the priestes that executed the office of the priesthode/ and were not founde: The sonnes of Obia/ the sonnes of Achisos/the sonnes of Addin/ which married one of ỹ doughters of Phargeleu/ and were named after hym. The writinge of thesame kynred was sought in ỹ register of their generacion/ but it was not founde: and therfore were they forbydden to execute the office of the priesthode. Vnto these sayde Nehemias/ and Asthatas/ that they shoulde haue no porcion in the Sanctuary/ tyll there rose vp an hie priest/ that were well instructe in the playne clearnes and trueth. Of all Israel (besyde seruauntes and maydens) there were xlij. M. iij. C. and xl. Now were there of seruauntes and maydens vij. M. iij. C. and xxxvj. Fyue thousande and xxxv. asses.

Their heades also/and the rulers in the trybes/ whā they came to Jerusalem/and wolde buylde and set vp the temple of God agayne in his place/ they gaue (after theyr habylite) vnto the temple/to the treasure & to the seruice of the Sanctuary xij. M. poūdes of golde/ v. thousande of syluer/ and an hundreth priestes garmentes. And so dwelt the priestes/and the Leuites/and the people that wente out of Jerusalem/ and in the countrie there aboute/ the syngers also/and the porters/ euery one of Israel in his owne lande.

j.Esd.iij.a † So whā the seuenth moneth came/ & whā the children of Israel were euery mā at his busynes/ they came all with one consent into the courte/ which was before the East dore. And there stode Jesua the sonne of Josedec/ & his brethren the priestes/ and Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel/ and his brethren/ settinge vp an aulter/ to offre brentsacrifices vpon it/ as it is writtē in the lawe of Moses ỹ man of God.

There came people also of other countries/ E
& the Heithen out of al landes/set vp the aulter in his place/ and offred sacrifices & brent offeringes vnto the Lorde in the morninge. And so they helde the feast of tabernacles/ † as Leui. xxiij. f it is cōmaunded in ỹ lawe. And dayly offred they as accordinge was/and made the sacrifices appoynted/ the offeringes also of the Sabbathes/and of the new Moones/ and all holy feastes. † And all they that vowed offeringes j.Esd.iij.b vnto the Lord/ beganne at the new Moone of the seuenth moneth to offre vnto God/ for the temple of the Lord was not yet buylded. And they gaue vnto the masons/ and carpenters/ money/meate/and drynke with chearfulnesse. Vnto them of Sydon also/ and Tyre they gaue cartes/ that they shoulde carry Cedretrees from Lybanus to be teastes and beames/ and that they shoulde make shippes in the hauen of Joppa/accordinge as it was appoynted and ordeyned/ by Cyrus kinge of the Persians.

And in the second yeare they came into the temple of God at Jerusalem. † In the seconde Eccl. xliv. b moneth beganne Zorobabel the sonne of Sa- and c. lathiel/and Jesua the sonne of Josedec/& their brethren the priestes and Leuites/ and all they that were come vnto Jerusalē out of the captiuitie of Babylon/ and layed the foundacion of the temple of God/ in the new Moone of the seconde moneth in the seconde yeare that they were come into Jewry and Jerusalem. And they appoynted the Leuites (that were F aboue xx. yeare olde) vnto the seruice of the Lorde: so Jesua and his sonnes and his brethren all the Leuites stode together/ and performed the lawe & ordinaunce/ in the house of the Lorde.

And the priestes stode and had their garmentes and trompettes/ and the Leuites/ the sonnes of Asaph had cymbals/geuynge thankes and prayses vnto the Lord/ † accordinge j.Pa. xvij. b as Dauid the kinge of Israel had ordeyned. And the songe that they dyd synge vnto the Lorde/was after this maner: † O synge vn- Ps cxxxv. a to the Lord/ for he is gracious/ & his goodnes vpon Israel endureth for euer. And al the people blew out with trompettes/ and sunge with loude voyce/prayſinge the Lorde together in the roaringe vp of the houſe of the Lorde. There came alſo from amonge the prieſtes and Leuites the rulers and elders/accordinge to the trybes and kynredes (ſuch as had ſene the houſe afore) to the buyldinge of this temple with greate crie and greate mourninge/many alſo with trompettes and greate ioye/in ſo much that the trompettes myght not wel be herde for the wepynge and mourninge. For the common people blew goodly vpon the trompettes.

G †Then came the enemies of the trybes of j.Eſd.iiij.a Juda and Ben Jamin/to knowe what that trompettinge and noyſe of ſhawmes might be. And they perceaued ỹ it was they which were come againe out of captiuitie/and wolde buylde the temple a new vnto ỹ Lorde God of Iſrael. So they wente to Zorobabel/and Jeſua/and to the rulers of the vyllages/and ſaide vnto them: Shall we buylde with you alſo? for we lykewyſe haue herde youre Lord/and we walke after theſame maner/from the dayes of Aſbazareth the kinge of Aſſyria/which brought vs hither. Then Zorobabel & Jeſua/and the rulers of the vyllages of Iſrael ſaide vnto thē: It is not mete that ye ſhoulde buylde the temple of oure God with vs: we oure ſelfes alone will buylde vnto the Lord/
j.Eſd.j.a. †like as Cyrus the kinge of the Perſians hath commaunded vs.

But the Heithen in the lande layed them ſelfes againſt thoſe that were in Jewry/helde vp the buyldinge frō them/layed wayte vpon them priuely/ſtopped ſuch as brought any thinge to thē/forbad them to buylde/and hindereth thoſe that made them paſſage/that the buyldinge ſhoulde not be finiſhed: & this continued ſo longe as kinge Cyrus lyued: and ſo they put of the buildinge for the ſpace of two yeare/vntill the raigne of kinge Darius.

The VI. Chapter.

A Notwithſtandinge/in the ſeconde yeare of j.Eſd.v.a the raygne of Darius/†Aggeus & Zachary the ſonne of Addo prophecied vpon thē in Jewry and Jeruſalem/in the name of the God of Iſrael. Then Zorobabel the ſonne of Salathiel/and Jeſua the ſonne of Joſedec Agg.j.c ſtode vp/†and beganne to buylde the houſe of the Lord at Jeruſalem/when the prophetes of the Lorde helpeth them.

At theſame tyme came Syſennes the vnderſhreſe in Syria & Phenices/with ỹ landlordes and his companions/and ſaide vnto them: Who hath bydden and commaunded you to buylde the houſe/to make the rofe and all other thinges agayne? And who are the workemen that builde them? Neuertheles/the elders of the Jewes had ſuch grace of ỹ Lorde/that they wolde not be let (though they were prouoked therto) but buylded on ſtill/vntill the time that kinge Darius were certified therof/and an aunſwere receaued from him. The letter that theſe men ſent vnto kinge Darius/was after this maner.

Syſennes the vnderſhreſe in Syria/and B
Phenices/and the lādlordes with their cōpanions/which are head rulers in Syria/& Phenices ſende their ſalutacion vnto Darius the kinge. We certifie oure lorde the kinge/that we came into the lande of Jewry/and wente to Jeruſalē: where we founde them buildinge the greate houſe of God & the temple/with greate coſtly freſtone/and with goodly timbre for the walles: yee/they make greate haiſt with the worke/and helpe one another/and it goeth forth proſperouſly in their handes/and with greate diligence and worſhippe is it made.
Then axed we the elders/who had commaunded them to make vp the houſe and the buildinge: and this we dyd/to the intent that we myght certifie the perfectly/and wryte vnto the/the names of thoſe that were the rulers of the worke. So they gaue vs this aunſwere: we are the ſeruauntes of the Lorde/which made heauen and earth: and as for this houſe it hath bene buylded and ſet vp afore tyme by the greate and myghty kinge in Iſrael. iij.Re.vj.a
But whan oure fathers prouoked God vnto wrath/and ſynned againſt the God of Iſrael/
†he gaue them ouer into the power of Nabuchodonoſor kinge of Babylon the kinge of the Caldees/which brake doune the houſe & brent it/and caried awaye the people priſoners vnto Babylon. iiij.re.xxiiij. and xxv. Jere.xxxix. lij.

†Neuertheles/in the fyrſt yeare that kinge C
Cyrus raygned at Babylon/Cyrus the kinge j.Eſd.v.c
wrote and cōmaunded to builde vp this houſe againe: and all the ornamentes that Nabuchodonoſor caried awaye from Jeruſalē vnto Babylō/appropriated vnto his owne temple: thoſe brought Cyrus forth agayne/and deliuered them to Zorobabel/and to Salmanaſar the vnderſhreſe/commaundinge them that they ſhoulde bringe thoſeſame ornamentes agayne to Jeruſalem into the temple/and to begynne from that tyme forth/to buylde the temple againe in his owne place. Then Salmanaſar layed the foundacīō of the Lordes houſe at Jeruſalem/and euer ſence haue they buylded/and yet is it not ended. And therfore (O kynge) if thou thinkeſt it good/let it be ſought in the lybraries/& rolles of kinge Cyrus: if it be fōūde then/that it is done with the counſayl/and conſent of kinge Cyrus/and if oure lorde the kinge be ſo mynded/let hym wryte vnto vs therof.

D †Then cōmaunded kynge Darius to ſeke
j.Eſd.vj.a in the lybraries: and ſo at Ægbathanis in a litle citie in Media there was fōūd ſuch a wryiij.Eſd.iiij. c tinge: †In the fyrſt yeare of the raigne of Cyrus/theſame kinge Cyrus commaunded that the houſe of the Lorde at Jeruſalem ſhoulde be buylded agayne (and odoures to be made there contynually vnto the Lorde) whoſe height ſhalbe ten cubites/ỹ bredth lx. cubites/and foure ſquare with thre hewē ſtones/with a lofte of tymbre of theſame countrie/yee/with a new loft/and the expences therof to be geuen of the houſe of king Cyrus. And the ornamentes of golde and ſyluer/that Nabuchodonoſor toke out of the houſe of the Lorde at Jeruſalem/ſhalbe ſet agayne in the temple at Jeruſalem/where they were afore. Syſennes alſo the vnderſhreſe in Syria and Phenices/the princes/and their companions/and the other that be head rulers in Syria and Phenices/ſhall not medle nor haue any thynge to do with that place.

E †Cyrus haue commaunded alſo/that they ſhall builde the houſe of the Lord whole vp: and haue ordeyned them to helpe thoſe that be come out of captiuitie/tyll the houſe of the Lorde be fynyſhed: and out of the tribute and taryinge that is yearly rayſed vp in Syria and Phenices/diligently to geue them a certayne ſumme/to the offeringe of ỹ Lorde: and theſame to be delyuered vnto Zorobabel the officer: that he therwithal maye ordeine oxen/rammes/lambes/and corne/ſalt/wyne and oyle/and that continually euery yeare: after the expences which the prieſtes that be at Jeruſalem/ſhew to be made daylye: †this j.Eſd.vj.b ſhalbe geuen vnto them without delaye/that they maye offre ſacrifices daylye to ỹ hyghest God/for the king and for his ſeruauntes/and to praye for theyr lyfes. Let it be proclaymed alſo on euery ſyde/that whoſoeuer breaketh or deſpyſeth this commaundement of the kinge/ſhalbe hanged vpon a galow (made of his owne good) and al his gooodes ſhalbe ſeaſoned vnto the kynge. The Lorde therfore (whoſe name is there called vpon) rote out and deſtroye all the kinges & people/that vndertake by violence to hinder theſame/or to deale vncurteouſly with the houſe of ỹ Lord at Jeruſalē. I Darius the kinge haue ordeyned/that theſe thinges ſhalbe done with all diligence.

The. VII. Chapter.

A Then Syſennes the vnderſhrefe in Celoſyria and Phenices/and the other landlordes with their companyons/obeyed ỹ thinges that kinge Darius had ordeined/were diligent in the holy workes/& where felow helpers with the olde rulers of the Jewes. And ſo the worke of the Sanctuary wente forth & proſpered/whan Aggeus and Zachary prophecied. And they perfourmed all thinges thorow the commaundement of the Lorde God of Iſrael/and after the deuice of Cyrus/Darius/and Artaxerſes kinges of Perſia.

And thus was oure houſe fynyſhed/vnto B
the xxiij. daye of the moneth Addar in the vj. yeare of kinge Darius. And the childrē of Iſrael the prieſtes & the Leuites/& the other that were come out of captiuitie/and ſuch as were ioyned vnto them/dyd accordinge as it is wrytten in the boke of Moſe. And in the dedicacion of the temple they offred an hundreth oxen/an C. rammes iiij. C. lambes/& xij. goates for the ſynnes of all ỹ people of Iſrael/after the nūbre of the trybes of Iſrael. The prieſtes alſo & the Leuites ſtode araied in their prieſtly garmētes after the trybes/ouer all ỹ workes of the Lorde God of Iſrael/accordinge to the boke of Moſes/and the porters by all ỹ dores.

And the children of Iſrael (with thoſe that C were come out of captiuitie) helde the Paſſeouer the xiiij. daye of the fyrſt moneth/whā the prieſtes and the Leuites were ſanctified. They that came out of captiuitie/ were not all ſanctified together: but the Leuites were all ſanctified together. And ſo all they that came out of captiuitie/ killed the Easter lambe for theyr brethren/ for the prieſtes & for them ſelfes. And the children of Iſrael that came out of captiuitie/ and eſcaped from all the abhominacions of the Heythen/ ſought the Lorde/ and kepte the feaſt of vnleuended bread vij. dayes longe/ eatinge and drynkinge/ and were mery before the Lorde: that the Lorde had turned the deuyce of the kynge of Aſſyria/ and cõforted their handes to the workes of the Lorde God of Iſrael.

The. VIII. Chapter.

A j. Eſd. vij. a AND after him/ whan Artaxerſes the kinge of the Perſians raygned/ there wente vnto him Esdras ỹ ſonne of Sarayas/ the ſonne of Azarias/ the ſonne of Helchia/ the ſonne of Sallum/ the ſonne of Sadoc/ the ſonne of Achitob/ the ſonne of Amarias/ the ſonne of Azarias/ the ſonne of Boccus/ the ſonne of Abiſu/ the ſonne of Phineas/ the ſonne of Eleazar/ the ſonne of Aaron the firſt prieſt. This Esdras wente vp from Babylõ (for he had good vnderſtandinge in the lawe of Moſes/ that was geuen of the Lorde God of Iſrael to be taught/ and done in dede.) And the kinge fauoured him/ and dyd him greate worſhippe and honour after all his deſyres. There wente vp with him alſo certayne of the children of Iſrael/ of the prieſtes/ of the Leuites/ of the ſingers/ porters/ and miniſtres of the temple at Jeruſalem.

In the vij. yeare of the raygne of kinge Artaxerſes/ in the v. moneth/ that is in ỹ vij. yeare of the raigne/ they wente from Babylon in the newmoone of the v. moneth/ & came the hye waye to Jeruſalem after his cõmaundement/ lyke as ỹ Lorde had proſpered theyr iourney. For in theſe Esdras gat greate inſtructiõ/ that he ſhoulde leaue none of the thinges behinde/ which were in the lawe and cõmaundementes of God. And he taught whole Iſrael all righteouſnes and iudgement.

Then came the Secretaries of kinge Artaxerſes and deliuered the wrytinges (that were come frõ Artaxerſes the kinge) to Esdras the prieſt/ and reader of the lawe of the Lorde: And this is the copye of the letter: Kinge Artaxerſes ſendeth his greting vnto Esdras the prieſt and reder of the lawe of the Lorde: Of frendſhippe and good will I haue ordeyned and charged/ yf there be any of the Jewes/ of the prieſtes and Leuites in my realme/ which deſyreth/ and is content to go with the vnto Jeruſalem/ that he maye do it. Therfore yf any be minded to beare ỹ company/ let them come togerther/ and go with the/ lyke as I am content and my vij. frendes my counſaylers:) to ſe what they do at Jeruſalem and in Jewry/ and kepe the thinges accordinge as thou haſt in the lawe of the Lorde: and to bringe the giftes vnto God the Lorde of Iſrael/ that B I and my frendes haue promyſed to Jeruſalem/ and all the ſyluer and golde that is in the countrie of Babilon/ vnto the Lorde to Jeruſalem/ with the thinge that is geuen for the people in the Lordes temple at Jeruſalem: Yee/ that theſame ſyluer & golde maye be gathered/ and oxen/ rammes/ ſhepe/ and goates/ and other that belonge to theſe thinges/ and that they maye offer ſacrifices vnto ỹ Lorde/ vpon the aulter of they: Lorde/ which is at Jeruſalem.

And whatſoeuer thou and thy brethrẽ will do with ỹ ſyluer and golde/ that do after thy mynde/ and after the commaundement of the Lorde thy God: and lykewyſe with all the holy veſſels/ that are geuen the for the ſeruyce of the houſe of ỹ Lorde thy God: and other thinges whatſoeuer is neceſſary for the to the worke of the temple of thy God/ that ſhalbe geuen the of ỹ kynges treaſure: and loke what thou with thy brethrẽ wilt do with the golde and ſyluer/ that do after the will of the Lord. And I kinge Artaxerſes haue commaunded the kepers of the treaſures in Syria and Phenices/ that whatſoeuer Esdras the prieſt and reder of the lawe of the Lorde doeth wryte it ſhalbe geuen him: till an C. talentes of ſyluer/ and of golde in like maner: Of corne alſo an C. meaſures/ and tyll an hundreth veſſels of wyne/ & other plenteous thinges without numbre. Let all thinges be done after the lawe of the hygheſt God/ that the wrath of God aryſe not in the realme of the kinge and of his ſonnes. I cõmaunde you alſo/ that ye require no taxinge nor tribute of the prieſtes/ Leuites/ ſyngers/

ſyngers/ and miniſtres of the temple/ nor of the wryters/ and that no man haue auctorite to medle any thynge agaynſt them. As for the (O Esdras) ſet thou iudges/ and arbitrers in the whole lande of Syria and Phenices/ after the wyſdome of God: and learne all ſuch as are ignorant in the lawe of God thy Lorde: and let all them that offende agaynſt the lawe/ be punyſhed: whether it be with death/ with payne/ to be condemned in money/ or to banyſhed.

Then ſayde Esdras the wryter: Bleſſed be the God of oure fathers/ that hath geuen ſo good a minde & will into the hert of the kinge/ to magnifie his houſe that is at Jeruſalem/ and hath made me to be accepted in the ſyght of the kynge/ of his counſayll/ of his frendes/ and of his nobles. And ſo I was ſtedfaſt in my mynde/ accordinge as the Lord my God C helped me/ and I choſe out men of Iſrael/ to j. Eſd. viij. a go vp with me. † And theſe are the heades (after their kinredes/ and houſes of their fathers) that wente vp with me from Babylon/ out of the kingdom of Artaxerſes: Of the ſonnes of Pharez/ Gerſonius. Of the ſonnes of Phares/ Zachary: & with him there turned agayne an hundreth & fiftie men. Of the ſonnes of the captayne of Moabilon/ Zaraci/ and with him ij. C. and l. men. Of the ſonnes of Adonicam thoſe that were the laſt/ and theſe are their names: Eliphalãm the ſonne of Gebel & Semeias/ and with him lxx. men. All theſe called I together by the water Thia/ where we pitched oure tentes thre dayes/ and there I muſtered them.

I. Eſd. viij. a † As for the ſonnes of the prieſtes & Leuites/ I founde none there. Then ſent I vnto Eleazar/ and Ecclom/ and Maſmã/ and Malobam/ and Enaathan/ and Samea/ and Joribimathan/ Eunagan/ Zachary Moſollamum (theſe were the leders and men of experience) & I ſent them worde/ that they ſhoulde come vnto Loddeus/ which was by the place of the treaſury/ and commaunded them that they ſhoulde ſpeake vnto Loddeus and to his brethren/ and to thoſe that were in the treaſury/ to ſende vs ſuch men/ as might execute ỹ prieſtes office in the houſe of ỹ Lord oure God. And with the mighty hande of oure Lorde God/ they brought vnto vs men of good experience/ from amonge the ſonnes of Mooſius/ the ſonne of Leui/ ỹ ſonne of Iſrael/ Sebeiam and the ſonnes and his brethren Asbin/ and Anim/ of whome there where xviij. From amonge the children of the ſonnes of Cananeus/ and their ſonnes were xx. mẽ. And of them that ſerued in the tẽple/ whome Sauid had ordeyned/ and the principal men that miniſtred for the worke vnto the Leuites in ỹ temple ij. C. and xx. men: whoſe names are all tokened vp in wrytinge.

† Then commaunded I a faſtinge vnto the yonge men before the Lorde/ that I myght j. Eſd. viij. e deſyre of him a proſperous iourney/ & a good waye for vs/ yea for vs/ for oure children/ and for the cattell/ becauſe of the layinges wayte: and I durſt not require of the kinge horſmen and fotemen/ to conueye vs ſafely againſt oure enemies/ for we had ſayde vnto the kinge/ that the power of the Lorde oure God ſhoulde be with them/ that ſeke him with their whole hert. And therfore we beſought God oure Lorde earneſtly becauſe of theſe thinges/ and he was mercifull vnto vs/ and herde oure prayer. And I ſeparated from amonge the rulers of the people/ and from the prieſtes of the temple xij. men/ and Sebeia/ and Aſania and ten men of their brethren with them. And I wayed them the golde and the ſyluer/ and all the prieſtly ornamentes of the houſe of our God/ which the kynge and his counſayll/ and his princes/ and whole Iſrael had geuen. And whan I had wayed it/ I gaue them an C. and l. talentes in ſyluer/ an C. talentes of ſyluer veſſel/ an C. talentes of golde/ and of golden veſſel ſeuen tymes twenty/and vessels of other metall (yce/ of good metall) with glisteringe as the golde/and sayde vnto them: ye also are holy vnto the Lorde/ and the vessels are holy/ and the golde and the syluer is promysed vnto the Lorde the God of our fathers. Be diligent now/and kepe it/ vntill the tyme that ye delyuer it to the rulers of the people/ to the priestes/ to the Leuites/ and to the principall men of the cities of Israel in Jerusalem/ and in the chaumbre of the house of oure God.

E †So the priestes and the Leuites which receaued of me the golde/ the syluer/ and the
j. Esd. viij d vessel/brought into Jerusalem into the temple of the Lorde. And from the ryuer Thia we brake vp the xij. daye of the fyrst moneth tyll we came to Jerusalem. And whan the thyrde daye was past/the weyed golde & syluer was delyuered in the house of ỹ Lorde the fourth daye/ vnto Marimoth the sonne of Jor the priest/ and with him was Eleazar the sonne of Phineas/ and with them were Josabdus the sonne of Jesnet. Medias and the sonne of Banus/& certayne of ỹ Leuites to the numbre and to the wayght: and the wayght of them was written vp thesame tyme. As for those that were come out of captiuitie/ they offred sacrifice vnto the Lorde the God of Israel: euen xij. oxen for all Israel/ lxxxvj. rammes/ lxxij. shepe/ xij. goates for synne/ xij. kine for a thankeofferinge/al to the sacrifice of the Lorde. And the kynges commission delyuered they vnto the stewardes/ and debytes of the kinge/ and to the vndershrefes in Celosyria/ and Phenices.

j. Esd. ix. a †Now whan these thinges were done/ the rulers came vnto me/and sayde: The generacion of Israel/the princes/ the priestes & Leuites/the straunge people/and indwellers of the lande/ haue not put awaye their vncleanesse/ from the Cananites/ Hethites/ Pheresites/ from the Moabites/ Egypcians/ and Edomites. For both they and theyr sonnes haue mengled them selfes with the doughters of thē/ & the holy sede is mixte with the outlandysh Heythen/and sens the begynninge of theyr raygne/haue the rulers and heades bene partakers of their wickednesse.

As soone as I had herde these thinges/immediatly I rent my holy garmētes/ and pulled out the heere of my heade & my beerd/ and sat me downe sorowfull and heauy. So al they that were moued thorow ỹ worde of the God of Israel/came vnto me: and I sat still full of heauynes vntyll the euenynge sacrifice. Then stode I vp from fastynge/ hauinge rente clothes and the holy garment/ kneled downe vpō my knees/ helde out my hādes vnto ỹ Lord/ and sayde: O Lorde/ I am confounded and f ashamed before thy face/for oure sinnes are become many vpon oure heades/ and our wickednesses are exalted vnto the heauen: for sens the tyme of our fathers we are in greate synne vnto this daye. And for the synnes of vs and our fathers/ we with oure brethren and with oure priestes haue bene delyuered vnto the kinges of the earth/ into the swearde/ and into the captiuitie/ and became a spoyle with confusion & shame vnto this daye. And now O Lorde God/ how greate is the mercy that we haue gotten of the? in that thou hast left vs a rote and a name in the place of thy Sanctuary/ to discouer our light in the house of the Lorde our God/ and geuen vs meate at all tymes of our ministracion. And whan we were in captiuitie/ we were not forsaken of the Lorde oure God: but he made the kinges of Persia gracious and fauourable vnto vs/ so that they gaue vs vytayles and meate/ yee/ & leaue to builde vp the temple of oure Lorde God agayne/to repayre the wayfred places of Syon/and to dwell in Jewry and Jerusalem. And now O Lorde/what shall we saye/ hauynge all these thynges in possession? For we haue broken thy cōmaundementes/ which thou ganest vnto vs by the handes of thy seruauntes the prophetes/ sayinge: The lande that ye go vnto/ and that is geuen you for an heretage to haue in possession/ is defyled with the vnclennes and fylthynes of the Heythen/ and with theyr abhominacion haue they polluted it altogether. † Therfore shall ye not Deut. vij ioyne youre doughters vnto their sonnes/ nor and xxiij marry your sōnes vnto their doughters: Moreouer/ ye shall neuer seke to make peace with them/ that ye may increace and eate the best in the lande/ and that ye maye deuide the inheritaunce of the lande vnto your childrē for euermore. As for the thinge that now happeneth vnto vs/ it commeth all for our wicked workes and greate synnes/ yet haste thou geuen vs suche a rote/ that we are come againe into oure owne lande: and we are so wicked/ that we haue broken thy statutes and commaundementes againe/& mengled our selfes with the vncleanes of ỹ outlandish Heythē. O Lord/art thou angry with vs? wilt thou rote vs cleane out? that oure rote & name remain no more? O Lord God of Israel/thou art true/for oure rote endureth yet vnto this present daye. And beholde/now are we before the in oure synnes/ nowe can we not stande before the in them.

G †And whan Esdras with this prayer had
Esd. x. a knowleged the synne/ wepinge/ and lyenge flat vppon the grounde before the temple/ there gathered vnto hym from Jerusalem a greate multitude of men and womē/of yonge men and maydens/ for there was a very greate wepinge and mourninge in the cōgregacion. So whan Jechonias the sonne Jehely one of the chyldren of Israell cryed/ he sayde vnto Esdras: we haue synned agaynst the Lorde/ because we haue maryed outlandishe womē of the Heythē. Now art thou ouer all Israel. We wyll sweare an ooth therfore vnto ỹ Lord/that we shal put awaye all oure wyfes whiche we haue taken of the Heythen with theyr chyldren lyke as it is appoynted the by oure forcelders. Stande vp then/ open thou it and declare it playnely vnto vs/ accordinge to the lawe of the Lorde: for the matter belongeth vnto the/ and we wyll helpe the/ quyte thy selfe manly. So Esdras arose/ and toke an ooth of the rulers of the priestes/ and of the Leuytes and of all Israell/to do after these thynges/ and they sware.

The IX. Chapter.

A THen Esdras stode vp from the courte of Esd. x. b the temple without/ and wente into the chaumber of Jonathas the sonne of Nasabus/and remayned there/ and ate no meate nor dranke drynke/ for the multitude of the wickednes of ỹ people. And there was made a proclamacion in al Jewry and at Jerusalē/ for al such as were gathered at Jerusalem out of captiuitie/that whosoeuer came not to Jerusalem within two or three dayes (according to the iudgment of the olde lordes of the cōsaill) his goddes shoulde be taken from him/ and he excluded from the congregacion of the captiuitie. And in thre dayes were al they of ỹ tribe of Juda/& Ben Jamin gathered together at Jerusalē/the xx. daie of the ix. moneth. And the whole multitude sat tremblinge in ỹ courte of the temple/ for it was wynter. So Esdras arose vp/ and sayde vnto them: ye haue done vnrightcously/ in that ye haue taken outlandishe wyfes to marriage/ and so to increace the synnes of Israell. And nowe knowlege thesame/ and geue prayse vnto the Lorde God of oure fathers/ and perfourme his wyll/ departinge from the Heythen of the lande/ and from the outlandishe wyfes. Then cryed the whole multitude with loude voyce/ and sayde: lyke as thou hast spoken/ so wyll we do: But for so muche as the S people are many/ and the wynter here/ we maye not stande without the house: agayne/ this worke is not a thinge that can be finysshed in a daye or two/ for we be many that haue synned in these thinges: Ordeyne therfore/ that the rulers of the multitude and all they that dwell with vs/ & as many as haue outlandishe wyfes/ the priestes also/ and iudges of euery place/ maye stande in the tyme appoynted/ tyl they louse vp the wrath of the Lord in this busynes.

Then Jonathas the sonne of Ezeli/ and Ozias/ and Thecam receaued the charge of this matter/ and Bozoramus/ and Leius/ and Sabatheus helped them therto. After this/ all they stode vp that were come oute of captiuitye. And Esdras the priest chose vnto him the principall men from amonge the fathers/accordinge to theyr names/and in the new moone of the tenth moneth they sat together to examen this matter. And so the matter was a determynge (concerninge the men that had outlandishe wyfes) vntyll the new moone of the fyrste moneth. And of the priestes that had myxte them selfes with outlandyshe wyfes/ there were founde: †Of
j. Esd. x. d the sonnes of Jesu the sonne of Josedec and his brethren/ Mazeas/ Eleazer/ Joribus and Joadeus/ which offred them selfes to put awaye theyr wyfes/ and to offre a ramme for theyr ignorance. And of the sonnes of Semmeri/ Masseas/ and Esses/ and Jeelech/

And of Israel / of the chyldren of Foro / Osy and Remias / and Geddias and Melchias / Michelus / Eleazarus / Jemmebias and Bannas. And of the chyldren of Jolaman / Chanias / Zachary / Jetzrelus / Joddius / Erimoth and Elias. And of the sonnes of Jathoim. Eliadas / Liasamus / and Jochias / Karimoth / Sabdis and Tebedias. And of the sonnes of Zebes / Johannes / Amanias / Zabdias and Emeus. And of the sonnes of Bannus / Olammus / Maluchus / Jeddus / Jasub / Asabus and Jerimoth. And of the sonnes of Addin / Naatus and Mooſias and Caleus / and Raanas / Maasuas / Mathathias / Besel / Bannus and Manasses.

And of the sonnes of Naue / Nones / Aseas / Melchias / Sameas / Simon / Ben Jamin / Malchus and Marras. And of the sonnes of Asom / Carianeus / Mathathias / Bannus / Eliphalach / Manasses / Semey. Of the sonnes of Nobeus / Idelus / Mathathias / Sabadus / Zecheda / Sedmi Jesseus and Baneas. All these had taken outlandish women to marriage / and they put them awaye with theyr chyldren.

The prieſtes and Leuites / and al they that were of Israel / dwelt at Jerusalem and thorowout al the lande / in the new moone of the
S seuenth moneth / and the chyldren of Israell
ij. Esd. viija were in their dwellynges. † And the whole multitude came together vpon the floore at the East syde of the holy porte of the temple. And they spake vnto Esdras the hie prieste & reder / that he wolde brynge the lawe of Moses / whiche was geuen of the Lorde God of Israel. So Esdras the hye priest broughte the lawe vnto the whole multitude / to man and woman / and to all prieſtes / ỹ they might heare the lawe / in ỹ new moone of the seuēth moneth. And he red in the floore / that is before the holy porte of the temple / frō the morninge early vntyll the eueninge / before men and women. And they applied theyr mynde all vnto the lawe.

And Esdras the prieste and reder of the lawe stode vp vpō a scaffolde of wood / which was made therfore: and vppon his righte hande there stode by hym Mathathias / Samus / Ananias / Azarias / Urias / Ozechias / & Balsamus: Vpon his lefte hande stode Faldeus / Misael / Malachias / Abuschas / Sabus / Nabadias and Zachary. Then toke Esdras the boke before ỹ whole multitude / for he was the principall / and had in mooſt honoure of them all. And whan he had red oute the law / they stode all straight vp vpon theyr fete. So Esdras prayſed the Lorde the mooſte hye God / the Almightye God of hooſtes. And all the people aunswered / Amen: and helde
E vp theyr handes: fell doune flat vppon the earth / and prayſed the Lorde: Jesus / Beneas / Sarebias / Jaddimus / Accubus / Sabbatheus / Calithes / Azarias / Joradus / Ananias / and Philias the Leuites whiche taught the lawe of the Lorde / and red the lawe of the Lorde in the congregacion / and euery man set thoſe before that vnderstode the law. Then spake Atharathes vnto Esdras the hye priest and reder / & to the Leuites that taught the multitude / sayinge: This daye is holy vnto the Lorde: and all they that herde the law / wepte. So Esdras sayde: † Separte youre ij Esdr. ix. ỹ waye then / and eate the best / and drynke the sweteſt / and sende giftes vnto them that haue nothinge: for this daye is holy vnto ỹ Lorde / and be not ye sory. Then wente they their waye euerychone / and dyd eate and drynke / and were mery / and send rewardes vnto thē that had nothinge / that they also myght eate with gladneſſe: for they were exceadingly reioyced / thorowe the wordes that were red vnto them in the lawe: And so they were all gathered together at Jerusalem to hold the feaſt / accordinge to the conuenaunt of the Lorde God of Israel.

But whan I came vnto them/they set me at

O ye Heithen / that heare and vnderstande:
Loke for youre shepeherde/he shall geue you

Syr/what are these: He aunswered and said vnto me: These be they / that haue put of the mortall clothinge/and put on the immortall/and haue testifyed and knowleged the name of God. Now are they crouned / and receaue
the rewarde.

Then sayd I vnto the aungel: what yonge
persone is it that crouneth them/and geueth them the palmes in theyr handes? So he aū-swered and sayde vnto me: It is the sonne of God/whome they haue knowleged in the worlde. Then beganne I greatly to cōmende thy God thou hast sene.

The. III. Chapter.

IN the thirtie yeare of the fal of the citie/I A was at Babylon/and lay troubled vpon my bed/and my thoughtes came vp ouer my herte: for I sawe the desolacion of Sion/ and the plenteous wealth of them that dwelt at Babilon: and my spirite was sore moued/ so that I beganne to speake fearfull wordes to the moost hyest/and sayde: O Lorde Lord thou spakest at the begynninge / whan thou spakest at the begynninge/whan thou plantedest the earth (and that thy selfe alone) & gauest commaundement vnto the people / and a body vnto Adam/which was a creature of thy handes/ † and haste brethed in hym the Gene. ij. b breth of lyfe: and so he lyued before the / and thou leddest him into paradyse/which garden of pleasure thy righthande had planted/ or

euer

uer the earthe was made. And vnto hym thou gauest commaundement to loue thy waye/which he transgressed/and immediatly thou appoyntest death in hym/and in his generacions. Of hym came nacions/trybes/
Gen.vj.b people and kynredes out of numbre. † And euery people walked after their owne wyll/ and haue done wonderfull thinges before the/and as for thy commaundementes/they despysed them.

B But in processe of tyme thou broughtest
Gene.vij.b the water floud/vpon those that dwelt in the worlde/and destroyest them. And like as the death was in Adam/so was the water floude also in these. Neuertheles/one of thē thou lefte:namely/Noe w his housholde/of whome come al righteous mē. And it happened that whā they that dwelt vpon the earth/begāne to multiplye/and had gotten many children/ and were a greate people/they beganne to be more vngodly then the fyrst.

Now whan they al lyued so wickedly before Ge.xij.xv. the/† thou diddest chose the a mā from amōge them/whose name was Abram. Him thou loucdest/& vnto him onely thou shewdest thy wyl/and maydest an euerlastinge conuenaūt with him/promisinge him/that thou woldest
Gen.xxj.a neuer forsake his sede. † And vnto him thou
gen.xx.c gauest Isaac/ vnto Isaac also thou gauest †ge.xxxj.a Jacob and Esau. † As for Jacob thou dydest chose him/and put backe Esau. And so Jacob became a greate multitude.

And it happened that whan thou leddest
Exod.xix.a his sede out of Egypte/† thou broughtest thē
.ut.iiij.b vp to the mount Syna/bowinge doune the heauens/settinge fast the earth/mouinge the grounde/makynge the depthes to shake/and troublinge the worlde: And thy glory wente thorow foure portes of fyre/and earth quakes and wyndes/and colde: that thou mightest geue the law vnto the sede of Jacob/and diligence vnto the generacion of Israel.

And yet tokest thou not awaye from them that wicked hert/that thy lawe myght bringe forth frute in them. For the fyrst Adam bare a wicked herte/transgressed/and was ouercome/and so be al they that are borne of him.
Rom.viij.a † Thus remayned weakenes with the lawe in the herte of the people/with the wickednesse of the rote/so that the good departed awaye/ and the euell abode still. So the tymes passed awaye/and the yeares were broughte to an ende. † Thē diddest thou rayse the vp a ser- j.Reg.
uaunt called Dauid/whome thou commaū- ij.Reg.
dest to builde a citie vnto thy name/and to offre vp incence and sacrifice vnto the therein. This was done now many yeares.

Then the inhabiters of the citie forsoke the/ D and in all thinges dyd euen as Adam and al his generacions had done: for they also had a wicked hert. And so thou gauest thy citie ouer into the handes of thine enemies. Are they of Babilon then better and more rightcous thē thy people/that they shal therfore haue the dominion of Sion? For whan I came there/ and sawe their vngodlynes/and so great wickednesse/that it coulde not be numbred: yee/ whan my soule sawe so many euell doers (in the xxx.yeare) my hert failed me/for I sawe/ how thou suffrest them in suche vngodlines/ and sparest the wicked doers: But thine owne people hast thou roted out/& preserued thine enemies/& this hast thou not shewed me.

I can not perceaue how this happeneth. E
So they of Babilon then better then they of Sion? Or is there any other people that knoweth the/sauynge the people of Israell? Or what generacion hath so beleued thy conuenauntes/as Jacob? And yet their rewarde appeareth not/& their labour hath no frute/ For I haue gone here and there thorowe the Heithē/and I se/that they be rych and wealthy/and thinke not vpon thy commaundemētes. Weye thou therfore oure wickednesse nowe in the balaunce/& theirs also that dwel in the worlde/and so shall thy name be nowhere found but in Israel. Or where is there a people vpon earth/that hath not synned before the? Or what people hath so kept thy commaundementes? Thou shalt fynde/that Israel by name hath kepte thy preceptes/but not the other people and Heithen.

