ing the Lord is always watching, and how our work concerns Him (vv. 23, 24). Cf. 1 Timothy 6:1, 2; Titus 2:9, 10; 1 Peter 2:18–21.

3:24, 25 reward of the inheritance. See note on Ephesians 6:7, 8. The Lord ensures the believer that he will receive a just, eternal compensation for his efforts (cf. Rev. 20:12, 13), even if his earthly boss or master does not compensate fairly (v. 25). God deals with obedience and disobedience impartially (cf. Acts 10:34; Gal. 6:7). Christians are not to presume on their faith in order to justify disobedience to an authority or employer (cf. Philem. 18).

4:1 Masters. See note on Ephesians 6:9.

C. Christian Speech (4:2–6)

4:2 Continue earnestly. The Greek word means “to be courageously persistent” or “to hold fast and not let go” and refers here to persistent prayer (Acts 1:14; Rom. 12:12; Eph. 6:18; 1 Thess. 5:17; cf. Luke 11:5–10; 18:1–8). being vigilant. In its most general sense, this means to stay awake while praying. But Paul has in mind the broader implication of staying alert for specific needs about which to pray, rather than being vague and unfocused. Cf. Matthew 26:41; Mark 14:38; Luke 21:36.

4:3 a door. An opportunity (1 Cor. 16:8, 9; 2 Cor. 2:12). the mystery of Christ. See notes on 1:26, 27; 2:2, 3.

4:5 those . . . outside. This refers to unbelievers. See notes on Ephesians 5:15, 16. Believers are called to live in such a way that they establish the credibility of the Christian faith and make the most of every evangelistic opportunity.

4:6 with grace. To speak what is spiritual, wholesome, fitting, kind, sensitive, purposeful, complimentary, gentle, truthful, loving, and thoughtful (see notes on Eph. 4:29–31). seasoned with salt. Just as salt not only flavors, but prevents corruption, the Christian’s speech should act not only as a blessing to others, but as a purifying influence within the decaying society of the world.

D. Christian Friends (4:7–18)

4:7 Tychicus. The name means “fortuitous” or “fortunate.” He was one of the Gentile converts Paul took to Jerusalem as a representative of the Gentile churches (Acts 20:4). He was a reliable companion of Paul and a capable leader, since he was considered as a replacement for Titus and Timothy on separate occasions (2 Tim. 4:12; Titus 3:12). He had the responsibility to deliver Paul’s letters to the Colossians, the Ephesians (Eph. 6:21), and Philemon (v. 9).

4:9 Onesimus. The runaway slave whose return to his master was the basis for Paul's letter to Philemon (see Introduction to Philemon: Background and Setting).

4:10 Aristarchus. The Greek name of a Jewish (cf. v. 11) native of Thessalonica (Acts 20:4; 27:2). He was one of Paul's companions who was seized by a rioting mob in Ephesus (Acts 19:29) and also accompanied Paul on his trip to Jerusalem and his voyage to Rome (Acts 27:2). Mark. See notes on Acts 13:5, 13; see Introduction to Mark: Author and Date. After having fallen out of favor with Paul for some time, Mark is seen here as one of Paul's key helpers (cf. 2 Tim. 4:11).

4:11 Jesus who is called Justus. Possibly one of the Roman Jews who believed Paul's message (Acts 28:24). kingdom of God. See note on 1:13.

4:12 Epaphras. See Introduction: Background and Setting. perfect and complete. His goal for the Colossian believers was the same as Paul's (cf. 1:28–2:2).

4:13 Laodicea. See note on 2:1. Hierapolis. A city in Phrygia twenty miles west of Colosse and six miles north of Laodicea (see Introduction: Background and Setting).

4:14 Luke. Paul's personal physician and close friend who traveled frequently with him on his missionary journeys and wrote the Gospel of Luke and the Book of Acts (see Introductions to the Gospel of Luke and Acts: Author and Date). Demas. A man who demonstrated substantial commitment to the Lord's work before the attraction of the world led him to abandon Paul and the ministry (2 Tim. 4:9, 10; Philem. 24).

4:15 Nymphas and the church . . . in his house. Other manuscripts make the name feminine (Nympha) and indicate the church met in her house, probably in Laodicea.

4:16 when this epistle is read among you.