The IIII. Chapter.

AND the aungel that was sente vnto me A (whose name was Uriell) gaue me aunswere/and sayde: Thy herte hath taken to muche vpon it in this worlde/and thou thinkest to comprehende the way of the Hyghest. Then said I: ye my lorde. And he aunswered me/& saide: I am sent to shew the thre waies/ and to set forth thre similitudes before the: wherof if thou canst declare me one/I wyll shewe the also the wayes that thou desyrest to se/and I shal shewe the frō whence the wicked hert commeth. And I sayde: tell on my Lord. Then sayde he vnto me: Go thy way/ weye me the weight of fyre/ or measure me the blast of the wynde/ or call me againe the daye that is past. Thē aunswered I and said: What man borne is able to do that? Why requirest thou such of me? And he sayde vnto me: If I shoulde axe the/how depe dwellinges are in the see: Or how great water springes are vpon the firmament? Or how greate water springes are in the beginninge of the depe? Or which are the outgoyinges of Paradise? Peraduenture thou woldest saie vnto me: I neuer wente doune yet into the depe nor in hell/neyther dyd I euer clymme vp into heauen. Neuertheless/ nowe haue I axed the but onely of fyre and wynde/& of the day/ where thorow thou hast trauayled/and from the which thou canst not be separated: and yet canst thou geue me no aunswere of them.

B He saide moreouer vnto me: Thine owne thinges/and such as are growē vp with the/ canst thou not knowe: how shoulde thy vessel then be able to comprehende the waye of the hyghest/and now outwardly in the corrupte worlde/to vnderstande the corrupcyon: that is euydent in my syght? Then sayde I vnto him: It were better that we were not at all/ then that we should lyue in wickednesse/and to suffre/and not to knowe wherfore. He aunswered me/and sayde: I wente in a woode/ and the trees toke such a deuyce and sayde:
dic.ij.b † Come let vs go/and fyght agaynste the see/
ar.xxxc that it maye departe away before vs/and that we maye make vs yet more woodes.

The floudes of the see also in like maner toke
this deuice/and said: Come/let vs go vp/and fyght against the trees of the wood/ that we may make our lande the wyder. The thought and deuice of the wood was but vaine & nothinge worth/for the fyre came and cōsumed the wood: The thought of the floudes of the see came likewyse to naught also/for the sande stode vp and stopped them.

C If thou were iudge nowe betwixte these two/whome woldest thou iustifye/or whome woldest thou cōdemne? I aunswered & said: Verely it is a foolish thought that they both haue deuysed. For the grounde is geuen vnto the wood/and the see also hath his place to beare his floudes. Then aunswered he me & sayde: Thou hast geuen a right iudgemente/ why iudgest thou not thy selfe also? For lyke as the grounde is geuen vnto the wood/and the see to his floudes: † euen so they that dwel Esa.lv.c vpon earth/maye vnderstande nothinge/but Joha. iij.c
that whiche is vpon earth: and he that dwel- ij.Cor.ij b leth aboue the heauens/maye onely vnderstande the thinges that are aboue the heaues. Then aunswered I and sayde: I beseche the (O Lord) let me haue vnderstandinge: for it was not my minde to be curious of the hie thinges/but of suche as we dayly medle with all: namely/wherfore that Israel is blasphemed of the Heythen/and for what cause the people (whome thou euer hast loued) is geuē ouer/to be punished of vngodly nacions: and why the lawe of oure fathers is broughte to naught/and the written conuenauntes come to none affecte/and we passe awaye out of the worlde as the gresshoppers/and oure life is a very feare/and we are not worthy to optaine mercy. What wyl he do then vnto his name/ which is called vpon/ouer vs: Of these thinges haue I axed question.

Then aunswered he me and sayde: The D more thou searchest/the more thou shalt maruaill/for the worlde hasteth fast to passe away/ and can not comprehende the thinges that are promised for the righteous in time to come/ † for this worlde is full of vnrighteousnesse j.Joh.v.c and weakenes.

But as concerninge the thinges whereof thou axest me/I wyl tell the. The euell is sowē/but the destruccio therof is not yet come. If the euel now that is sowen/be not turned vpsyde doune/and if the place where the euell is sowen/passe not awaye/then can not the thing come that is sowen with the good. For the corne of euell sede hath bene sowen in the herte of man from the beginnynge/and how much vngodlynes hath he broughte vp vnto this tyme: and how much shal he yet bringe forth/vntyl he come into the barne?

Pondre nowe by thy selfe/whan the corne E
of euel sede is cut doune/how greate a barne

shall

shal it fyll: I aunswered and sayde: Howe/& whan shall these thinges come to passe? Wherfore are oure yeares few and euel? And he aunswered me/sayinge: Haist not thou to much vpon the Hyest/for thy haystynes to be aboue him is but in vayne/thou makest to muche a do. Dyd not the soules also of the righteous are question of these thinges in their holynes sayinge: Howe longe shall I hope of this fashion? Whan commeth the frute of my barne/and my rewarde? And vpon this Jeremiel the archaungel gaue them Apoc. vj. b aunswere/and sayde: †Euen whan the numbre of the sedes is fylled in you: for he hath weyed the worlde in the balaunce: in measure and numbre hath he measured the tyme/and moued it not/vntyll the same measure be fulfylled. Then aunswered I and sayde: O Lorde Lorde/now are we al ful of synne/and for oure sake peraduenture it is not/that the barne of the ryghteous shall not be fylled/because of the synnes of them that dwell vpon earth.

F So he aunswered me/and sayde: Go thy waye to a woman with chylde/and axe her when she hath fulfilled her ix. monethes/if her childes bed maye kepe the byrth any longer within her. Then sayde I: No Lorde/that can she not. And he sayde vnto me: In hell the secrete places of soules are lyke the preuy chaumber of a woman. For lyke as a woman that trauayleth/maketh haist/whan the tyme & necessyte of the byrth is at hande: Euen so doeth she haist to delyuer it that is committed vnto her. Loke what thou desyrest to se/it shalbe shewed the from the beginninge. Then aunswered I and sayde: If I haue founde fauoure in thy syghte/and if it be possible/and if I be mete therfore/shew me then/whether there be more to come then is past/or more past then is for to come. What is past/I knowe: but what is for to come/I knowe not.

G And he saide vnto me: Stande vp vpon ỹ rightsyde/and I shall expoũde the similitude vnto the. So I stode/and beholde/an whote burnynge ouen wente ouer before me: and it happened that whan the flame was gone by/the smoke had the vpperhande. After this there wente ouer before me a watery cloude/and sente doune muche rayne with a stormet and whan the stormy rayne was paste/the droppes remayned still. Then sayde he vnto me: lyke as the rayne is more then the droppes/and as the fyre exceadeth the smoke/euen so the measure of the thinges that are paste/hath the vpperhande. Then wente the droppes and the smoke aboue: and I prayed and sayde: Maye I lyue (thynkest thou) vntyll that tyme? Or what shall happen in those dayes? He aunswered me/and sayde: As for the tokens wherof thou axest me/I maye tell the of them in a parte: but as touchinge thy lyfe/I maye not shewe the/for I am not sent therfore.

The. V. Chapter.

NEuerthelesse/as concerning the tokens/I marke this: Behold/the dayes shal come that they whiche dwell vpon earth/shalbe taken in a great numbre/and the waye of the trueth shalbe hyd/and the lande shalbe baren from faith: †But iniquyte shall haue the vpperhande/lyke as thou hast sene now/and as mat. xxiiij thou hast herde longe ago. And the land that thou seyst now to haue rule/shalt thou shortly se waist. But if God graunte the to lyue/thou shalt se after the thirde trompet/that the Sunne shal sodenly shyne again in ỹ nyght/and the Moone thre tymes in the daye/and blond shall droppe out of wood/and the stone shall geue his voyce/and the people shalbe vnquiete: and euen he shall rule/whome they hope not that dwell vpon earth/and the foules shall flut/and the Sodomitish see shal cast out his fysh/and make a noyse in the nyghte/which many shall not knowe/but they shall all heare the voyce therof.

H There shalbe a confusion also in many places/and the fyre shalbe oft sente agayne/and the wylde beastes shal go they: waye/& menstreous women shal beare monsters/and salt waters shalbe found in the swete: one frende shal fyght againste another: then shal all wyt and vnderstandinge be hyd and put aside into their secrete places/and shalbe soughte of many/and yet not be founde: then shall vnrighteousnesse and volupteousnesse haue the vpperhande vpon earth. One lande also shall axe another/and say: Is righteousnesse gone thorowe the? And it shall saye: Nay. At the same same tyme shall men hope/but nothinge optayne: they shall labour/but their wayes shall not prospere.

To shewe the such tokens I haue leue/and if thou wilt praye agayne/and wepe as now/and fast seuen dayes/thou shalt heare yet greater thinges. Then I awaked/and a fearfulnes wente thorow all my body/& my mynde was feble and carefull/so that I almost swouned withall. So the aungel that was come to talke with me/helde me/comforted me/and set me vp vpon my fete.

I And in the seconde night it happened/that Salathiel the captayne of the people came vnto me/sayinge: Where hast thou bene? and why is thy countenaunce so heauy? Knowest thou not that Israel is committed vnto the/in the lande of their captiuitie? Vp then/and eate/and forsake vs not/as the shepeherde that leaueth his flock in the handes of wicked wolfes. Then sayde I vnto him: Go thy waye fro me/and come not nye me: and he herde it: and as I sayde/so went he his way fro me. And so I fasted seuen dayes/mourninge and wepynge/like as Uriel the aungel commaũded me. And after seuẽ dayes it happened/that the thoughtes of my hert were very greuous vnto me agayne/and my soule receaued the spirete of vnderstandinge/and I begãne to talke with the moost hyghest agayne and sayde: O Lord Lorde/of euery wood of the earth and of all the trees therof/thou hast chosen the one onely vyneyarde: and of al lãdes of ỹ whole worlde/thou hast chosen the one pyt: and of all flources of the grounde/thou hast chosen the one lylie: and of all the dephtes of the see/thou haste filled the one ryuer: and of al buylded cities thou hast halowed Sion vnto thy self: and of all the foules that are created/thou hast named the one doue: and of all the cattell that are made/thou hast prouided the one shepe: and amonge all the multitudes of folkes/thou hast gotten the one people/and vnto this people whome thou louedest/thou gauest a lawe/that is proued of all.

K And now O Lorde/why hast thou geuen this one people ouer vnto many? and vpon the one rote thou hast prepared other/and why hast thou scatred thy one only people amonge many? which treade thẽ doune/yee/which haue euer withstande thy promises/and neuer beleued thy conuenauntes? And though thou werest enemye vnto thy people/yet shouldest thou punysh them with thine owne handes. Now whan I had spoken these wordes/the aungell that came to me the night afore/was sent vnto me/and saide vnto me: Heare me/and herken to the thinge that I saye/& I shall tell ỹ more. And I sayde: Speake on my Lorde. Then saide he vnto me: Thou art sore vexed & troubled for Israels sake. Louest thou the people better thẽ him that made them? And I sayde: No Lord/but of very grefe and compassion haue I spoken. For my raynes payne me euery houre/because I wolde haue experience of the waye of the moost hyghest/& to seke out parte of his iudgement. And he saide vnto me: that thou maiest not. And I said wherfore Lord? Whereunto was I born then? Or why was not my mothers childes bed then my graue? So had I not sene the mysery & trouble of Jacob/and the trauayle of my people of Israel.

L And he saide vnto me: Nũbre me the thinges that are not yet come: gather me together the droppes that are scatred abroade: make me the floures grene agayne that are wythered: open me the thinge that is closed: and bringe me forth the windes that are shut vp. Shewe me the image of a voyce/and then shall I declare ỹ ỹ thing that thou laboures to knowe. And I sayde: O Lorde Lorde/who maye knowe these thinges/but he that hath not his dwelling with mẽ? As for me/I am vnwyse: how maye I then speake of these thinges/wherof thou axest me? Thẽ sayde he vnto me: like as thou canst do none of these thinges ỹ I haue spokẽ of/Euen so canst thou not fynde out my iudgement/or in the ende the loue that I haue promysed vnto my people. And I sayde: Beholde o Lord/yet art thou nye vnto them that haue no ende: and what shall they do that haue bene before me/or we ỹ be now/or they that shall come after vs? And he sayde vnto me: I will lyken my iudgement vnto a rynge. Like as there is no slackenesse of ỹ laste/euen so is there no swiftnesse of the first. So I aunswered and sayde: Couldest thou not make those (that haue bene made/and that be now/& that are for to come) in one/that thou mightest shewe thy iudgement the sooner?

Then aunswered he me and saide: The creature maye not haist aboue the maker/ neyther maye the worlde holde thē at once/ that shalbe created.

And I sayde: How hast thou sayde then vnto thy seruaunt/ that thou lyuinge maker hast made the creature lyuinge at once/ & the creature bare it? euen so mighte it now also beare them that be present at once. And he sayde vnto me: Axe the childesbed of a womā/ and saye vnto her: If thou bringest forth children/ why doest thou it not together/ but one after another? Praye her therfore/ to bringe forth ten children at once. And I sayde: she cannot/ but must do it one after another.

Then sayde he vnto me: Euen so haue I genen a childesbed vnto the earth/ for those that be soune vpon it by processe of tyme. For like as a yonge childe maye not bringe forth the thinges that belonge to the aged/ euen so haue I ordeyned the worlde which I made.

G And I axed and sayde: Seyng thou hast now geuen me a waye/ I will speake before ꝑ: for our mother of whome thou hast tolde me/ is yet yonge/ & now she draweth nie vnto age. He aunswered me & saide: Axe a womā ꝑ beareth childrē/ & she shall tell the. Saye vnto her: wherfore are not they (whome thou hast now brought forth) like those that were before the/ but lesse of stature? And she shall aūswere the: They that be borne in ꝑ youth of strēgth/ are of one fashion: & they that are borne in ꝑ tyme of age (whā ꝑ childesbed fayleth) are otherwyse. Considre now thy self/ how ꝑ ye are lesse of stature/ thē those ꝑ were before you/ & so are they that come after you/ lesse then ye/ as ꝑ creatures which now beginne to be old/ & haue passed ouer the strength of youth. Then saide I: Lorde I beseche ꝑ/ if I haue founde fauoure in thy sight/ shewe thy seruaunt/ by whome doest thou vyset thy creature?

The VI. Chapter.

A AND he sayde vnto me: In the beginninge whan the grounde was made/ before the worlde stode/ or euer the wyndes blew/ before it thondreth and lightened/ or euer the foundacions of Paradyse were layed/ before the fayre floures were sene/ or euer ꝑ moueable powers were stablished/ before the innumerable multitudes of aungels were gathered together/ or euer the hyghnesses of the ayre were lifted vp/ afore the measures of the firmament were named/ or euer the chimneys in Sion were hote/ & or the present yeares were sought out/ and or euer the inuencions of them that now synne/ were put asyde/ before they were sealed ꝑ now gather faith for a treasure: then did I considre and pondre all these thinges/ and they all were made thorow me/ & thorow none other: by me also they be ended/ and by none other.

Then aunswered I and sayd: which shalbe the parting asunder of the tymes? Or whan shalbe the ende of the first/ and the beginnyng of it that foloweth? And he sayde vnto me: From Abraham vnto Isaac/ whā Jacob and Esau were borne of him/ Jacobs hande helde fyrst the hele of Esau: for Esau is the ende of this worlde/ and Jacob is the begynninge of it that foloweth. The hande of man betwixte the hele and the hande. Other question (Esdras) axe thou not.

I aunswered then and sayde: O Lorde ꝑ Lord/ if I haue founde fauoure in thy sight/ I beseche the/ shewe thy seruaunte the ende of thy tokens/ wherof thou shewdest me parte ꝑ last night. So he aunswered & saide vnto me: Stande vp vpō thy fete/ and heare the perfecte voyce and sounde. There shall come a greate mocion/ but the place where thou stādest shall not be moued: And therfore whan thou hearest the wordes/ be not afrayed: for of the ende shall the worde and foundacion of the earth be vnderstande. And why? ꝑ worde therof trembleth and quaketh/ for it knoweth that it muste be chaūged at the ende. And it happened/ that whan I had herde it/ I stode vp vpō my fete and herkened: and beholde/ there was a voyce that spake/ and the sounde of it was like the sounde of many waters/ and it sayde. Behold/ the dayes come/ that I wil begynne to drawe nye/ and to vysed them that dwell vpon earth/ and will begynne to make inquisicion of thē/ what they be that haue hurte equite with vnrighteousnes/ and whan the lowe estate of Sion shalbe fulfilled: and whan the worlde/ that shal vanish awaye/ shalbe ouerscaled/ then will I do these tokens.

C The bokes shalbe opened before the firmament/ and they shall se altogether/ and ꝑ children of a yeare olde shall speake with their voyces: the women with chylden shall bringe forth vntymely children of three or foure monethes olde/ & they shall lyue/ and be raysed vp: & sodenly shall the sowen places appeare as the vnsowen/ the full stoare houses shall sodenly be founde emptie/ and the trompet shall geue a sounde/ which whā euery man heareth/ they shalbe haistely afrayed. † At that tyme shall frēdes fight one against another like enemies/ and the earth shall stande in feare with them. e.p.c h.vij.a

The springes of the welles shall stande styll/ and in three houres they shall not renne. Whosoeuer remayneth from all these thinges that I haue tolde the/ shall escape/ and se my saluacion/ and the ende of youre worlde. And the men that are receaued/ shal se it/ they that haue not taisted death frō their byrth: and the hert of the indwellers shalbe chaunged/ and turned into another meaninge: for euel shalbe put out/ and deceate shalbe quenched. As for faith/ it shall florish/ corrupcion shalbe ouercome: and the trueth/ which hath bene so lōge without frute/ shalbe declared.

D And it happened whan he talked with me/ ꝑ I loked demurely vpon hym before whome I stode/ and these wordes sayde he vnto me: I am come to shewe the tyme of the night for to come.

If thou wilt praye yet more/ and faste seuen dayes agayne/ I shall tell the more thinges/ and greater then before: for thy voyce is herde before the hyest: for why? the mighty hath sene thy rightcous dealynge/ he hath sene also thy chastitie/ which thou haste had euer sence thy youth: and therfore hath he sent me to shewe the all these thinges/ and to saye vnto the: Be of good comforte/ and feare not/ and haist not with the tymes that are past to thynke vayne thinges/ and make no haist of the latter times.

And it happened after this/ that I wepte agayne/ and fasted seuen dayes in like maner/ that I mighte fulfill the thre wekes/ which he tolde me. In the eight nighte was my hert vexed within me agayne/ and I beganne to speake before ꝑ hyest: for my sprete was greatly set on fyre/ and my soul was in distresse/ and I sayde: O Lorde/ thou spakest vnto thy creature frō the begynninge/ (euen the fyrst daye) and saydest. † Let heauen and earth be made/ and thy worde was a perfecte worke. And then was there the sprete/ and the darcknesses were yet on euery syde/ and sylence: there was no mans voyce as yet from the. Thē cōmaundedest thou a fayre light to come forth out of thy treasures/ that thy worke might appeare and be sene.

E Vpon the seconde daye thou maydest the sprete of the firmament/ and commaundedest it to parte a sunder/ and to make a deuision betwirte the waters/ that the one parte might remayne aboue/ and the other beneth. Vpon the thyrde daye thou broughtest to passe/ that the waters were gathered in the seuenth parte of the earth: Sixe partes hast thou dryed vp/ and kepte them/ to the intent that men might sowe and occupie housbandrie therein. As soone as thy worde wente forth/ that worke was made. For immedialy there was greate innumerable frute/ and many diuerse pleasures and desyres of tēptacion/ floures of chaungeable colour and smell/ and this was done the thyrde daye.

Vpon the fourth daye thou cōmaundedest that the Sunne shoulde geue his shyne/ & the Moone her light: the starres diddest thou set in ordre/ & gauest thē a charge † to do seruice euen vnto mā/ that was for to be made. *Vpon the fifth daye thou saydest vnto the seuēth parte (where the waters were gathered) that they shoulde bringe forth diuerse beastes fooles and fishes. And so it came to passe/ that the dōme water & without soule/ brought forth liuinge beastes at the cōmaundement of God/ that all people might prayse thy wonderous workes/ Then diddest thou preserue two soules/ the one thou calledest Enoch/ & the other Leuiathan/ and diddest separate the one frome the other: for the seuenth parte (namely/ where the water was gathered together) might not holde them both. Vnto Enoch thou gauest one parte/ which was dryed vp ꝑ thirde daye/ that he shoulde dwell in thesame parte/ wherein are a thousande hilles. But vnto Leuiathan thou gauest the seuēth parte/ namely the moyst/ and hast kepte him to deuoure what thou wilt/ and whan. Deut.iiij.e *Gen.j.c

Vpō the sixte daye thou gauest commaundement vnto ꝑ earth/ that before the it shoulde bringe forth beastes/ cattel and all that crepe/ & (besydes this) Adā also/ whome thou mayest

deste lorde of all thy creatures: Of him come we all/and the people also / whome thou hast chosen specially vnto thy self. All this haue I saide now & spoken before the/that I might shewe/ how that the worlde is made for oure sakes. As for the other people which also come of Adam / thou hast sayde that they are nothinge/ but be like a spytle/and hast likened the aboundaunce of them vnto a droppe (that falleth) from the rofe of the house.

And now (O Lord) the Heithen which haue euer bene reputed as nothinge / haue begonne to be lordes ouer vs / & to deuoure vs:
Exo.iiij. f but we thy people † (whome thou hast called the first borne / thy only begotte / & thy feruent louer) are geue into their handes & power. If the worlde now be made for ourc sakes / why haue we not the inheritaūce in possession with the worlde? How longe shall this endure?

The VII. Chapter.

A AND it happened after that I had spoken out these wordes / there was sent vnto me an aungel (which had bene by me also the nyghtes afore) and he sayde vnto me: Vp Esdras / & heare the wordes that I am come to tell ỹ. And I saide: speake on Lord my God. Thē saide he vnto me: The see is set in a wyde place / that it might be depe & greate: but the intraunce is narow and small like a ryuer. For who wolde go into the see/to loke vpon it/and to rule it? If he wente not thorow the narow/ how might he come into the broader?

Item another. A citie is buylded and set vpon a broade felde / and is full of all goodes/ the intraunce is narow and sodaine / like as if there were a fyre at the ryght hande/ an a depe water at ỹ left / & as it were onely one straight path betwixte them both / so small / that there coulde but one man go there.

If this citie now were geuen to an ayre / & he neuer wente thorow this parlous waye/ how wolde he receaue his inheritaunce? And I sayde: It is so Lord. Then sayde he: Euen so is Israel also a portion. And why? for their sakes haue I made the worlde: and whan Adam transgressed my statutes / then was the thinge iudged that was done. Then were the intraunces of the worlde made narrow/full of sorow and trauayle: They are but few & euel/ full of perels and laboure. For the intraunces of the forewoilde were wyde and sure / and brought immortall frute.

If they now which are entred into this B worlde/ maye not comprehende these strayght and vayne thinges / much lesse maye they cōprehende and vnderstande the secrete thinges: Why disquieteste thou thy self thē / seynge thou art but a corruptible man? And what woldest thou knowe / where as thou art but mortall? And why hast thou not receaued into thine hert the thinge that is for to come / but that is present?

Then sayde I: O Lord Lorde/thou hast ordayned in thy lawe / † that the rightcous Deu.vi should inheret these thinges/ but that the vnfaithfull and vngodly shoulde perysshe. Neuertheles / the rightcous shall suffre strayte thinges/and hope for wyde: for they that haue lyued vngodly/and suffred strayte thinges/ shal not se the wyde.

And he sayde vnto me: There is no iudge aboue God / and none that hath vnderstandinge aboue the Hyghest. For there be many that perisshe / because they despyse the lawe of God that is set before them. For God hath geuen strayte cōmaundemēt to such as come/ that they knowe what they do / and how they shoulde lyue: & if they kepte this/ they shoulde not be punyshed.

Neuertheles / they were not obedient vnto him/ but spake agaynst him: imagined vayne thinges/and purposed to synne/and saide moreouer/that there was no God/and that God regarded it not. His wayes haue they not knowen/his lawe haue they despysed/and denyed his promises: in his statutes and ordinaunces haue they not bene faithfull and stedfast/and haue not perfourmed his workes.

And therfore Esdras/ vnto the full/ plenty: C and to the emptye/emptynesse. Beholde / the tyme shall come / that these tokens which I haue tolde the / shall come to passe / and the bryde shall appeare: and the earth that now passeth awaye / shalbe shewed: & whosoeuer is delyuered from the foresayde euels / shall se my wonders. For my sonne Jesus shalbe openly declared / with those that be with him: and they that remayne / shalbe mery in soule hundreth yeares.

After thesesame yeares shal my sonne Christ dye dye/and all men that haue lyfe: and the worlde shalbe turned into the olde silence seuen dayes/ like as in the fore iudgementes / so that no mā shall remayne. And after seuē dayes/ ỹ worlde that yet awaketh not/ shalbe rayſed vp/ & shall dye corrupte. And the earth shall restore those that haue slepte in her / and so shall the dust those that dwell in silence/ and the secrete places shall deliuer those that be committed vnto them. And the moost Hyghest shalbe openly declared vpon the seate of iudgemēt/ & all misery shall vanyshe awaye/and longe suffringe shalbe gathered together. But the iudgement shall continue / the trueth shall remayne / and faith shall waxe strōge/ the worke shall folowe/ and the rewarde shalbe shewed/the rightcousnes shall watch / and the vnrightcousnesses shall beare no rule.

D Then sayde I: † Abraham prayed fyrst for e.xviij. d the Sodomites / * and Moses for the fathers Exo.xxxij. c that synned in the wildernes / & he that came after him for Israel/in the tyme of Achas and e.xxiij b Samuel † and Saul for the destruction/ * &
.pa. vj. c Salomon for them that came into the Sanc-
j.re.viij. tuary/ † Helias for those that receaued rayne/and for the dead that he myght lyue: and * Ezechias for the people in the tyme of Sennaij.Reg. xix. & xx. cherib: and diuerse other in like maner which haue prayed for many.

Euen so now/seyinge ỹ corrupte is growen vp / & wickenes increaced / and the righteous haue prayed for the vngodly / wherfore shall it not be so now also?

He aunswered me/and sayde: This present worlde is not the ende/there remayneth much honoure in it / therfore haue they prayed for the weake. But the daye of dome shalbe the ende of this tyme / and the begynninge of the immortalite for to come / wherein all corrupcion vanysheth/all volupteousnes is louſed/all misbelefe takē awaye / ryghteousnes growen/ and the verite spronge vp. Then shall no man be able to saue hym that is destroyed / nor to oppresse hym that hath gotten the victory. I
E aunswered then / and sayde: Thys is my fyrst and last sayinge/that it had bene better / not to haue geuen the earth vnto Adam: or els whā it was geuen him/ to kepe him that he shoulde not synne. For what profit is it for men now in this present tyme to lyue in heauynes / and after death to loke for punyshment? O thou Adā/what hast thou done? For though it was thou that synned/thou art not fallen alone/but we all that come of the. For what profite is it vnto vs/if there be promysed vs an immortall tyme / where as we medle with deadly workes? and that there is promysed vs an euerlastinge hope / where as we our selfes are euell and vayne? and that there are layed vp for vs dwellinges of health and fredome / where as we haue lyued euell? and that the worshippe of the Hyghest is kept to defende them/ which haue led a pacient life/where as we haue walked in the moost wicked wayes of all? and that there shalbe shewed a paradyse / whose frute endureth for euer / wherein the fredom & medicine / where as we shall not go in? for we haue walked in vnpleasaunt places: And that the faces of them which haue absteined / shall shyne aboue the starres / where as oure faces shalbe blacke and darcke? For whyle we lyued and dyd vnrightcously / we cōsidered not that we shoulde suffre therfore after death?

Then aunswered he me/and sayde: This is F the consideracion and thought of the battayl/ which man hath vpō earth: that if he be ouercome/he shall suffre as thou hast sayde. But if he get the victory / he shall receaue the thinge that I saye. For this is the life/ wherof Moses spake vnto the people whyle he liued/ sayinge: † Chose the life that thou mayest lyue. Neuer- Deut.xx. d theles/ they beleued him not/ neyther the prophetes after him: No/nor me which haue spoken vnto thē / that heauynes should not reach vnto them to their destruction / like as ioye is for to come ouer those / that haue suffred them selfes to be enfourmed in saluacion.

I aunswered then & sayd: I knowe Lord/ that the hyghest is mercifull / in that he hath mercy vpon them / which are not yet in the worlde/and vpon those also that walke in his lawe: † & that he is pacient: & longe sufferinge Rom.ij.a towarde those that haue synned in their workes: and that he is liberal to geue where as it requireth: and that he is of great mercy/ for he multiplieth his louynge kyndnesses towarde those that are present/and that are past/ and to them which are for to come. For if he multiplie not his mercies / the worlde shall not be made lyuinge/with those that dwell therein. He ge-

ueth also / for if he gaue not of his goodnesse / that they which haue done euell / mighte be eased / the ten thousande parte of men shoulde not be made lyuinge. And if ỹ iudge forgaue not those that be healed with his worde / and if he wolde destroye the multitude that stryueth / there shoulde be very few left in an innumerable multitude.

The. VIII. Chapter.

A ND he aunswered me / sayinge: The mooste hyghest made thys worlde for many / but the worlde to come for few. I will tell the a similitude / Esdras: As whan thou axest ỹ earth / it shall saye vnto the / ỹ it geueth much moulde / wherof earthen vessels are made / but litle of it that golde commeth of.

Euen so is it with the worke of this worlde.

Mat. xx. b and xxj. b † There be many created / but few shalbe preserued. Then aunswered I and sayde: Then swalowe vp the wit (o thou soule) & deuoure the vnderstādinge / for thou art agreed to herken and to geue eare / and wyllinge to prophecie / for thou hast no longe space geuen the / but onely to lyue. O Lorde / wilt thou not geue thy seruaunt leue / that we maye praye before the / and that thou maiest geue sede vnto oure hert / and buylde oure vnderstandinge / that there maye come frute of it: and that euery one which is corrupte / and beareth the state and place of a man / maye lyue?

For thou arte alone / and we all are one worke manshippe of thy handes / like as thou hast sayde / and like as the body is fashioned now in the childesbed / and thou geuest the membres / and thy creature is preserued in fyre and water: & ix. monethes doeth thy worke suffre thy creature / which is fashioned in her: but the thinge that preserueth / and it that is preserued / shall both be kepte togeather: and whan tyme is / the chyldesbed deliuereth the thinge that is kepte and growen in her.

B For thou hast commaunded the brestes to geue mylck vnto the frute / that ỹ thinge which is created and fashioned / maye be norished for a tyme: and then thou disposest and ordrest it with thy mercy / bringest it vp with thy righteousnes / nortourest it in thy lawe / & refourmest it with thy vnderstandinge / mortifiest it as thy creature / and makest it liuynge as thy worke. Seinge then that thou destroyest hym / which with so great labours is created and fashioned thorow thy commaundement / thou couldest lyghtely ordene also / that the thinge which is made / might be preserued.

And this I speake now of all men in general / as thou knowest: but of thy people for whose sake I am sory: and of thy inheritaunce / for whose cause I mourne / and of Israel / for whome I am wofull: & for Jacob / for whose sake I am greued: therfore beginne I to praye before the / for my self and for them / for I se the fall of vs / cuen of vs ỹ dwell vpon earth. But I haue herde ỹ swiftenes of the iudge / which is to come: therfore heare my voyce / & vnderstande my wordes / & I shall speake before the.

C This is the beginninge of the wordes of Esdras / before he was receaued: O Lorde / thou that dwellest in euerlastingnesse / whose eyes are lift vp in ỹ ayre / whose stoole is exceadinge hye / whose glory & maiesty maye not be cōprehended / before whom the hooستes of heauen stāde with tremblinge / whose kepinge is turned in winde & fyre / whose worde is trew / whose talkinge is stedfast / whose commaundement is stronge / whose ordinaunce is fearfull / whose loke dryeth vp the depthes / whose wrath maketh the moūtaynes to melt awaye / and whose trueth beareth wytnes: O heare ỹ prayer of thy seruaunt / and marcke with thine eares the peticion of thy creature.

For whyle I lyue / I will speake: and so lōge as I haue vnderstandinge / I will aunswere. O loke not vpō the sinnes of thy people / which serue the in the trueth. Haue no respecte vnto the wicked studies of the Heithen / but to the desyre of those that kepe thy testimonies with sorowes. Thinke not vpon those that haue walked faynedly before the / but vpon them / which with will haue knowen thy feare.

Let it not be thy wyll to destroye thē / which haue had beastly maners / but to loke vpō them that haue clearly taught thy lawe. Take thou no indignacion at them / which are worse thē beastes: but loue them / that alwaye put their trust in thy righteousnes and glory: for we and oure fathers haue al thesame sickenes and disease / but because of oure synnes thou shalt be called mercifull.

For if thou hast mercy vpon vs / thou shalt D be called mercifull / where as we haue no workes of kes of righteousnes: for the righteous which haue layed vp many good workes togeather / shall out of their dedes receaue rewarde. For what is man / that thou shouldest take displeasure at him? Or what is the corruptible mortal generaciō / that thou shouldest be so rough towarde him?

re. viij. g dar. vj. f Joan. j. b † For of a trueth there is no man amonge thē that be borne / but he hath dealt wickedly: and amōge the faithfull there is none / which hath not done amysse. For in this (O Lorde) thy righteousnes & thy goodnes shalbe prayesed and declared / if thou be mercifull vnto thē / which are not rych in good workes.

Then aunswered he me / and sayde: Some thinges hast thou spoke right / and accordinge vnto thy wordes it shalbe. For I will not verely considre the worke of them / which haue synned before death / before the iudgement / before destruction / † but I will reioyce ouer the m. iiij. d worke and thought of the righteous. I wil remembre also ỹ pylgremage / the holy makinge and the rewarde. Like as I haue spoken now / so shall it come to passe. For as the housband man soweth much sede vpō the grounde / and planteth many trees / & yet alwaye the thinge that is sowen or planted is not all kepte safe / neyther doeth it all take rote: Euen so is it of them that are sowen in the worlde / they shall not all be preserued.

E I aunswered then and saide: If I haue founde grace / thē let me speake / Like as the housbande mans sede perisheth / if it receaue not rayne in due season / or if there come to much rayne vpō it: Euen so perisheth mā also / which is created with thy handes / and is like vnto thine owne image & to thy self / for whose sake thou hast made all thynges / and lykened him vnto the housbande mans sede. Be not wroth at vs (O Lorde) but spare thy people / & haue mercy vpon thine owne inheritaunce: O be mercifull vnto thy creature.

Then aunswered he me and sayde: Thinges present are for the present / and thinges to come for such as be to come. For thou wantest yet much / seynge thou maiest loue my creature aboue me / I haue oft times drawen nye vnto the / but neuer to the vnrighteous. In this also thou art maruaylous before the Hyghest / in that thou hast humbled thy self / as it becommeth the / and hast not regarded thyne owne self / that thou art had in such honoure amonge the righteous. Therfore shall greate wrechednesse and misery come vpon thē / that in the latter tyme shall dwell in the worlde / for they haue walked in greate pryde.

But vnderstande thou for thy self / and seke out glory for such as be like ther: for vnto you is paradyse opened / the tree of life is planted / the tyme to come is prepared / plenteousnes made ready: a citie is buylded for you / & a rest is prepared / yee / perfecte goodnes & wysdome. The rote of euel is marked from you / that weaknes and mote is hyd from you / and into hell flyeth corrupcion in forgetfulnes. Sorowes are vanyshed awaye / and in the ende is shewed the treasure of immortalite. And therfore axe thou no more questions / concerninge the multitude of them that perysshe. For they haue taken liberty / despysed the Hyghest / thought scorne of his lawe / and forsaken hys wayes.

Moreouer / they haue trodē vnder foote his righteous / † & sayde in their hert that there is no God / yee / and that wittingly / for they dye. For like as the thinge ỹ I haue spoken of / is made ready for you: Euē so is thy: st and payne prepared for thē. For it was not his wil that man shoulde come to naught: but they which be created / haue defyled the name of him ỹ made them / and are vnthankefull vnto him / which prepared life for thē. And therfore is my iudgement now at hande. These thinges haue I not shewed vnto all men / but vnto few: namely vnto the / and to such as be like the. G Psal. xiij. a

Then aunswered I and sayde: Beholde O Lorde / now hast thou shewed me the multitude of the tokens / which thou wilt begynne to do at the last: but at what tyme and whan thou hast not shewed me.

The. IX. Chapter.

HE aunswered me then & sayde: Measure A thou the tyme diligently in it self / whan thou seyst that one parte of the tokens come to passe / which I haue tolde the before / so shalt thou vnderstande / that it is ỹ very same tyme / wherein the Hyghest wil beginne to vysit the worlde / which he made. And whā there shalbe sene earthquake & vproure of ỹ people in the world / thē shalt thou wel vnderstāde / ỹ ỹ mooste hyest spake of those thinges / frō the dayes that were before the/euen from the beginninge.

For like as all that is made in the worlde/ hath a beginninge and ende/ and the ende is manifest: Euen so the tymes also of Hyghest haue playne beginninges in wonders & signes/and the ende in workinge and in tokens. And euery one that shalbe saued/ and shalbe able to escape by his workes & by faith (wherein ye haue believed) shalbe preserued frō the saide perels/ & shall se my sauiour in my lande and within my borders/ for I haue halowed me from the worlde. Then shall they be in carefulnesse/which now haue abused my waies: and they that haue cast them out despytefully/ shall dwell in paynes.

B For suche as in their life haue receaued benefites/ and haue not knowen me/ and they that haue abhorred my lawe/ whyle they had yet fredome/& whan they had yet open roume of amendement and conuersion/ and vnderstode not/but despysed it: thesame must know it after death in payne. And therfore be thou nomore carefull/ how the vngodly shalbe punyshed/ and how the righteous shalbe saued/ and whose the worlde is/ and for whome the worlde is/& whā it is. Then aunswered I and iiij. Esd. iij. sayde: † I haue talked before & now I speake/ and wyll speake also hereafter/ that there be many mo of them whiche perish/ then shalbe saued/ like as the floude is greater then the droppes.

And he aunswered me/ sayinge: like as the felde is/ so is also the sede: as the floures be/ so are the colours also: suche as the worke mā is/ suche is also the worke: and as the housbandman is him selfe/so is his housbandrye also/ for it was ỹ tyme of the worlde. And whan I prepared for thē that are now/ or euer the worlde was made/wherein they shall dwel/then was
C there no man that withstode me. Now whan euery one was/ & the maker also in the worlde whiche is now prepared/ and the moneth that ceaseth not/ and the lawe which is vnsearcheable/their maners were corrupte. So I considered the worlde/ and behold/ there was parell/ because of the thoughtes that were come into it. And I sawe/ and spared them greatly/ and haue kepte me a wynebery of the grapes/ and a plante from amōge many generacions. Let ỹ multitude perish thē/ which are growen vp in vayne/ and let my grape and wynebery be kept euen my plante: for with great laboure haue I made it vp.

Neuertheles/if thou wilt take vpon the yet seuen dayes mo (but thou shalt not faste in them) go thy waye then into the felde of floures/where no house is buylded/ and eate onely of the floures of the felde/taist not flesh/ drinke no wyne/ but eate floures onely. Praye vnto the Hyghest continually/ so will I come/and talke with the.

So I went my waye/& came into the felde D which is called Ardach (like as he cōmaunded me) and there I sat amonge the floures/ and ate of the herbes of the felde/ and the meate of thesame satisfied me. After seuen dayes I sat vpon the grasse/ & my hert was vexed within me like as afore: & I opened my mouth/ and beganne to talke before the Hyghest/ & saide: O Lorde/thou that shewest thy selfe vnto vs/ thou hast declared and opened thy self vnto oure fathers in the † wyldernes/ in a place Exo.xvij. where no man dwelleth/in a baren place/whā and xx. they came out of Egypte/ & thou spakest say- Deut.i. inge: Heare me O Israel/ & marke my wordes thou sede of Jacob. Beholde/ I sowe my lawe in you/and it shall bringe frute in you/ & ye shalbe honoured in it for euer. For oure fathers which receaued the lawe/ kepte it not/ & obserued not thy ordinaunces and statutes/ & the frute of thy lawe was not declared: for it might not/for why? it was thine. † For they Exo.xx. that receaued it/perished/because they kept not the thinge that was sowen in them.

It is a custome whan ỹ grounde receaueth sede/or the see a ship/ or a vessel meate & drinke/ that whan it perisheth or is broken wherein a thinge is sowē/ or wherein any thinge is put: the thinges also perishe & are brokē/ which are sowen or put therein. But vnto vs it hath not happened so: for we ỹ haue receaued the lawe/ perish in sinne/ & oure hert also which receaued the lawe: notwithstandinge † the lawe pe- Esa.xl. risheth not/but remayneth in his laboure. ij. Tim.

And whan I cōsidered these thinges in my hert after this maner/ I loked about me with mine eyes/& vpō ỹ righte syde I sawe † a wo- iiij. Esd. man/which mourned sore/made great lamentacio/& wept vehemently loude voyce/ her clothes were rent in peces/& she had asshes vpō her heade.

Then

E Then let I my thoughtes go/ that I was in/and turned me vnto her/and saide: wherfore wepest thou? why art thou so sory and discomforted? And she saide vnto me: Syr/ let me bewayle my selfe and take yet more sorowe: for I am sore vexed in my minde/ and brought very lowe. And I saide vnto her: what ayleth ỹ? Or who hath done any thing to the? tell me. She saide: I haue bene vnfruteful and baren/and haue had an housbande thirtie yeares. And these xxx. yeares I do nothinge els daye and night & al houres/ but make my prayer to the Hyghest. After thirtie yeares God herd me thy handmaiden/ loked vpon my misery/ considred my trouble/ and gaue me a sonne/and I was glad of him/ so was my housband also & al my neighbours/ and we gaue greate honour vnto the mighty. And I norisshed hym with greate trauayle. So whan he grewe vp/ and came to the tyme that he shoulde haue a wyfe/ I made a feast.

The. X. Chapter.

A And it happened that whan my sonne wente into his chaumber/ he fel doune/ and dyed: then ouerthrewe we all the lyghtes/ and all my neighbours rose vp to cōforte me. Thē toke I my rest vnto the seconde daye at night: and whan they had al rested/ ỹ they myght comforte me/ I rested also/and rose vp by nighte/ & fled/& am come hither into this felde/ as thou seyst: and am purposed not to come in the citie/but to remain here/and neyther to eate nor drynke/ but continually to mourne and to fast vntill I dye.

Then let I my meditacions and thoughtes fall/that I was in/and spake to her in displeasure: Thou foolishe woman/ seist thou not oure heauynesse & mourninge/ and what happeneth vnto vs: howe Sion our mother is all wofull and sory/ and how she is clene broughte doune & in misery? seyng we be all now in heauynes/& make oure mone (for we be al sorowful.) As for the heauines that thou takest/it is but for one sonne. Demaunde the earth/& she shal tel the/ ỹ it is she which ought (by reason) to mourne/for the fal of so many that grow vpon her. For from the beginning al mē are borne of her/& other shal come: and beholde/they walke almoost all into destruc-cion/and many of them shalbe roted out.

Who shoulde then (by reason) make more mourninge then she/that hath lost so greate a multitude: and not thou/ whiche art sory but for one. But if thou woldest say vnto me: My mourninge is not like the mourninge of the earthe/ for I haue loste the frute of my body/which I bare wh heauynes: as for ỹ earth/ accordinge to the ordinaunce of ỹ earth onely/ so that many are gone awaye in her/ as it is B come to passe: Then saide I vnto her/like as thou hast borne with trauaile & sorow/euen so the earth also from the beginning/geueth her frute vnto mā/for him that made her. † And Heb.xij.a therfore witholde thy sorowe and heauynes by thy self/and loke what happeneth vnto the/ beare it strongly. For if thou iudgest ỹ marke and ende of God to be righteous and good/ and receauest his counsail in time/ thou shalt be commaunded therin. Go thy way then in to the citie to thy housbande.

And she sayde vnto me: that wil I not do/ I wil not go in the citie/But here will I dye. So I commoned more with her/and sayde: Do not so/But be counsayled/& folow me: for how many falles hath Sion? Be of good cōforte because of the sorow of Jerusalem. For thou seist that oure Sanctuary is laied waist/ our aulter broken/our temple destroyed/ oure playinge of instrumentes and singing layed doune/the thankesgeuinge put to sylence/our myrth is vanished awaye/the lighte of oure candelstick is quēched/ỹ Arke of the cōuenaūt is taken from vs/al our holy thinges are defyled/& the name that is called vpon ouer vs/ is dishonoured/ our childrē are put to shame/ oure priestes are brent/our Leuites are carried away into captiuitie/our virgins are defyled/ and our wyfes raunshed/our righteous men spoyled/and oure children destroied/our yonge men are broughte in bondage/ and oure strōge worthies are become weake: & Sion (whiche seale is the greatest of al) is louse vp frō her worshippe: for she is delyuered into the handes of them that hate vs.

And therfore shake of the greate heauines/ C and put away the multitude of sorowes: that the myghtye maye be mercyfull vnto the/ and that the Hyghest maye geue the reste frō thy laboure and trauayle. And it happened/that whā I was talking with her/her face did shine and glister/so that I was afrayed of her and mused what it myght be. And immediatly she cast out a greate voyce/very fearful/so that the earth shoke at the noise of ỹ womā:

and I loked/and beholde/the woman appeared vnto me nomore: but there was a citie
buylded/ and a place was shewed from the grounde and foundacion.

Then was I afrayed/ & cried with a loude
voyce/and sayde: where is Uriel the aungell/iiij.Es.iiij.a † which came to me at ỹ fyrst? For he hath caused me to come in many consideracions and hye thoughtes/and myne ende is turned too corupcion/and my prayer to rebuke. And as I was speakynge these wordes/he came vnto me/and loked vpon me/and I laye as one that had bene dead/and myne vnderstāding was altered/& he toke me by the ryghthande/and comforted me/and set me vp vpon my fete/and sayde vnto me: what ayleth the? and why is thine vnderstandinge vexed? and the vnderstandinge of thy hert/and wherfore art thou sory? And I sayde: Because thou haste iiij.Es.ix.a forsaken me: and I haue done † accordinge vnto thy wordes/I wente into the felde/ and there haue I sene a thynge/ that I am not able to expresse. He sayd vnto me: Stande vp and be manly/ and I shall geue the exortacion.

D Then sayde I: Speake vnto me my Lorde/ forsake me not/lest/I dye in vayne: for I haue sene that I knewe not/ and herde that I do not knowe. Or shall my vnderstanding be deceaued/ and my mynde? But nowe I beseche the/that thou wilt shewe thy seruaūte of this wonder. He aunswered me then/and sayde: heare me/ and I shall enfourme
the/and tell the wherfore thou art afrayed/for the Hyghest hath opened many secrete thinges vnto the.

He hath sene that thy waye is ryght/ and that thou takest sorowe continually for thy people/ and makest greate lamentacyon for Syon: and therfore vnderstande the vysyon/whiche thou saweste a lytle whyle ago after this maner: Thou saweste a woman mournynge/and thou hast comforted her: Nevertheless/now seist thou the lykenes of the woman nomore/But thou thoughteste there was a cytie builded: and lyke as she tolde the of the fall of her sonne/ so is this the aunswere:
The woman whome thou saweste/ is Syon:
and where as she tolde the/that she hath bene thyrtie yeares vnfrutefull and baren/ those are the xxx. yeares/wherin there was no offeringe made in her.

But after xxx. yeares Salomon buylded her/and offred/ and then bare the baren a sonne. And where as she tolde the/ that she norysshed hym with labour/ that was the dwellynge of Jerusalem. But where as the sonne dyed in her chaumber/ that is the fall of Jerusalem. And thou saweste her lykenesse/ & how she mourned for her sonne: and what els happened vnto her/ I haue shewed the.
And nowe God seith that thou art sory in thy mynde/and suffreste from thy hert for her/and so hath he shewed the her clearnesse/ and the fayrnes of her beutye.

And therfore I bad the remayne in the felde/where no house is buylded. For I knew that the Hyghest wolde shewe this vnto the/therfor I cōmaunded the to go into the feld:
where no foundacion nor buildinge is. For in the place where the Hyghest wyll shewe
his cytie/ there shalbe no mans buyldinge.
And therefore feare not/ and let not thyne herte be afrayed/ but go thy waye in/ and se
the glorious and fayre buyldynge/ and howe greate it is/ and howe greate thou thynkest it after the measure of thyne eyes/ and then shalte thou heare as muche as thyne eares maye comprehende. For thou art blessed aboue many other/ and arte called with the Hyghest as the fewe. But to morowe at nyght thou shalte remayne here/ and so shall the Hyghest shewe the visyons of hye thinges/which he wyll do vnto them that dwell vpon earth in the last daies. So I slepte the same night/like as he commaunded me.

The.XI.Chapter.

THen saw I a dreame: and behold/ there came vp from the see an Aegle/ whiche had xij. wynges and thre heades: And I saw/and beholde/he spred his winges ouer all the earth/and al the wyndes of the ayre blewe in them/ and so they were put together agayne.
And I behelde/ and oute of his fethers there grewe other lytle contrarye fethers: the heades rested. The head in the middest was greater then the other/yet rested it not the residue.

Moreouer/I sawe that the Aegle flewe with his wynges/and raygned vpon earthe/
and ouer all them that dwel vpon the earth:
and I sawe that all thinges vnder heauen
were subiecte vnto him/and no man spake against him/no/not one creature vpon ỹ earth.
I sawe also that the Aegle stode vp vpon his clawes/and gaue a soūde with his fethers/
and a voyce sayinge after this maner: watche not altogether/ slepe euery man in his owne place/and watch for a time/But let the heades be preserued at the last. Neuertheless/ I sawe that the voyce wente not out of his heades/
But from the myddest of his bodye. And I B numbred his contrarye fethers/ and beholde/there were eyghte of them. And I loked/and beholde/ vpon the ryghteside there arose one fether/and raygned ouer al ỹ earth.
And it happened that whan it raygned/ the ende of it came/and the place thereof appeared nomore. So the nexte folowinge stode vp and raygned/ and had a greate tyme:
and it happened/ that whan it raygned/ the ende of it came also lyke as the fyrst/ so that it appeared nomore.

Then came there a voyce vnto it/and sayd:
Heare thou that haste kepte in the earthe so longe/this I say vnto the/Before thou beginnest to appeare nomore: There shall none after the attayne vnto thy tyme/no/ not halfe
the time Then arose the thirde/ and raygned
as the other afore/ and appeared nomore also.
So wente it with all the residue one after another/so that euery one raigned and then appeared nomore. Then I loked and beholde/in processe of time the fethers that folowed were set vp vpō the rightsyde/ that they might rule also: and some of them ruled/ but within a C whyle they appeared nomore: for some of thē were set vp/But ruled not. After this I loked/and beholde/the xij. fethers appeared nomore
and the two wynges: and there was nomore vpon the Aegels body/But two heades that rested/and sixe fethers. Then sawe I also/that the sixe fethers were parted in two/ and remayned vnder the heade/that was vpon the ryght syde/ for the foure continued in theyr place. So I loked and behold/they that were vnder the wynges/ thought to set vp themselfes/and to haue the rule. Then was there one set vp/but shortly it appeared nomore/ &
the seconde were sooner awaye then the first.
And I behelde/and lo/the two thought also by themselfes to raygne: and whan they so thoughte/ beholde/ there waked one of the heades that were at rest/namely/it ỹ was in the myddest/ for that was the greater of the two heades. And then I sawe/ that the two heades were fylled with hym/ and the heade was turned with them that were by hym/
and ate vp the two vnderwynges that wold haue raigned.

But this heade put the whole earth in fea- D re/and bare rule in it/ouer al those that dwelt vpon earth with muche labour/and he had the gouernaunce of the worlde ouer all the fooles that haue bene. After this I loked/and beholde/the heade that was in the myddest/ sodenly appeared nomore lyke as the wynges: then came the two heades/ whiche ruled vpon earth/and ouer those that dwelte therein. And I behelde/and lo/the heade vpon the rightside/deuoured it that was vpon the leftsyde. And I herde a voyce/which said vnto me: loke before the/ & consyder the thing that thou seyst. Then I sawe/ and beholde/as it were a Lyon that roareth/ runninge
haystely oute of the wood/ and he sente oute
a mans voyce vnto the Aegle/ and sayde:
Heare thou/ I wyll talke with the/ and the Hyghest shal saie vnto ỹ: Is it not thou that hast the victory of the foure beastes/ whome
I made to raygne vppon earth/ and in my world/and that the ende of their times might come thorow them?

And the fourth came/and ouerwanne all E
the beastes that were past/ & had power ouer
the worlde with greate fearfulnes/ and ouer
the whole compasse of the earth/with ỹ moost wicked labour/ and so longe tyme dwelt he vpon the earthe with deceate/ and the earth hast thou iudged not with trueth. For thou hast troubled the meke/thou haste hurt ỹ peaceable and quiete/thou haste loued lyars/and destroyed the dwellinges of thē that brought forthe frute/ and haste caste downe the walles of suche as dyd the no harme: Therfore is thy wrongeous dealynge/ and blasphemye come vp vnto the Hyghest/& thy pryd vnto ỹ mighty. The Highest also hath loked vpō the proude times/& beholde they are ended/and their abhominacions are fulfilled. And therfore appeare nomore thou Aegle/& thy horrible winges/and thy wicked fethers/and thy vngracious heades/and thy synful clawes/& all thy vaine body: that the earth maye be refresshed/and come againe to her self/whā she is delyuered from thy violence/and that she maye hope for the iudgement and mercy of him that made her.

The. XII. Chapter.

A AND it happened whan the Lyon spake these wordes vnto the Aegle/I sawe and beholde/the head that afore had the vpperhād appeared nomore: neither dyd the foure winges appeare any more that came to hym/and were set vp to raigne/& their kingdome was smal/and full of vproure.

And I sawe/and beholde/they appeared nomore/and the whole body of ỹ Aegle was brent/and the earth was in greate feare. Thē awaked I out of the traunce of my mynde/& from greate feare/and saide vnto my spirite: Lo/this hast thou geuen me/in that thou searchest out the wayes of the Highest: lo/yet am I weery in my mynde/and very weake in my spirite/and lytle strength is there in me/for the greate feare that I receaued this nyghte. Therfore wyl I now beseke the Hyghest/that he wyll comforte me vnto the ende/and I

B saide: Lorde Lorde/if I haue founde grace before the syght/and if I am iustifyed with the before many other/and if my praier become vp before thy face/comforte me then/and shewe thy seruaunt the interpretacion and playne difference of this horrible syght/that thou mayest perfectly comforte my soule: for thou hast iudged me worthy/to shew me the last of tymes.

And he saide vnto me: this is the interpretacion of this syght. The Aegle whome thou sawest come vp from the see/is the kyngdō

San. vij. whiche was sene † in the vision of thy brother Daniel/but it was not expounded vnto him/for now I declare it vnto the.

Beholde/the dayes come/that there shall ryse vp a kyngdome vpon earth/and it shalbe feared aboue al the kyngdomes that were before it. In thesame kingdome shall xij. kynges raigne one after another. For the seconde shal begynne to raigne/and shal haue more tyme then the other/and this do the xij. wynges signifye/which thou sawest. As for the voyce

C that spake/and that thou sawest go out from the heades (but not from the body) it betokeneth/that after ỹ tyme of that kingdome/there shal aryse greate stryuinges/and it shal stand in parcel of fallyng/neuertheles/it shal not yet fall/but shalbe set into his beginninge. And the eyght vnderwinges whiche thou sawest hange vnto the wynges of hym/betoken that in hym there shall aryse eyght kynges/whose tyme shalbe but smal/and their yeares swift/and two of them shall beare. But whan the myddest tyme commeth/there shalbe foure kepte in the time/whan this tyme begynneth to come that it maye be ended/but two shalbe kepte vnto the ende.

And where as thou sawest thre heades restynge/this is the interpretacion. In his laste shal the Hyghest rayse vp thre kyngdomes/and call many agayne into them/and they shal haue the dominion of the earth/and of those that dwel therin/with much laboure aboue al those that were before them. Therfore are they called the heades of the Aegle: for it is they that shall bringe forth his wickednesse agayne/and that shall perfourme/and fynish his laste. And where as thou sawest/that the greate heade appeared nomore/it signifyeth that one of them shall dye vpon his best/and yet with payne/for the two that remayne/shalbe slayne with the swearde. For the swearde of the one shall deuoure the other/but at the last shall he fall thorowe the swearde hymselfe.

And where as thou sawest two vnderwin D ges vpon the heade/that is on the right syde/it signifyeth that it is they/whome the Hyghest hath kepte vnto theyr ende: this is a smal kyngdome/and ful of trouble. The Lion whome thou sawest risynge vp oute of the wood/and roaringe/and speakinge vnto the Aegle/& rebukinge him for his vnrighteousnesse/is the wynde/which the Hyghest hath kepte for them/and for their wickednesse vnto the ende: he shall reproue them/and rente them asunder before them. For he shall set them lyuinge before the iudgmente/and shal rebuke them: for the residue of my people shal he deliuer with trouble/those that be preserued ouer mine endes: and he shal make thē ioyful vntyl the cōminge of the daie of iudgment/wherof I haue spoken vnto the from the beginninge. This is the dreame that thou sawest/and this is the interpretacion. Thou onely hast bene mete to knowe the secrete of the Hyghest.

Therfore wryte all these thynges that thou hast sene in a boke/and hyde them/and teach them the wyse in the people/whose hertes thou knowest maye comprehende and kepe the secretes. But wayte thou here thy selfe yet seuen dayes mo/that it maye be shewed the/whatsoeuer it pleaseth the Hyghest to declare vnto the/and with that he wente his waye.

And whan all the people perceaued/that E the seuen dayes were past/and I not come agayne into the citie/they gathered them altogether from the least vnto the moost/and came vnto me/and sayde: what haue we offended the: and what euel haue we done agaynste the/that thou forsakest vs/and syttest here in this place? For of all people thou onely arte leste vs/as a grape of the vyne/and as a candell in a darke place/and as an hauen and a shippe preserued from the tempeste. Haue we not els aduersyte ynough/but thou muste forsake vs? Were it not better for vs/that we had bene brente with Syon? For we are no better then they that dyed there/and they wepte with loude voyce. Then aunswered I them and sayde: Be of good comforte O Israel/and be not heauy thou house of Jacob: for the hyghest hath you in remembraunce/and the myghty hath not forgotten you in temtacion. As for me/I haue not forsaken you/neyther am I departed from you: but am come into this place to praye/because of the mysery of Israel/that I myghte seke mercy for the lowe estate of youre Sanctuary. And nowe go youre waye home euery man/and after these dayes wyll I come vnto you. So the people wente theyr waye into the cytie lyke as I commaunded them: but I remayned styll in the felde seuen dayes/as the aungell bad me/and I ate onely of the flowres of the felde/and had my meate of the herbes in those dayes.

The XIII. Chapter.

AND it happened after the seuen dayes/A that I dreamed a dreame by nyght. And beholde/there arose a winde from the see/that moued all the floudes thereof. And I loked/& beholde/the man was stronge/and increased with the cloudes of heauen: and whan he turned his countenaunce so consyder/all the thinges trembled that were sene vnder him: and whan the voice went out of his mouthe/al they brent that herde him/like as the earth whan it feleth the fyre.

After these I sawe/and beholde/there gathered togethera multitude of men oute of numbre from the foure wyndes of the heauen/to fyghte agaynste the man that came oute from the see. And I loked/and beholde/he graued hym selfe a greate mountayn/and flew vp vpon it. But I wolde haue sene the border or place/whereout the hyll was grauen/and I coulde not.

I sawe after these/that all they which came to fyght agaynst him/were sore afrayed/and yet durste they fyghte. Neuertheles/whan he sawe the fearcenesse and violence of the people/he neyther lyfte vp his hande nor helde swearde/nor any weapen: but onely (as I sawe) he sent out of his mouth as it had bene a blaste of fyre/and oute of his lippes the wynde of the flamme: and oute of his tunge he caste oute sparkes and stormes/and they were all myxte togethe: the blast of fyre/the wynde of the flammes/and the greate storme/and fell with a russhe vppon the people/whiche was prepared to fyghte/and brente them vp euerychone: so that of the innumerable multitude there was nothinge sene/but onely dust and smoke. Whā I sawe this/I was afrayed.

Afterwarde sawe I thesame man come B doune from the mountaine/and calling vnto him another peaceable people: and there came much people vnto him: som were glad/some were sory/some of them were bounde/so that they were caried and brought forth.

Then was I sycke thorowe greate feare/and I waked/and sayde: thou haste shewed thy seruaunte all thy wonders from the beginning gynninge/and hast counted me worthy/ that thou myghtest receaue my prayer: shewe me nowe yet the interpretacion of this dreame.

For thus I consydre in my vnderstanding: Wo vnto them that shalbe left in those daies/ and muche more wo vnto them that are not lefte behynde: for they that were not left were in heauynesse.

Nowe vnderstande I the thynges that are layed vp in the latter dayes/ whiche shall happen vnto them/and to those that are not lefte behynde. Therfore are they come into greate parels/and many necessities/ lyke as these dreames declare. Yet is it easyer/ that he whiche suffreth hurte/ come in these/ then to passe awaye as a cloude oute of the worlde/ and nowe to se the thynges that shal happen in the last.

C Then aunswered he me/ and sayde: The interpretacion of the syghte shal I shewe the/ and I wyll open vnto thy the thynge that thou haste requyred. For thou haste spoken of them that are lefte behynde/ and this is the interpretacion. He that taketh awaye the perell in that tyme/hath kepte hym selfe. They that be fallen into harme/ are suche as haue workes and fayth vnto the moost myghtye. Knowe this therfore/ that they whiche be left behynde/ are more blessed then they that be dead. This is the meaninge of the vysion.
Where as thou sawest a man commynge vp from the depe of the see/ thesame is he whome God the Hyghest hath kepte a great season/whiche by his owne selfe shall delyuer his creature/and he shal ordre them that are lefte behynd. And where as thou sawest/that out of his mouth there came a blast of wind/ fyre and storme/and howe that he lyft vp neither swearde nor weapen/ but that the russhinge in of hym destroyed the whole multitude/that came to fyghte againste hym: it signifyeth/ that the dayes come/ whan God wyll delyuer them that are vpon earthe/ and in a traunce of mynde shall he come vpō thē/ that dwell in the earth. And one shall vndertake to fyght agaynste another/ one citie against another/ one place againste another/
Ma. xxiiij. a † one people against another/and one realme
D against another. Whan this cōmeth to passe/ then shall the tokens come/that I shewed the before: and then shall my sonne be declared/ whome thou sawest clymme vp as a man. And whā al the people heare his voice/ euery man shal in their owne lande leaue the battail/that they haue one against another/ & an innumerable multitude shalbe gathered together/as they that be willinge to come and to ouercome him by fyghtinge. But he shall standē vpon the toppe of the mount Sion. Neuertheles/Sion shal come/and shalbe shewed/beynge prepared and builded for all mē/ lyke as thou sawest the hyl grauē forth without any handes. But my sonne shal rebuke the people that are come for their wickednes/ with the tempest/and for their euel ymaginacions: & they: paynes/ wherwith they shalbe punished/are lykened vnto the flamme: and without any labour shal he destroye thē/ euē by the law/which is compared vnto the fyre.

And where as thou sawest/that he gathered another peaceable people vnto hym: those E are the ten trybes/which ware caryed awaye prysoners oute of their owne lande/ in the tyme of Oseas the kynge † whome Salmanasar the kynge of Assyria toke prysoner/ and iiij. K. xvij. caryed them ouer the water/and so came they into another lande.

But they gaue them this counsayl/ that they shoulde leaue the multitude of the Heythen/and to go forth into a farther countrie/ where neuer mankynde dwelte: that they myghte there kepe their statutes/ whiche they neuer kepte in their owne lande. And so they entred in at the narowe passages of the water of Euphrates/ and † God shewed tokens Exod. xiiij. for them/ and helde styll the floude tyll they Jos. iij. d were passed ouer: for thorowe that countrye there was a greate waye/namely of a yeare & an halfe iourney/for thesame region is called Asareth. Then dwelt they there vnto the latter tyme: and when they come forth againe/ the Hyghest shal hold styl the springes of the streame againe/ that they maye go thorowe/ therfore sawest thou the multitude ī peace. And they that be left behinde of thy people/ are those that be founde within my border. Now whan he destroyeth the multitude that is gathered together/he shal defende his people that remayne/and then shall he shewe the greate wonders.

Then

F Then saide I: O Lord Lorde/shew me this: wherfore haue I sene the man cōminge vp from the depe of the see?

And he sayde vnto me: Lyke as thou cāste neyther seke out nor knowe the thynges that are in the depe of the see/euen so mayest thou not se my sōne/or those that be with hym/ But in the tyme of the daye. This is the interpretacion of the dreame/ whiche thou sawest/ therfore thou only art here lyghtened: for thou hast forsaken thine owne lawe/ and applied thy diligence vnto mynde/ and soughte it. † Thy lyfe hast thou ordred in wysedome/ iij. Reg. v. and hast called vnderstandinge thy mother/ Pro. viij. a and therfore haue I shewed the the treasure of the Hyghest. After thre dayes I wyl shew the more/& talke with the more at large/ yee/ heauy and wonderous thinges wyll I declare vnto the.

Then wente I forth into the felde/geuing prayse and thākes greatly vnto God/ because of his wonders which he did in time/and because he gouerneth thesame/and such as is in time/and there I sat thre dayes.

The XIIII. Chapter.

A Vpon the thirde day I sat vnder an Oke tree/then came there a voyce vnto me out of the bush/and sayde: Esdras/Esdras. And I saide: here I am Lord/ and stode vp Exod. iij. a vpon my fete. Then spake he vnto me: † In the bushe dyd I appeare vnto Moses/ and talked with him/ whan my people serued in Egypte/and I sente him/ and led my people out of Egypte/ and broughte him vpon the mounte Syna/where I helde hym by my a longe season/and tolde him my wonderous workes/and shewed him the secretes of the tymes/and the ende/and commaunded him/ saying: These wordes shalt thou declare/ and not hyde them. And nowe I saye vnto the: that thou laye vp in thine herte the dreames that thou hast sene/ and the interpretacions which I haue shewed the: for thou shalt be receaued of all/ thou shalte be turned/ and remayne with my counsaill/and with suche as be lyke the/ vntyll the tymes be ended. For the worlde hath lost his youth/and the tymes begynne to waxe olde. For the tyme is deuyded into twelfe partes/ and ten partes of it are gone already/ and halfe of the tenth parte: Yet remayneth there that/whiche is after the halfe of the tenth parte.

Therfore prepare and ordre thy house/ and B refourme thy people: comforte suche of them as be in trouble: and tell nowe of the destruccion: let go from the mortal thoughtes: caste awaye the burthens of man: put of the weake nature: laye vp in some place the thoughtes that are moost heauy vnto the: and hayste the to flyt from these tymes: for suche cruell and wickednesse as thou haste nowe sene happen shall they do yet much worse. † For the weaker mat. xxiiij. a that the worlde and the tyme is/the more shal j. Joh. ij. c synne/ and wyckednesse increace/ in them that dwell vpon earthe. For the trueth is fled farre awaye/ and lesynge is harde at hande. For nowe haisteth the visyon to come that thou hast sene.

Then aunswered I and sayde: Beholde Lorde/ I will go as thou haste commaunded me/and refourme the people whiche are present. But they that shalbe borne afterward who wil exhorte or rebuke them?

Thus the worlde is set in darkenes/ and C they that dwell therin/are without light for thy lawe is kindled/because no man knoweth ỳ thinges that are done of the/ or that shalbe done. If I haue founde grace before the/ sende the holy ghoost into me/ and I shall wryte all that hath bene done in the world sence the begynninge/ whiche was wrytten in thy lawe/ that men maye fynde the path/ and that they which wil lyue in the latter dayes maye lyue.

And he aunswered me/ sayinge: Go thy waye/ gather thy people together/ and saye vnto them/that they seke the not for xl. dayes: but loke thou gather the many boxe trees/ and take with the Sarea/ Dabria/ Selemis/ Echanus and Asyall/ these fyue/ whiche are ready to wryte swiftly/ and come hyther/and I shall lyghte a candle of vnderstandinge in thine herte/ whiche shall not be put oute tyll the thynges be perfourmed/ which thou shalt begynne to wryte. And then shalte thou declare some thynges openly vnto the perfecte/ and some thynges shalte thou shewe secretly vnto the wyse. To morowe at this houre shalt thou begynne to wryte.

Then wente I forth (as he commaunded D

me

me and gathered all the people together/and sayde: Heare these wordes o Israel: Oure fathers from the beginninge were straungers
in Egypte/from whence they were delyue-Deut.xiij.v red/and receaued the lawe of lyfe/whiche
they kepte not/which ye also shaue transgressed after them. Then was this lande/and the lande of Sion parted amonge you by the lot to possesse. But youre fathers and youre selfes also haue done vnrighteousnes/and haue not kepte the wayes which the Lyghest commaunded you. And for so muche as he is a righteous iudge/he toke from you in tyme
the thinge that he had geuen you. And now are ye here/and youre brethren amonge you.
Therfore if so be that ye wyll subdue youre
owne vnderstandinge/and reformme youre herte/ye shalbe kepte alyue/and after death shall ye optayne mercy. For after death shall the iudgment come/whan we shall lyue a-gayne: and then shall the names of the righteous be manifest: and the names of the vngodly with their workes shalbe declared. Let no man therfore come nowe vnto me/nor aske any question at me these xl. dayes.

E So I toke the fyue men (as he commaunded me) and we wente into the felde/and remayned there. The nexte daye a voyce called Ezec.iij.a me sayinge: Esdras/Open thy mouth/† and Apoc.x.b drynke that I geue the. Then opened I my mouth/and beholde/and reached me a full cuppe/whiche was full of water/But the coloure of it was lyke fyre. And I toke it and dranke. And whan I had dronken it/my herte had vnderstandinge/and wysdome grewe in my breste: for my sprete was kepte in remembraunce/and my mouth was opened and shut nomore. The Lyghest gaue vnderstandinge vnto the fyue men/that they wrote the hye thynges of the night/which they vn-derstode not. But in the nyght they dyd eate bread: as for me/I spake in the day/and helde not my tunge by nighte. In xl. daies/they wrote two hundreth and foure bokes.

And it happened whan the xl. dayes were fulfylled/that the Lyghest spake/saying: The fyrste that thou hast writtен/speake openly/that the worthy and vnworthy maye rede it.
But kepe the lxx. last/that thou mayest shewe
it onely to suche as be wyse amonge thy people. For in them is the sprynge of vnderstan-dinge/the fountayne of wysdome/and the streame of knowlege/And I dyd so.

The.XV.Chapter.

BEholde/speake thou in the eares of my A people the wordes of prophecye/whiche
I wyll put in thy mouth/sayeth the Lorde/and cause them to be writtен in a letter/for it is the trueth. Feare not the imaginacions against the/let not the vnfaythfulnesse of them trouble the/that speake against the. For al the vnfaithfull shal dye in their vnfaithfulnesse.
Beholde sayeth the Lorde/I wyll bringe plagues vpon the worlde: the swearde/hunger/death and destruccion/for wyckednesse hath the vpperhande in all the earth/& their shamefull workes are fulfilled.

Therfore sayeth the Lorde/I wyll holde B
my tunge nomore vnto their wickednesse/whiche they do so vngodlye: neyther wyll I suffre them in the thinges that they deale withall so wyckedlye. Beholde/the innocēte Apoca.vj bloude of the troubled cryeth vnto me/and and ix.a the soules of the righteous complayne continually: and therfore (sayeth the Lorde) I will surely auenge/and receaue vnto me all innocent bloude from amonge them.

†Beholde/my people is led as a flocke of Psal.xliij shepe to be slayne/I wyl not suffre them now Rom.viij to dwell in Egypte/But wyl bringe them out j.Cor.iiij.b
with a myghty hande/and a stretched oute arme/and smite it with plagues as afore/and will destroye all the lande of it. Egypte shall mourn/and the foundaciōs of it shalbe smyteten with the plague/and puny shmente that God shall bringe vpon it.

They that tyll the grounde/shall mourne/ C for their sedes shalbe destroyed thorowe the blastinge and hale/and an horrible starre. Wo worth the worlde and them that dwell therein/for the swearde and their destruccion draweth nye: and one people shall stande vp to fyght against another/and swerdes in theyr handes. For men shalbe vnstedfast/and some shall do violence vnto other: they shal not re-garde their kynge and princes/the wayes of their doynges and handelinges in their power. A man shall desyre to go into the cytie/and shal not be able. For because of their pride the cities shalbe broughte in feare/the houses
shall

shall shake/and men shalbe afrayed. A man shall haue no pytie vpon his neyghbours/but one shall prouoke another vnto battayl/to spoyle their goodes/because of the hunger of bread/and because of the greate trouble.

D Beholde/I gather and call together all the kynges of the earth/which are from the vprysynge/frō the South/frō the East/& Libanus to turne vnto thē/and restore the thynges that they haue geuen them. Like as they do yet this daye vnto my chosen/so wil I do also/& recō-pence them in their bosome. Thus sayeth the Lorde God/My ryght hande shal not spare
the synners/and my swearde shall not ceasse
ouer them/that shed the innocent bloude vpō
the earth. The fyre is gone out frō his wrath/and hath consumed the foundacions of the earth & the synners/like ỳ strawe that is kindled. Wo worth them that synne/and kepe not my cōmaundementes/sayeth the Lorde: I wil not spare them. Go youre waye ye childrē from violence/defyle not my Sanctuary: for the Lorde knoweth all them that synne a-gaynst him/and therfore delyuereth he them vnto death and destruction: For now are the plagues come vpon the worlde/and ye shall remayne in them. For God shall not deliuer you/because ye haue synned agaynst hym.

E Beholde/an horrible vision commeth from the East/where generacions of Draggons shal come out/& the people of the Arabes with many charrettes/and the multitude of them shalbe as the winde vpon earth/that all they which heare thē ragynge in their wrath/maye feare and be afrayed: and as the wylde Bores out of the wood/so shall they go out/and with greate power shall they come/and stāde fightinge with them/and shall wayst the porcion
of the lande of the Assyrians.

And then shal the Draggons haue the vp-perhande/not remembringe their byrth/and shall turne aboute swearinge together in greate power/to persecute them. But these shalbe afrayed/and kepe silence at their power/and shall flye: and one out of the lande of the Assyrians shall besege them/and consume one of thē/and in their hoost shalbe feare & drede/
and stryfe amonge their kinges.

F Beholde/cloudes from the East/and from the North vnto the South/and they are very horrible to loke vpon/ful of wrath and storme.
They shall smyte one vpon another/and they shall smyte at the a greate starre vpon earth & their starre/and the bloude shalbe from the swearde vnto the belly/and the smoke of man vnto ỳ Camels litter: And there shalbe greate fearfulnes and tremblinge vpon earth/& they that se the wrath shalbe afrayed/and a tremblinge shall come vpon them.

And then shall there come greate raynes
from the South and from the North/& parte from the West/and from the stormy wynde from the East/& shall shut thē vp agayne/and the cloude which he rayseth vp in wrath: and the starre to cause feare towarde the East and Westwinde shalbe destroyed: and the greate cloudes shalbe lift vp/and the myghty cloudes ful of wrath/and the starre/that they maye make all the earth afrayed/and them that dwel therein/and that they maye poure out ouer all places an horrible starre/fyre and hayle/and flyenge swerdes/and many waters: that all feldes maye be full/and all ryuers/and they shall breake doune the cities & walles/moun-taynes and hilles/all trees/wood and ỳ grasse of the medowes/and all their frute. And they shall go stedfast vnto Babylon/and make her afrayed/they shall come to her/and besege her/
the starre and all wrath shall they poure out vpon her.

Then shall the dust and smoke go vp vnto G
the heauen/and all they that be aboute her/shall bewayle her/and they that remayne vnder her/shall do seruice vnto them that haue put her in feare. And thou Asia that comfor-test thy self also vpon the hope of Babylon/& art a worshippe of her persone. Wo be vnto the thou wretch/because thou hast made thy self like vnto her/and hast decte thy doughters in whordom/that they myght triumphe and please thy louers/which haue alwaye desyred to committe whordom with the: thou hast folowed the abhominable citie in all her workes and inuencions.