This letter was to be publicly read in the churches in Colosse and in Laodicea. epistle from Laodicea. A separate letter from Paul, usually identified as the epistle to the Ephesians. The oldest manuscripts of Ephesians do not contain the words "in Ephesus," indicating that in all likelihood it was a circular letter intended for several churches in the region. Tychicus may have delivered Ephesians to the church at Laodicea first.

4:17 Archippus. Most likely the son of Philemon (Philem. 2). Paul's message to him to fulfill his ministry is similar to the exhortation to Timothy (2 Tim. 4:5).

4:18 by my own hand. Paul usually dictated his letters to an amanuensis (recording secretary), but would often add his own greeting in his own writing at the end of his letters (cf. 1 Cor. 16:21; Gal. 6:11; 2 Thess. 3:17; Philem. 19). Remember my chains. See note on Philippians 1:16; see Introduction to Ephesians: Background and Setting. Cf. Hebrews 13:3.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL TO THE THESSALONIANS

Title

In the Greek NT, 1 Thessalonians is listed literally as “To the Thessalonians.” This represents the apostle Paul’s first canonical correspondence to the church in the city of Thessalonica (cf. 1:1).

Author and Date

The apostle Paul identified himself twice as the author of this letter (1:1; 2:18). Silvanus (Silas) and Timothy (3:2, 6), Paul’s traveling companions on the second missionary journey when the church was founded (Acts 17:1–9), were also mentioned in Paul’s greeting (1:1). Though Paul was the single inspired author, most of the first person plural pronouns (we, us, our) refer to all three. However, during Timothy’s visit back to Thessalonica, they refer only to Paul and Silvanus (3:1, 2, 6). Paul commonly used such editorial plurals because the letters came with the full support of his companions.

Paul’s authorship has not been questioned until recently by radical critics. Their attempts to undermine Pauline authorship have failed in light of the combined weight of evidence favoring Paul such as: (1) the direct assertions of Paul’s authorship (1:1; 2:18); (2) the letter’s perfect correlation with Paul’s travels in Acts 16–18; (3) the multitude of intimate details regarding Paul; and (4) the confirmation by multiple, early historical verifications starting with Marcion’s canon in A.D. 140.

The first of Paul’s two letters written from Corinth to the church at Thessalonica is dated c. A.D. 51. This date has been archeologically verified by an inscription in the temple of Apollo at Delphi (near Corinth) which dates Gallio’s service as proconsul in Achaia to A.D. 51–52 (Acts 18:12–17). Since Paul’s letter to the churches of Galatia was probably written c. A.D. 49–50, this was his second piece of canonical correspondence.

Background and Setting

Thessalonica (modern Salonica) lies near the ancient site of Therma on the Thermaic Gulf at the northern reaches of the Aegean Sea. This city became the capital of Macedonia (c. 168 B.C.) and enjoyed the status of a “free city” which was ruled by its own citizenry (Acts 17:6) under the Roman Empire. Because it was located on the main east-west highway, Via Egnatia, Thessalonica served as the hub of political and commercial activity in Macedonia, and became known as “the mother of all Macedonia.” The population in Paul’s day reached 200,000 people.

Paul had originally traveled 100 miles from Philippi via Amphipolis and Apollonia to Thessalonica on his second missionary journey (A.D. 50; Acts 16:1–18:22). As his custom was upon arrival, he sought out the synagogue in which to teach the local Jews the gospel (Acts 17:1, 2). On that occasion, he dialogued with them from the OT concerning Christ’s death and resurrection in order to prove that Jesus of Nazareth was truly the promised Messiah (Acts 17:2, 3). Some Jews believed and soon after, Hellenistic proselytes and some wealthy women of the community also were converted (Acts 17:4). Mentioned among these new believers were Jason (Acts 17:5), Gaius (Acts 19:29), Aristarchus (Acts 20:4), and Secundus (Acts 20:4).

Because of their effective ministry, the Jews had Paul's team evicted from the city (Acts 17:5–9), so they went south to evangelize Berea (Acts 17:10). There, Paul had a similar experience to Thessalonica with conversions followed by hostility, so the believers sent Paul away. He headed for Athens, while Silvanus and Timothy remained in Berea (Acts 17:11–14). They rejoined Paul in Athens (cf. Acts 17:15, 16 with 3:1), from which Timothy was later dispatched back to Thessalonica (3:2). Apparently, Silas afterwards traveled from Athens to Philippi while Paul journeyed on alone to Corinth (Acts 18:1). It was after Timothy and Silvanus rejoined Paul in Corinth (Acts 18:5) that he wrote 1 Thessalonians in response to Timothy's good report of the church.

Paul undoubtedly had multiple reasons for writing, all coming out of his supreme concern for the flock from which he had been separated. Some of Paul's purposes clearly included: (1) encouraging the church (1:2–10); (2) answering false allegations (2:1–12); (3) comforting the persecuted flock (2:13–16); (4) expressing his joy in their faith (2:17–3:13); (5) reminding them of the importance of moral purity (4:1–8); (6) condemning the sluggard lifestyle (4:9–12); (7) correcting a wrong understanding of prophetic events (4:13–5:11); (8) defusing tensions within the flock (5:12–15); and (9) exhorting the flock in the basics of Christian living (5:16–22).

Historical and Theological Themes

Both letters to Thessalonica have been referred to as “the eschatological epistles.” However, in light of their more extensive focus upon the church, they would better be categorized as the church epistles. Five major themes are woven together in 1 Thessalonians: (1) an apologetic theme with the historical correlation between Acts and 1 Thessalonians; (2) an ecclesiastical theme with the portrayal of a healthy, growing church; (3) a pastoral theme with the example of shepherding activities and attitudes; (4) an eschatological theme with the focus on future events as the church's hope; and (5) a missionary theme with the emphasis on gospel proclamation and church planting.

Interpretive Challenges

The primary challenges for understanding this epistle involve the sections that are eschatological in nature: (1) the coming wrath (1:10; 5:9); (2) Christ's return (2:19; 3:13; 4:15; 5:23); (3) the Rapture of the church (4:13–18); and (4) the meaning and time of the Day of the Lord (5:1–11).

I. PAUL'S GREETING (1:1)

1:1 Paul. Biographical details for the former Saul of Tarsus (Acts 9:11) can be found in Acts 9:1–30; 11:19–28:31; see note on Romans 1:1. For autobiographical material, see 2 Cor. 11:16–12:10; Galatians 1:11–2:21; Philippians 3:4–6; and 1 Timothy 1:12–17. Silvanus. A companion of Paul on the second missionary journey (Acts 15–18), later a writer for Peter (1 Pet. 5:12), also called Silas. Timothy. Paul's most notable disciple (Phil. 2:17–23) who traveled on the second and third missionary journeys and stayed near Paul during his first Roman imprisonment (Phil. 1:1; Col. 1:1; Philem. 1). Later he served in Ephesus (1 Tim. 1:3) and spent some time in prison (Heb. 13:23). Paul's first letter to Timothy, while he was ministering in the church at Ephesus, instructed him regarding life in the church (cf. 1 Tim. 3:15). In his second letter, Paul called Timothy to be strong (2 Tim. 2:1) and faithfully preach as he faced death and was about to turn his ministry over to Timothy (2 Tim. 4:1–8). God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. Since Paul's initial converts were Jewish, he made it unmistakably clear that this "church" was not a Jewish assembly, but rather one which gathered in the name of Jesus, the Son of God (Acts 17:2, 3), who is both Lord God and Messiah. This emphasis on the equality between God and the Lord Jesus is a part of the introduction in all Paul's epistles (cf. 1 John 2:23).

II. PAUL'S PERSONAL THOUGHTS (1:2–3:13)

A. Thanksgiving for the Church (1:2–10)

1:2 our prayers. Paul and his companions prayed frequently for the entire flock and three of those prayers are offered in this letter (1:2, 3; 3:11–13; 5:23, 24).

1:3 work of faith. The threefold combination of faith, hope, and love is a Pauline favorite (5:8; 1 Cor. 13:13; Col. 1:4, 5). Paul refers here to the fulfillment of ministry duties which resulted from these three spiritual attitudes (cf. vv. 9, 10).

1:4 your election by God. The church is commonly called "the elect" (cf. Rom. 8:33; Col. 3:12; 2 Tim. 2:10; Titus 1:1). In salvation, the initiating will is God's, not man's (cf. John 1:13; Acts 13:46–48; Rom. 9:15, 16; 1 Cor. 1:30; Col. 1:13; 2 Thess. 2:13; 1 Pet. 1:1, 2; see notes on Eph. 1:4, 5). Man's will participates in response to God's promptings as Paul makes clear when he says the Thessalonians received the Word (v. 6) and they turned to God from idols (v. 9). These two responses describe faith and repentance, which God repeatedly calls sinners to do throughout Scripture (e.g., Acts 20:21).