Therfore sayeth God: I will sende plagues vpon the/wydowhode/powerte/hunger/war-res and pestilence/to wayst thy houses with destruction and death/& the glory of thy power shalbe dryed vp as a floure/whan the heate aryseth that is sent ouer the. Thou shalt be syck as a poore wyfe that is plagued / and beaten of women: so that the myghty and louers shall not be able to receaue the. Wolde I so hate the sayeth the Lorde? If thou haddest not alwaye slayne my chosen/exaltinge ỹ stroke of thy handes/& sayde ouer theyr death/ whan thou wast dronken: set forth the bewtye of thy countenaunce.

The rewarde of thy whordome shalbe recompenced the in thy bosome / therfore shalt thou receaue rewarde.

B Lyke as thou hast done vnto my chosen (sayeth the Lorde) euen so shall God do vnto the / and shall delyuer the into the plague. Thy chyldren shall dye of hunger / and thou shalt fal thorow the swearde Thy cities shalbe broken doune / and all thine shall perysh with the swearde in the felde. They that be in the mountaynes/ shall dye of hunger / & eate their owne flesh / and drynke their owne bloude for very hunger of bread & thyrst of water. Thou vnhappy shalt come thorow the see / & receaue plagues agayne.

In the passage they shall cast doune the slayne cytie/ and shall rote out one parte of thy lande/and consume the porcion of thy glory. They shall treade the doune lyke stouble / and they shalbe thy fyre/and shall consume the thy cities/and thy lande/thy wood/ and thy frutefull trees shal they burne vp with the fyre. Thy children shall they carry awaye captiue: & loke what thou hast/they shall spoyle it/ and marre the beuty of thy face.

The XVI. Chapter.

A WO vnto the Babylon and Asia/ wo vnto the Egypte and Syria: gyrde your selfes with clothes of sack and heere / & mourne for youre chyldren/ be sory/ for your destruction is at hande. A swearde is sent vpon you / & who will turne it back? A fyre is kindled amonge you/and who will quench it? Plagues are sent vnto you/and what is he that will dryue them awaye? Maye any man dryue awaye an hungrie Lyon in the wood? Or maye any man quench the fyre in the stubble/ whan it hath begonne to burne? Maye one turne agayne the arowe that is shot of a stronge archer? The myghty Lorde sendeth the plagues / & what is he that will dryue them awaye? The fyre is kindled & gone forth in his wrath / and what is he that will quench it? He shall cast lightninges/& who shall not feare? He shall thonder/and who shall not be afrayed? The Lord shall threaten / and who shall not vtterly be beaten to poulder at his presence? The earth quaketh / and the foundacions therof: the see aryseth vp with waues from the depe / and the floudes of it are vnquiete / and the fishes therof also before the Lorde / and before the glory of his power. For stronge is hys ryghthande that holdeth the bowe/his arowes that he shooteth are sharpe/and shall not mysse/whan they begynne to be shot into the endes of the worlde.

Beholde/the plagues are sent/and shall not B turne agayne/tyll they come vpon earth. The fyre is kyndled / and shall not be put out/ tyll it consume the foundacions of the earth. Like as an arowe which is shot of a myghty archer returneth not backward/ euen so ỹ plagues that shalbe sent vpon earth / shal not turne againe/ Wo is me/ wo is me/ who wyll delyuer me in those dayes? The begynninge of sorowes and great mourninge: the beginninge of derth & greate death / the beginninge of warres / and the powers shall stande in feare: the beginninge of euels/& they shall tremble euery one. What shall I do in these thynges whan the plagues come? Beholde/ hunger and plague/ trouble and anguysh are sent / as scourges for amendement. But for all these thynges they shall not turne from theyr wickednesses / nor be alwaye myndefull of the scourges.

Beholde/ vitayles shalbe so good cheape vp- C pon earth / that they shall thynke them selfes to be in good case: & euen then shall myschiefe growe vpon earth/ warres / derth and greate disquietnes. For many of them that dwell vpon earth shal perysh of hunger/ and the other that escape the hunger / shall the swearde destroye: and the dead shalbe cast out as doūge/ and there shalbe noman to comforte them. For the earth shalbe waysted / and the cities shalbe cast doune: there shalbe no man left to tyll the earth/& to sowe it. The trees shall geue frute / and who shall plucke thē of and gather thē? The grapes shalbe rype/& who shal treade them? For all places shalbe desolate of men/ so that one man shall desyre to se another/ or to heare his voyce. For of one whole citie there shalbe ten left/and two in the felde/which shal hyde them selfes in the thicke busshes / and in ỹ clyftes of stones: lyke as whan there remaine thre or foure olyues vpon the olyue tree / or as whan a vyneyarde is gathered / there are left some grapes / of them that diligently sought thorow the vyneyarde.

D Euen so in those dayes there shalbe thre or foure left/ for thē that search their houses with the swearde. And the earth shalbe left waist/ & the feldes therof shall wexe olde: & her wayes/ and all her pathes shall growe full of thornes/ because no man shall trauayle there thorow. The doughters shall mourne hauinge no brydegromes: the women shall make lamentacion/ hauynge no housbandes / their doughters shall mourne / hauinge no helpe of theyr brydegrome. In the warres shall they be destroyed/ and their housbandes shall perysh of hunger. O ye seruauntes of the Lord / heare these thinges/and marke them. Beholde/the worde of the Lord/O receaue it: beholde/ the plagues drawe nye / and are not slack in taryinge. Lyke as a trauaylinge woman/ which in the ix. moneth bringeth forth a sonne / whan the houre of the byrth is come / an houre two or thre afore that the paynes come vpon her body / and whan the chylde commeth to the byrth/they tary not the twynckлinge of an eye: Euen so shall not the plagues be slack to come vpon earth/and the worlde shall mourne/ and sorowes shall come vpon it on euery syde.

E O my people / heare my worde / make you ready to the battayl: and in all euell be euen as pylgrems vpon earth. He that selleth/let him be as he that flyeth his waye: & he that bieth/ vij. d as one that wil lese. † Who so occupieth marchaundise/as he that wynneth not: and he that buyldeth/as he that shall not dwell therein: he that soweth / as one that shall not reape: he that twysteth the vyneyarde / as he that shall not gather the grapes: they that marry/as they that shall get no chyldren: and they that xxvj. a marry not as the wydowes: † and therfore xxv. c they that laboure/labour in vayne. For straungers xvj. b shall reape their frutes / and spoyle their goodes/ ouerthrowe their houses / & take their chyldren captiue: for in captiuitie and hunger shall they get children. And they that occupie their marchaundises with robbery / how lōge decke they their cities/ their houses/ their possessions and persones: the more will I punish them for their synnes sayeth the Lord. Lyke as an whore enuyeth and honest woman/ so shall righteousnes hate iniquitie / whan she decketh her self/and shall accuse her to her face/ whan he commeth that defendeth/which shall make inquisicion for al synne vpon earth. And therfore be not ye like thereunto/ nor to ỹ workes therof: for or euer it be lōge/ iniquite shalbe taken awaye out of the earth / and righteousnes shall raygne amonge you.

Let not the sinner saye that he hath not sin- F ned: for coles of fyre shal burne vpō his heade/ which saieth before the Lorde God and his glory: I haue not synned. Beholde/the Lord knoweth all the workes of men / their imaginacions / their thoughtes / and their hertes. † For he spake but the worde: Let the earth be Gen. j. c made / & it was made: let the heauen be made/ and it was made. In his worde were the starres made/and he knoweth the numbre of thē. He searcheth the grounde of the depe/and the treasures therof: he hath measured the see/ and what it conteineth. He hath shut the see in the middest of the waters / and with his worde hath he hangeth the earth vpon the waters. He spredeth out the heauen like a voulte: vpon the waters hath he founded it. In the deserte and drye wyldernes hath he made springes of water / and poules vpon the toppe of the mountaynes / that the floudes myght poure doune from the stony rockes to water the earth. He made man/ and put his hert in the myddest of the body/ and gaue him brieth/ lyfe and vnderstandinge/ yee / and the sprete of the almighty God/ which made all thinges / and hath searched the grounde of all the secretes of the earth.

He knoweth youre imaginacions and in- G uencions / and what ye thinke whan ye synne and wolde hyde youre synnes. Therfore hath the Lord searched & sought out all your workes/ & he shall bewraye you all. And whā your synnes are brought forth / ye shalbe ashamed before men/ & youre owne synnes shalbe youre accusers in that daie. What wil ye do? Or how will ye hyde youre synnes before God and his aungels? Beholde / God him self is the iudge/ feare him/ leaue of frō youre sinnes/ and forget your vnrighteousnesses/ and medle no more with them: so shall God lede you forth/ and delyuer you from all trouble. For beholde/ the heate of a greate multitude is kindled ouer you/and they shall take awaye certayne of you/ and fede the ydle with Idols: and they that consent vnto thē/ shalbe had in derision/ laughed to scorne/and troden vnderfote.

H For vnto the places there shalbe a place/and in the next cities a greate insurrection vpon those that feare the Lorde. They shalbe like mad men/ they shall spare no man: they shall spoyle & wayst such as feare the Lorde/ their goodes shall they take from them/ and shut them out of theyr houses. Then shal it be knowen who are my chosen/ and they shalbe tryed as the golde in the fyre. Heare O ye my beloued/ sayeth the Lorde/ beholde/ the dayes of trouble are at hande/ but I will delyuer you from thesame. Be not ye afraied/ dispayre not/ for God is youre captayne.

Who so kepeth my commaundemētes and preceptes/ (sayeth the Lorde God) let not youre synnes weye you doune/ & let not youre vnrighteousnesses be lift vp. Wo be vnto thē that are subdued vnto theyr synnes/ and tangled in their wickednesses: lyke as a felde is hedged in with busshes/ and the path therof couered with thornes/ that no man maye trauayle thorow: and so is he taken/ and cast in the fyre and brent.

The ende of the iiij. boke of Esdras.

The boke of Tobias.

The fyrst Chapter.

TObias was of the trybe and citie of Nephthaly/ which lyeth in the hye coūtries of Galile/ aboue Naason the waye towarde the West/ hauynge the citie of Sephet vpō the left syde.

Though he was taken pryſoner in ỹ dayes of † Salmanasar kinge of the Assyrians/ neuertheles/ beynge in captiuitie/ he forsoke not the waye of trueth: In so much that whatsoeuer he myght get/ he parted it dayly with his felow pryſoners and brethren/ that were of his kynred. And though he were yonger then all they in the tryde of Nephtali/ yet dyd not he behaue him self chyldesly in his workes. And whan all the other wente to the golden calfes/ †, which Jeroboam the kynge of Israel had made/ he him self alone fled all their companyes/ and gat hym to Jerusalem vnto the temple of the Lorde/ and there worshipped the Lorde God of Israel/ faythfully † offeringe all his fyrst frutes and tythes/ so that in the thyrde yeare he ministred all the tythes vnto the straūgers and conuertes. These and such lyke thynges dyd he accordinge to the lawe of God/whan he was yet but yonge.

But whan he was a man/ he toke † out of his owne trybe a wyfe called Anna/ and of her he begat a sonne/ whome he called after his owne name/ and taught hym from his youth vp to feare God/ and to refrayne from all synne.

Now whan he with his wyfe/ his sonne/ and with all his kynred was come in captiuitie vnto † Ninue/ what tyme as they al dyd eate of the meates of the Heythen/ he kepte his soule/ and was neuer defyled in their meates.

† And for so much as he was myndfull of the Lord in all his hert/ God gaue him fauoure in the presence of Salmanasar ỹ kynge/ which gaue him power to go where he wolde/ and so had he lybertie to do what him lyst.

So wente Tobias vnto all thē that were in pryſon/ † and comforted them/ and gaue them wholsome exhortacions. And whā he came to Rages a citie of ỹ Medes/ & hauinge talētes of syluer (of the thynges wherwith the kinge had honoured hym) and sawe amōge a greate company of people of his kynred/ one Gabelus (which was of his owne trybe) beynge in necessite/ he gaue hym the sayde weyght of siluer vnder an hand writynge.

After a longe season whan Salmanasar the kyng was dead/ & Sennacherib his sonne raygned in his steade/ which hated the chyldren of Israel/ Tobias wente dayly thorowout all his kynred/ and comforted them/ and gaue gaue of his goodes to euery one of them as much as he myght: he fed the hungry/ clothed the naked/ and buried the dead and slaine/ and that diligently.

D † And whan Sennacherib the kinge came agayne and fled out of Jewry (what tyme as God punyshed hym for his blasphemy) and in his wrath slew many of the chyldren of Israel/ Tobias † buried their bodies. But whan it was tolde the kinge/ he cōmaunded to slaye hym/ & take awaye all hys goodes. Neuertheles/ Tobias with his wyfe fled his waye/ and was hyd naked/ for there were many ỹ loued hym. But after xlv. dayes ỹ kinge was slaine of his owne sōnes. Then came Tobias againe to his house/ and all his goodes were restored vnto hym.

The II. Chapter.

AFter these thynges vpon a solempne daye of the Lord/ Tobias made a good feast in his house/ and sayde vnto his sonne: Go thy waye/ & bringe hyther some of oure trybe/ such as feare God/ ỹ they may make merry wt vs. And whā he was gone/ he came agayne and tolde his father/ that one of the chyldren of Israel laye vpon the strete. And immediatly he leapt frō his table/ left the feast/ came fastinge to the dead coarse/ toke him and bare him priuely into his house/ that whan ỹ Sunne was doune/ he myght safely burye him. And whan he had hyd the coarse/ he dyd eate his meate with mournynge and feare/ remembringe the wordes that the Lorde sayde by the prophet Amos: † youre hye feastes shalbe turned to sorowe and heauynes.

Amos viij.

Mac.j.d

B But whā the Sunne was doune/ he wente his waye and buried him. Then all his neighboure reproued him/ sayinge: It is not longe/ sence † it was commaunded to slaye the because of this matter/ & hast scarce escaped the daunger of death/ and buriest thou the dead agayne? Neuertheles/ Tobias fearinge God more then the king/ toke the bodies of ỹ slaine/ hyd them in his house/ and buried them at mydnyght.

obie.j.d

C It happened vpon a daye/ that he had buried ỹ dead/ and was weery/ came home/ and layed him doune by the wal and slepte. And whyle he was a slepe/ there fel doune vpō his eyes warme doūge out of the swalowes nest/ so that he was blinde. † This tentacion dyd God suffre to happen vnto him/ ỹ they which came after/ myght haue an example of his pacience/ like as of holy Job. For in so much as he euer feared God frō his youth vp/ & kepte his commaundementes/ he was not heauy agaynst God/ that ỹ plague of blindnes chaūced vnto him/ but remained stedfast in ỹ feare of God/ & thanked God all ỹ dayes of his life.

Deu.viij. c and xij.c Joan.ix.a and xj.a

For like as blessed Job was had in derision of kinges/ euen so was he laughed to scorne of his elders and kinsfolkes/ which sayde vnto hym: † where is thy hope/ for the which thou hast done almes and buried the dead? But Tobias rebuked them/ and spake: † Saye not so/ for we are the chyldren of holy men/ and loke for the lyfe/ which God shall geue vnto them/ that neuer turne their belefe from him. Anna his wyfe † wēte dayly to the weuynge worke/ and loke what lyuinge she coulde get with the labour of her handes/ she brought it. And it happened that she toke a kyd and brought it home.

The. III. Chapter.

THen Tobias toke it heauely/ & with teares beganne to make his prayer/ sayinge: O Lord/ thou art righteous/ and all thy iudgementes are true/ † yee/ all thy wayes are mercy/ faithfulnes/ and iudgement. And now O Lord be mindeful of me/ and take no vengeaunce of my sinnes/ neyther remembre my mysdedes/ nor the mysdedes of my elders. For we haue not bene obedient vnto thy cōmaundementes/ therfore are we spoiled/ brought into captiuitie/ into death/ into derision/ and shame vnto all nacions/ amōge whome thou hast scatred vs. And now O Lorde/ thy iudgementes are greate/ for we haue not done accordinge to thy commaundementes/ neyther haue we walked innocently before the. And now O Lorde/ deale with me accordinge to thy wyll/ and commaunde my spirete to be re-ceaued in peace / for more expedient were it for me to dye then to lyue.

B At the same tyme it happened / that Sara the doughter of Raguel at Rages a citie of the Medes was sclaundred of one of her fathers handmaydens / namely / that she shoulde haue had seuen housbandes / which as soone as they were gone in vnto her / were slayne of the deuel called Asmodeus. Therfore whan she reproued the mayden for her faulte / she aunswered her / sayinge: God let vs neuer se sonne nor doughter of the more vpō earth / thou killer of thy housbandes. Wilt thou slay me also / as thou hast slayne seuen men? At this voyce wente Sara into an hye chaūber of her house / and thre dayes and thre nyghtes she neyther dyd eate nor drynke / but continued in prayer / and besought God with teares / that he wolde deliuer her from this rebuke.

C Vpon the thyrde daye it chaunched / that whan she had made an ende of her prayer / she praysed the Lorde / sayinge: Blessed be thy name O God of oure fathers / which whan thou art wroth / shewest mercy / and in the time of trouble thou forgeuest the synnes of them that call vpon the. Vnto the O Lorde turne I my face / vnto the lift I vp myne eyes. I beseche the O Lorde / louse me out of the bandes of this rebuke / or els take me vtterly awaye from of the earth. Thou knowest Lorde / that I neuer had desyre vnto man / & that I haue kepte my soule cleane from all vncleanly lust. I haue not kepte company with those that passe their time in sporte / neyther haue I made my self partaker with thē that walke in lighte behauoure. Neuertheles / an housbande haue I consented to take / not for my pleasure / but in thy feare.

D Now peraduenture / eyther I haue bene vnworthy of thē / or els were they vnmete for me / for thou happly hast kepte me to another housband. † For why? thy counsaill is not in ỹ power of mā. But whosoeuer loueth the / and seruyth the a ryght / is sure / that if his lyfe be tempted & proued / it standeth in the tryenge: and if he endure in pacience / he shal haue a rewarde and be hyghlye crouned: and if he be in trouble / that God (no doubte) shall delyuer hym: and if his lyfe be in chastenynge / that he shall haue leaue to come vnto thy mercy.

For thou hast no pleasure in oure dampnacion: and why? after a storme thou makest the wether fayre and stil: after wepinge and heauynes thou geuest greate ioye. Thy name O God of Israel / be praysed for euer. At the same time were both their prayers herd in the sight of the maiesty of the hyghest God. And Raphael the holy aungel of the Lorde was sent to helpe them both / whose prayers came together before God.

The. IIII. Chapter.

SO whan Tobias thoughte his prayer to be herde that he might dye / he called vnto him his sonne Tobias / and sayde vnto him: My sonne / heare the wordes of my mouthe / & laye them in thine hert as a foundacion. Whā God taketh awaye my soule / burye thou my body / † & holde thy mother in honoure all the dayes of her life. For thou oughtest to remembre / what & how greate parels she suffred for ỹ in her wōbe. And whan she also hath fulfilled the time of her life / bury her besyde me. Haue God in thy thought all the dayes of thy life / and bewere / † lest / at any tyme thou consent vnto synne / and lest / thou let slippe the commaundementes of the Lorde oure God.

B Geue almes of thy goodes / and turne neuer thy face from the poore: and so shal it come to passe / that the face of the Lorde shall not be turned awaye from the. † Be mercifull after thy power. If thou hast much / geue plenteously: if thou hast litle / dothy diligence gladly to geue of that litle. For so gatherest thou thy self a good rewarde in the daye of necessite. For almes delyuereth ỹ from death / and suffreth not the soule to come in darkenes. A greate comforte is almes before the hygh God / vnto all them that do it.

* My sonne / kepe the wel frō all whoredome / & besyde thy wyfe se that no fault be knowen of the. Let neuer pryde haue rule in thy mynde nor in thy worde / † for in pryde begāne all destruction.

† Whosoeuer worketh any thinge for the / C immediatly geue him his hyre / and loke that thy hyred seruaunte wagies remayne not by the ouer night. † Loke that thou neuer do vnto another man / the thinge that thou woldest not another man shoulde do vnto the. † Eate thy breed with the hungry and poore / and couer the

uer ỹ naked with thy clothes. Set thy bread and wyne vpon the buriall of the righteous / and do not thou eate and drinke therof with the synners. Aske euer counsayll at the wyse.

Be alwaye thankefull vnto God / and beseke him that he wil ordre thy wayes / and that whatsoeuer thou deuyseste or takest in hande / it maye remayne in hym. I certifie the also my sonne / that (whan thou wast yet but a babe) † I delyuered tē talentes of syluer vnto Gabelus / at Rages a citie of the Medes / and his hādwritinge haue I by me. And therfore seke some meanes / how thou mayest come by hym / and receaue of hym the sayd weyght of syluer / and geue hym his handwritinge againe.

My sonne / be not afrayed: trueth it is / we lede here a poore life / † but greate good shall we haue if we feare God / and departe from al synne / and do well.

The V. Chapter.

AThe aunswered Tobias vnto his father / and sayde: father / all that thou hast commaunded me / will I do / and that diligently. But how I shall require thys money / I can not tell. Neyther doeth he knowe me / nor I him. What token shall I geue him: And as for the waye thither / I neuer knew it. Then his father aunswered him / and sayde: I haue his handwritinge by me / which whan thou shewest him / immediatly he shall paye the. But go thy waye now / and get the some faithfull man to go with ỹ for an hyre / that thou maiest receaue the money / whyle I am yet lyuinge.

B Then wente Tobias out / and vpō the strete he founde a fayre yonge man standinge / gyrded vp / and as it were one ready to take his iourney. And he knew not that it was an aūgel of God / but saluted him / and sayde: From whence art thou / thou good yonge man? He aunswered: Of the children of Israel.

And Tobias sayde vnto hym: knowest thou the waye / that ledeth vnto the countrie of the Medes? He aunswered: I knowe it well / and all those stretes haue I gone oft tymes / and haue lodged with oure brother Gabelus / that dwelleth in Rages a citie of ỹ Medes / which lyeth vpon the mount Egbathanis. Tobias sayde vnto him: I praye the / tary for me / tyll I haue tolde my father these thinges. Then wente Tobias in / and tolde hys father all. At the which his father maruayled / and prayed that he wolde come in vnto him.

Now whan the aungel came in / he saluted C him / and saide: ioye be with the for euermore. And olde Tobias saide: what ioye can I haue / that syt here in darcknes / and se not the light of heauen? The yonge man sayde vnto hym: Be of good cheare / God shal helpe the shortly. And Tobias said vnto him: Canst thou bringe my sonne to Gabelus / vnto the citie of Rages in Media? And whan thou commest agayne / I shall paye the thy hyre. And the aungel saide vnto hym: I shall lede thy sonne / and bringe him to ỹ agayne. Thē Tobias aunswered him: Tell me I praye the / of what house / or of what trybe art thou?

The aungel Raphael saide vnto him: Aseke thou after the kinred of an hyrelinge / or sekest thou a gyde for thy sōne to go with him? But that I make the not careful / I am Azarias the sonne of greate Hananias. And Tobias aunswered: Thou art come of a greate kinred / but I praye the / be not displeased / that I desyred to knowe thy kinred. The aungel sayde vnto hym: Thy sonne shall I lede forth safely / and bringe him whole to the againe.

Then aunswered Tobias and saide / well go D on youre waye / & God be in youre iourney / & his aungel beare you cōpany. So whan they had prepared all thinges / that they wolde take with thē in their iourney / Tobias bad his father & his mother farewel / and they wente on their waye both together. Now whan they were gone / his mother beganne to wepe / and saide: † The staf of oure age hast thou taken awaye / and sent him from vs. Tob. r. &

Wolde God that money had neuer bene / for ỹ which thou hast sent him awaye. If we had bene content with our pouerte / this had bene greate ryches vnto vs / that we sawe oure sōne here. Then saide Tobias vnto her: wepe not / oure sonne shall come to vs againe safe and sōūde / and thine eyes shall se him. For I trust / that the good aungel of God shall beare him company / and ordre well all the thinges that he doeth: so that he shall come to vs againe with ioye. At these wordes his mother left of from wepynge / and helde her tunge.

The. VI. Chapter.

AGo Tobias wēte on his waye / & a dogge folowed hym / and the fyrst nyght they abode by the water of Tigris. Then wente he out to wash his fete / and beholde / there came forth an horrible fish to deuoure him. Of whome Tobias was afrayed/and cried with a loude voyce/sayinge/Lorde he cōmeth vpon me. And the aūgel sayde vnto hym: Take him by the ioule / & drawe him to the. And he dyd so/and drewe him vpon the lande/and the fish beganne to leape at his fete.

BThen sayde the aungel vnto him: Take out the bowels of this fish/and as for the herte/the gall/and the leuer/kepe them by the. For these thinges are necessary and good for medicine. Tobias dyd so / and rosted the fish/ and they toke him with them in their iourney: the residue they salted / as much as was sufficient for them / till they came to Rages. Thē Tobias axed the aungel/and sayde vnto hym: I praye the brother Azarias / tell me / wherto are these thinges good of the fish / that hast bydden my to kepe?

The aungel aunswered him and sayde: If thou layest a pece of the hert vpon the coales/ the smoke therof dryueth awaye all maner of euell spretes / whether it be from man or from womā/ so that from thence forth thesame shall come nomore vnto them. The gall is gōod to anoynte or to strake the eyes withall/ where as there is any blemish in them / so shall they be whole.

CAnd Tobias sayde vnto him: where wilt thou that we remayne? The aungel aūswered Nu.xxxvj.a and saide: † Here is a nye kinsman of thyne/ one Raguel by name / which hath a doughter called Sara/& hath neither sonne nor daughter but her. All his good belongeth vnto the/ and thou must marry his doughter: and therfore desyre her of her father / and he shall geue her the to wyfe. Thē aunswered Tobias and sayde: As I vnderstande/ she hath bene maried vnto seuen housbandes / and they all are dead: and I haue herde saye / that the deuell slew thē. I am afrayed therfore/lest/ such thinges happen vnto me also: which if it came to passe (seynge I am the onely sonne of my father and my mother) I shulde bringe them in their age with sorow to their graues.

Then saide the aungel Raphael vnto him: DHeare me/and I will tell the/ what they be of whome the deuell hath power. Namely/they that receaue marriage of such a fashion/ that they shut God out from thē and from their hert/† and geue them selfes to their owne lust/ j.Thes *cuen as it were an horse & muyle/which haue *Psa no vnderstandinge: vpon such hath the deuel power. † But whan thou takest her/& art come Tob. into the chaumber/ withhold thy self from her thre dayes / and geue thy diligence vnto no thynge/but vnto prayer with her.

And in the fyrste night rooste ỳ leuer of the fish/ and the deuel shalbe dryuen awaye. The seconde nyght shalt thou be receaued into the company of the holy patriarkes. The thirde night shalt thou optayne the blessinge of God/ so that whole and sounde childrē shalbe borne of you. After the thirde night take the mayden in the feare of God/ and more for the desyre of children/thē for any fleshly lust: that in the sede of Abraham thou maiest optaine the blessinge in children.

The VII. Chapter.

THen wente they into Raguel / which re- Aceaued them ioyfully. And whan Raguel loked vpon Tobias / he sayde vnto Anna his wyfe: How lyke is this yonge man vnto my sisters sonne. And whā he had spoken this/ he sayde: whence be ye good brethrē? They saide: Of the trybe of Nephtali / out of the captiuitie of Ninive. Then said Raguel vnto thē: knowe ye my brother Tobias? They sayde: yea / we knowe him well. And whan he had spoken much good of him/the aungel sayde vnto Raguel: Tobias of whom thou axest/ is this yōge mans father. Then Raguel bowed him self doune/ and wepte / toke him aboute the neck/ and kyssed him/ and sayde: † Gods blessynge Tobi haue thou my sonne / for thou art the sonne of a good verteous man. And Anna his wyfe & Sara his doughter wepte also.

Now whā they had talked together/Raguel Bbad kyll a wether / and to make a feast. And whan he prayed them to syt doune to dynner/ Tobias said: I wil neither eate nor drinke here this daye/ excepte thou first graūte me my peticion/ & promise me to geue me thy doughter Sara. Whā Raguel herde this/he was astonnyed / for he knew what had happened vnto the other seuen men/that wente in vnto her: and he beganne to feare/that it should chaūge vnto him also in lyke maner.

And whyle he stode so in doubte/and gaue the yonge man no aunswere/the aungel saide vnto him: Feare not to geue him thy doughter / for vnto this man that feareth God / belongeth thy doughter to wyfe/therfore might none other haue her.

CThen saide Raguel: I doubte not/but God hath accepted my prayers and teares in his syght: and I trust he caused you to come vnto me for thesame intent / that this doughter of myne might be married in her owne kinred/† accordinge to the lawe of Moses. And Nu.xxxvj.c now doubte thou not/but I wil geue her vn Deu.vij.c to the: So he toke the ryghthande of hys doughter/and gaue her into the right hande of Tobias/and sayde: The God of Abraham/ the God of Isaac/and the God of Jacob be with you/ioyne you together/and fulfyll hys blessinge in you. And they toke a letter and made a wrytinge of the marriage. And then made they merry/and praysed God. And Raguel called Anna his wyfe vnto hym / & bad her prepare another chaumber/and thither he brought Sara his doughter/and she wepte. Then sayde he vnto her: Be of good cheare my doughter / the Lorde of heauen geue the ioye / for the heauynesse that thou haste suffred.

The. VIII. Chapter.

ANowe after that they had supped / they broughte the yonge man into her. Then thought Tobias vpon the wordes of the aungel/and toke out of his bagge a pece of the leuer of the fysh/and layed it vpon the hote coales. So the aungel Raphael toke holde of the deuell/and sente him awaye/and bound him in the wylderneſſe of the hyer Egypte. Then spake Tobias vnto the virgine/and saide: Vp Sara/† let vs make oure prayer vnto God to Deu.vij.a daye/to morow/and nexte morowe: for these thre nyghtes wyll we reconcyle oure selfes with God: and whan the thirde holy night is past/we shal ioyne together in the deutye of marriage. For we are the chyldren of holy men/and we maye not come together as the BHeithen/that knowe not God.

b.vj.d †Then stode they vp both togeather/and besought God eacnestly/that he wolde preserue them. And Tobias sayde: O Lorde God of oure fathers / praysed be thou of heauen & earth of the see/ welles & floudes / & of all the creatures ỳ be therin. † Thou maydest Adam Gen. ij.b of the moulde of the earth / & gauest him Eua for an helper. And nowe Lorde thou knowest that it is not because of voluptcousnes/ that I take this syster of myne to wyfe / but onely for the loue of children / in whome thy name be blessed for euer. And Sara sayde: haue mercy vpon vs (O Lord) haue mercy vpon vs/ and let vs both come whole and sounde to a good age.

And aboute the cocke crowe / it happened that Raguel called his seruauntes / and they wente with hym to make a graue. For he sayde: it is chaunced vnto him peraduenture/as it dyd vnto the other seuē mē/ỳ went in vnto her. Nowe/whan they had made the graue/Raguel came agayne to his wyfe/ and sayde vnto her: sende one of thy maydens to loke if he be dead/ that I maye burye him afore it be lyght daye. C

So she sent a mayden to se / whiche whan she came into the chaumber/she founde them whole and sounde / slepinge togeather. And so she came agayne/ and broughte good tydinges. Then Raguel and Anna his wyfe Dprayed the Lorde / and sayde: Prayed be thou O Lorde God of Israel. For it is not happened vnto vs as we thoughte / for thou hast dealte mercifully with vs/ and put awaye from vs the enemye that persecuted vs/ and hast shewed mercy vnto yonder two beloued. O Lord cause them to magnifye the more perfecly / and to offre the the sacrifyce of thy prayse / and of theyr healthe: that all people maye knowe/ that thou onely art God in all the earth.

And immediatly/Raguel commaunded Ehis seruauntes to fyll the graue that they had made/with earth/afore it was light: and bad his wyfe prepare a feast / & to make ready all thinges that were necessary for meate / to suche as wente by the waye. He caused two fat kyne also/and foure wethers to be slayne/ and meates to be prepared for all hys neighbours and frendes.

And Raguel charged Tobias to remayne with him two wekes. As for all the good that he had/he gaue Tobias the one halfe of it/ and made this writinge/ that the half which remayned/should fall vnto Tobias after their death.

The IX. Chapter.

A THen Tobias called vnto hym the aungel whome he thought to haue ben a mā and sayde vnto hym: Brother Azarias/ I praye ỹ herkē vnto my wordes: If I shoulde geue my self to be thy seruaūt/ I shall not deserue thy prouydēce. Neuertheles/ I beseche ỹ that thou wilt take the beastes and the seruaūtes/ & go vnto Gabelus in Rages the citie of Medes/and delyuer him his handwriting/ and receaue the money of him/and praye him to come to my marriage. For thou knowest thy selfe/that my father telleth the dayes: and if I tary one daye to longe/ he wyll be sory in his mynde. Nowe seyst thou howe earnestly Raguel hath requyred me/ so that I can not saye hym naye.

Then toke Raphael foure of Raguels seruauntes/ and two Camels/ and wente vnto Rages the citie of the Medes: and whan he had founde Gabelus/ he gaue him his handwrytinge/ & receaued all the money. He tolde him also of Tobias the sonne of Toby/ howe al thinges had happened/and caused hym to

B come with him to the marriage. Now whan he came into the house of Raguel/ he founde Tobias syttinge at the table: and he leapte vp/ and they kyssed one another/ and Gabelus

Tob. viij. a wepte/and praysed God/and sayde: † the blessing of the God of Israel haue thou/ for thou art the sonne of a right verteous and iust mā/ and of one that feareth God/ & geueth greate almes. And blessing haue thy wyfe/and your parentes/ that ye maye se your children/ and youre childers chyldren/ vnto the thirde and fourth generacion/and that youre sede maye be blessed of th God of Israel/ whiche raygneth worlde withoute ende. And whan they al had saide Amen/they went to the feast/ but with the feare of the O Lord helde they the feast of the marriage.

The. X. Chapter.

A NOwe whyle yonge Tobias made longe tarienge/ By reason of the marriage/ his father was ful of care & heauynes/ & thought what shoulde be the cause that my sonne taryeth so longe? Or why shoulde he be kepte so longe there? Peraduenture Gabelus is dead/and no man wyll geue him the money. Thus beganne he to be very soroweful/ he and Anna his wyfe with hym/ and beganne to wepe both together/ Because theyr sonne was not come agayne vnto them at the daye appoynted. As for his mother/ she wepte with discomfortable teares/and saide: Wo is me/ my sonne: Oh what ayled vs to sende the away into a straunge countrie/ thou light of oure eyes/ † thou staff of our age/ thou Tob. v. b comforte of oure lyfe/ thou hope of oure generacion? Seinge the thinges that we haue are onely in the/ we shoulde not haue sente the awaye from vs.

Then Tobias comforted her/ and sayde: Holde thy tunge/ and be not discomforted/ oure sonne is whole and sounde: the mā that we sente him withall/ is faythfull ynough. Neuertheless/ she might in no wyse be comforted/ But dayly wente oute/ loked aboute/ and wente aboute all the stretes/ wherby she thoughte he shoulde come agayne: that (if it were possible) she might se hym comminge a farre of.

But Raguell sayde vnto his sonne in law: O tary here/ and I shall sende a messaunger vnto thy father Tobias to tell hym that thou art in good healthe. Tobias sayde vnto hym: I am sure that my father and my mother counte euery day/ and that theyr hertes are sory.

So whan Raguel prayed Tobias with C many wordes/and he wolde in no wyse heare him/ he delyuered Sara vnto him/ and the half parte of al his goodes: in seruauntes and handmaidens/in shepe/ in camels/ & in kyne/ and much money/and so sent him awaye frō him with peace and ioye/and sayde: The holy aungell of the Lorde be with you in youre iourney/and brynge you forth safe & sounde/ that ye maye fynde all thinges in good case with youre elders/and that myne eyes maye se youre children afore I dye.

So the elders enbraced theyr doughter kyssed her/ and let her go/ exhortinge her to honoure her father and mother in lawe/ to loue her housband/ to rule wel her household/ to kepe her house in good ordre/ and to shewe her selfe blamelesse.

The. XI. Chapter.

A NOwe as they were goying homeward agayne/ vpon the xj. daye they came to Charra/ whiche lyeth in the halfe waye towarde Ninive. And the aungell sayde: Brother Tobias/ thou knowest howe thou haste left thy father: therfore if it please the/ we two will go before/ and let the housholde with thy wyfe and the cattel come soft and fayrly after vs. And whan Tobias was content that they shoulde go before/ Raphael sayde vnto him: Take of the gall of the fishe with the/ for it shalbe necessarye. So Tobias toke of the gal/ and they wente theyr waye. But Anna the mother of Tobias sat dayly by the wayesyde vpon the toppe of an hill/ from whence she might se farre aboute her.

B And whyle she was waytinge there for his commynge/ she loked afarre of/ and anone she perceaued her sonne comminge/ and ranne and tolde her housbande/ sayinge: Beholde/ thy sonne commeth. And Raphael saide vnto Tobias: As soone as thou commest into the house/ immediatly worshippe the Lorde thy God/ and geue thankes vnto him/ then go to thy father/ and kysse him/ & strake his eyes ouer with the gall of the fysh/ that thou haste brought with the. For be sure/ that his eyes shall straygh waye be opened/ and thy father shall se the lyght of heauen/ & shall reioyce at the syght of the. Then the dogge that had bene with thē in their iourney/ ranne before and came as a messaunger/ and wagged ih his tayle for gladnes.

C So the blinde father arose/ and beganne to runne/ and stombled with his fete/ & gaue a seruaunt his hande/ ranne to mete his sonne/ receaued him/ and kyssed him/ he and his wife and beganne to wepe for ioye.

Now whan they had worshipped & thanked God/ they sat doune. Then toke Tobias of the fyshes gall/ and anoynted his fathers eyes: and taried halfe an houre/ and then begāne the blemishe to go out of his eyes/ lyke as it had bene the whyte skynne of an egge: which Tobias toke and drew from his eyes/ and immediatly he receaued his sight.