1:5 our gospel. Paul called his message "our gospel," because it was for him and all sinners to believe and especially for him to preach. He knew it did not originate with him, but was divinely authored; thus, he also called it “the gospel of God” (2:2, 9; Rom. 1:1). Because the person who made forgiveness possible is the Lord Jesus, he also referred to it as “the gospel of Christ” (3:2). word only. It had to come in word (cf. Rom. 10:13–17), and not word only, but in Holy Spirit power (cf. 1 Cor. 2:4, 5) and in confidence (cf. Is. 55:11). what kind of men. The quality of the message was confirmed by the character of the lives of the preachers. Paul’s exemplary life served as an open book for all people to read, establishing the credibility of the power and grace of God essential to making the message of redemption believable to sinners (see note on 2 Cor. 1:12).

1:6 followers. The Thessalonians had become third generation mimics of Christ. Christ is the first; Paul is the second; and the Thessalonians are the third (1 Cor. 4:16; 11:1). joy of the Holy Spirit. Cf. Romans 14:17. Joy in the midst of suffering evidenced the reality of their salvation, which included the indwelling Holy Spirit (1 Cor. 3:16; 6:19).

1:7 examples. The Greek word was used to describe a seal that marked wax or a stamp that minted coins. Paul commended the Thessalonians for being model believers, leaving their mark on others. Macedonia and Achaia. The two Roman provinces which comprised Greece, Macedonia being to the north and Achaia to the south.

1:8 sounded forth. The idea is to reverberate. Wherever the Thessalonians went, the gospel given by the word of the Lord was heard. It resulted in a local outreach to Thessalonica, a national outreach to Macedonia and Achaia, and an international outreach to regions beyond. we do not need to say anything. Though it may appear that this church developed such a testimony in only three Sabbaths of preaching (cf. Acts 17:2) spanning as little as fifteen days, it is better to understand that Paul preached three Sabbaths in the synagogue before he had to relocate elsewhere in the city. In all likelihood, Paul spent months, not weeks, which accounts for: (1) the two collections he received from Philippi (Phil. 4:16); (2) the time he worked night and day (2:9; 2 Thess. 3:8); and (3) the depth of pastoral care evidenced in the letter (2:7, 8, 11).

1:9 turned. This word describes what the Bible elsewhere calls repentance (Matt. 3:1, 2; 4:17; Acts 2:38; 3:19; 5:31; 20:21). Salvation involves a person's turning from sin and from trusting in false gods to Christ. See notes on 2 Corinthians 7:8–11. to serve the living and true God. Those converted to Christ abandoned the worship of dead idols to become willing slaves to the living God.

1:10 to wait. This is a recurring theme in the Thessalonian letters (3:13; 4:15–17; 5:8, 23; 2 Thess. 3:6–13; cf. Acts 1:11; 2 Tim. 4:8; Titus 2:11–13). These passages indicate the imminency of the deliverance; it was something Paul felt could happen in their lifetime. delivers us from the wrath to come. This can mean to evacuate out of a current distress (Rom. 7:24; Col. 1:13) or to exempt from entering into a distress (John. 12:27; 2 Cor. 1:10). The wrath can refer either to God's temporal wrath to come on the earth (Rev. 6:16, 17; 19:15) or to God's eternal wrath (John. 3:36; Rom. 5:9, 10). First Thessalonians 5:9 develops the same idea (see note there). The emphasis in both passages on Christ's work of salvation from sin favors this being understood as the deliverance from the eternal wrath of God in hell because of salvation.

B. Reminders for the Church (2:1–16)

2:1 not in vain. Paul's ministry among the Thessalonians was so fruitful that not only were people saved and a vibrant, reproducing church planted, but the church also grew and flourished even after Paul left (cf. 1:5–8).

2:2 spitefully treated at Philippi. Paul and Silas had been brutalized in Philippi before coming to Thessalonica (cf. Acts 16:19–24, 37). They suffered physically when beaten (Acts 16:22, 23) and incarcerated (Acts 16:24). They were arrogantly mistreated with false accusations (Acts 16:20, 21) and illegally punished in spite of their Roman citizenship (Acts 16:37). much conflict. Like their treatment in Philippi, Paul's team was falsely accused of civil treason in Thessalonica (Acts 17:7) and suffered physical intimidation (Acts 17:5, 6).

2:3 error or uncleanness . . . deceit. Paul used three distinctly different words to affirm the truthfulness of his ministry, each expressing a contrast with what was characteristic of false teachers. He first asserted that "his message" was true and not erroneously false. His "manner of life" was pure, not sexually wicked. His "method of ministry" was authentic, not deceptive (see notes on 2 Cor. 4:2).

2:4 approved by God. It could be that some false teachers came into the church to discredit Paul's ministry. This would account for his emphasis in verses 1–12 on his divine appointment, approval, integrity, and devotion to them. Cf. Acts 9:15; 16:9, 10.

2:5, 6 flattering words. Paul used three disclaimers to affirm the purity of his motives for ministry: (1) he denied being a smooth-talking preacher who tried to make favorable impressions in order to gain influence for selfish advantage; (2) he did not pretend to be poor and work night and day (cf. v. 9) as a pretense to get rich in the ministry at their expense; and (3) he didn't use his honored position as an apostle to seek personal glory, only God's glory (cf. 1 Cor. 10:31).

2:6 apostles of Christ. This plural is designed to include Paul with the Twelve for the sake of emphasizing his unique authority. Silvanus and Timothy were "apostles (messengers) of the church" (cf. Rom. 16:7; Phil. 2:25). See note on Ephesians 4:11.

2:7, 8 gentle . . . as a nursing mother. Paul may have had in mind Moses' portrayal of himself as a nursing mother to Israel (cf. Num. 11:12). He used the same tender picture with the Corinthians (cf. 2 Cor. 12:14,

15) and the Galatians (cf. Gal. 4:19). Paul's affection for the Thessalonians was like that felt by a mother willing to sacrifice her life for her child as was Christ who was willing to give up His own life for those who would be born again into the family of God (cf. Matt. 20:28)

2:9 laboring night and day. Paul explained this in 2 Thessalonians 3:7–9. He did not ask for any money from the Thessalonians but rather lived on what he earned and what the Philippians sent (Phil. 4:16), so that his motives could not be questioned, unlike the false teachers who always sought money (cf. 1 Pet. 5:2). the gospel of God. Cf. Romans 1:1. The Good News from God which Paul preached included these truths: (1) the authority and truthfulness of Scripture (v. 13); (2) the deity of Christ (Rom. 10:9); (3) the sinfulness of mankind (Rom. 3:23); (4) Christ's death and Resurrection (1 Cor. 15:4, 5); and (5) salvation by God's grace through man's faith (Eph. 2:8, 9). Paul's summary of the gospel is in 1 Corinthians 15:1–5.

2:10 You are witnesses. Under OT law, it took two or more witnesses to verify truth (Num. 35:30; Deut. 17:6; 19:15; 2 Cor. 13:1). Here, Paul called on both the Thessalonians and God as witnesses to affirm his holy conduct in the ministry. Cf. 2 Corinthians 1:12.

2:11 exhorted . . . comforted . . . charged. Paul used these three words to describe his fatherly relationship with the Thessalonians since they were his children in the faith. They emphasized the personal touch of a loving father (cf. 1 Cor. 4:14, 15).

2:12 His own kingdom and glory. This speaks of the sphere of eternal salvation (cf. Col. 1:13, 14) culminating in the splendor of heaven.

2:13 the word of God. Paul's message from God is equated with the OT (Mark 7:13). It was the message taught by the apostles (Acts 4:31; 6:2). Peter preached it to the

Paul's Ministry Profile

Paul's ministry profile in 1 and 2 Thessalonians outlines the essential elements of effective pastoral ministry. His life among the church illustrates what a shepherd is to be and do according to God's will. The following summary of responsibilities describes Paul's ministry among the Thessalonians.