D Then they praysed God/ he and his wyfe/ and all they that knewe hym. And Tobias sayde: O Lorde God of Israel/ I geue the prayse and thankes/ for thou haste chastened me/ and made me whole. And lo/ nowe do I se my sonne Tobias. After seuen dayes came Sara his sonnes wyfe also whole and sound with all the household and cattel/ with camels and much money of his wyfes/ and with the money that he had receaued of Gabelus: and he tolde his father and his mother all the benefytes/ which God had done for him/ by the man that led him. Achior also and Nabath/ Tobias syster sonnes came and were glad/ & reioyced with him/ by reason of all the good that God had shewed vnto him.

And so for the space of seuē daies they made merry/ and were right ioyful euerychone.

The XII. Chapter.

A THen Tobias called his sonne vnto him & sayde: What maye we geue this holy man that went with the? Tobias aunswered his father and saide: Father/ what rewarde shal we geue him? Or what thinge can deserue his benefytes? He hath bene my gyde/ and brought me safe againe: he receaued the money from Gabelus/ he caused me to gete my wyfe/ he droue the cuel spriete frō her/ he hath bene occasyon of gladnesse to her father and mother: he delyuered me/ that I was not deuoured of the fish/ he hath made the to se the light of heauē/ yee/ we al haue receaued great good of him. How shoulde we worthely deserue these thinges vnto him? But I praye the my father/ ỹ thou wilt desyre him/ if happly he wyl voutsafe/ to take with him the half of al that we haue brought.

So the father & the sonne called him/ toke hym asyde/ and beganne to praye him/ that he wolde be content to take in good worth/ the halfe parte of all that they had brought. Then sayde he secretly vnto them: Prayse the God of heauen/ and geue thankes vnto hym before all men lyuynge/ for he hath shewed his mercy ✠ vnto vs. It is good to hyde the Some read- Kynges secrete/ But to shew and to prayse the de: vnto workes of God/ it is an honorable thynge. you. D Whan they herde this/they were sore afrayed/ and trembled/ and fell doune vppon their faces vnto the grounde. Then saide the aungel: Peace be with you/feare not. Where as I haue ben with you/it is the wyl of God/ geue prayse and thankes vnto him.

And whan he had spoken these wordes/he was take̅ away out of their syght/so that they sawe him no more. Then fell they doune flat vpon their faces by the space of thre houres/ and praysed God: and wha̅ they rose vp/ they tolde al his wonderous workes.

A copie of the epistle: that Jeremy the prophet dyd sende vnto the Jewes/ which were led awaye prysoners by the kynge of Babylō. Wherein he certifieth them of the thinge that was cōmaunded him of God.

The. VI. Chapter.

A BEcause of the synnes that ye haue done God/ye shalbe † led awaye captiue vnto Babylon/euen of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon. So when ye be come into Babylon/ ye shall remayne there many yeares/ and for a lōge season: namely vij generacions: and after that will I bringe you awaye peaceably from thence. Now shall ye se in Babylon goddes of golde/ of syluer/ of wood/ and of stone: borē vpō mens shoulders/ to cast out a fearfulnesse before the Heythen. But loke that ye Jere. xxv. a.b

do not as the other: be not ye afrayed/ and let not the feare of them ouercome you.

Therfore/ when ye se the multitude of peo- B ple/worshippinge them behinde and before/ saye ye in youre hertes: O Lorde † it is thou/ Deut. vi that oughtest onely to be worshipped. Myne aungel also shalbe with you/and I my self wil care for youre soules. As for ỹ tymbre of those goddes/the carpenter hath polished them: yee/ gylted be they/and layed ouer with syluer/ yet are they but vayn thinges/and can not speake. Lyke as a wench that loueth peramours is trymly decked/ euē so are these made and hanged with golde. Crounes of golde verely haue their goddes vpon their heades: so the priestes them selfes take the golde & syluer from them/ and put it to their owne vses: yee/ they geue of thesame vnto harlottes/ and trymme theyr whores withall: Agayne/ they take it from the whores/ and decke their goddes therwith. † Yet can not these goddes delyuer them sel- Jere. x fes from rustes and mothes. When they haue couered them with clothinge of purple/ they wype their faces for the dust of the temple/ wherof their is much amōge them. One hath a sceptre in his hāde/as though he were iudge of the countrie: yet can he not slaye such as offende him. Another hath a swearde or an axe in his hande/ for all that/ is he neyther able to defende him selfe from battayll nor fro murtherers.

By this ye maye vnderstande/ that they be C no goddes: therfore se that ye neyther worshippe them/nor feare them. For lyke as a vessel that a man vseth/ is nothinge worth when it is broken/ euen so is it with their goddes. When they be set vp in the temple/ their eyes be full of dust/ thorow the fete of those that come in. And like as the dores are shut in rounde aboute vpon him/ that hath offended the kinge: Or as it were a dead body kepte besyde ỹ graue: Euē so the priestes kepe the dores with barres and lockes/ lest/ their goddes be spoyled of the robbers. They set vp candels before them (yea verely/and that many) whereof they can not se one/ but euen as blockes so stande they in the temple. It is sayde/ that the serpentes and wormes/ which come of the earth/ gnawe out theyr hertes/ eatinge them/ and their clothes also/ and yet they fele it not.

Their

Their faces are blacke thorow the smoke that is in the temple. The oules/ swalowes/ and byrdes flye vpon them/yee/ & the cattes runne ouer their heades.

D By this ye maye besure that they are not goddes/ therfore feare them not. The golde that they haue/ is to make them beuryfull: for all that/ excepte some body dight of their rust/ they wyll geue no shyne: and when they were cast into a fourme/ they felt it not. They are bought for money/ and haue no breth of lyfe wythin them. † They must be boren vpon p. viij c mens shoulders/ as those that haue no fete: wherby they declare vnto men/ that they be nothinge worth. † Confounded be they then/ c viij. a that worshippe them. For if they fall to the grounde/they can not ryse vp agayne of them selfes: Yee/ though one helpe them vp/ and set them ryght/ yet are they not able to stande alone: but must haue proppes to set vnder thē lyke dead men. As for the thinge that is offred vnto them/their priestes sell it and abuse it: yee/ the priestes wyues take therof/ but vnto the sycke and poore they geue nothynge of it/ the women with childe/ and the menstreous laye handes of their offerynges. By this ye maye besure that they are not goddes/ therfore be not ye afrayde of them. From whence commeth it then/ that they be called goddes? The women syt before the goddes of syluer/ golde and woode/ and the priestes syt in their temples/ hauynge open clothes/ whose heades and beardes are shauen/ and haue nothynge vpon their heades: roaringe and crienge vpon their goddes/as men do at the feast when one is dead.

E The priestes also take awaye the garmentes of the ymages/ & decke their wyues & children withall. Whether it be good or euel that any man do vnto them/they are not able to recompence it: they can neyther set vp a kynge nor put him doune. In like maner they maye neither geue riches/nor reward cuel. † Though v. a a man make a vowe vnto them/ and kepe it not/they wil not require it. They can not delyuer a man from death/ neyther are they able defende the weake from the mighty. They can not restore a blinde mā to his sight/ nor helpe any mā at his nede. They can shewe no mercy to the wydowe/ nor do good to the fatherlesse.

Their goddes of wood/stone/ gold and syluer/ are but euen as other stones/ that be hewen of the mountayne. They that worshippe them/ shalbe confounded. How shoulde they then be taken for goddes: yee/ how darre men call them goddes? And though the Caldees worshipped them not/hearinge that they were but domme and coulde not speake: Yet they them selfes offre vnto Bel/and wold fayne haue him to speake: as who saye/they could fele that may not moue. But when these men come to vnderstandinge/they shall forsake them/ for their goddes haue no selinge. A greate sorte of F women gyrded with coardes/ syt in the stretes/ and burne olyue beries. Now if one of them be conueyed awaye/ and lye with any such as come by: she casteth her neyghbouresse in the teeth/ because she was not so worthely reputed/ nor her coarde broken. Whatsoeuer is done for them/ it is but in vayne and lost: Who maye it then be thought or sayde that they are goddes? Carpenters and goldsmythes make thē/neither be they any other thinge/ but euen what the worke men wyll make of them. Yee/ the goldsmythes them selfes that make them/are of no lōge contynaunce: How shoulde then the thinges that are made of them/be goddes? Vayne therfore are the thinges (yee/ very shame is it) that they leaue behinde them their posterite. For as sone there cōmeth any warre or plague vpō them/ then the priestes ymagyn/ where they maye hyde them selfes wyth them. How can men thinke then that they by goddes/which neither maye defende them selfes from warre/ nor delyuer them from myssfortune? For seynge they be but of wood/ of stone/ of syluer and of golde: all people and kynges shall knowe hereafter/that they be but vayne thynges: yee/ it shalbe openly declared/ that they be no goddes: but euen the very workes of mens handes/ and that God hath nothinge to do with thē. They can set no kinge in the lande/nor geue rayne vnto mē. They can geue no sentence of a matter/ neyther defende the lande from wronge: For they are not able to do so much as a frowe/ that flyeth betwyxte heauen and earth.

When there happeneth a fyre in the house of G those goddes of woode/of syluer/and of golde/

the prieſtes will eſcape and ſaue them ſelfes/ but the goddes burne as the balkes therein. They can not withſtande any kinge or batayl: how maye it the be thought or graunted/ that they be goddes? Moreouer/theſe goddes of woode/of ſtone/of golde and ſyluer/ maye neyther defende the ſelfes fro theſes nor robbers: yee/ the very wicked are ſtronger then they. Theſe ſtrype them out of their apparell/ that they be clothed withall/ theſe take theyr golde and ſyluer from them/and ſo get then awaye: yet can they not helpe the ſelfes. Therfore it is much better for a man to be a kinge/ and ſo to ſhewe hys power: or els a proffitable veſſel in a houſe/ wherein he that oweth it/ myght haue pleaſure: yee/ or to be a dore in a houſe/to kepe ſuch thinges ſafe as be therein: then to be ſuch a vayne god. The Sunne/ the Moone/ and all the ſtarres when they geue their ſhyne and lyght are obedient/ & do men good: When the lightninge gliſtreth/ all is cleare: The wynde bloweth in euery countrie/ and whan God commaundeth the cloudes to go rounde aboute the whole worlde/ they do as they are bydden: when the fyre is ſent doune from aboue and commaunded/it burneth vp hilles and woodes: But as for thoſe goddes/they are not like one of theſe thinges/
B neyther in beuty nor ſtrength. Wherfore men ſhoulde not thinke/ nor ſaye that they be goddes/ ſeynge they can neyther geue ſentence in iudgement/ nor do men good. For ſo much now as ye are ſure/ that they be no goddes/ then feare the not: For they can neyther ſpeake euel nor good of kinges. They can ſhewe no tokens in heauen for the Heythen/ neyther ſhyne as the Sunne/ nor geue light as the Moone: yee/ the vnreaſonable beaſtes are better then they: for they can get the vnder the roſe/ and do them ſelfes good: So can ye be certified by no maner of meanes/ that they be goddes: therfore feare the not. For like as a ſrayboggarde in a garden of cucumbers kepeth nothinge/ euen ſo are their goddes of wood/of ſyluer and golde: and like as a whyte thorne in an orcharde that euery byrde ſytteth vpon: yee/like as a dead body that is caſt in the darke. Euen ſo is it wt thoſe goddes of woode/ ſyluer and golde.

By the purple and ſcarlet which they haue vpon them/ & ſoone faydeth awaye/ye maye vnderſtande/that they be no goddes: yee/they them ſelfes ſhalbe conſumed at the laſt/which ſhalbe a greate confuſion of the lande. Bleſſed is the godly man that hath no images/ and worſhippeth none: for he ſhalbe farre from reproſe.

The fyrſt Chapter.

A Rphaxat ſ kinge of ſ Medes ſubdued many people vnto his dominiō/ & builded a noble ſtronge citie/ which he called Egbathanis. The walles of it made he of fre ſtone/ four ſquared/ſeuentie cubites hye/ and thirtie cubites broade. He made towers there vpon of an hundreth cubites hye. But vpon the foure corners euery ſide was twenty fote broade. He made the portes in the height like as the towers. This kinge truſted in his myghty hooſt/and in his glorious charrettes.

So in the twelft yeare of his raigne/it happened that Nabuchodonoſor the kinge of the Aſſyrians (which raigned in the greate citie of Niniue) fought agaynſt Arphaxat/and ouercame him in the greate felde called Ragau/beſyde Euphrates and Tigris and Jadaſon/in the felde of Erioth the kinge of the Elikes.

Then was the kingdome of Nabuchodonoſor exalted: † and his hert was lift vp: and he ſent vnto all them that dwelt in Celicia/in Damaſcus/in Libanus/ and vnto the Heythen that dwelt in Carmel and Cedar/ and to ſuch as dwelt in Galile in the greate felde of Eſdrelon/ to all them that were in Samaria/ and and beyonde the water of Jordane vnto Jeruſalem/ and the whole lande of Jeſſe vnto the mountaynes of Ethiopia. Vnto all theſe dyd Nabuchodonoſor the kinge of the Aſſyrians ſende meſſaungers. But they all wt one conſent wolde not agree vnto him/ & ſent the meſſaūgers againe emptie/ & put them awaye without honoure. Then Nabuchodonoſor the kinge toke indignacion at all thoſe lādes/ and ſware by his trone and by his kingdom/ that he wolde be auenged of all theſe countries.

The II. Chapter.

A IN the xviij. yeare of kinge Nabuchodonoſor/ vpō the xxij. daye of the firſt moneth/ it was deuiſed in the courte of Nabuchodonoſor the kinge of the Aſſyrians/ that he wolde defende him ſelf. So he called vnto him al the elders/all his captaines and mē of warre/ and ſhewed them his ſecrete counſayll/ and tolde the that his purpoſe was to bringe the whole earth vnder his dominion. Now whan they were all content with this ſayinge: Nabuchodonoſor the kinge called Holofernes the chiefe captaine of his warres/& ſaide vnto him: Go thy waye forth againſt all the kingdomes of the Weſt/and ſpecially againſt thoſe that haue deſpiſed my commaundement. † Thou ſhalt ſpare no realme/ all ſtronge cities ſhalt thou bringe in ſubiection vnto me. ij.b

B Then Holofernes called together all ſ captaines & rulers of all ſ power in Aſſyria/ and muſtred the ſouldyers vnto the hooſt (like as the kinge commaunded him) namely/an hundreth and twentye thouſande fightinge men vpon fote/ and twelfe thouſande archers vpō horſebacke. All his ordinaunce ſent he before with an innumerable multitude of Camels/ſo that the hooſt was well prouided for with oxē and ſmal cattel/and that without numbre. He cauſed corne to be prepared out of all Syria for his hooſt. Much golde and ſyluer alſo toke he out of the kinges houſe. So he toke his iourney/ and he and all his hooſt/ with charrettes/ horſmen and archers: of whome there were ſo many/ that they couered the grounde of the lande/like the greſhoppers.

C And whan he was gone paſt the borders of the Aſſyrians/ he came towarde the greate mountaines of Ange/ which lye vpon the left ſyde of Celicia: and ſo he wente vp into all their caſtelles/ and wāne euery ſtronge holde. As for the welthy citie of Melothus/ he brake it doune/and ſpoyled all the children of Tharſis and the Iſmaelites/ which laye towarde ſ wildernes/and vpon the South ſyde of the lande of Chelon. He wente ouer Euphrates alſo and came into Meſopotamia/ and brake doune all the hie cities that were there/from the broke of Mambre till a man come to the ſee: and he toke the borders in frō Celicia vnto the coaſtes of Japhet towarde the South. He caried awaye all the Madianites/and ſpoyled all their goodes: & whoſoeuer withſtode him/ he ſlew the with the ſwearde. After this he wente doune into the felde of Damaſcus in the tyme of harueſt/ and brent vp all the corne and all the trees/ and cauſed the vynes to be cut doune. And the feare of him fell vpon all them that dwelt in earth.

The. III. Chapter.

SO the kinges and princes of all cities & A landes ſent their Embaſſatours/namely they of Syria and Meſopotamia. Syria Sobal and Lybia and Celicia/ which came to Holofernes/ and ſayde: Let thy wrath ceaſſe towarde vs: It is better for vs to ſerue the great kinge Nabuchodonoſor with oure lyfes/ and to be ſubiecte vnto the/ then that we ſhoulde dye and be ſlayne/ and receaue greater hurte. All oure cities and poſſeſſions/al mountaines and hilles/ all feldes/ greate and ſmall/ cattel/ ſhepe/goates/horſes and camels/ al oure goodes and houſholdes be in thy power/ vnder thy ſubiection be it altogether. We oure ſelfes alſo and oure children wylbe thine owne/come vnto vs a peaceable lorde/ and vſe our ſeruice at thy pleaſure.

Then came Holofernes doune from the B mountaines with horſemē and greate power/ and conquered all ſtronge fenſed cities/ and all that dwelt in the lande. And out of all cities he toke ſtronge men/ & ſuch as were mete for the warre/to helpe him. † There came ſuch Judith v. & a feare alſo vpon thoſe countries/that the indwellers of all the cities/ the princes and rulers & the people together/wente forth to mete him as he came/ and receaued him honorably with garlandes and torches/with daunces tabrettes and pypes.

Neuertheles/ though they dyd thys/ yet C

might they not swage his rigorous stomack: but he destroyed their cities / & hewee doune their woodes. For Nabuchodonosor the kinge had cōmaunded him / that he shulde rote out all the goddes of the lande / to the intent that he onely might be called and taken for God / of the nacions which Holofernes with his power brought vnder him. So wēte he thorow Syria Sobal / and thorow all Appamia / and all Mesopotamia / came to Idumeans in the lande of Gabaa and Septopoli / and toke their cities / and remained there thirty dayes / wherein he caused all the whole multitude of his hoost to be gathered together.

The. IIII. Chapter.

A WHan the children of Israel that dwelt in Jewry herde this / they were sore afrayed of him. There came such tremblinge also and feare vpon them / that they sorowed he shoulde do vnto the citie of Jerusalem / and the temple of the Lorde / as he had done to other cities and their temples. So they sent into all Samaria rounde aboute vnto Jericho / toke in / & occupied all the toppes of the mountaines / made fast the tounes with walles / and prepared corne for them agaynst the battayl.

Eliachim also the priest wrote vnto all them that dwelt towarde Esdrelō (which lyeth ouer against the greate felde by Sotha Im) & vnto all those / by whom men might haue passage vnto thē / that they shoulde take in the wayes of ỹ mountaines / where there myght be any waye and passage to Jerusalem / and that they shoulde hold diligēt watch / where any straight way was bewixt the mountaines. And ỹ children of Israel dyd as Eliachim the priest of ỹ
B Lorde had cōmaunded thē. † And all ỹ people cried earnestly / and humbled their soules Eccli. xxv. b with fastinges and prayers / they and their wyfes. The priestes put on heery clothes / and layed the yonge babes before the temple of the Lorde / and couered the aulter of the Lorde with an heery cloth. And with one accorde cried they vnto the Lord God of Israel / that their childrē shoulde not be geuen into a pray / and their wyfes into a spoyle / that their cities shoulde not be layed waist / & that their Sanctuary shoulde not be vnhalowed / and so they to be a shame and rebuke vnto the Heithen.

C Then Eliachim the hie priest of the Lorde went rounde aboute all Israel / & spake vnto them / sayinge: Be ye sure that the Lord will heare youre peticions / if ye cōtinue stedfast in fastinges and prayers in the sight of ỹ Lord. Remembre Moses the seruaunte of ỹ Lord / † which ouerthrew the Amalechites (that trusted in their might and power / in their hoost / their shildes / in their charrettes and horsmen) not with weapens / but with holy prayers. Euen so shall all the enemies of Israel be / if ye continue in this worke that ye haue begonne. So vpon this exhortacion they continued in prayer before the Lord. In so much that they which offred brent sacrifices vnto the Lord / offred the offringes vnto the Lorde / beynge arayed in heery clothes / and had asshes vpon their heades. And they al besought God from their whole hert / that he wolde vyset hys people of Israel.

The V. Chapter.

AND worde came to Holofernes the prince of the warres of the Assyrians / that the childrē of Israel prepared them selfes to make resistaunce / and how they had stopped the wayes betwixte the mountaynes. Then was he exceadinge wroth / and ealled all the princes of Moab / and the captaines of Ammon / and sayde vnto thē: Tell me / what people is this that kepeth in the mountaines? Or what maner of cities are they? What is their power? Or what maner of hoost haue they? Who is their captaine? And why do they despyse vs / † (more then all those that dwell in the East) & come not forth to mete vs / that they might receaue vs with peace?

† Then Achior the captaine of all the Ammonites aunswered / and sayd: Syr / if it please the to heare me / I will tell the trueth before the / concerninge this people that dwell in the mountaines / and there shall no lye go out of my mouth.

B This people is of the generacion of ỹ Caldees / thei dwelt first in Mesopotamia / for thei wolde not folow the goddes of their fathers ỹ were in the lande of the Caldees / & so forsoke they the customes of their forefathers (whiche had many goddes) and worshipped one God that made heauen & earth: which also cōmaunded them that they † shoulde go from thence / and dwel at Haran. * Now whan there came a derth into ỹ whole lande / † they went doun to Egipte: and there they dwelt foure hūdreth yeares / in the which they multiplied so greatly that their hoost might not be numbred. * And whan the kyng of Egipt oppressed them / and subdued them in buylding of his cities / with makinge of claye & brick / they cried vnto God their Lord / which punished the whole lande of Egipte with diuerse plagues.

C † Now whan the kyng of Egipt let thē go their waies / and the plague ceased / * & then followed after them / to take thē / and to bringe thē againe into his seruice / whyle they were flienge awaye / the God of heauen opened the see / so that the waters stode fast vpon both the sydes as a wall / and these wente thorow the bottome of the see drye shod. In the which place whan an innumerable people of the Egypcians folowed vpon them / they were so ouerwhelmed with the waters / that there remained not one / to tell them that came after how it happened.

D So whan this people was passed thorow the read see / they came into the wildernes of the mount Sinai / where neuer man might dwell afore / and where the sonne of man had neuer rested. † There were the bitter waters made swete for them that they might drinke / † and xl. yeares had they meate from heauen. Wheresoeuer they wente / (without bowe and arowe / without buckler or sweard) their God fought for thē / and caused thē to haue the victory. Yee / no man was able to hurte this people / except it were so / that they departed vnfaithfully from the worshippinge of the Lorde their God. † But as oft as they worshipped any other besyde their God / he gaue them ouer to be spoyled / to be slaine / and to be put to confusion. Neuertheles / as oft as they were sory for departinge / frō the worshippe of their God / the same God of heauen gaue thē power and strength to withstande their enemies.

E † Moreouer / they slew the kinge of the Cananites / Jebusites / Pherezites / Hethites / Henites and Amorites / and all the mighty in Hesebon / and toke their landes and cities in possession: and so longe as they synned not in the sight of their God / it wente well with thē / for their God hateth vnrighteousnesse. † For in tymes past whan they wente out of the waye / which God had geuē them / that they shoulde walke in it / they were destroyed in diuerse batayles of many nacions / and many of thē were carried awaie prysoners into a straūges countrie. But now lately they haue turned them Esd. ix. a selfes agayne vnto the Lord their God / and are come togethere againe out of the countries where they were scatred abroade: & thus haue they conquered these mountaines and dwell therein: & as for Jerusalē where their Sanctuary is / they haue it agayne in possession.

F And therfore my lorde / make diligent inquisicio / if this people haue done wickednesse in the sight of their God / then let vs go vp agaynst thē / for doubtles their God shall deliuer them into thy handes / and subdue them vnto thy power. But if this people haue not displeased their God / we shall not be able to withstāde thē / † for their God shal defende thē / Judit. vj. c and so shall we be a shame to all the worlde.

Now whan Achior had spoken out these wordes / all the princes of Holofernes were wroth / and thought to slaye him / & saide one to another / what is he this / which darre saye ỹ the children of Israel are able to withstande. Nabuchodonosor the kinge & his hoost: where as they are an vnweapened people / without strength or vnderstandinge of the feates of warre? That Achior therfore may knowe that he hath deceaued vs / we will go vp into the mountaynes: and whan the mighty men of them are taken / he also shalbe stickte with the sweарde / that all the people maye knowe / that Nabuchodonosor is the God of the earth / and that there is none other without him.

The VI. Chapter.

SO whan they had left of speakinge: Holofernes toke sore indignacion / and sayde vnto Achior: For so much as thou hast prophecied vnto vs / sayinge: † that ỹ people of Israel Judith v. f shalbe defended of their God / I will shew the that there is no God / but Nabuchodonosor. Yee / whan we slaye them all as one man / thou also shalt perishe with them thorow the sweарde of ỹ Assyrians / & all Israel shalbe destroyed with the / & thē shalt thou fele / that Nabuchodonosor is the lorde of the whole earth. Then shal ỹ sweard of my knighthode go thorow thy sydes / and thou shalt fall doune stickte amonge the wounded of Israel / and shalt not come to thy self agayne / but be vtterly destroyed with the. But if thou thinkest thy prophecye to be true/ why doest thou then chaūge thy coloure? why art thou afrayed? Thinkest thou that my wordes are not able to be perB fourmed? But that thou mayest knowe / that thou shalt fele these thinges with them/ beholde/ from this houre forth wyll I sende the vnto yonder people / that whan the punyshment of my swearde (which they haue worthely deserued) falleth vpō them/thou mayest be punyshed with them.

So Holofernes cōmaunded his seruauntes to take Achior / and to cary him vnto Bethulia/ and to delyuer hym into the handes of the chyldren of Israel. Then Holofernes seruauntes toke him / & wente thorow the plaine felde. But whan they drew nye vnto ỹ mountaines/the slyngecasters came out against the: Neuertheles/they gat them awaye by the syde of the mountaine / and bounde Achior hand & fote to a tree/ and so left him bounde/ and turned againe vnto their lorde.

Notwithstandinge / the children of Israel wente doune from Bethulia/ came vnto him/ loused him/brought him to Bethulia/ set him in the middest of the people / & axed him what the matter was / that the Assyrians had left him bounde.

C Osias the sonne of Micha of the trybe of Simeon/ and Charmim (which is also called Gothoniel) were the principal rulers at the same tyme. Now whan Achior stode in the myddest of the Senatours/ and before thē all/
Judit. v. b he tolde thē † what aunswere he gaue Holofernes/ to the thinge that he axed him / & how Holofernes people wolde haue slayne him for so sayinge/and how Holofernes him self was wroth/ and cōmaunded him for the same cause to be delyuered vnto the Israelites: that whan he ouercame the children of Israel/he myght cōmaunde Achior also to be put to death with Judit. v. f diuerse tormentes/because he saide: † the God of heauen is their defender.

And whan Achior had playnely tolde out all these thinges/ al the people fell doune vpon their faces/ praysinge the Lorde/ poured out their prayers together vnto the Lorde / with a general complainte and wepynge/and saide: O Lorde God of heauen and earth/ beholde their pryde/ and loke vpon oure loulynes / and consider how it stādeth with thy sainctes/and make it to be knowen / that thou forsakest not those / which holde them fast by the / and that thou bringest thē lowe / that presume of them selfes / and make their boast in their owne strength. So whan the wepinge and prayer D of the people (which they had made the whole daye longe) was ended/ they cōforted Achior sayinge: the God of oure fathers / whose power and strength thou hast praysed/shall so rewarde the / that thou shalt rather se their destruction. Whan the Lord our God thē shal geue his seruaūtes this libertie/ God be with the also amonge vs: so that if it please the/thou with thyne maiest dwell with vs.

Now whan Osias had ended the counsail/ he toke him into his house/ and made a greate supper / called all the elders to it / and so they refresshed them selfes after the fastinge. And afterwarde was all the people called together/ whiche made their prayers all the night longe in the congregacion / and besought the God of Israel for helpe.

The VII. Chapter.

THe next daye Holofernes commaunded A his hooste to go vp against Bethulia. †There were an C. & xx. thousande fightinge Judith men on fote/ & two an twentie thousand horsmen/ beside the preparinge of them that were wonne / and came to them on euery syde out of the countries and cities which he had take. All these prepared them selfes vnto the battayl against the Israelites/and came on by the hyll syde/ vnto the top that loketh ouer against Sothaim / from the place whiche is called Belma/ vnto Chelmō that lyeth towarde Esdrelon.

Now whan the children of Israel sawe so B greate multitude of the Assyrians / they fell doune flat vpon the grounde / strowed asshes vpon their heades / and prayed with one accorde/that the God of Israel wolde shew his mercy vpon his people. And so they toke their weapens/ and sat bewixte the mountaynes in the narow place/ and kepte the waye daye and nyght. But whyle Holofernes was goynge aboute / he founde the water springe/ whiche from the South syde was conueyed into the cittie by a conduyte: this commaunded he to be directe another waye/ & to cut their conduyte in sūder. There were welles also not farre frō the walles/whiche they vsed secretly/more for pleasure then for necessite.

C Then wente the Ammonites & the Moabites vnto Holofernes/and sayde: The children of Israel truste neyther in speare nor arowe/but haue taken in/and kepe the mountaynes and hilles. That thou mayest ouercome them/therfore without the strikinge of any battayll / set men to kepe the welles / that they drawe no water oute of them: so shalte thou destroye them without sweard/ or at the least they shalbe so feble / that they muste be fayne to geue ouer the citie/which they thinke not able to be wonne / for so muche as it lyeth in mountaynes. These wordes pleased Holofernes well and all his men of warre/
Judit. xvj. a and † he set an hundreth men at euery welle rounde aboute.

And whan this watch had endured twentye daies/the cisternes & al springes ỹ had water/fayled them that dwelt in the citie of Bethulia/so that in the whole citie they had not drinke ynough for one day/ for the people had water geuen them daily in a measure. Then came the men and women/yonge persones & childre al vnto Osias/and saide all with one
Judith. xvj. a voyce: † God be iudge betwene vs and the/ for thou hast dealt cruel with vs: thou woldest not speake peaceably with the kynge of Assirians / therefore hath God solde vs in theyr handes/& there is no man to helpe vs/ where as we are brought doune before theyr eyes in thirst and greate destruccion. Therefore gather nowe together all the people that be in the citie / that we maye all yelde oure selfes willingly vnto the people of Holofernes: for better it is that we be captiue and prayse the Lorde with oure lyfes / then to be slayne and perysshe/ and to be laughed to scorne/and shamed of euery man whan we se oure wyfes and chyldren dye before oure eyes. We take heauen and earthe this daye to recorde/ and the God of oure fathers (whiche punysheth vs/accordinge to the deseruinge of our synnes) and geue you warnyng/that ye geue vp the citye nowe into the power of Holofernes hoost / that oure ende maye be shorte with the sweard/which els shal endure longe for wante of water and for thirst.

Whan they had spoken oute these wordes/ & there was a greate wepynge and houlynge in the whole congregacion / and that of euery man / and they cryed an whole houre longe vnto God with one voyce / sayinge: †we haue synned with oure fathers/we haue Psal.cv.a done amysse/we haue dealte wickedly. Thou that art gracious/haue mercy vpon vs / punysh oure vnrighteousnesse with thine owne scourge/and geue not those ouer that knowlege the / vnto a people whiche knoweth the not/lest/they say among the Heithen: †where Psal.cxiij.b is their God.

And whan they were so weery with this crienge & wepinge/that they helde their tunges/Osias stode vp with watrye eyes/& saide: †O take good hertes vnto you / (deare Judi. viij. b brethren) and be of good cheare/and let vs waite yet these fyue dayes for mercy of the Lorde: peraduenture he shal cut awaie his indignacion/and geue glory vnto his name. But if he helpe vs not whā these fyue daies are past/ we shal do as ye haue saide.

The VIII. Chapter.

ANd it happened whan these wordes A came to the eares of Judith a wyddowe/ whiche was the doughter of Merari/ the sonne of Idox/ the sonne of Joseph / the sonne of Osias/the sonne of Elai/ the sonne of Jammor/ the sonne of Jedeon / the sonne of Raphoim/the sonne of Achitob/the sōne of Melchia/the sonne of Euam/the sonne of Mathania/ the sonne of Salathiel/ the sonne of Simeon/ the sonne of Ruben. And her housbande was called Manasses/whiche dyed in the daye of the barlye haruest. For whyle he was bynding the sheaues together in ỹ felde/ the heate came vpon his heade / and he dyed at Bethulia in his citie/and there was he buried besyde his fathers. Now was Judith his desolate wydowe thre yeares & six monethes. And in ỹ higher partes of her house she made B

She dyd weare a smocke of heere/& fasted al ỹ daies of her life/excepte the Sabbathes & new moones/and the solempne dayes that the people of Israel kepte. She was a fayre and beutyful persone. The.X. Chapter.

AND whan she had lefte of erienge to the Lord/she rose vp from the place/ where she had lyē flat before ỹ Lord/and called her maiden/went doune into her house/layed the heery cloth from her/† put of the garmētes of Judit.xvj. her widowhode/washed her body/anoynted her self wt precious thinges of swete sauour/ broyded & planted her heere/set an hoode vpō her heade/and put on such apparel as belongeth vnto gladnesse / slippers vpon her fete/ armelettes/spanges/earinges/fingerringes/ and deckt her self with al her best araye.

The Lorde gaue her also a special beutye and fayrnesse (for all this deckinge of her selfe was not done for any voluptcousnesse and pleasure of th flesh/but of a righte discrecyon and vertue/therfore dyd the Lorde increace her beutye) so that she was exceadinge amiable and well fauoured in all mens eyes. She gaue her maydē also a bottell of wyne / a pot with oyle/pottage/cakes/bread and chese/and went her waye.

B Now whan she came to the porte of ỹ citie/ she founde Osias and the elders of the citye waitinge there. Which whan they sawe her/ they were astonnyed/ & marualed greatly at her beuty/neuertheles/they axed no question at her/but let her go/sayinge: The God of our fathers geue the his grace/ and with his power perfourme al the deuice of thy hert: that Jerusalem maie reioyce ouer the/ & that thy name maie be in the numbre of the holy and righteous. And al they that were there/sayde with one voyce: so be it/so be it. Judith made her prayer vnto the Lord/and wente out at the porte/she and her maydē.

And

And as she was goying doune the mountayne/ it happened that aboute the sprynge of the daye/the spyes of the Assirians mete with her/ and toke her/sayinge: whence commest thou? Or whither goest thou? She aunswered: I am a doughter of the Hebrues/ and am fled from them/ for I knowe that they shalbe geuen vnto you to be spoyled: because they thought scorne to yelde them selfes vnto you/that they mighte synde mercy in youre syght. Therfore haue I deuised by my self after this maner: I wil go before the prince Holofernes/ and tell him all their secretes/ and wyl shewe him/ how he maye come by them/ and wynne them/ so that not one man of his hoost shal perish.

¶ And whan these men had herde her wordes/and considered her fayre face/they were astonnyed (for they wondred at her excellente beutye) and sayde vnto her: Thou haste saued thy lyfe by fyndinge oute this deuyce/ that thou woldest come doune to our lorde: and be thou sure/that whā thou commest vnto him/ he shal intreate the wel/and thou shalt please him hertely. So they brought her into Holofernes pauylion/and tolde him of her. Nowe whan she came in before him/immediatly he was ouercome/and taken with her beutye. Then sayde his seruauntes: who wolde despyse the people of the Jewes/ that haue so fayre women? Shoulde we not by reason fyght against them for these? So whan Judith sawe Holofernes syttinge in a canapye/ that was wrought of purple/sylke/golde/smaragde and precious stones/she loked fast vpō him/and fell doune vpon the earth. And Holofernes seruauntes toke her vp agayne at their lordes commaundement.

The. XI. Chapter.

A Then saide Holofernes vnto her: Be of good chere/and feare not in thine herte/ For I neuer hurted man/ that wolde serue Nabuchodonosor the kynge. As for thy people/if they had not despised me/ I should not haue lift vp a speare against thē. But tell me now/what is the cause that thou art departed frō them/& wherfore art thou come vnto vs?

And Judith sayde vnte him: Syr:/vnderstande the wordes of thy handmayden: for if thou wilt do after the wordes of thy handmayden/ the Lorde shall bringe thy matter to a prosperous effecte. As truly as Nabuchodonosor a lorde of the lande lyueth/& as truly as his power lyueth/which is in the to the punyshment of al men that go wrong/ all men shall not onely be subdued vnto him thorow the/but al the beastes also of the feld. For all people speake of thy prudent actyuite/ and it hath euer bene reported/ howe thou onely art good and myghtye in all his kingdome/ and thy discrecion is commended in all landes.

†The thynge is manifest also that Achior spake/ and it is wel knowen/what thou commaundest to do vnto him. For this is playne and of a suertye/that oure God is so wroth wt vs (by the reason of oure synne) that he hath shewed by his prophetes vnto the people/ how that for their sinnes he wil deliuer them ouer vnto the enemy. And for so much as the children of Israel knowe that they haue so displeased their God/they are sore afraied of the. They suffre greate hunger also/& for wante of water/ they are dead nowe in a maner. Moreouer/ they are appointed to slaye all their cattel/that they maie drinke the bloude of thē: and are purposed to spende all the holy ornamentes of their God (whiche he hath forbidden them to touch) for corne/ wyne and oyle. Seinge now that they do these thinges/ it is a playne case/ that they muste nedes be destroied. Which whan I thy handmaiden perceaued/I fled from them/& the Lorde hath sent me vnto the/to shew the these thinges. For I thy handmaiden worshippe God euen here now besyde the/ and thy handmaiden shal go forth/and I wil make my prayer vnto God/and he shall tell me/ whan he wyll reuarde thē their synne: then shall I come and shew the/& bringe the thorow the middest of Jerusalem/so that thou shalt haue al the people of Israel/as ỹ shepe without a shepeherde: there shall not so much as one dogge barcke against the/for these thinges are shewed me by the prouidence of God: and for so much as God is displeased with thē/he hath sente me to tel the thesame.

These wordes pleased Holofernes and all his seruauntes/which maruailed at the wysdome of her/ and sayde one to another: there is not such a woman vpon earth/ in beutye & discrecion of wordes. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: God hath done wel/that he hath sent the hyther before thy people/ that thou mayest geue them into oure handes. And for so much as thy promise is good if thy God perfourme it vnto me/he shalbe my God also/and thou shalt be excellent and greate in ỹ courte of Nabuchodonosor/& thy name shalbe spoken of in al the lande.

The. XII. Chapter.

A Then cōmaunded he her to go in where his treasure laye/ and charged that she shoulde haue her dwelling there/and appointed/ what shoulde be geuen her from his table. Judith aunswered hym/ and sayde: †As for the meate that thou hast commaunded to geue me/ I maye not eate of it as now (lest/I displease my God) but wyl eat of such as I haue broughte with me. Then sayde Holofernes vnto her: If these thynges that thou hast brought with the fayle/ what shall we do vnto the? And Judith sayde: As truly as thou lyuest my lorde/ thy handmayden shall not spende all this/ tyll God haue broughte to passe in my hande/the thing that I haue deuysed.