Gentiles (Acts 11:1). It was the word Paul preached on his first missionary journey (Acts 13:5, 7, 44, 48, 49), his second (Acts 16:32; 17:13; 18:11), and his third (Acts 19:10). Cf. Colossians 1:25. effectively works. The work of God's Word includes: saving (Rom. 10:17; 1 Pet. 1:23); teaching and training (2 Tim. 3:16, 17); guiding (Ps. 119:105); counseling (Ps. 119:24); reviving (Ps. 119:154); restoring (Ps. 19:7); warning and rewarding (Ps. 19:11); nourishing (1 Pet. 2:2); judging (Heb. 4:12); sanctifying (John 17:17); freeing (John 8:31, 32); enriching (Col. 3:16); protecting (Ps. 119:11); strengthening (Ps. 119:28); making wise (Ps. 119:97–100); rejoicing the heart (Ps. 19:8); and prospering (Josh. 1:8, 9). All this is summarized in Psalm 19:7–9 (see notes there).

2:14 imitators. Not only were the Thessalonians imitators of Paul and the Lord (cf. 1:6), but also of the churches in Judea in the sense that they both were persecuted for Christ's sake (cf. Acts 4:1–4; 5:26; 8:1). They drank Christ's cup of suffering (Matt. 26:39) and walked in the way of the OT prophets (Matt. 21:33–46; Luke 13:34).

2:15 who killed . . . the Lord Jesus. There is no question that the Jews were responsible for the death of their Messiah, though the Romans carried out the execution. It was the Jews who brought the case against Him and demanded His death (cf. Luke 23:1–24, 34–38), just as they had killed the prophets (cf. Matt. 22:37; Mark 5:1–8; Acts 7:51, 52).

2:15, 16 contrary to all men. Just as it is God's will that all people be saved (1 Tim. 2:4; 2 Pet. 3:9), so it was the will of the Jews that no one find salvation in Christ (v. 16). Paul at one time had embraced this blasphemy of trying to prevent gospel preaching (cf. 1 Tim. 1:12–17).

2:16 wrath has come upon them. God's wrath (cf. 1:10; 5:9) on the Jews who "pile up their sins to the maximum limit" (cf. Matt.

23:32; Rom. 2:5), thus filling up the cup of wrath, can be understood: (1) historically of the Babylonian exile (Ezek. 8–11); (2) prophetically of Jerusalem's destruction in A.D. 70; (3) eschatologically of Christ's Second Coming in judgment (Rev. 19); or (4) soteriologically in the sense that God's promised eternal wrath for unbelievers is so certain that it is spoken of as having come already as does the apostle John (cf. John 3:18, 36). This context relates to the fourth option.

C. Concerns for the Church (2:17–3:13)

2:17 having been taken away. Paul had been forcibly separated from his spiritual children (cf. Acts 17:5–9). His motherly (v. 7) and fatherly instincts (v. 11) had been dealt a severe blow. Literally, the Thessalonians had been orphaned by Paul's forced departure.

2:18 Satan hindered us. Satan, which means "adversary," continually attempted to tear down the church that Christ promised to build (cf. Matt. 16:18). He was said to be present at the churches of Jerusalem (Acts 5:1–10), Smyrna (Rev. 2:9, 10), Pergamum (Rev. 2:13), Thyatira (Rev. 2:24), Philadelphia (Rev. 3:9), Ephesus (1 Tim. 3:6, 7), and Corinth (2 Cor. 2:1–11). He thwarted Paul in the sense that a military foe would hinder the advance of his enemy. This could possibly refer to the pledge that Jason made (Acts 17:9), if that pledge was a promise that Paul would not return to Thessalonica.

2:19 crown of rejoicing. The Bible speaks of eternal life like a wreath awarded for an athletic victory. It is spoken of in terms of: (1) the imperishable wreath that celebrates salvation's victory over corruption (1 Cor. 9:25); (2) the righteous wreath that celebrates salvation's victory over unrighteousness (2 Tim. 4:8); (3) the unfading wreath of glory that celebrates salvation's victory over defilement (1 Pet. 5:4); (4) the wreath of life that celebrates salvation's victory over death (James 1:12, Rev. 2:10); and here (5) the wreath of exultation which celebrates salvation's victory over Satan and mankind's persecution of believers. at His coming. "Coming" or parousia literally means "to be present." It can be understood as: (1) actual presence (Phil. 2:2); (2) moment of arrival (1 Cor. 16:17); or (3) expected coming (2 Cor. 7:6). In regard to Christ and the future, it can refer to: (1) Christ's coming at the Rapture (4:15), or (2) Christ's Second Coming prior to His 1,000 year millennial reign (Matt. 24:37; Rev. 19:11–20:6). Paul referred directly to Christ's coming four times in 1 Thessalonians (see also 3:13; 4:15; 5:23) and once indirectly (1:10). Context indicates Paul most likely refers here to Christ's coming for the Rapture of the church.