B So his seruauntes broughte her into the tente/where as he had appointed. And as she was goyinge in/she desyred that she myghte haue leue to go forth by night & before daye/ to her prayer/ and to make intercession vnto the Lorde. Then commaunded Holofernes his chamberlaynes: that she shoulde go out and in at her pleasure/to praye vnto her God those thre dayes.

And so in the nyght season she went forth into the valley of Bethulia/ and washed her selfe in the wellewater. Then wente she vp/ & besoughte the Lorde God of Israell/ that he wolde prospere her waye/ for the delyueraunce of his people. And so she went in/and remayned cleane in her tent/ tyll she toke her meate in the euenynge.

C Upō the fourth daye it happened/that Holofernes made a costly supper vnto his seruaūtes/& saide vnto Vagao his chamberlayne: Go thy waye/and counsail this Hebruesse ỹ she may be wyllinge to consent to kepe company with me. For it were a shame vnto all ỹ Assyriās/that a woman should so laugh a mā to scorne/ that she were come from him vnmedled withal.

Then wente Vagao vnto Judith/ and saide: Let not the good doughter be afrayed to come into my lorde/ that she maye be honoured before hym/ that she maye eate and drynke wyne/and be mery with hym. Vnto whome Judith aunswered: Who am I/that I shoulde saye my lorde naye? whatsoeuer is good before his eyes/ I shall do it: and loke what is his pleasure/ that shall I thinke well done as longe as I lyue.

So she stode vp/ and deckt her selfe with her apparell/ and wente in/ and stode before hym. And Holofernes herte was wholmoued/ so that he brente in desyre towarde her. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: Drinke now and syt doune/ and be mery/ for thou haste founde fauoure before me. Then sayde Judith: Syr/I wyl drinke/for my mynde is meryer to daye/then euer it was in all my lyfe. And she toke and ate and dranke before him/ the thinges that her maydē had prepared for her. And Holofernes was mery with her/ and dranke more wyne/ then euer he dyd afore in his lyfe.

The. XIII. Chapter.

NOwe whan it was late in the night his seruauntes made hast/euery man to hys lodginge. And Vagao shut the chaumber dores/and wente his waye/ for they were all ouerladen with wyne. So was Judith alone in the chaumber. As for Holofernes/ he laye vpon the bed all dronken/ and of very dronkennes he fell a slepe.

Then commaunded Judith her mayden to stande without before the dore/& to wayte. And Judith stode before the bed/ makynge her prayer with teares/and moued her lippes secretly/ and sayde: Strengthe me O Lorde God of Israel/ and haue respecte vnto the workes of my handes in this houre/that thou mayest set vp thy citie of Jerusalem lyke as thou hast promysed: O graunte that by the I may perfourme the thynge/ whiche I haue deuysed thorowe the belefe that I haue in the.

And whan she had spoken this/she wente to the bedsteade/ and louse the swearde that hanged hanged vpon it/ and drew it oute. Then toke she holde of the heery lockes of his head/ and sayde: Strengthe me o Lorde God in this houre/ and with that/ she gaue hym two strokes vppon the necke/ and smote of his heade. Then toke she the canapy awaye/ and rolled the dead body aside. Immediatly she gat her forth/ and delyuered the heade of Holofernes vnto her mayden/ and bad her put it in her wallet.

And so these two wente forth together after their custome/ as thoughe they wolde praye/ and so passed by the hooste/ and came thorowe they' valley vnto the porte of the cytie. And Judith cried afarre of vnto ỹ watchmen vpon the walles: Open the gates (sayde she) for God is with vs/ whiche hath shewed his power in Israel. And whan they herde her voyce/ they called the elders of the citie together. And they came all to mete her/ litle and great/ yonge & olde/ for they thought not that she shoulde haue come so soone. So they lyghted candels/ and gathered aboute her euerychone: but she wente vp into an hye place/ and caused sylence to be proclaymed.

C Whan euery man now helde his tunge/ Judith sayd: O prayse the Lorde oure God/ for he hath not despysed/ nor forsaken thē that put they' trust in hym: and in me his handemaydē he hath perfourmed his mercy/ which he promysed vnto the house of Israel/ yee/ in my hande thesame nyght hath he slaine the enemy of his people.

And with that she toke forth the heade of Holofernes out of the wallet/ and shewed it them/ sayinge: Beholde/ the heade of Holofernes the captayne of the Assirians/ and this is the canapy/ wherin he laye in his dronkennesse: where the Lorde oure God hath slain him by the hande of a woman.

But as truly as the Lorde lyueth/ his aungell hath kepte me/ goynge thither/ remayninge there/ & cōmyng hither again frō thēce. And the Lorde hath not suffred me his handmaiden to be defyled/ but without any fylthines of synne hath he brought me againe vnto you: & that with greate victory/ so that I am escaped/ and ye deliuered. O geue thankes vnto him euerychone/ † for he is gracious/ & his mercy endureth for euer.

Psal. cv. & and cvj. a

So they praysed the Lorde altogether/ D and gaue thankes vnto him. And to her they saide: The Lorde hath blessed the in his power/ for thorowe the he hath brought oure enemies to naught.

And Ozias the chiefe ruler of the people of Israel/ saide vnto her: Blessed art thou (O doughter of the Lorde the hye God/) aboue al woman vpon earth.

Blessed be the Lorde the maker of heauen and earth/ whiche hath gyded the a right to wounde and to smyte of the heade of the captayne of oure enemyes. For this daye he hath made thy name honorable/ that thy prayse shall neuer come oute of the mouth of men/ whiche shall alwaye remembre the power of the Lorde: seynge thou hast not spared thine owne selfe/ but put the in ieoperdy/ consyderinge the anguysh and trouble of thy people/ and so hast helped their fal before God our Lord. And al the people sayde: Amen/ Amen.

Achior also was called/ and he came. Thē E sayde Judith vnto him: The God of Israel vnto whome thou gauest wytnes/ that he wolde be auenged of his enemies/ euē he hath this nyght thorowe my hande smytten of the heade of all the vnfaythfull. And that thou maiest se that it so is/ beholde/ this is the head of Holofernes/ whiche in his presumpteous pride despysed the God of the people of Israel/ and threatened the with destruccion/ sayinge: † whan the people of Israel is taken/ I Judith shal cause the also to be stickte with ỹ sweard. Whan Achior sawe Holofernes heade/ he fel doune vpon his face to the grounde for very anguish & feare/ so that he swouned withall. But after that he was come agayne to hym selfe/ he fel doune before her and praysed her/ sayinge: Blessed art thou of thy God in al the tabernacles of Jacob: for all the people that heare of thy name/ shal praise the God of Israel because of the.

The. XIIII. Chapter.

IUdith sayde vnto all the people: Brethrē A heare me/ Stycke vp this heade vppon oure walles/ and whan the Sunne aryseth/ take euery man his weapen/ and fall out violently/ not as though ye wolde go besyde thē/ But to renne vpon them with violence. Whā the the spyes in the tentes se this/ they shal of necessyte be compelled to flye backward/ and to rayse vp they' captain to the battail. So whā their captaynes come into Holofernes pauylion/ and fynde the dead body wrapped in the blonde/ fearfulnes shall fal vppon them: and whan ye perceaue that they flye/ folowe them without al care/ for God shal deliuer thē vnto you to be destroyed.

Then Achior seynge the power of God/ which he had shewed vnto the people of Israel/ fell of from his Heithenish belefe/ & put his trust in God/ and let him self be circumcised: & so was he numbred among the people of Israel/ he and al his posteritie vnto this daye.

B Now as soone as it was daye/ they stickte vp Holofernes heade vpō the walles/ and euery man toke his weapen/ and so they wente out with an horrible crye. Whan the spyes sawe that/ they ranne vnto Holofernes tent. And they that were within the tent/ came before his chaumber/ & made a greate russhinge to wake him vp/ because they thought with ỹ noyse to haue raised him. For there durst not one of ỹ Assirians knocke/ go in/ nor to open.

But whan the captaines and princes/ and all the chiefe in the kynge of the Assirians hooste came together/ they saide vnto the chamberlaynes: Go youre waye in/ and wake him iiij.b vp/ † for ỹ myse are crepte out of their holes/ and darre prouoke vs vnto battayl.

C Thē wente Vagao into his chaūber/ stode before the bed/ & clapped with his handes/ for he thought he had bene slepinge wt Judith.

But whan he had herkened perfectly with his eares/ & coulde perceaue no steringe/ he wente nyer to ỹ bed/ & lift it vp/ and thē sawe he the dead body of Holofernes lyenge there without a heade/ weltred in his blonde vpon ỹ earth. Then cried he with a loude voice/ and with wepinge rent his clothes/ & wente into Judiths tent/ & foūd her not. And so he leapt oute vnto the people/ and sayde one woman of the Jewes hath brought al Nabuchodonosors people to shame.

For lo/ Holofernes lyeth vpon the ground and hath no heade.

Whā the chiefe of ỹ Assirians hoost herde ỹ/ they rente their clothes/ & there fel an intolerable feare & tremblinge vpō thē/ so ỹ they' myndes were sore afrayed. And there was an exceadinge greate crye in the whole hoost.

The. XV. Chapter.

NOw whan all the hoost herde that Holofernes was headed/ they' mynde and counsayll fell from thē: and such a feare came vpon them: that they vndertoke to defende them selfes by flyenge away: one spake not to another/ but hanged doune their heades/ lefte al behynde thē/ and made haist to escape from the Hebrues: for they herde ỹ they were hayestinge to come after with their weapens/ and so they fled by the wayes of the feldes/ & thorowe all the fotepathes of the dales. A

And whan ỹ children of Israel sawe that they fled/ they folowed vpon them/ and went doune with trompettes/ blowinge & making a greate crie after them. As for the Assirians/ they had no ordre/ & kepte not them selfes together/ but fled their waie. Neuertheless/ the children of Israel fel vpon them with one cōpany & ordre/ & discomfyted as many as they might get. And Osias sent messaungers vnto all the cities and countries of Israel.

So al the regions and euery citie sent oute B their best men after them in harnesse/ & smote thē with the swearde/ til they came to the vttermost parte of their borders. And the other that were in Bethulia/ came into the tentes of the Assirians/ and toke al that they which were fled/ had left behynde them/ and so they found greate good. And they that came againe to Bethulia from the battail/ toke with thē suche thinges as had ben they's: there was no nūbre of the cattel/ and of al the costly iewels/ so that from the lowest vnto the hyghest/ they were al made ryche of the spoyles of them. And Joachim the hyghe priest at Jerusalem/ came to Bethulia with al the elders/ that they might se Judith.

Now whan she came out vnto them/ they C beganne al to prayse her with one voyce/ sayinge: thou worshippe of the citie of Jerusalē/ thou ioye of Israel/ thou honoure of our people/ thou hast done manly/ and thy hert is cōforted/ because thou haste loued clenlynesse and chastytie/ and haste knowen noman but thyne owne husbande: therefore hath the hande of the Lorde comforted the/ and blessed shalte thou be foreuer. And all the people sayde:

sayde: So be it/so be it.

In thirty dayes coulde the people of Israel scarce gather vp the spoyles of the Assyrians. But all that belonged vnto Holofernes/and had bene his specially/ (whether it were of golde/of syluer/precious stones/ clothynge and all ornamtntes) they gaue it vnto Judith. And all the people reioyced/ both woman/ maydens/and yonge people/ with pypes and harpes.

MArdocheus ỹ sone of Jair/ the sonne of Semei/ the sonne of Cisey of ỹ trybe of Ben Jamin a Jew: which had his dwellinge in Susis/ a man of greate reputacion/ & excellent amonge all thē that were in the kinges courte (Neuertheles/he was one of the prysoners/ † whom Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babylon had eg. caried awaye from Jerusalem vnto Babylon/ with Jechonias the kinge of Juda.) In d the seconde yeare of the raygne of greate Artaxerses in the fyrst daye of the moneth Nisan/ had this Mardocheus such a dreame: He thought he herde a greate tempest/ horrible yiij. a thonderclappes/ earthquakes/ and greate vprour in the lande: and that he sawe two greate dragons/ ready to fyght one against another.

B Theyr crie was greate. At the which roaringe and crie all Heythen were vp/to fight against the righteous people. And thesame daye was ful of darcknes & very vnclearc/ ful of trouble & anguysh/ yee/ a greate fearfulnes was there in all the lande. The righteous were amased/ for they feared the plague and euell that was deuised ouer them/ and were at a poynte with them selfes to dye. So they cried vnto God/ and whyle they were cryenge/ the litle welle grew into a greate ryuer/ & into many waters. And with that it was daye/ and the Sunne rose vp agayne. And the lowly were exalted and deuoured the glorious & proude.

Now whan Mardocheus had sene this dreame/ he awoke/ and mused stedfastly in his hert what God wolde do: and so he desyred to knowe all the matter/ & his mynde was there vpon vntyll the nyght.

The XII. Chapter.

In this chapter is declared: how Mardocheus vttereth the treason of the two seruauntes agaynst the kinge/ and therfore doeth the kinge rewarde hym.

AT thesame tyme dwelt Mardocheus with A Bagatha/and Thares the kinges chamberlaynes and porters of the palayce. † But Esther j. d whan he herde their deuice/ and had diligētly and. vj. a consydered their imaginacions/ he perceaued that they wente aboute to laye theyr cruel handes vpon the kinge Artaxerses: and so he certified the kinge therof. Then caused the kinge to examen the two gelded with tormētes. And whan they had graunted it/ they were put to death.

This the kinge caused to be put in the cro- B nicles for an euerlastinge remembraunce/ and Mardocheus wrote vp thesame matter. So the kinge commaunded/ that Mardocheus shoulde do seruice in the courte/ and for this faythfulnesse of his/ he gaue hym a rewarde. But Aman the sonne of Amadathi the Agathite/ which was holden in greate honoure & reputacion in the kinges courte/vndertoke to hurte Mardocheus and his people/ because of ỹ two chaūber laynes that were put to death.

Whan I was made lorde ouer many people/ and had subdued the whole earth vnto my Dominion/ my mynde was not with crueltye and wronge to exalte my self by the reason of my power: but purposed with equitie alwaye and gentylnes/ to gouerne those that be vnder my iurisdiccion/and wholy to set them in a peaceable lyfe/ and therby to bringe my kingdom vnto tranquyllite/ that men myght safely go thorow on euery syde/ and to renue peace agayne/ which

And this shalbe done the xiiij. daye of the moneth called Adar/of this yeare/that they which of olde (and now also) haue euer bene rebellious/maye in one daye with violence be thrust doune into the hel/to ỹ intẽt that after this maner/our Impyre maye haue peace & trãquilite.

But ✝ Mardocheus thought vpon all the

And this haue I done in no pryde nor presumpcion.

And therfore O Lorde thou God & king/ &

The shyne of her beuty made her face rose coloured. The similitude of her face was chearfull and amyable/ but her hert was sorowfull for greate feare. She wente in thorow all the dores/ and stode before the kynge. The kinge sat vpon the trone of his kingdome/ and was clothed in his goodly araye/ all of golde/ and set with precious stones/ and he was very terryble. The XVI. Chapter.

A copye of the commaundemente / which kynge Artaxerses caused to be proclaymed in all the countries of his Vominion / for ỹ wealth of the Iewes.

A THe greate kynge Artaxerses / which raigneth from India vnto Ethiopia / ouer an hundreth and xxvij. landes / sendeth vnto the princes and rulers of thesame landes / such as loue him / his frendly salutacio. There be many that for the sondrye frendishippes and benefytes / which are diuersly done vnto them for their worshippe / be euer the more proude and hye minded / and vndertake not onely to hurte oure subiectes (for plenteous benefytes maye they not suffre / and begynne to ymagyn some thynge agaynst those that do them good / and take not onely all vnthankefulnes awaye from men) but in pryde and presumpcion (as they that be vnmyndefull / and vnthankefull for the good dedes) they go aboute to escape the iudgement of God that seyth all thynges / which iudgement hateth & punysheth all wickednes. It happeneth oft also / that they which be set in office by the hygher power / and vnto whome the busynes and causes of the subiectes are cōmytted to be handled / waxe proude / and defyle them selfes with sheddynge of innocent bloude / which bringeth them to intollerable hurte. Which also with false and disceatfull wordes / and wich lyenge tales / deceaue and betraye the innocent goodnes of princes.

† What tyme now as Aman the sonne of Esth
Amadathu the Macedonian (a straunger verely of the Persians bloude / & farre from oure goodnes) was come in amonge vs as an aleaunt / & had optayned the frendshippe that we beare towarde all people / so that he was called oure father / and had in hye honoure of euery man / as the nexte and principal vnto the king / he coulde not forbeare hym self frō his pryde / hath vndertaken not onely to robbe vs of the kyngdome / but of oure lyfe also.

With manyfolde deceate also hath he desy- C

For hys mynde was (whā he had taken thē out of the waye / & robbed vs of thē) by this meanes to translate the kyngdome of the Persians vnto them of Macedonia. But we fynde that ỹ Iewes (which were accused of the wycked / that they might be destroyed) are no euel doers / but vse reasonable & ryght lawes / and that they be the chyldren of the mooſt hye lyuynge God / by whome the kyngdome of vs and oure progenitours hath bene well ordred hytherto. Wherfore as for the letters and commaundementes / that were put forth by Amā / ỹ sonne of Amadathu / ye shall do well / if ye holde them

of none

of none effecte: for he that set them vp / and inuented them / hangeth thē at Susys before the porte / with all his kinred / & God (which hath all thynges in his power) hath rewarded him after his deseruinge.

2 And vpon this ye shall publish & set vp the copy of this letter in all places / that the Iewes maye frely and wythout hinderaunce holde them selfes after their owne statutes / and that they maye be helped / and that vpon the xiij. Daye of the xij. moneth Adar / they maye be auenged of them / which in the tyme of their anguyſh and trouble wolde haue oppressed them. For the God that gouerneth al thinges / hath turned to ioye / the daye wherein the chosen people shoulde haue perysshed.

Moreouer / amōge the hye solempne dayes that ye haue / ye shall holde this daye also with all gladnesse: that now and in tyme to come / this daye maye be a remembraunce to good / for all such as loue the prosperitie of the Persians: but a remembraunce of destruction to those that be sedicious vnto vs.

All cities and landes that do not this / shall horribly perish / & be destroyed with ỹ swearde and fyre / and shall not onely be nomore inhabited of men / but be abhorred also of the wilde beastes and foules.

The V. Chapter. ✠

A THen shall the rightcous stande in greate stedfastnesse against such as haue dealt extremely with them/ and taken awaye theyr labours. When they se it/ they shalbe vexed with horrible feare/ and shall wonder at the haistinesse of the sodane health: groninge for very distresse of mynde/ and shall saye within them selfes (hauinge inwarde sorow/ & mourninge for very anguish of mynde:)

Mat.xix.a

These are they/ whome we somtyme had in derision/ and iested vpō. † We foules thought their lyfe very madnesse/ and their ende to be without honoure. But lo/ how they are counted amonge the children of God/ & their Tedyous wayes haue we gone / but as for the waye of the Lorde / we haue not knowen it.

Or as a byrde that flyeth thorow the ayre / and no man can se any token where she is flowen / but onely heareth the noyse of her wynges / beatyng the lyght wynde / partyng the ayre thorow ỹ vehemence of her goyng / & flyeth on shakynge her wynges / where as afterwarde no tokē of her waye can be founde. Or lyke as when an arowe is shot at a marck / it parteth the ayre / which immedialty commeth together agayne / so that a man can not knowe where it wente thorow. Euē so we in lyke maner as soone as we were borne / beganne immedialty to drawe to our ende: and haue shewed no token of vertue / but are consumed in oure own wickednesse.

The VI. Chapter.

WYsdome is better than strength / and a A man of vnderstandinge is more worth Eccli.ix.

Vnto you therfore (o ye kinges) do I speake / that ye maye learne wysdome & not go amisse: for they that kepe righteousnes / shalbe righteously iudged: & they that are learned in righteous thinges / shall fynde to make aunswere. Wherfore set your lust vpon my wordes / and loue them / so shall ye come by nourtour / wysdome is a noble thinge / and neuer fayleth awaye: yee / she is easely sene of them that loue her / and founde of such as seke her. To thinke vpon her / is perfecte vnderstandinge: and who so watcheth for her / shalbe safe / and that soone. For she goeth aboute / sekynge suche as are mete for her / sheweth her selfe cherefully vnto them in theyr goynges / and meteth them with al diligēce.
Rom.xiij.b For the vnfained desyre of reformacion is her beginninge: to care for nurtour is loue / † and loue is the kepynge of her lawes. Nowe the kepyng of the lawes is pefeccion / and an vncorrupte lyfe maketh a man familiar wt God.

As for wysdome / what she is / and how she came vp / I wil tel you / and will not hyde the mysteries of God from you: but wil seke her oute from the beginninge of the natiuitie / and bringe the knowlege of her into lyght / and wyl not kepe back the trueth: Neither will I haue to do with consumynge envye / for such as man shall not be partaker of wisdome. But the multitude of the wyse is the welfare of the worlde / and a wyse kynge is the vpholdinge of the people. O receaue nourtoure then thorow my wordes / and it shal do you good.

Now as I my selfe learned vnfaynedly / so do I make other men partakers of her / and hyde her ryches from no mā: for she is an infynite treasure vnto mē / which who so vse / become partakers of the loue and frendshippe of God / and are accepted vnto him for the giftes of wisdome.

Therefore can no vndefyled thynge come in to her. † For she is the bryghtnesse of the everlastinge lyght/the vndefyled myrroure of the maiesty of God/ and the ymage of his goodnesse. And for so much as she is one/ she maye do all thinges: and beynge stedfast her selfe/ she renueth all/ and among the people conueyeth she her selfe into the holy soules. She maketh Gods frendes and Prophetes: For God loueth no man/ but hym in whome wysdom dwelleth. The. VIII. Chapter.

A WYsdome reacheth frõ one ende to another myghtelye/and louingly doeth she ordre al thinges. I haue loued her/and labored for her euen fro my youth vp: I dyd my diligence to marry my self with her/such loue had I vnto her beutye. Who so hath the company of God/commendeth her nobilyte/ yee/ the Lord of al thinges hym selfe loueth her. For she is the scholemastresse of the nurtour of God/and the choser out of his workes. If a man wolde desyre ryches in this lyfe/ what is rycher then wysdome that worketh al thinges? Thou wilt saye: vnderstandinge worketh. What is it amonge al thinges/that worketh more then wysdome? If a mã loue vertue and ryghteousnesse/ let hym laboure for wysdome/for she hath greate vertues. And why? she teacheth sobernes and prudence/ righteousnesse and strength/which are suche thinges as men can haue nothing more profytable in their lyfe. If a man desyre muche

B knowlege/she cã tel the thinges that are past/ and discerne thinges for to come: she knoweth the soutlties of woordes/ and can expounde darcke sentences. She can tell of tokens and wonderous thynges/ or euer they come to passe/ and the endes of all tymes and ages.

So I purposed after this maner: I wyll take her vnto my company/and cõmon louingly with her: no doubte she shall geue me good counsayl/ and speake comfortably vnto me in my carefulnes and grefe. For her sake shal I be wel and honestly taken among the commons/ and Lordes of the counsaill. Though I be yonge/ yet shall I haue sharpe vnderstanding: so that I shalbe maruaylous in the syght of greate men/ and the faces of princes shal wonder at me. † Whan I holde my tunge/they shall abyde my leysure: whan I speake/ they shall loke vpon me: and if I talke much/they shal laye their handes vpon their mouth. Moreouer/ by the meanes of her I shall optayne immortalyte/ and leaue behynde me an euerlastinge memoriall/ amonge them that come after me. I shall set the people in ordre/ and the nacions shalbe subdued vnto me. Horrible tyrauntes shalbe afraied/whã they do but heare of me: among the multitude I shalbe counted good/ and mighty in battaill. Whan I come home/ I shal fynd rest with her: for her company hath no bytternes/ and her felowshipp hath no tediousnesse/but mirth and ioye.

Job.xxix.

C Now whan I consydered these thinges by my self/and pondered thẽ in my hert/how that to be ioyned vnto wisdom/ is immortalite/ and greate pleasure to haue her frendshippe: how that in the workes of her handes are infynite ryches: howe that/who so kepeth company with her shalbe wyse: and that he which talketh with her/shal come to honour: I wente aboute sekinge to get her vnto me. For I was a lad of a rype wyt/& had a good vnderstandinge.

But whan I grewe to more vnderstandinge/ I came to an vndefyled body. Neuertheles/ whan I perceaued that I coulde not kepe my selfe chaist/† except God gaue it me (and that was a poynte of wysdome also/ to knowe whose gifte it was) I stepte vnto the Lorde/& besought him/and with my whole hert/I saide after this maner.

The XIII. Chapter.

A VAyne are all men / whiche haue not the knowlege of God: †as wer they that out of the good thynges whiche are sene / knewe not hym / that of hym selfe is euerlastinge. Neither toke they so much regarde of the worckes that are made/as to knowe/who was the Deut. iiij. c and xvij. b crafteſman of them: †But some toke the fyre/ some the wynde or ayre/some the course of the starres/some the water/some toke Sūne and Moone/or the lightes of heauen whiche rule the earth for goddes. But though they had such pleasure in their beuty/that they thought thē to haue ben goddes: yet should they haue knowen/how much more fayrer he is ỹ made them. For the maker of beuty had ordeyned al these thinges. Or if they marualed at the power and workes of them / they shoulde haue perceaued therby/ that he whiche made these thinges/is mightier then they.

B For by the greatnes & beuty of the creature the maker therof maye playnely be knowen. Notwithstandinge/they are the lesse to be blamed/that sought God and wold haue found him/& yet myssed. And why: for so muche as they wente aboute in his workes and sought after them/it is a token that they regarded & helde much of his workes that are sene: howbeit/they are not wholy to be excused. For if their vnderstāding & knowlege was so great that they coulde discerne ỹ worlde & the creatures/why did they not rather fynde oute the Lorde therof.

But vnhappy are they/and amonge the dead is they: hope/that cal them god whiche are but the workes of mens handes: golde/ sylver and the thinge that is founde oute by cunninge / the similitude of beastes / or any vaine stone that hath ben made by hande of olde. †Or as whan a carpenter cutteth doune

C of it cunningly: and so with the one parte maketh a vessell to be vsed / and dighted meate with the residue. As for the other parte that is left/which is profytable for nothynge (for it is a crocked pece of wood/and full of knobbes) he carueth it diligently thorow his vaynitie/and (accordinge to the knowlege of his cunninge) he geueth it some proporcion/ fashioneth it after the similitude of a man/or maketh it lyke some beast/striketh it ouer with read and painteth it/and loke what foule spot is in it/he casteth some coloure vpon it. Then maketh he a conuenient tabernacle for it/ setteth it in the wal/& maketh it fast with yron/ prouiding so for it/lest/it happen to fall: for it is well knowen/that it can not helpe it selfe: And why: it is but an ymage/and muste of necessitie be helped.

D Then goeth he and offreth of his goodes vnto it for his children and for his wyfe/he seketh helpe at it/ he axeth counsayll at it: he is not ashamed to speake vnto it that hath no soule: for healths he maketh his peticion vnto him that is sicke: for lyfe he prayeth vnto him that is dead: he called vpon him for helpe/ that is not able to helpe him selfe: and to sende him a good iourney/he prayeth him that may not go. And in al the thinges that he taketh in hande (whether it be to op[illegible]thing or to worke) he prayeth vnto him that can do no maner of good.

The. XIIII. Chapter.

A AGayne/another man purposyng to saile/ and beginninge to take his iourney thorow the raginge see / calleth for helpe vnto a stocke that is farre weaker then the tree ỹ beareth him. For as for it/couetousnes of money hath founde it / and the crafteſman made it with his cunninge. But thy prouidence (O father) gouerneth all thinges from the beginninge/ †for thou hast made a waye in the Exo. xiiij see/& a sure path in the middest of the waues: declaringe therby that thou haste power to helpe in al thinges/yee/though a man wente to the see without shippe. Neuertheleſſe/ that the workes of thy wysdome shoulde not be Gene. vj vaine/ †thou hast caused an Arke to be made: and therfore do men committe their lifes to a smal pece of wood/passinge ouer the see in a shippe: and are saued.

B †For in the olde tyme also whan the proude Gene. vj giaūtes perished/he (in whome the hope was left to increase the world) went into ỹ shippe/ which was gouerned thorow thy hande/and so left sede behinde hym vnto the worlde. For happy is the tree/where thorow ryghteousnes commeth: but cursed is the ymage of
Psa. cxiij. b Esay. xxxiij. c Baruc. vj. d Psal. vij. a wood/ỹ is made with handes/ †yee/ both it & he that made it: He/ because he made it / and it / because it was called god / where as it is but a frayle thynge. *For the vngodly and his vngodlines are both like abhominable vnto God. Euen so the worke and he that made it also / shalbe punished together. Therfore shall there a plague come vpon the ymages of the Heithen: for out of the creature of God they are become an abhominacion/a temptacion vnto the soules of men / and a snare for the fete of the onwyse. And why: the sekinge out of ymages is the beginninge of whordome/and the bringinge vp of them is ỹ destruccion of lyfe. For they were not from the beginninge/ neither shal thy continue for euer. The welthy ydelnes of men hath founde them out vpon earth/therfore shall they come shortly to an ende. When a father mourned for his sonne that was taken away from him/ he made him an ymage (in al the haist) of his dead sonne: & so beganne to worshippe hym as God/which was but a dead mā / & ordeyned his seruauntes to offre vnto him. Thus by processe of time/& thorow long custume/ this erroure was kepte as a law/ & tyrānes cōpelled men by violēce to honour images. As for those that were so farre of/ ỹ men myghte not worshippe them presently / their picture was brought frō farre (like the ymage of a kyng/whome they wolde honoure) to the intent that ỹ great diligence they might worshippe him which was farre of/as though he had bene present. Againe/ the singulare cunninge of the crafteſman gaue the ignoraunte also a greate occasion to worshippe ymages. For the workeman willinge to do him a pleasur that set him a worke/laboured with al his
D cunninge to make the ymage of the best fashion. And so (thorow the beuty of the worke) the commō people was deceaued/in so much ỹ they toke him nowe for a god / which a litle afore was but honoured as a man. And this was the erroure of mans lyfe/whan men (either for to serue their owne affeccions/ or to do some pleasure vnto kinges) ascribed vnto stones and stockes the name of God / whiche ought to be geuen vnto no man.

Moreouer/this was not ynough for them that they erred in the knowlege of God: but where as they liued in the greate warres of ignoraunce/those many and greate plagues called they peace. For eyther/ †they slewe their owne children & offred thē/or vsed sacrifice in ỹ night season/or els held vnreasonable watches: so ỹ they kepte neither lyfe nor marriage cleane: but eyther one slewe another to death maliciously/or els greued his neighboure in aduoutry. And thus were all thinges mixte together: blonde/mans laughter/ theft / dissimulacion/coruption/vnfaithfulnesse/ sedicion/periury/disquietinge of good men / vnthankefulnes/defylinge of soules/chaunging of byrth/vnstedfastnesse of marriag/ misordre of aduoutrye and vncleannesse. And why: the honourynge of abhominable ymages/ is the cause/the beginninge/and ende of al euel. For they that worshippe Idols / eyther they are madde whan they be merry/or prophecie lies/ or lyue vngodly/or els lightly forsweare them selfes. For in so much as their truste is in the Idols (which haue neyther soule nor vnderstanding) though they sweare falsely/yet they thinke it shal not hurte them.

Deu. xvij. b Jere. vij. a and xix. a

Therfore commeth a greate plague vpon them/and that worthely: for they haue an euel opinion of God/geuynge hede vnto Idols/ swearynge vniustly to deceaue / and despysynge ryghteousnesse. For theyr swearinge is no vertue / but a plague of them that synne/and goeth euer with the offence of the vngodly.

suffering and true/ and in mercy ordrest thou al thinges. Though we synne/yet are we thine/for we knowe thy strength. If we sinne not/then are we sure that thou regardest vs. For to knowe the / is perfecte righteousnesse. Yee/to know thy righteousnes and power/is the rote of immortalite. As for the thing that men haue found out thorow their euel sciēce/ it hath not deceaued vs: as the paynting of the picture (and vnprofitable labour) and carued ymage/with dyuerse colours / whose syght entyseth the ignoraunt: so that he honoureth & loueth the picture of a dead image that hath no soule.

Neuer-

B Neuertheleſſe / they that loue ſuche euell thynges are worthy of death: they that truſte in them/they that make them / they that loue them/and they that honoure them. But where to euery veſſel ſerueth/that knoweth the potter hymſelfe. So with his vaine labourc he maketh a god of theſame claye: this doeth euen he/ whiche a litle afore was made of earthe hym ſelfe/and within a litle whyle after/(whan he dyeth) turneth to earth againe.

C Notwithſtandinge/he careth not the more because he ſhal labourc/nor because his life is ſhorte: but ſtryueth to excel goldſmithes/ the ſyluerſmythes/ and cupperſmythes / and taketh it for an honour to make vayne thynges. For his herte is aſſhes/his hope is but vayne earth/and his lyfe is more vyle then claye: for ſo much as he knoweth not his owne maker/ that gaue him his ſoule to worke/and brethed in hym the breth of lyfe. They counte our life but a paſtyme / and oure conuerſacion to be but a market / and that men ſhoulde euer be getting/yee/and that by euel meanes. Now he that of earth maketh frayle veſſel and ymages/knoweth hym ſelfe to offende aboue all other.

For man made them/and he that hath but a borrowed ſpirite/faſhioned them. But no man can make a god lyke vnto him: for seynge he is but mortal him ſelfe/it is but mortal that he maketh with vnrighteous handes. Be him ſelfe is better then they whome he worſhipped/for he lyued/though he was mortall / but ſo dyd neuer they. And whyle they thought to be hyd in the darkeneſſe of their ſynnes / they were ſcattered abroade in the very myddeſt of the darck couerynge of forgetfulnes/put to horrible fear and wonderouſly vexed. For the corner where they where/ myght not kepe them from feare: becauſe the ſounde came doune & vexed them: yee/many terrybie and ſtraunge viſions made them afrayed.

No power of the fyre might geue thē light/ B neyther might the cleare flammes of the ſtarres lighten that horrible nyght. For there appeared vnto them a ſodane fyre/very dredeful: At the (which whan they ſawe nothinge) they were ſo afrayed/ that they thought the thinge which they ſawe/to be the more fearfull. † As Exod. viij. b time were they afrayed thorow the feare of the wonders / and somtyme they were so weake/ that they swouned withall: for an hayſty and sodayne fearfulnes came vpō thē. Afterwarde yf any of thē had fallen/he was kepte and shut in pryson / but without chaines. But if any dwelt in a vyllage / if he had ben an hyrd or housbandmā/he suffred intollerable necessitie: for they were all bounde with one chaine of darkenesse.

D Whether it were a blasinge wind/or a swete songe of the byrdes amonge the thicke braunches of the trees / or the vehemence of hayſty rūninge water / or greate noyse of the fallinge doune of stones/ or the playinge and rūninge of beastes whom they sawe not/ or the mighty noyse of roarynge beastes /or the sounde that aunswereth agayne in the hye mountaynes: it made them swoune for very feare. For all the earth shyned with cleare light / and no man was hindered in hys laboure. Onely vpon them there fell a heauy nyght / and image of darkenesse that was to come vpon thē. Yee/ they were vnto them selfes the moost heauy and horrible darkenesse.

The. XVIII. Chapter.

Of ỏ nighte were oure fathers certefied afore / ỏ they knowinge vnto what oothes they had geuē credēce / might be of good cheare. Thus thy people receaued the health of righteous/but the vngodly were destroied. For like as thou hast hurt our enemies/ so hast thou promoted vs whome thou callest afore. For the righteous children of ỏ good men offred secretly / & ordred the lawe of righteousnes vnto vnite:that the iust shoulde receaue good and euel in lyke maner / syngynge prayses vnto the father of all men. Agayne/ there was herde an vnconuenient voyce of the enemies / and a piteous crye for children that were bewayled. The master and the ser- C uaunt were punyshed a lyke / the meane man and the kinge suffred in like maner. For they altogether had innumerable that dyed one death.

† Neyther were the lyuinge sufficient to Exod.f
bury the dead/for in the twincklinge of an eye/ the noblest nacion of them was destroyed. As oft as God helped thē afore / yet wolde it not make thē beleue: but in the destruction of the fyrst borne they knowleged / that it was the people of God. For whyle all thinges were still/and whan the nyght was in the myddest of her course/thy Almighty worde (o Lorde) leapte doune from heauen out of thy royall trone/as a rough man of warre / in the myddest of the lande that was destroyed: and the sharpe swearde performed thy straighte cōmaundement/standinge and fyllinge al thinges with death: yee / it stode vpon the earth & reached the heauen. The syght of the euel dreames vexed thē sodenly / and fearfulnesse came vpon them vnwares.

Then laye there one here/another there/half S dead / half quick / and shewed the cause of his death. For the visions that vexed thē / shewed them these thinges afore: so that they were not ignoraunt/wherfore they perysshed.

The tētaciō of death toucheth the righteous also/and amonge the multitude in the wildernesse there was insurrection / but thy wrath endured not longe. † For the blameles man Nu.xvj wente in all the hayst/ and toke the battayl vpon him/brought forth the weapen of his ministracion:euen prayer and the censours of reconcilinge/set him self agaynst the wrath/ and so brought the misery to an ende: declaringe therby that he was thy seruaunt. For he ouercame not the multitude with bodely power/ nor with weapens of might: but with the worde he subdued him that vexed him / putynge tynge the in remembraunce of the ooth / and conuenaunt made vnto the fathers. For whan the dead were fallen doune by heapes one vpon another/ he stode in the myddest/ pacified the wrath / and parted the waye vnto the lyuinge. And why/ † in his longe garment was

The. XIX. Chapter.

A AS for the vngodly/the wrath came vpon them without mercy vnto the ende. For he knewe before what shoulde happen vnto them:how that(whan they had consented to let them go / and had sent thē out with greate diligence)they wolde repente/and folowe vp-Exo.xiiij.a pon them. † For whan they were yet mourninge and makinge lamentacion by the graues of the dead/they deuysed another foolyshnes: so that they persecuted them in theyr flienge / whome they had cast out afore with prayer. Worthy necessite also brought them vnto this ende / for they had cleane forgotten the thynges that happened vnto them afore. But the thinge that was wantynge of their punyshment / was requisite so to be fulfylled vpon them with tormentes: that thy people might haue a maruaylous passage thorow/ & that these might fynde a straunge death.