3:1 no longer endure it. The agony of separation between spiritual parent Paul and his children in Thessalonica became unbearably painful (cf. v. 5). in Athens alone. Paul and Silas stayed behind while Timothy returned (v. 2). This would not be the last time that Timothy went to a church in Paul's place (cf. 1 Cor. 4:17; 16:10; Phil. 2:19–24; 1 Tim. 1:3).

3:2 establish . . . encourage . . . your faith. This was a common ministry concern and practice of Paul (cf. Acts 14:22; 15:32; 18:23). Paul's concern did not focus on health, wealth, self-esteem, or ease of life, but rather the spiritual quality of life. Their faith was of supreme importance in Paul's mind as evidenced by five mentions in verses 1–10 (see also vv. 5, 6, 7, 10). Faith includes the foundation of the body of doctrine (cf. Jude 3) and their believing response to God in living out that truth (cf. Heb. 11:6).

3:3 appointed. God had promised Paul future sufferings when He commended him to ministry through Ananias (Acts 9:16).

Paul reminded the Thessalonians of this divine appointment so that they would not think that: (1) God's plan was not working out as evidenced by Paul's troubles, or (2) Paul's afflictions demonstrated God's displeasure with him. To think that way would upset the church's confidence in Paul and fulfill Satan's deceptive purposes (v. 5). Cf. 2 Corinthians 4:8–15; 6:1–10; 11:23–27; 12:7–10.

3:4 suffer tribulation. Paul had told the Thessalonian believers to expect him to suffer as he had already suffered before his Thessalonian experience (2:14–16; Acts 13, 14). During (Acts 17:1–9) and following (Acts 17:10–18:11) his time at Thessalonica, Paul also knew tribulation.

3:5 the tempter. Satan had already been characterized as a hinderer (2:18) and now as a tempter in the sense of trying/testing for the purpose of causing failure (cf. Matt. 4:3; 1 Cor. 7:5; James 1:12–18). Paul was not ignorant of Satan's schemes (2 Cor. 2:11; 11:23) or vulnerable to his methods (Eph. 6:11), so Paul took action to counterattack Satan's expected maneuver and to assure that all his efforts were not useless (cf. 2:1).

3:6 your faith and love. Timothy returned to report the Thessalonians' trust in God, their response to one another, and to Paul's ministry. This news convinced Paul that Satan's plans to disrupt God's work had not been successful and settled his anxiety (v. 7).

3:8 stand fast. Pictured here is an army that refuses to retreat even though it is being assaulted by the enemy. This is a frequent Pauline injunction (1 Cor. 16:13; Gal. 5:1; Eph. 6:11, 13, 14; Phil. 1:27; 4:1; 2 Thess. 2:15).

3:9 joy. Paul, like John (3 John 4), found the highest sense of ministry joy in knowing that his children in the faith were growing and walking in the truth. It led him to the worship of God in thanksgiving and rejoicing.

3:10 praying. As to frequency, Paul prayed night and day just as he worked night and day (2:9). As to fervency, Paul prayed superabundantly (cf. Eph. 3:20). lacking*. Paul was not criticizing the church but rather acknowledging that they had not yet reached their full potential, for which he prayed and labored (v. 10). The themes of chapters 4 and 5 deal with areas of this lack.

3:11 direct our way. Paul knew that Satan had hindered his return (2:18). Even though Timothy had visited and returned with a good report, Paul still felt the urgency to see his spiritual children again. Paul followed the biblical admonition of the Psalms (Ps. 37:1–5) and Proverbs (Prov. 3:5, 6) to entrust difficult situations to God.