B Then was euery creature fashioned againe of the new accordinge to the will of their maker / obeyinge thy commaundementes / that thy children might be kept without hurte. For the cloude ouershadowed their tentes/and the drye earth appeared / where afore was water: so that in the read see there was a waye without impediment / and the greate depe became a grene felde:where thorow all the people wēt that were defended with thy hande / seynge thy wonderous and maruaylous workes. For as the horses / so were they fed / and leapte like lambes/prayesynge the (o Lorde) which haddest delyuered them. And why: they were yet mindefull of ỏ thynges/ that happened whyle they dwelt in the lande: how the grounde brought forth flyes in steade of cattel/and how the ryuer scrauled with the multitude of frogges in steade of fyshes.

† But at the last they sawe a new creacion C of byrdes / what tyme as they were deceaued Exod.xvj.c
with lust / and desyred delicate meates. For Num.xj.g
whan they were speakinge of their appetite/ the quayles came vpon them from the see/and punyshmentes came vpon the synners / not without the tokens which came to passe afore by the vehemence of the streames:for they suffred worthely accordinge to their wickednesses/ they dealt so abhominably and churlishly with straungers. Some receaued no vnknowen gestes/some brought the straungers into bondage that dyd them good. Besyde all these thinges / there were some that not only receaued no straungers with their wylles/ but persecuted those also / † and dyd thē much euell/ iij.Joan.b that receaued them gladly. Therfore were they punyshed with blindnesse / † like as they that Gen.xix.c
were couered with sodane darckenesse at the iiij.Re.vj.d
dores of ỏ righteous: so that euery one sought the intraunce of his dore.

Thus the elementes turned into them sel- S fes/like as whan one tune is chaunged vpon an instrument of musyck / and yet all the residue kepe their melody: which maye easely be perceaued/ by the sight of the thinges that are come to passe. The drye lande was turned into a watery / & the thynge that afore swamme in the water/wente now vpō the drye groūde. The fyre had power in the water (contrary to his owne vertue) and the water forgat his owne kinde to quench. Againe the flammes of the noysome beastes hurte not the flesh of them that wente with thē/neither melted they the yse/which els melteth lightly. In all thinges hast thou promoted thy people (o Lord) and brought thē to honoure: thou hast not despysed them / but alwaye and in all places hast thou stande by them.

The ende of the boke of Wysdome.

The boke of Jesus the sonne of Syrach / whiche is called in Latyne Ecclesiasticus.

The prologe of Jesus the sonne of Syrach vnto his boke.

MAny and greate men haue declared wysdome vnto vs out of the lawe / out of the prophetes / and out of other that folowed thē. In the whiche thynges Israel ought to be cōmended / by the reason of doctrine & wysdome: Therfore they that haue it and reade it / shoulde not onely them selfes be wyse there thorow / but serue other also with teachinge and wrytinge.

After that my graundfather Jesus had geuen diligent labour to rede the lawe / the prophetes and other bokes that were left vs of oure fathers / and had wel exercised him self therein: he purposed also to wryte some thynge of wysdome and good maners / to the intent that they which were willinge to learne and to be wyse / myght haue the more vnderstandinge / and be the more apte to leade a good conuersacion.

Wherfore I exhorte you to receaue it louyngly / to reade it with diligence / and to take it in good worth: though oure wordes be not so eloquent as the famous oratours. For the thynge that is wrytten in the Hebrue tunge / sounderh not so well whan it is translated into another speache. Not onely this boke of myne / but also the lawe / the prophetes / and other bokes sounde farre otherwyse then they do / whan they are spoken in their owne language.

Now in the xxxviij. yeare whan I came into Egypte in the tyme of Ptolome Euerges / and continued there all my life / I gat liberty to reade and wryte many good thinges. Wherfore I thought it good and necessary / to bestowe my diligence and trauayle to interprete this boke. And considerynge that I had tyme / I laboured and dyd my best to perfourme this boke / and to bringe it vnto light: that the straungers also whiche are disposed to learne / might applye thē selfes vnto good maners / and lyue accordinge to the lawe of the Lorde.

The first Chapter.

ALl wysdome † cōmeth of God the Lord / and hath bene euer wih him / and is before all tyme. Who hath numbred the sande of the see / ỹ droppes of the rayne / & the dayes of tyme? Who hath measured the hegbt of heauen / the bredth of the earth / and the depenesse of the see? Who hath sought out the grounde of Gods wysdome / whiche hath bene before all thinges. † Wysdome hath bene before all thinges / and the vnderstandinge of prudence from euerlastinge. (Gods worde in the hegbt is the welle of wysdome / and the euerlastinge commaundementes are the intraunce of her.) Vnto whome hath the rote of wysdome bene declared? Or who hath knowen her wyt? Vnto whome hath the doctrine of wysdome bene discouered and shewed? and who hath vnderstande the manyfolde entraunce of her?

There is one: euen the Hyghest / the maker of all thinges / the almyghty / the kinge of power (of whome mē ought to stande greatly in awe) which sytteth vpon his trone / beynge a God of dominion: He hath created her thorow the holy ghoost: he hath sene her: nūbred her / and measured her: He hath poured her out vpon all his workes / and vpon all flesh accordinge to his gift: he geueth her rychely vnto them that loue hym. The feare of ỹ Lorde is worshippe and triumphe / gladnesse / and a ioyfull croune. The feare of the Lorde maketh a mery herte / geueth gladnesse / ioye and longe lyfe. Who so feareth the Lorde / it shall go well with hym at the last / and in the daye of his death he shalbe blessed.

The loue of God is honorable wysdome: loke vnto whome it appeareth / they loue it / for they se what wōderous thinges it doeth. † The feare of the Lorde is the beginninge of wysdome / and was made with the faithfull in the mothers wombe: it shall go with the chosen women / & shalbe knowen of the righteous & faythfull. The feare of the Lorde is the right Gods seruice / that preserueth and iustifieth the hert / and geueth myrth and gladnesse. Who so feareth the Lorde / shalbe happy: & whan he hath nede of comforte / he shalbe blessed. To feare God / is the wysdome that maketh rych / and bringeth all good with her. She fylleth the whole house with her giftes / and the garners with her treasure. The feare of ỹ Lorde is the croune of wysdome / and geueth plenteous peace and health. He hath sene her and numbred her / knowlege and vnderstandinge of wysdome hath he poured out as rayne: and thē that helde her fast / hath he brought to honoure.

The feare of the Lorde is the rote of wysdome / and her braunches are longe life. (In the treasures of wysdome is vnderstandinge and deuocion of knowlege / but wisdome is abhorred of synners.) The feare of the Lorde dryueth out synne / for he that is without feare / can not be made ryghteous / and his wylful boldnes is his owne destruction. A pacient man wil suffre vnto the tyme / and then shall he haue the rewarde of ioye. A good vnderstandinge wyl hyde his wordes for a time / and many mens lippes shall speake of his wysdome. In the treasures of wysdome is the declaracion of doctrine / but the sinner abhorreth the worshyp of God. My sonne if thou desyre wysdome / kepe the commaundement / & God shall geue her vnto the: for the feare of ỹ Lordes wysdome and nurtoure / he hath pleasure in fayth and louynge mekenesse / and he shall fyll the treasures therof. Be not obstinate and vnfaythfull to the feare of the Lorde / and come not vnto hym with a dubble hert. Be not an ypocryte in the sight of men / & take good hede what thou speakest. Marck well these thynges / lest / thou happen to fall and bringe thy soule to dishonoure / and so God discouer thy secretes / and cast the doune in the myddest of the congregacion: because thou woldest not receaue the feare of God / and because thy herte is full of faynednesse and deceate /

O ye that feare the Lord / take sure holde of his mercy: shrenke not awaye from hym that ye fall not. O ye that feare the Lorde / beleue hym / and youre rewarde shall not be emptie. For God is gracious and mercyfull / he forgeueth synnes in the tyme of trouble / and is a defender for all them that seke hym in the trueth. Wo be vnto him that hath a dubble hert / wycked lippes / and euel occupied handes / and to the synner that goeth two maner of wayes. The. III. Chapter.

THe chyldren of wysdome are a congregacion of the ryghteous / & their exercise is obedience and loue. Heare me youre father (o my deare children) & do thereafter / that ye maye be safe. † For the Lord will haue the father honoured of the children / and loke what a mother commaundeth her children to do / he will haue it kepte. Who so honoureth his father / hys synnes shalbe forgeuen him: and he that honoureth his mother / is like one that gathereth treasure together. Who so honoureth his father / shal haue ioye of his owne children: & whan he maketh his prayer / he shalbe herde. † He ỹ honoureth his father / shal haue a lōge life: & he that is obedient for ỹ Lordes sake / his mother shall haue ioye of hym.

Reioyce not whan thy father is reproued / for it is no honoure vnto the / but a shame. For the worshippe of a mans father is his owne worshippe / and where the father is without honoure / it is ỹ dishonesty of the sonne. My sonne make much of thy father in his age / and greue him not as longe as he liueth. And if his vnderstādinge fayle / haue pacience with him / and despyse him not in thy strength. If a ryche man fall/ his frendes set hym vp againe: but whan the poore falleth/his frendes forsake hym. If a riche man fall into an errour/he hath many helpers: he speaketh proude wordes/and yet men iustifye him.

But if a poore man go wronge/he is punished: yet/though he speake wysely/yet can it haue no place. Whan the ryche man speaketh/euery body holdeth his tunge: and loke what he sayeth/they prayse it vnto the cloudes. But if the poore man speake/they saye: What felow is this? and if he do amysse/they shall destroye hym. Ryches are good vnto him that hath no synne in his conscience/and pouerte is a wycked thinge in the mouth of the vngodly. The herte of man chaungeth his countenaunce/whether it be in good or cuell. some man holdeth his tunge / and he is wyse

for he that knowlegeth him self openly / shalbe preserued from hurt and destruction. Lyke as whan a chaumberlayne thorow desyre & lust

vseth violence/& vnrighteousnes in the lawe:
(O how good a thynge is it/a man that is re-

so shalt thou escape wylfull synne.

Some man kepeth silence / and is founde

a man is to be hated. The foule sayeth: I haue no frende / I haue no thanke for all my good dedes: yee/euen they that eate my bread/speake no good of me. O how oft/ and of how many shal he be laughed to scorne? He taketh a more perillous fall by such wordes/then if he fell vp-men come haystely. In the mouth of him that is vntaught / are many vncõuenient and vnmete wordes. A wyse sentence shall not be alowed at the mouth of the foule / for he spea-

Some man synneth not / because he hath C

Some man promyseth hys frende a gyft for

Lyke as a house that is destroyed / euen so is wysdome vnto a foule: As for the knowlege of the vnwyse / it is but darke wordes. The. XXII. Chapter.

A Slouthfull body is moulded of a stone of clay: he ỹ toucheth him/ must wash his hādes again. A mysnourtured sōne is the dishonoure of ỹ father. A foolish doughter shalbe lytle regarded. ner/ and in Jerusalem was my power. I toke rote in an honourable people / euen in the portion of the Lorde and in his heretage / and kepte me in the fulnes of the saynctes. I am set vp an hye lyke a Ceder vpon Libanus/ and as a Cypres tree vpon the mount Hermon: I am exalted lyke a palme tree in Cades / and as a rose plante in Jericho: As a fyre oliue tree in the felde / and am exalted lyke as a plantayne tree by the water syde. I haue geuen a smell in the stretes as a Cinamom & Balme/ that hath so good a sauoure: yee/ a swete odoure haue I geuen/ as it were Myrre of the best. F

I haue made my dwellinges to smell as it C were of rosyn/ Galbanū / of Clowes and Incence/ and as Libanus whan it is not hewen doune/ & myne odoure is as the pure Balme. As the Therebynte haue I stretched out my braunches / and my braunches are the braunches of honoure and louinge fauoure. † ✠ As Jo.
the vyne haue I brought forth frute of a swete sauoure/ and my flources are as the frute of honoure and ryches. I am the mother of beutye/ of loue/ of feare/ of knowlege and of holy hope: † In me is all grace of life and trueth: In me Jo.
is all hope of life & vertue. O come vnto me/ all ye that be desyrous of me / and fyll youre selfes with my frutes: for my spirete is sweter then hony / and so is my inheritaunce more thē the hony combe: the remembraunce of me endureth endureth for euermore. They that eate me/ shal haue the more hunger: and they that drinke me/ shall thyrste the more. Who so herkeneth vnto me/ shall not come to cōfusion: and they that worke in me/ shall not offende. They that make me to be knowen/ shall haue euerlastinge lyfe. F

All these thinges are the boke of lyfe/ the cōuenaunt of the Hyghest/ & the knowlege of ỹ trueth. † Moses commaunded the lawe in the xx. a

This bringeth a plentcous vnderstandinge d

The fyrst hath not knowen her perfectly / nomore shall the last seke out the ground of her. For her thought is fuller then the see / and her counsayll is profounder then the greate depe.

I wysdome haue cast out floudes. I am as a greate waterbroke out of the ryuer. I am as the ryuer Dorix/ and as a water conduyte am I come out of the garden of pleasure. I sayde: I wyl water the garden of my yonge plātes/ and fyll the frute of my byrth. So my waterbroke became exceadinge greate / and my ryuer approched vnto the see. For I make doctryne to be vnto al mē as lyght as ỹ fayre morninge/ and I shall make it to be euer the clearer. ❨ I wyll pearce thorow all the lower partes of the earth. I wyll loke vpon all such as be a slepe/ and lighten al them that put their trust in the Lorde ❩ I shall yet poure out doctrine like as prophecy / and leaue it vnto such as seke after wysdome/ and their generacions shall I neuer fayle vnto the holy euerlastinge worlde. † Beholde/ how that I haue not laboured for my self onely / but for all them that seke after the trueth.

The XXV. Chapter.

A Thre thinges there are / that my spirete fauoureth / which be also alowed before God and men. † The vnyte of brethren/ * the loue of neyghboures/ † and man and wyfe that agree well together. Gen. xiij. b * Ro. xij. a † Eccl. xl. b

Thre thinges there be which my soule hateth / and I vtterly abhorre the lyfe of thē: A poore man that is proude. A rych man that is a lyar: † and an olde body that doteth and is vnchayste. Ge. xviij. b

If thou hast gathered nothinge in thy youth/ what wil thou fynde then in thine age? O how pleasaunt a thinge is it / whan graye headed men are discrete/ & whā the elders can geue good counsayll? O how comly a thinge is wysdome vnto aged men? yee/ vnderstandinge and counsayll is a glorious thinge. The croune of olde mē is to haue much experience/ and the feare of God is their worshippe.

There be ix. thinges/ which I haue iudged B in my hert to be happy / and the tenth wyll I tell forth vnto men with my tunge. A mā that whyle he lyueth/ hath ioye of hys children/ and seith the fall of his enemyes. Well is hym/ that dwelleth wt an houswyfe of vnderstandinge/ † and that hath not fallen with his tunge/ and Eccli. xxiij. a vnmete for hym. Well is him / that findeth a Jaco. iij. a faythfull frende: and well is hym/ which talketh of wysdome to an eare that heareth him. O how greate is he/ that findeth wysdome & knowlege? Yet is he not aboue hym ỹ feareth the Lorde. The feare of God hath set it self aboue all thinges. Blessed is the man / vnto whome it is graunted to haue ỹ feare of God. Vnto whome shall he be lykened that kepeth it fast? The feare of God is the begynninge of his loue/ & the beginninge of faith is to cleaue fast vnto it. The heauynes of the hert is all the punishment/ and the wickednes of a woman goeth aboue all. All punishment and plague is nothinge in cōparison of the plague of the hert/ euen so all wickednes is nothinge to the wickednes of a woman.

Whatsoeuer happeneth vnto a mā / is no- C thinge in comparison of it / that his euel willers do vnto hym: and all vengeaunce is nothinge to the vengeaunce of ỹ enemye. There is not a more wicked heade then the heade of the serpent / and there is no wrath aboue the wrath of a woman. † I wyl rather dwel with Prou. xxj. c a Lyon and draggon/ then to kepe house with a wicked wyfe. The wickednesse of a woman chaungeth her face/ she shall moffel her countenaunce as it were a Beer/ and as a sack shall she shewe it amonge the neyghbours. Her housbande is brought to shame amonge his neyghbours/and whan he heareth/ it maketh him to syghe. All wickednes is but litle to the wickednes of a woman/the porcion of the vngodly shall fall vpon her.

Like as to clymme vp a sandy waye is to ỹ fete of ỹ aged/euē so is a wife full of wordes to a still quiete man. †Loke not to narowly vpon the beutye of a woman/ lest/ thou be prouoked in desyre towarde her. The wrath of a woman is dishonoure and greate confusion. If a womā get the mastry / then is she contrary to her housbande. A wicked wife maketh a sory hert/ an heauy contenaunce and a dead wounde (weake handes and table knees / is a woman that comforteth not her housbande.) † Of the woman came the begynninge of synne/ & thorow her we all are dead. Geue thy water no passage/ no/ not a lytle / neyther geue a wicked woman her wil. If she walke not after thy hande/ she shall confounde ỹ in the syght of thyne enemies. Cut her of then from thy flesh/ that she do not alwaye abuse the.

The XXVI. Chapter.

HAppy is the man that hath a verteous wyfe/ for the numbre of his yeares shalbe dubble. An honest woman maketh her housbande a ioyfull man/ and she shall fyll the yeares of his life in peace. A verteous woman is a noble gift/ which shalbe geuē for a good porcion vnto such as feare God. Whether a man be rych or poore/ he maye haue euer a merry hert/ and chearfull cōtenaunce. There be thre thinges that my hert feareth / and my face is afrayed of the fourth. Treason in a citie/ a sedicious people/ and noysome tunges/ al these are heauyer then the death. But whan one is gelous ouer his wyfe / it bringeth payne and sorow vnto the herte: and a woman that telleth out all thinges/ is a scourge of the tūge. Whā one hath an euel wyfe / it is euen as whan an vnlike pare of oxen must drawe together: † he that getteth her/ getteth a scorpion. A dronken woman is a greate plague / for she can not couer her owne shame.

Judic. xvj.

B The whoredom of a womā maye be knowē in ỹ pryde of her eyes and eyelyddes. † If thy doughter be not shamefast/ holde her straytly/ lest/ she abuse her self thorow ouermuch liberte. Beware of all the dishonesty of her eyes / and maruayl not if she do against the. Like as one that goeth by the waye and is thyrstye/ so shal she open her mouth/ and drinke of euery nexte water that she maye get.

Eccli. j.

By euery hedge shall she set her dounc/ and open her quyuer against euery arowe. A louinge wyfe reioyceth her housbande: and fedeth her bones with her wysdome. A woman of few wordes is a gift of God / and to a well nurtoured mynde maye nothing be cōpared.

An honest and manerly woman / is a gyft C aboue other giftes / & there is no waight to be compared / vnto a mynde that can rule it self. Like as the Sunne whan it aryseth / is an ornament in the hye heauen of the Lorde/ so is a verteous wife the beutye of al her house. Like as the cleare light vpon the holy candelstick/ so is the beutye of the face vpon an honest body. † Like as the golden pillers are vpon the sockettes of syluer / so are the fayre legges vpon a woman that hath a constant mynde. (Perpetual are the foundacions that be layed vpon a whole stonye rocke/ so are the cōmaundements of God vpon an holy woman.)

Can. vj.

There be two thinges that greue my hert/ D and in the thirde is a displeasure come vpon me. Whan an experte man of warre suffreth scarcenes and pouerte. Whan men of vnderstandinge and wysdome are not set by: And whan one departeth from righteousnes vnto synne: Who so doeth such/ the Lorde hath prepared him vnto the swearde. There be two maner of thinges/ which me thinke to be harde and perylous: A marchaunt can not lightly kepe him frō wronge/ neyther a tauerner hym self from synne.

The Gydes resorte vnto their / lyke so doeth the trueth turne vnto them that be occupied withall. The Lyon wayteth for the praye: so do the synnes lurke vpon the workers of wickednes. The talkynge of hym that feareth God/ is nothinge but wysdom: as for a foule he chaungeth as the Moone. But afore al thinges geue thankes vnto him that hath made the/and replenished the with his goodes.

C Who so feareth the Lorde / wyll receaue his doctrine: and they that get them to hym by times/shall fynde grace. He that seketh the lawe/ shalbe fylled withall: As for hym that is but fayned/he wyl be offended therat. They that feare the Lorde / shall fynde the iudgment/& their righteousnes shalbe kindled as a lighte. An vngodly man wyll not be refourmed / but can helpe him selfe with the example of other in his purpose. A man of vnderstandinge despyseth no good counsail/ but a wylde and proude body hath no feare. My sonne/do no thinge without admonicēt/ so shal it not repent the after the dede. Go not in the waye where thou mayest fal/nor where thou mayest stomble against the stone. Geue not thy selfe into a laborious slyppery waye/ and beware of thine owne children. In all thy workes put thy truste in God from thy whole herte/ for that is kepinge of the commaundementes. Who so beleueth Godes worde: taketh hede to the commaundementes: and he that putteth his trust in the Lorde/shal wante nothinge.

The.XXXIII. Chapter.

A There shall no euell happen vnto hym that feareth God: But whan he is in tentacion/the Lord shall delyuer him. A wyse man hateth not the lawe/ but an ypocrite is as a shyp in a raginge water. A man of vnderstandinge geueth credence vnto the lawe of God/& the lawe is faithfull vnto him. Be sure of the matter/then talke therof: Be fyrste wel instructe/thē maiest thou geue aunswere. The herte of the foolish is like a carrwhele/ & his thoughtes runne about like the axel tree. Like as a wilde horse that neyeth vnder euery one that sytteth vpon him/so is it with a scorneful frende. Why doeth one daie excel another/seinge al the daies of the yeare come of the Sunne? The wisdome of the Lord hath so parted them asunder/ & so hath he ordeined the times and solempne feastes. Some of thē hath he chosen & halowed before other daies. And al men are made of the grounde / and out of the earth of Adam.

In the multitude of science hath the Lord B de sundereth them/and made their wayes of diuerse fashions. Some of them hath he blessed/made much of them / halowed them / and claymed them to him self. But some of them hath he cursed/brought them lowe/& put thē out of their estate. †Like as the claye is in the Rom.vj.c potters hande/and all the ordinge therof at his pleasure: so are men also in the hande of him that made them/so that he may geue thē as it lyketh hym best. †Against euel is good/ 1.Cor.vj.c & against death is lyfe: so is the vngodlye against such as feare God. If he be not obedient/bynde his fete: but do not to much vnto him in any wyse/and without discrecio do nothinge. If thou haue a (faithfull) seruaũt/let him be vnto the as thine owne soule/ for in blonde hast thou gotten hym. If thou haue a seruaunte / holde him as thy selfe / for thou hast nede of hym as thy selfe. If thou intreatest him cuel/and kepest him harde/and makest him to be proude/ and to renne awaie from the/thou canst not tell what waye thou shalt seke hym.

The. XXXIIII. Chapter.

A Vayne people begyle them selfes with vayne and deceatful hope/ & foules trust in dreames. Who so regardeth dreames / is like vnto him ẏ wil take holde of a shadowe/& folowe after the winde: Euen so is it with the appearynges of dreames. Before the face is the lykenesse of a face. Who can be clensed of the vncleane? Or what trueth can be spoken of a lyar? Soothsayinge / witchcraft / sorcery and dreamynge is but vanyte: lyke as whan a woman trauayleth with chylde / and hath many fantasyes in her herte. Where as such visyons come not of God/ set not thine herte vpon thẽ: For dreames haue deceaued many a man: and they fayled that put theyr truste therein.

B The lawe shalbe fulfylled without lyes/ & wysdome is sufficient to a faythfull mouthe. A wyse man that is well instructe/ vnderstãdeth much: and he that hath good experience/ can talke of wisdome. He that hath no experience/knoweth litle: and he that erreth / causeth much wickednes. Now I se/that they which feare God/haue the right spirite: for their hope standeth in him/that can helpe them. Who so feareth the Lorde/standeth in awe of no man/ and is not afrayed/for the Lorde is his hope and comforte.

C Blessed is the soule of him that feareth the Lord: In whome putteth he his trust: who is his strength? For the eyes of the Lorde haue respecte vnto them that loue hym. He is their mighty protection/& stronge groũde: A defence for the heate / a refuge for the hote noone daye/ a succoure for stomblinge / and an helpe for fallynge. He setteth vp the soule/ and lighteneth the eies: He geueth health life and blessynge. He that geueth an offeringe of vnrighteous good/his offering is refused: and the scornefull dealynges of the vnrighteous please not God. † God hath no delyte in the offeringes of the vngodly/ neyther maye synne be reconcyled in the multitude of oblacions. The XXXV. Chapter.

A Haue mercy vpon vs O Lorde/ thou God of all thinges. Haue respecte vnto vs/shewe vs the light of thy mercies/& sende thy feare amonge the Heithen & straungers/ which seke not after the: that they may knowe how ẏ there is no God but thou/& that maye shew thy wonderous workes. A LEvery frende sayeth: I wyll be frendly vnto hym also. But there is some frende / whiche is onely a frende in name. Remayneth there not heauinesse vnto death / whan a cõpanion and frende is turned to an enemy? O moost wycked presumpcion: From whẽce art thou spronge vp / to couer the earth with

And holde thy counsaill fast in thine hert / C for there is no man more faithfull to kepe it / then thou thy selfe. Some man is apte and well instructe in many thinges / and yet very vnprofytable vnto him selfe. Some man there is that can geue wyse and prudent counsail / and yet is he hated / and continueth a begger: for that grace is not geuen him of God to be accepted. Another is robbed of all wysdome / yet is he wyse vnto him selfe / and the frute of vnderstandinge is faythfull in his mouth.

A wyse man maketh his people wyse / and D the frutes of his wysdome fayle not. A wyse man shalbe plenteously blessed of God: and all they that se him / shall speake good of hym. The lyfe of man standeth in the numbre of the dayes / but the dayes of Israel are innumerable. A wyse man shal optayne faythfulnesse and credence amonge his people / and his name shalbe perpetual. So doeth the potter set by his worke / he E turneth the whele aboute with his fete / he is diligent and carefull in all hys doynges / and his laboure and worke is without numbre. He fashioneth the claye with his arme / and with his fete he tempereth it. His herte ymagineth how he maye make it pleasaunt / and his diligence is to clense the ouen. The teeth of wilde noysome beastes/the scorpions/ serpentes / and the swearde are created also for vengeaunce / to the destruction of the vngodly. They shall be glad to do his commaundemẽtes: and whan nede is/they shalbe ready vpon earth: and whan their houre is come / they shall not ouerpasse the commaundement of the Lorde.

Therfore haue I taken a good courage vnto me from the begynninge / and thought to put these thinges in wrytinge/ & to leaue them behinde me. † All the workes of the Lorde Gen. are good / and he geueth euery one in due season/and whan nede is. So that a man nede not to saye: this is worse thẽ that. For in due season they are all pleasaunt and good: And therfore prayse the Lorde with whole hert and mouth / geue thankes vnto his name.

The. XL. Chapter.

A GReate trauayle is created for all mẽ / and A an heauy yock vpon all mens chyldren/ frõ the daye that they go out of their mothers wombe / tyll they be buried in (the earth) the mother mother of al thinges: namely/ their thoughtes and ymaginacions/feare of the hert/ counsayl/ meditacions/longinge and desyre/the daye of death: from the hyghest that sytteth vpõ the glorious seate/vnto the lowest & moost symple vpon the earth: from him that is gorgeously arayed/and weareth a croune/ vntyll him that is but homely and symple clothed. There is nothinge but wrath/zele/scarfulnes/ vnquietnes/ and feare of death / rigorous/anger/ and stryfe. And in the nyght whan one shoulde rest and slepe vpon his bedde/the slepe chaungeth hys vnderstandinge and knowlege. A lytle as nothinge is his rest in the slepe/as wel as in the daye of laboure.

B He feareth and is disquieted in the vision of his hert / as one that runneth out of a battayll: and in the tyme of healthe he awaketh / & marueyleth that ỹ feare was nothinge. Such thinges happen vnto all flesh / both man and beest: but seuenfolde to the vngodly. Moreouer death / bloudsheddinge / stryfe / and swearde/ oppression/hunger/ destruction / and punyshment: † these thinges are all created against the vngodly / * & for their sakes came ỹ floude also. † All that is of the earth / shall turne to d earth agayne: & al waters ebbe againe into the see. All brybes and vnrighteousnes shalbe put awaye/ but faythfulnes & trueth shall endure for euer. The substaũce and goodes of the vngodly shalbe dryed vp / and synke a waye as a waterfloude/and they shall make a sounde like a greate thonder in the rayne.

C Lyke as the righteous reioyceth / whan he openeth his hande / so shall the transgressours be faynte/ whã their goodes vanysh and con- b sume awaye. † The children of the vngodly shall not optayne many braunches / and ỹ vncleane rotes vpon the hyghe rockes shalbe rooted out before the gras by the water syde and vpon the ryuer bankes.

Frendlines and liberalite in the increace & blessinge of God / is lyke a paradyse & garden of pleasure: such mercy also & kindnes endureth for euer. † To labour and to be content wh b that a man hath/is a swete pleasaunt lyfe: and that is to fynde a treasure aboue all treasures. To beget children/and to repayre the cytie/maketh a perpetual name: but an honest woman is more worth then they both. Wyne & myn- strelsye reioyce the hert / but the loue of wysdome is aboue them both.

E Pypinge and harpynge make a swete noyse/ but a frendly tũge goeth beyonde them both. Thyne eye desyreth fauoure and beuty / but a grene sede tyme rather thẽ they both. A frende and companyon come together at opportunyte/ † but aboue them both is a wyse that a- Eccli. xxv. c greeth with her housbande. One brother helpeth another in the tyme of trouble/but almes shall delyuer more then they both. Golde and syluer fasten the fete / but a good counsayll is more pleasaunt then they both. Temporal substaunce and strength lyft vp the mynde: but the feare of the Lorde more then they both. The feare of the Lorde wanteth nothinge/ and nedeth no helpe. The feare of the Lorde is as a pleasaunt garden of blessinge/ and nothinge so beutyfull as it. My sonne/ lede not a beggers lyfe / for better it were to dye then to begge. Who so loketh to another mans table/ taketh no thought for hys owne lyuinge/ how to vpholde hys lyfe/for he fedeth him self with other mens meate. But a wyse and well nurtoured man wyll beware therof. Beggynge is swete in the mouth of the vnshamefast/but in hys belly there burneth a fyre.

The XLI. Chapter.

O Death/how bytter is the remembraunce A of the/to a man that seketh rest and comforte in his substaunce and ryches/vnto ỹ man that hath nothinge to vexe hym/and that hath prosperyte in all thynges / yee / vnto hym that yet is able to receaue meate? O death/how acceptable and good is thy iudgement vnto the nedefull / and vnto hym whose strength fayleth/and that is now in hys last age / and that in all thynges is full of care and fearfulnes: vnto hym also that is in dispayre/ and hath no hope nor pacience? The children of the vngodly are abhominable children/ and so are they that kepe com-

The chyldren complayne of an vngodly father: and why? for hys sake they are rebuked and despysed. Wo be vnto you (O ye vngodly) which haue forsaken the lawe of the Hyghest God: If ye be borne/ye shal be borne to cursynge: if ye dye / the curse shalbe youre porcyon.

ij.a THe glory of the heyght/ † is the fayre and cleare firmament/the beuty of the heauen in his glorious clearnes. The Sunne whan it appeareth / declareth the daye in the goynge out of it/a maruaylous worke of the Hyghest. At noone it burneth the earth/and who maye abyde the heate thereof? Who so kepeth an ouen whan it is hote/thre tymes more doeth the Sunne burne vpon the mountaynes / whan it bretheth out the fyre beames / and shyneth with the bryghtnes of it / it blindeth the eyes. The XLIII. Chapter.

A commendacion of the olde verteous fathers.

A LEt vs commende the noble famous men/ and the generacion of oure forecelders and fathers. Many more glorious actes hath the Lord done/ & shewed his greate power euer sence the beginning. The noble famous men raygned in their kyngdomes/ and bare excellent rule. In their wysdome and vnderstandinge/ they folowed the counsayll shewed in the prophecies. † They led the folke thorow the counsayll and wysdome of the scrybes of the people. Wyse sentences are founde in their instruction. They sought the swetenes and melody of musyck/ and brought forth the pleasaũt songes in scripture. They were ryche also/ and coulde comforte and pacifye those that dwelt with them. All these were very noble/ and honorable men in their generacions/ and were well reported of in their tymes. These haue left a name behinde them/ so that theyr prayse shall alwaye be spoken of. Afterwarde there were some/ whose remẽbraunce is gone. † They came to naught & perysshed/ as though they had neuer bene/ and became as though they had neuer bene borne/ yee/ and their children also with them.

B Neuertheles/ these are louinge mẽ/ whose righteousnes shall neuer be forgotten: but cõtinue by theyr posteryte. Theyr chyldren are an holy good heretage: Theyr sede endured fast in the conuenaunt. For their sakes shall their chyldren and sede continue for euer/ and theyr prayse shall neuer be put doune. Their bodyes are buried in peace/ but their name lyueth for euermore. The people can speake of their wysdome/ and the congregacion can talke of their prayse. † Enoch walked right and acceptably before the Lorde: therfore was he translated for an example of amendement to the generacions. † Noe was a stedfast & righteous man: and in the tyme of wrath he became a reconcilinge. Therfore was he left a remnaunt vnto the earth/ whan the floude came. † An euerlastinge conuenaunt was made with hym/ that all flesh shoulde pery she no more with ỹ water.

† Abraham was a greate father of many people/ in glory was there none like vnto him. He kepte the lawe of the Hyghest/ and came into a conuenaunt with him. He set the conuenaunt in hys flesh/ † & whan he was tempted/ he was founde faythfull. Therfore swore God vnto him with an ooth/ that he wolde blesse al people in hys sede/ that he wolde multiplie and increace him as the dust of ỹ earth/ and to exalte hys sede as the starres: yee/ and that hys sede shoulde haue the possession/ and inheritaunce of the lande from see to see/ and from the ryuer vnto the borders of the lande.

† With Isaac dyd he stably sh thesame conuenaunt/ for Abrahams his fathers sake. Yee/ that gracious blessinge and healthy of all men/ and conuenaunt dyd he stably sh with Isaac/ and made it to rest vpon the heade of Jacob. He knew him/ † in that he prospered him so well and rychely/ & gaue hym an heretage/ and sundered his porcion by it self/ * and parted it amonge the twelfe trybes. Mercyfull men brought he out of him/ which founde fauoure before al flesh.

The. XLV. Chapter.

MOses beloued of God and men/ whose remembraunce is in hyghe prayse: hym hath the Lorde made lyke in the glory of the saynetes/ and magnified him/ so that the enemies stode in awe of him/ thorow his wordes he dyd greate wonders. He made him great in the syght of kinges/ gaue him cõmaundement before his people/ and shewed him hys glorious power. † He stably shed him with faythfulnes and meknes/ and chose hym out of all men. For he herde his voyce/ and ledde him in the darcke cloude: † and there he gaue hym the commaundementes/ yee/ the lawe of lyfe and wysdome/ that he myght teach Jacob the conuenaunt/ and Israel his lawes.

B † He chose Aaron his brother also out of ỹ trybe of Leui/ exalted him/ and made him such like. * An euerlastinge conuenaunt made he with him/ and gaue him the priesthode in the people. He made him glorious in beutyfull araye/ and clothed him with the garment of honour. He put perfecte royce vpon him/ and gyrded him with strength. He decke him wt hyde clothes and a tunycle/ with an ouerbody cote also and gyrdle. Rounde aboute made he him belles of gold/ and that many: † that whã he wente in/ the sounde myght be herde/ that they myght make a noyse in the Sanctuary/ and geue the people warninge. The holy garment was wrought & broadered with golde/ yalow sylke and purple. And in the brestlappe there was a goodly worke/ wherein was fastened lyght and perfectnesse.

C Vpon thesame also there was a worke fastened/ and set with costly precious stones/ all bounde with golde: and this he brought in his ministracion. The stones also were fastened for a rememoraunce/ after the twelfe trybes of Israel. Vpon his mytre there was a plate of pure golde/ & grauen ymage of holynes/ a famous and noble worke garnysshed/ & pleasaunt to loke vpon. Before him were there sene no such fayre ornamentes/ and these it behoued hym alwaye to vse: There myght none other put them on/ but onely his children/ and his childers children perpetually. Dayly persourmed he his burntofferinges two tymes.

a † Moses fylled his handes/ & anoynted him with holy oyle.

D Thys was now confirmed him with an euerlastinge conuenaunt/ and to hys sede/ as the dayes of heauen: namely/ that his children shoulde alwaye ministre before him/ and persourme the office of the priesthode/ and wysh the people good in his name. Before all men liuinge chose he him/ that he shoulde offre before the Lorde/ and make odours for a swete sauoure and remembraunce/ that he shoulde reconcyle the people of the Lorde wyth him agayne. † He gaue hym auctorite also in hys commaundementes/ and in the conuenaunt that he shoulde teach Jacob the statutes and testimonies/ and to enfourme Israel in his lawe.

† Therfore there stode vp certayne against him/ and had enuie at him in the wildernes: namely/ they that were of Dathan/ and Abirams syde/ and the furious congregacion of Chore. This the Lorde sawe/ and it displeased him/ & in his wrothfull indignacion were they consumed. A greate wonder dyd he vppon them/ and consumed them with the fyre.

† Besydes this/ he made Aaron yet more honorable and glorious. He gaue him an heretage/ and parted the fyrst frutes vnto him.

† Vnto him specially he appoynted the bread for sustenaunce (for the prestes dyd eate of the offeringes of the Lorde) this gaue he vnto him & his sede. † Els had he no heretage nor porcion in the lande and with the people. For the Lorde him self is his porcion/ and enheritaunce.

The thirde noble and excellẽt man is † Phyneas the sonne of Eleasar/ which pleased the God of Israel/ because he had the zele & feare of the Lorde. For whan the people were turned back/ he put him self forth right soone/ and that with a good will to pacifie the wrath of ỹ Lorde towarde Israel. Therfore was there a conuenaunt of peace made with him/ that he shoulde be the puncipal amonge the righteous/ and the people that he and his posteryte shoulde haue the office of the priesthode for euer. (Lyke as there was made a cõuenaũt with Dauid of the trybe Juda/ that from amonge hys sonnes onely there shoulde be kynge:) And that Aaron also and his sede shoulde be the heretage/ to geue vs wysdome in oure herte/ to iudge his people in righteousnes: that his goodes should not come into forgetfulnes/ and that their honoure myght endure for euer.

welles of water flowed oute/and were exceadinge full as the see. He toke care for hys people/and deliuered them from destruccion.
He kepte his citie and made it stronge/that it shoulde not be besieged. He dwelte in ho-noure and worshyppe amonge his people/and enlarged the intraunce of the house and the courte. He geueth lighte as the morninge the Moone whan it is full. He shyneth as the Sunne in the temple of God. He is as bryght as the rayneBowe in the fayre clousonnes of Aaron in their glory. And that he might sufficiently perfourme his seruice vpō

of the drinckeofferinge/& poured in of ỹ wyne:
so he poured vpon the bottome of the aulter a good smell vnto the hyghest prince.

Then beganne the sonnes of Aaron to synge/and to blowe with trompettes/and to make a greate noyse/for a remembraunce and prayse vnto the Lorde. Then were the people afrayed/and fell doune to the earth vpon
theyr faces/to worshippe the Lorde theyr
God/and to geue thankes to almighty God.
They songe goodlye also with their voyces/so that there was a pleasaunte noyse in the greate house of the Lorde. And the people in theyr prayer besoughte the Lorde
the hyghest/that he wolde be mercyfull/tyll the honoure of the Lorde were perfourmed. Thus ended they theyr ministraciō and seruyce.

C Then wente he doune/and stretched oute his handes ouer the whole multytude of the people of Israel/that they shoulde geue praise and thankes oute of theyr lyppes vnto the Lorde/and to reioyce in his name. He be-ganne yet once also to praye/that he myghte openly shewe the thankesgeuinge before the hyghest/namely thus: O geue prayse and thankes (ye all) vnto the Lorde our God/whiche hath euer done noble and great thingees: whiche hath increaced oure dayes from oure mothers wombe/and dealt with vs ac-cordinge to his mercy: that he wyll geue vs
the ioyfulnesse of herte/and peace for oure tymes in Israel. Which faithfully kepeth his mercy for vs euermore/and alway deliuereth

D There be two maner of people/that I abhorre fro my hert: as for the thirde/whome I hate/it is no people: They that syt vpō ỹ moūtain of Samaria/the Philistines/and the foo-

E I Jesus the sonne of Syrach Eleazarus of Jerusalem/haue marked vp these informations/and documentes of wisdome and vnderstandinge in this boke/and poured out ỹ wysdome oute of my herte. Blessed is he that exerciseth him selfe therin: and who so taketh such to herte/shal be wyse. If he do these thin-ges/he shalbe strong in all. For the lighte of the Lorde ledeth him.

The. LI. Chapter. ✠

A prayer of Jesus the sonne of Syrach.

A I Thanke the O Lorde and kynge/and prayse the O God my Sauioure/I wyl yelde prayse vnto thy name: for thou arte my defender and helper/and haste preserued my body from destruccion/frō the snare of traycupied with lyes. Thou hast bene my helper/from such as stode vp against me/and hast de-liuered me after the multitude of thy mercy/and for thy holy names sake. Thou hast delyuered me from the roaring of them/that prepared them selfes to deuoure me oute of the handes of such as soughte after my lyfe: from the multitude of them that troubled me/and wente aboute to set fyre vppon me on euery syde/so that I am not brent in the middest of the fyre: From the depe of hel/frō an vncleane

tunge/from lyenge wordes/from the wicked kynge/and from an vnrighteous tunge. My soule shal praise the Lorde vnto death/for my lyfe drew nye vnto hell.

B They compassed me rounde aboute on e-uery side/and there was no man to helpe me.
I loked about me/if there were any man that wolde succoure me: But there was none. Thē thoughte I vpon thy mercy O Lorde/and vpon thy actes that thou haste done euer of olde: namely/that thou delyuerest such as put their trust in the/and ryddest them out of the handes of the Heithen. F

Thus lyfte I vp my prayer frō the earth/
and prayed for delyueraunce from death.
I called vppon the Lorde my father/that he wolde not leaue me withoute helpe in the daye of my trouble/and in the tyme of the proude. I praysed thy name contyn-

it: and so my prayer was herde. Thou saue-from the vnrighteous tyme. Therfore wyl I acknowlege and prayse the/and magnifye the name of the Lorde.

therfore shal I not be forsaken.

good treasure. Thorowe her the Lord hath geuen me a newe tunge/ wherewith I wyll prayse him. O come vnto me ye vnlearned / &

Here endeth the songe of the thre children.

The story of Susanna/ which is the xiij. Chapter of Daniel after the Latin.

THere dwelt a man in Babylon/ called Joachim: that toke a wyfe whose name was Susanna/ (the doughter of Helchias) a very fayre woman/ and suche one as feared God. Her father and her mother also were godlye people/ and taught her doughter accordinge to the lawe of Moses. Nowe Joachim (her husband) was a greate rych man/and had a fayre orcharde ioyninge vnto his house. And to hym resorted the Jewes commonly / Because he was a man of reputacion amonge them. Thesame yeare were there made two iudges/such as the Lord speaketh of: All the wickednesse of Babilon commeth from the elders (that is) from the iudges/ which seme to rule the people. These came oft to Joachims house: and all such as had any thinge to do in the lawe/came thither vnto them.

Now when the people came agayne at after noone/Susanna wente into her husbandes orcharde to walke. The elders seynge this/ that she went in dayly and walked: they burned for lust to her/ yee/ they were almoost oute of theyr wyttes / and caste downe theyr eyes / that they shoulde not se heauen / nor remembre that God is a ryghteous iudge. For they were both wounded with the loue of her / neyther durst one shewe another his grefe. And for shame/ they durste not tel her their inordinate luste / that they wolde fayne haue had ro do with her. Yet they layed waite for her earnestly from daye to daye/ that they myghte (at the leest) haue a syght of her. And the one sayd to the other: Vp/let vs go home/ for it is dynner tyme. So they wente their waye from her.

When they returned agayn/they came together/enquiring out the mater betwixt thē selfes: yee/the one tolde the other of his wicked luste. Then appointed they a tyme when they might take Susanna alone.

It happened also that they spyed oute a conueniente tyme / when she wente forth to walke (as her maner was) and no bodye with her but two maydens / and thoughte
.ij.a †to washe her selfe in the garden / for it was
.vj.a an hote season. And there was not one persone there/ excepte the two elders that had hyd them selfes / to beholde her. So she sayde to her maydens: go fet me oyle and sope/and shut the orcharde dore/that I maye washe me. And they dyd as she bad them/ and shut the orcharde dore/ and wente oute them selfes at a backe dore / to fet the thinge that she had commaunded: but Susanna knowe not/that the elders lay there hid within. Nowe whan the maydens were gone forth / the two elders gat them vp and ranne vpon her/ sayinge: Nowe/the orcharde dores are shut/ that no man can se vs: we haue a lust vnto the/therfore consent vnto vs/ and lye with vs.

D If thou wylt not / we shall bringe a testimoniall agaynste the / that there was a yonge felowe with the / and that thou hast sente awaye thy maydens from the for thesame cause. Susanna syghed / and sayde: Alas I am in trouble on euery syde. Though I folowe youre mynde / it wyll be my death: and yf I consent not vnto you/ I canne not escape youre handes. Well/ it is better for me/to fall into youre handes/ without the dede doynge / then to synne in the sighte of the Lorde: and with that/she cryed oute with a loude voice: the elders cryed also out against her.

Then ranne there one to the orcharde dore / and smote it open. Now when the seruauntes of the house herde that crie in the orcharde / they rushed in at the backe dore / to se what the matter was. So when the elders tolde them/ the seruauntes were greatly ashamed: for why/there was neuer suche a reporte made of Susanna. On the morowe after came the people to Joachim her housbande / and the two elders came also/ full of myscheuous ymaginacions agaynste Susanna/ to bringe her vnto death / & spake thus before the people: Sende for Susanna the doughter of Helchias/Joachims wyfe. And immediatly they sente for her. So she came with her father and mother / her chyldren / and all her kynrede. Nowe Susanna was a tender persone/ and maruaylous fayre of face. Therfore the wicked men commaunded to take of the clothes from her face (for she was couered) that at the leest/they might so be satisfyed in her beutye. Then her frendes/ yee/and all they that knewe her/beganne to wepe.

These two elders stode vp in the middest of the people/ † and laied their handes vpon ỹ Leu.xxiiij.c
heade of Susanna: whiche wepte and loked vp towarde heauen / for her herte had a sure trust in the Lord. And the elders saide: As we were walkynge in the orcharde alone / this woman came in with her two maidens: whome she sent awaye from her/and sparred the orcharde dores. With that/a yonge fellow (whiche there was hyd) came vnto her / and laye with her. As for vs/ we stode in a corner of the orcharde. And when we sawe this wickednesse/ we ranne to her: and perceaued that they had medled together. But we could not holde hym/ for he was stronger than we/ thus he opened the dore/and gat him awaye. Nowe when we had taken this woman/ we axed her/what yonge felow this was: but she wold not tell vs. This is the matter / and we be witnesses of thesame.

The commune sorte beleued them/as those that were the elders and iudges of the people/ and so they condemned her to death. Susanna cryed oute with a loude voyce/and Heb.xiij.c
sayde: O euerlastinge God / † thou searcher of secretes/ thou that knowest all thinges afore they come to passe: thou wotest that they haue borne false wytnes angainst me: & beholde/ I must dye / where as I neuer dyd any

any suche thinges / as these men haue maliciously inuented against me. And the Lord herde her voyce. For when she was led forth to the death/the Lord rayséd vp the spirete of a yonge childe/ whose name was Saniel / & cried with a loude voyce: †I am cleane from this blonde. Then all the people turned them towarde him/and saide: What meane these wordes that thou hast spoken? Saniel stode in the middest of them and saide: Are ye suche foules (O ye children of Israel) that ye canne not discerne? Ye haue here cõdẽned a doughter of Israel vnto death / and knowe not the trueth wherfore: Go syt on iudgment again/ for they haue spoken false wytnesse agaynste her.

Wherfore the people turned againe in all the haist. And the elders (that is the principal heades) saide vnto him: Come syt doune here amonge vs/ and shewe vs this matter/ seynge God hath geuen the as great honour as an elder. And Saniel saide vnto thẽ: †Put these two asyde one from another/and then shal I heare them. Whã they were put asunder one from another/he called one of them/ and sayde vnto him: O thou olde kanckerde carle/that hast vsed thy wickednesse so longe: thin vngracious dedes which thou hast done afore/are now come to light. For thou hast geuen false iudgmentes/thou hast oppressed the innocent/and letten the gyltie go free / where as yet the Lorde sayeth: †The innocent and ryghteous se thou slaye not. Wel than/if thou hast sene her/tell me/ vnder what tree sawest thou them talkyng together? He aunswered: Vnder a Molbery tree. And Saniel sayde: very well. Nowe thou lyest euen vpon thyne heade. Lo / the messaunger of the Lorde hath receaued the sentence of him/ to cut the in two.

Then put he him asyde / and called for the other/ and sayde vnto hym: O thou sede of Canaan/but not of Juda: Fayrnesse hath deceaued the/& lust hath subuerted thine herte. Thus dealte ye afore with the doughters of Israel/and they (for feare) cõsented vnto you: but the doughter of Juda wolde not abyde youre wickednesse. Nowe tell me than/ vnder what tree biddest thou take them speakynge together? He aunswered: vnder a Pomgranate tree. Then saide Saniel vnto him: Very well / nowe thou lyest also euen vppon thine heade. The messaunger of the Lord standeth wayting with the swearde/to cut the in two/ and to slaye you both.

With that/ al the whole multitude gaue a greate shoute/and praised God/ † whiche alwaye deliuereth them that put their trust in him. And they came vppon the two elders (whom Saniel had cõuicte with their owne mouthe: that they had geuen false witnesse) and dealte with them / euen likewise as they wolde haue done with their neighbouresse: Yee/they dyd †accordinge to the lawe of Moses/and put them to death. Thus the innocent blonde was saued thesame daye.

Then Helchias and his wyfe prayséd God for their doughter Susanna / with Joachim her housbande and all the kinrede: that there was no dishonesty founde in her. From that daye forth was Saniel had in greate reputacion in the syght of the people.

The ende of the story of Susanna.

The story of Bel/ and of the Dragon: whiche is the xiiij. Chapter of Daniel after the Latin.

There was at Babilõ an ymage/ called Bel: and there were spente vpon him euery daye xij. cakes/ xl. shepe/and sixe greate pottes of wyne. Hym dyd the kynge worshippe hym selfe/and wente daylye to honoure hym: but Saniel worshipped his owne God. And the kynge sayde vnto him: Why doest not thou worship Bel? He aunswered and sayd: †Because I maye not worshippe thinges that be made with handes / * but the lyuinge God which made heauen and earth/and hath power vpon all flesh. The kynge sayd vnto him: Thinkest thou not that Bel is a lyuing God? Or seyest thou not/howe much he eateth and drinketh euery daye? Saniel smyled and said: O kynge

O kynge deceaue not thy selfe: Thys is but made of claye within/ and of metall without/ † neyther eateth he euer any thinge.

Then the kynge was wroth / and called for his priestes / and sayde vnto them: If ye tell my not who this is that eateth vp these expences/ye shall dye: But if ye can certifie me that Bel eateth them/ then Saniel shall dye/ for he hath spoken blasphemy agaynst Bel. And Saniel sayde vnto the kynge: let it be so / accordinge as thou hast sayde. The priestes of Bel were lxx. beside their wyfes and chyldren. And the kinge wente with Saniel into the temple of Bel. So Bels priestes sayde: Lo/we wil go out / and set thou the meate there (O kynge) and poure in the wyne/ then shut the dore fast/and seale it with thine owne signet: and to morow whan thou commest in/if thou fyndest not that Bel hath eaten vp all / we wyll suffre death: or els Saniel / that hath lyed vpon vs. The priestes thought them selfes sure ynough / for vnder the aultare they had made a preuy intraunce / and there wente they in euer /. and dyd eate vp what there was.

So when they were gone forth / the kynge set meates before Bel. Now Saniel had commaunded his seruauntes to bringe asshes/ and these he sifted thorowout all the temple/ that the kynge myght se. Then wente they out/ and sparred the dore / sealinge it with the kynges signet/and so departed. In the nyght came the priestes with theyr wyfes and chyldren (as they were wonte to do) and dyd eate and drinke vp all. In the morninge by tymes at the breake of the daye / the kynge arose / and Saniel with hym. And the kynge sayde: Saniel / are the seales whole yet? He aunswered: Ye / (o kynge) they be whole. Now as soone as he had opened the dore / the kynge loked vnto the aultare / and cried with a loude voyce: Greate art thou o Bel / and wyth the is no deceate. Then laughed Saniel / and helde the kynge that he shoulde not go in / and sayde: Beholde the pauement/ marcke well/ whose foteſteppes are these? The kynge sayde: I se the foteſteppes of men/ women and chyldren.

Therfore the kynge was angry / and toke the priestes with their wyfes and chyldren/ and they shewed hym the preuy dores / where they came in / and dyd eate vp such thinges as were vpon the aultare. For the which cause the kynge slewe them / † and delyuered Bel into Daniels power / which destroyed hym and hys temple.

And in thesame place there was a greate Dragon / which they of Babylon worshypped. And the kynge sayde vnto Saniel: sayest thou/ that thys is but a god of metall also? lo/ he lyueth/ he eateth and drinketh: so that thou canst not saye / that he is no lyuinge god/ therfore worshippe hym. Saniel sayde vnto the kynge: I wyll worshippe the Lorde my God / † he is the true lyuinge God: as for this / he is not the god of lyfe. But geue me leaue / (o kynge) and I shall destroye this Dragon without swearde or staf. The kynge sayde: I geue the leaue. Then Saniel toke pitch/fatte and heery woll/and dyd seeth them together/and made lompes therof: this he put in the Dragons mouth / and so the Dragon barst in sonder: and Saniel sayde: lo / there is he whome ye worshipped.

When they of Babylon herde that / they toke greate indignacion/ and gathered thẽ together agaynst the kynge/sayinge: The kynge is become a Jewe also/ he hath destroyed Bel/ he hath slayne the Dragon / and put the priestes to death. So they came to the kinge / and sayde: let vs haue Saniel / or els we wyll destroye the and thine house.

Now whan the kinge sawe / that they russhed in so sore vpon him / and that necessite constrayned hym/ † he delyuered Saniel vnto them: which cast him into the Lyons denne/ where he was sixe dayes. In the denne there were seuen Lyons / and they had geuen them euery daye two bodies and two shepe / which then were not geuen them / that they myght deuoure Saniel.

There was in Jewry a prophet called Abacuc / which had made pottage / and crommed bread in a depe platter / and was goying into the felde / for to bringe it to the mowers. But the aungel of the Lorde sayde vnto Abacuc: go / cary the meate that thou hast into Babylon/vnto Saniel/which is in the Lyons

Denne. And Abacuc sayde: Lorde / I neuer sawe Babylon: and as for the denne / I knowe Ezec. viij. a it not. † Then the aungel of the Lorde toke him by the toppe / and bare him by the heer of the heade / and (thorow a myghty wynde) set him in Babylon vpon the denne. And Aba-

And Daniel sayde: O God / hast thou thought vpon me? well / thou neuer fayleste the that loue the. So Daniel arose / and dyd eate / and the aungel of the Lorde set Abacuc in his owne place agayne immediatly.

G Vpon the seuenth daye / the kinge wente to bewepe Daniel: and whan he came to the denne / he loked in: and beholde / Daniel sat in the myddest of the Lyons. Then cryed the kynge with a loude voyce / sayinge: Greate art

The prayer of Manasses kyng of Juda / when he was holden captiue in Babylon.

O Lorde almighty / God of our fathers Abrahā / Isaac and Jacob / and of the rightcous sede of them: which hast made heaue and earth / with al the ornamēts therof / which hast ordeyned the see by the worde of thy commmaundement: whiche hast shutte vp the depe / and hast sealed it for thy fearfull & laudable name / which all mē feare / and tremble before the face of thy vertu / and for the anger of thy threatnynge / the which is importable to synners. And now I bowe the knees of my hert / requiring goodnes of the (o Lorde.) I haue synned Lord I haue synned / and know myne iniquitie. I desyre the by prayer. The fyrst boke of the Machabees.

The fyrst Chapter.

A After that Alexander ỹ sone of Philippe kinge of Macedonia wente forth of the lande of Cethim / and slewe Darius kinge of the Persians and Medes: It happened that he toke greate warres in hande / wanne very many stronge cities / and slewe many kynges of the earth: goynge thorow to the endes of the worlde / and gettynge many spoyles of the people: In so much / that the worlde stode in greate awe of him / † and therfore was he proude in his herte. Now when he had gathered a mighty stronge hoost / and subdued the landes & people with their princes / so ỹ they became trybutaries vnto him: he fel sicke. And when he perceaued that he must nedes dye / he called for his
a noble estates (which had bene brought vp wb
b him of children /) † and parted his kingdome amonge them / whyle he was yet alyue. So Alexander raigned xij. yeare / and then dyed.

After his death fell the kingdome vnto his princes / and they optayned it euery one in his roume / and caused them selfes to be crouned as kinges: and so dyd their children after them many yeares / and much wickednes increaced in the worlde. Out of these came that vngra-
a cious rote / noble Antiochus the sonne of Antiochus the kinge († which had bene a pledge at Rome) and he raigned in the Cxxxvij. yeare of the raygne of the Grekes.

B In those dayes wente thereout of Israel wicked men / which moued much people with a their counsayll / sayinge: † Let vs go & make a a conuenaunt with ỹ Heithen / ỹ are rounde aboute vs: * for sence we departed from them / we haue had much sorow. So this deuyce pleased them well / and certayne of the people toke vpō thē for to go vnto ỹ king / which gaue them licence to do after the ordinaunce of the Heithen. † Then set they vp an open scholc(at ij. ma. iij. b Jerusalem) of the lawes of the Heythen / and were nomore circumcised: but forsoke the holy Testamente / and ioyned them selfes to ỹ Heithen / † and were cleane solde to do myschiefe. ij Re xxi. b

So when Antiochus beganne to be mighty in his kingdome / he wēte aboute to optaine the lande of Egypte also / that he might haue the dominion of two realmes. † Vpon this ij. mac. v. a entred he into Egypte with a stronge hoost / with charrettes / elephantes / horsmen and a greate numbre of shippes / and beganne to warre agaynst Ptholome the king of Egypte. But Ptholome was afrayed of him / and fled: and many of his people were wounded to death. Thus Antiochus wanne many stronge cities / and toke awaye greate good out of the lande of Egypte.

† And after that Antiochus had smytten C
Egypte / he turned againe in the C. xliij. yeare ij. Ma. v. c and wente towarde Israel / and came vp to Jerusalem with a mighty people: and entred proudly into the Sanctuary / and toke awaye the golden aultare / the candelsticke and all the ornamentes therof: the table of the shewbread / the pouringe vessel / the chargers / the golden spones / the vale / the crounes and golden apparel of the temple / and brake doune all. He toke also the syluer & golde / the precious Jewels / and the secrete treasures that he foūde. And when he had taken awaye altogether / caused a greate murthur of men / and so fulfilled his malicious pryde / he departed into his owne lande.

Thus there a rose greate heauynesse & misery in all the lande of Israel. The princes and the elders of the people mourned / the yonge men & the maydens were defyled / & the fayre beuty of women was chaunged: the bryde-grome & the bryde toke them to mourninge: the lande and those that dwelt therein was moued: for all ỹ house of Jacob was brought to confusion.

† After two yeares the kinge sent his chiefe O treasurer vnto the cities of Juda / which came ij. Ma. v. e to Jerusalem with a greate multitude of people / speakinge peaceable wordes vnto them / but all was deceate: † for when they had ge- j. ma. vj. b uen hym credence / he fell sodenly vpon the citie / and smote it sore / and destroyed much people of Jsrael. And whā he had spoyled the citie/ he set fyre on it / castinge doune houses & walles on euery syde. The women and theyr chyldren toke they captiue/and led awaye their cattel. Then builded they the castel of Sauid wyth a greate and thicke wall/ & with mighty towers/and made it a stronge holde for them. Besyde all thys they set wicked people and vngodly men to kepe it/ stoared it with weapens and vitayles: gathered the goodes of Jerusalem/and layed them vp there: thus became it a thefysh castell.

And this was done to laye wayte for the people that wente into the Sanctuary/and for the cruell destructiō of Jsrael. Thus they shed innocent bloude on euery syde of the Sanctuary /& defiled it: In so much that ỹ citiesyns were fayne to departe/and the citie became an habitacion of straungers / beynge desolate of her owne sede / for her owne natiues were fayne to leaue her. Her Sanctuary was clene
Tob.ij.a Amos viij.b waysted / † her holy dayes were turned into mourning/ her Sabbathes were had in derision/ & her honoure brought to naught. Loke how greate her glory was afore/so greate was her confusion/and her ioye turned into sorow.

E †Antiochus also the kinge sent out a comij.Ma.vj.a mission vnto all his kingdome / that all the people shoulde be one. Then they left euery man his lawe/ and all the Heythen agreed to the commaundemēt of kinge Antiochus Yee/ many of the Jsraelites consented there vnto/ offeringe vnto Jdols/and defilinge the Sabbath. So the kinge Antiochus sent his messaungers with his commission vnto Jerusalem / and to all the cities of Juda: that they shoulde folowe the lawes of the Heythen/and forbadde other burntoffering/ meatofferinge/ or peaceofferinge / to be made in the temple of God / and there shoulde no Sabbath nor hye feast daye be kepte: but commaunded/ that the Sāctuary & the holy people of Jsrael shoulde be defyled.

He commaunded also/ that there shoulde be set vp other aultares / tempels and Jdols: to offre vp swynes / flesh and other vncleane beastes: that men shoulde leave their children vncircumcised / to defyle their soules with all maner of vnclennesse and abhominacions: that they myght so forget the lawe / & chaunge all the holy ordinaunces of God: and that whosoeuer wolde not do accordinge to the commaundemēt of kinge Antiochus/shoulde suffre death. In lyke maner commaunded he thorowout all his realme / and set rulers ouer the people / for to cōpell them to do these thinges/ commaundinge the cities of Juda to do sacrifice vnto Jdols.

Then wente the people vnto the Heythen by heapes/forsoke the lawe of the Lorde/and committed much euel in the lande: yee/ and chaced out ỹ secrete Jsraelites / which had hyd them selfes in corners and preuy places. The f xv. daye of ỹ moneth Casleu/in the Cxlv. yeare/ set kinge Antiochus an abhominable Jdol of desolacion vpon the aultare of God/and they buylded aultares thorowout all the cities of Juda on euery syde / before the dores of the houses / and in the stretes: where they brent incence/and dyd sacrifice. †And as for the bo- Jn kes of the lawe of God/ they brent them in the fyre/and rente them in peces. Whatsoeuer he was that had a boke of the Testament of the Lorde founde by him/ yee/ whosoeuer endeuoured him self to kepe ỹ lawe of the Lorde/ the kinges commaundement was that they shoulde put him to death. And thorow hys auctoritie they executed these thinges euery moneth/ vpon the people of Jsrael that were founde in the cities.

† The fyue and twentie daye of the mo- ij.m
neth/ what tyme as they dyd sacrifice vpon ỹ aultare (which stode in the steade of the aultare of the Lorde) accordinge to ỹ cōmaundement of kinge Antiochus/they put certayne womē to death/which had caused their childrē to be circūcised: Not only that/ but they hāged vp the children by the neckes thorowout all their houses/& slewe the circūcisers of them.

Yet were there many of ỹ people of Jsrael/ which determined in them selfes / that they wolde not eate vncleane thinges: but chose rather to suffre death / then to be defyled with vncleane meates. So because they wolde not breake ỹ blessed lawe of God/they were cruelly slayne. And this greate tyranny increaced very sore vpon the people of Jsrael.

The II. Chapter.

A In those dayes there dyd stande vp one Mathathias ỹ sonne of John/ the sonne of of Symeon the priest (out of the kynred of Joaris) from Jerusalem / and dwelt vpon the mount of Modin/and had v. sonnes: Jhō called Gaddis: Symon called Thasy: Judas/ otherwyse called Machabeus: Eleazar/ otherwyse called Abaron: and Jonathas / whose surname was Apphus. These sawe the euell that was done amonge the people of Juda & Jerusalem. And Matathias sayde: Wo is me/ alas that euer I was borne / to se this mysery of my people / and the piteous destruction of the holy citie: and thus to syt so styll/ it beynge delyuered into the handes of the enemyes.

j.b † Her Sanctuary is come into the power of straungers / her temple is as it were a man that hath lost his good name. Her precious ornamentes are caried awaye captyue / her olde men are slayne in the stretes / and her yonge men are fallen thorow the swearde of the enemyes.

What people is it/ that hath not some possession in her kyngdome? Or who hath not gotten some of her spoyles? All her glory is taken awaye. She was a Quene / and now she is become an hādmaydē. Beholde oure Sāctuary/oure beuty & honoure is waysted awaye and defyled by the Gentiles. What helpeth it vs then to lyue? And Matathias rēte his clothes / he and his sonnes / and put sacke cloth vpon them/and mourned very sore.

B Then came the men thyther wiche were sent of kynge Antiochus / to compell such as were fled in the citie of Modin / for to do sacrifice/and to burne incence vnto Jdols / and to forsake the lawe of God. So/ many of the people of Jsrael consented and enclyned vnto them/ but Matathias and his sonnes remayned stedfast. Thē spake the commissioners of kynge Antiochus/and saide vnto Matathias: Thou art a noble man / of hye reputacion and greate in this citie/ hauynge fayre chyldrē and brethren. Come thou therfore fyrst / and fulfyll the kynges commaundement / lyke as all the Heythen haue done/yee/ & the men of Juda/& such as remayne at Jerusalem: so shalt thou and thy chyldren be in the kinges fauoure/ and enriched with gold / syluer and greate rewardes.

Matathias aunswered / and spake with a loude voyce: Though all nacions obeye the kinge Antiochus / and fall awaye euery man frō kepynge the lawe of their fathers: though they consente to his commaundementes / yet wil I and my sonnes and my brethren/not fal from the lawe of oure fathers. God forbyd we shoulde: † that were not good for vs / that we Act.v.b shoulde forsake the lawe and ordinaunces of God/ and to agre vnto the commaundement of kinge Antiochus. Therfore we will do no such sacrifice/neither breake the statutes of our lawe/† to go another waye. And when he had Prou.iiij.b
spoken these wordes there came one of the Jewes / which openly in the syght of all dyd sacrifice vnto the Jdols vpon the aulter in the citie of Modin/ accordinge to the kinges cōmaundement.

When Matathias sawe this/it greued him C at the herte/ so that hys raynes spoke withall/ & his wrath kindled for very zele of the lawe. With that he gaue a skippe forth / and kylled the Jewe besyde the aulter: Yee/ and slewe the kinges cōmissioner/ that compelled him to do sacrifice / and destroyed the aulter at thesame tyme: such a zele had he vnto ỹ lawe of God/ † lyke as Phyneas dyd vnto Zambri ỹ sonne Nu.xxv.b of Salomy. And Matathias cried wt a loude voyce thorowe ỹ citie/sayinge: Who so is feruent in the lawe/and kepe the conuenaunt/ let hym folowe me. † So he and his sonnes fled ij.Mac.v.c
into the mountaynes/and left al that euer they had in the citie. Many other godly men also departed into the wylderneesse with their children/theyr wyfes and theyr cattel/and remained there: for the tyranny increaced so sore vpon them.

Now when the kinges seruauntes and the D hooste / which was at Jerusalem in the citie of Sauid/herde that certayne men had brokē the kinges commaundemēt / and were gone their waye to the wildernesse into secrete places / & that there were many departed after them: they folowed vpon thē/to fyght agaynst them in the Sabbath daye / and sayde: Wyll ye yet rebell? Get you hence / and do the commaundement of kinge Antiochus/ and ye shall lyue. They aunswered: †We wyll not go forth/ney- Josu.j.c ther wyll we do the kynges commaundemēt/ to defyle ỹ Sabbath daye. Then begāne they to fyght agaynst thē: neuertheless / they gaue them none other aunswere / neyther cast they

one stone at them / nor made fast their preuy places / but sayde: We will dye all in oure innocency / heauen and earth shall testifie with vs/thar ye put vs to death wrogeously. Thus they fought agaynst them vpō the Sabbath/ and slewe both men and cattel / their wyfes and their chyldren / to the numbre of a thousande people.

When Matathias and hys frendes herde thys they mourned for thē right sore / & sayde one to another: if so be that we all do as oure brethren haue done/and fyght not for oure lyues and for oure lawes agaynst the Heythen/ then shal they ye sooner rote vs out of ye earth. So they concluded amonge thē selfes at the same tyme/sayinge: Whatsoeuer he be that cōmeth to make battayl with vs vpon the Sabbath daye / we wyll fyght agaynst hym / and not dye all / as oure brethren that were murthered so haynously. Vpon thys came the Synagoge of the Jewes vnto them: stronge men of Jsrael/all such as were feruent in the lawe. And all they that were fled for persecucion/ came to helpe them / and to stande by them: In so much that they gathered an hooste of men / and slewe the wicked doers in their gelousy / and the vngodly men in their wrath. Some of the wicked fled vnto the Heythen/ and escaped.

Thus Matathias and his frendes wente aboute/and destroyed the aulters/and circūcised the children that had not yet receaued the circūcision: as many as they founde within ye coastes of Jsrael: and folowed mightely vpon the children of pryde / and thys acte prospered in their hādes: In so much that they kepte the lawe agaynst the power of the Gentiles and the kinges/and gaue not ouer their dominion vnto wicked doers.

After thys/when the tyme drew fast / that Matathias shoulde dye/he sayd vnto his sonnes: Now is pryde and persecution increaced/ now is the tyme of destruction and wrathfull displeasure: Wherfore (o my sonnes) be ye feruent in the lawe / and ieoperde youre lyues for the Testament of the fathers: call to remembraunce what actes oure fathers dyd in theyr tyme / so shall ye receaue greate honoure and an euerlastinge name.

Jacob. xlij. c Remembre Abraham: † was not he founde faythfull in tentacion / and it was rekened vnto him for righteousnesse? *Joseph in tyme of hys trouble kepte the cōmaundement / and was made a lorde of Egypte. † Phineas oure father was so feruent for the honoure of God / that he optayned the conuenaunt of an euerlastinge priesthode. *Josue for fulfyllinge the worde of God / was made the captaine of Jsrael. †Caleb bare recorde before the congregacion / and receaued an heretage. *Dauid also in his mercyfull kyndnesse/ optayned the trone of an euerlastinge kyngdome. † Elias beynge gelous and feruent in the lawe / was taken vp into heauen. * Hananias / Azarias and Mysael remayned stedfast in fayth / and were delyuered out of the fyre. Jn like maner/ † Daniel beynge vngilty/was saued from the mouth of the Lyons.

And thus ye maye consydre thorowout all ages sence the worlde beganne/ † that whosoeuer put their trust in God / were not ouercome. †Feare not ye then the wordes of an vngodly man/ * for his glory is but dounge and wormes: to daye is he sent vp/and to morowe is he gone: for he is turned into earth / and his memorial is come to naught. Wherfore (o my sonnes) take good hertes vnto you / and quyte youre selfes like men in the lawe / for if ye do the thinges that are commaunded you in the lawe of the Lorde youre God/ye shall optayne greate honoure therein.

And beholde / J know that your brother Symon is a man of wysdome: se that ye geue eare vnto him alwaye / he shalbe a father vnto you. As for Judas Machabeus/ he hath euer bene mighty and stronge from his youth vp: let him be youre captayne / and ordre the battayl of the people: Thus shall ye bringe vnto you all those that fauoure the lawe / and se that ye auenge the wronge of youre people/ and recompence the Heithen agayne/ & applie youre selfes whole to the commaundement of the lawe. So he gaue thē his blessinge: and was layed by his fathers: and dyed in the C. xlvj. yeare at Modin/ where his sōnes buryed him in his fathers sepulchre / and all Jsrael made greate lamentacion for him.

The. III. Chapter.

Then stode vp Judas Machabeus in his father stede / and all his brethren helped hym: hym: and so dyd all they that helde with his father / & fought with chearefulnesse for Jsrael. So Judas gat his people greate honoure: He put on a brest plate as a giaunte/ & arayed him self with his harnesse / and defended the hooste wyth hys swearde. Jn hys actes he was like a Lyon / and as a Lyons whelpe roaringe at his praye. † He was an enemie to the wicked/and hunted them out: *and brent vp those that vexed his people. So that his enemies fled for feare of him/and al the workers of vngodlynes were put to trouble: such lucke and prosperite was in his hande. This greued diuerse kinges/but Jacob was greatly reioyced thorow his actes/and he gat him selfe a greate name for euer.

He wente thorow the cities of Juda / destroyinge the vngodly out of them/turninge awaye the wrath from Jsrael/ and receauinge such as were oppressed: and the fame of hym wente vnto the vttermost parte of the earth. Then Appollonius (a prince of Syria) gathered a myghty greate hooste of the Heithen and out of Samaria / to fyght agaynst Jsrael. Which when Judas perceaued / he wēte forth to mete him/fought with him/slew him / and a greate multitude with him: the remnaunte fled/ and he toke their substaunce. Judas also toke Appollonius owne swearde / and fought with it all his life longe.

Now whē Serō (another prince of Siria) herde saye / ỹ Judas had gathered vnto him the congregacion and churche of the faythfull/ he sayde: J will get me a name and a prayse thorowout the realme: for J will go fyght with Judas/and them that are with him / as many as haue dispysed ỹ kinges cōmaundement. So he made him ready/ and there wēte with him a greate myghty hooste of the vngodly/to stande by hym/ and to be auenged of the children of Jsrael. And when they came nye vnto Bethoron / Judas wente forth agaynst them with a small company. And whē hys people sawe such a greate hooste before thē/ they sayde vnto Judas: How are we able (beynge so fewe) to fyght agaynst so greate a multitude & so stronge? seinge we be so weery/ and haue fasted all thys daye?

But Judas sayde: † Jt is a smal matter for many to be ouercome with few: Yee / there is no difference to the God of heauen/to delyuer by a greate multitude or by a smal cōpany: † for the victory of the battayll standeth not in the multitude of the hooste / but the strength cōmeth from heauen. Beholde/ they come agaynst vs with a presumpteous and proude multitude: to destroye vs oure wyfes and our children/and to robbe vs. But we wyll fyght for oure lyues and for oure lawes/ & the Lorde him self shall destroye thē before oure face: therfore be not ye afrayed of them.

As soone as he had spoken these wordes / he leapte sodenly vpon thē. Thus was Seron smytten/and his hooste put to flyght/ and Judas folowed vpon thē beyonde Bethoron vnto the playne felde: where there were slayne eight hundreth men of thē / & the residue fled into the lande of the Philistines. Then all the Heithen on euery syde were afrayed for Judas and his brethren: so ỹ the rumoure of him came vnto the kinges eares / for all the Gentiles coulde tell of the warres of Judas.

So whan kinge Antiochus herde these tidinges/he was angry in his mynde: wherfore he sente forth and gathered an hooste of his whole realme/very stronge armies: and opened his treasury / and gaue his hooste a yeares wages in hande / commaundinge them to be ready at all tymes.

Neuertheless/ when he sawe that there was not money ynough in his treasuries/and that thorow the discorde and persecucion/which he made in the lāde (to put doune the lawes that had bene of olde tyme) hys costumes and tributes of the lande were mynished: he feared that he was not able for to beare the costes & charges any lenger/nor to haue such giftes / to geue so liberally as he dyd afore/more then the kinges that were before him.

Wherfore he was heauy in his minde / and thought † to go in Persides / for to take tributes of the lāde / and so to gather much money. So he left Lysias (a noble man of the kynges blounde) to ouerse the kinges busynesses / from the water Euphrates vnto the borders of Egypte: and to kepe wel his sonne Antiochus/ tyll he came agayne.

Moreouer / he gaue him half of his hooste & Elephantes / and commitied vnto him euery thinge of his mynde / cōcerninge those which