3:12 love to one another. With over thirty positive and negative “one anothers” in the NT, love appears by far most frequently (cf. 4:9; Rom. 12:10; 13:8; 2 Thess. 1:3; 1 Pet. 1:22; 1 John 3:11, 23; 4:7, 11; 2 John 5). It is the overarching term that includes all of the other “one anothers.” Its focus is on believers in the church. to all*. In light of the fact that God loved the world and sent His son to die for human sin (John 3:16), believers who were loved when they were unlovely (Rom. 5:8) are to love unbelievers (see notes on Matt. 5:43, 44). Other NT commands concerning all people include: pursuing peace (Rom. 12:18), doing good (Gal. 6:10), being patient (Phil. 4:5), praying (1 Tim. 2:1), showing consideration (Titus 3:2), and honoring (1 Pet. 2:17).

3:13 blameless in holiness. Paul prayed that there would be no grounds of accusation because of unholiness. Cf. 1 Corinthians 1:8; 2 Corinthians 11:2; Ephesians 5:25–27; 1 Peter 5:16, 17; Jude 24. His saints*. Since this exact term is not used elsewhere in the NT of angels (see note on Jude 14), but is commonly used for believers, it is best to understand the coming of the Lord to rapture all His church (see notes on 4:13–18) and take them to heaven to enjoy His presence (see notes on John 14:1–3).

III. PAUL’S PRACTICAL INSTRUCTIONS (4:1–5:22)

A. On Moral Purity (4:1–8)

4:1 in the Lord Jesus. To give added weight to his words, Paul appealed here to the fact that he wrote with the authority of Christ Himself (see vv. 2, 15; 5:27; 2 Thess. 3:6, 12). please God*. (cf. 2:4, 15; 2 Cor. 5:9; Eph. 5:10, 17; Col. 1:10; Heb. 11:6; 13:15, 16; 1 John 3:22). This is done by obedience to the Word of God (cf. v. 3).

4:3 the will of God. All of God’s Word contains God’s will—both affirmations and prohibitions. Specifically, God’s will includes salvation (1 Tim. 2:4), self-sacrifice (Rom. 12:1, 2), Spirit filling (Eph. 5:18), submission (1 Pet. 2:13–15), suffering (1 Pet. 3:17), satisfaction (5:18), settledness (Heb. 10:36), and particularly here—sanctification, which literally refers to a state of being set apart from sin to holiness. In this context, it means being set apart from sexual impurity in particular, holding oneself away from immorality by following the instruction in verses 4–8.

4:4 possess his own vessel. Two interpretations of “vessel” are usually offered. The term can mean: (1) the wife (cf. Ruth 4:10 LXX; 1 Pet. 3:7) which one acquires, or (2) the body (2 Cor. 4:7; 2 Tim. 2:21) which one possesses. The latter is most likely since: (1) vessel in 1 Peter 3:7 is used only in a comparative sense (“weaker vessel”) referring to vessel in terms of general humanity not femaleness; (2) being married does not guarantee sexual purity; (3) Paul would be

Key Words in 1 Thessalonians

Sanctification: Greek hagiasmos—4:3-4, lit. “set apart”—refers to a process whereby God sets aside that which is holy. However, sanctification is perfect only in principle; it is not yet attained by humanity. But though we still remain in a fallen world, we stand in relation to God as though we were already made perfect (Heb. 10:10). Christ’s one and only sacrifice sanctified us (made us holy), and that sanctification has the lasting result that it continues to work in us, making us holy (Heb. 10:14).

Spirit; Soul; Body: Greek pneuma—4:8; 5:19, 23—lit. “spirit”; Greek psychē—5:23—lit. “life”; Greek sōma—5:23—lit. “body.” First Thessalonians 5:23 is the only place in the NT where the being of a person is delineated into three portions. Yet in this passage, all three make up a whole person. The spirit enables a person to contact and be regenerated by the divine Spirit (John 3:6; Rom. 8:16). The psuche, which is translated “soul,” speaks of a person’s personality or essence. Finally, the NT writers identify the body as a physical entity separate from one’s soul or spirit. As this verse indicates, God works from the inside out, sanctifying our entire being for eternal life.

Coming: Greek parousia—2:19; 3:13; 4:15; 5:23—lit. “presence,” commonly used in the NT to describe the visitation of important people such as royalty. Thus the word points to a unique and distinct “coming.” This term is used in the NT to designate the Second Coming of Christ. This glorious coming will reveal Christ as King over all.

contradicting what he taught in 1 Corinthians 7 about the superlative state of singleness (cf. 7:8, 9); and (4) if taken in the sense of “acquiring a wife,” Paul would be talking to men only and ignoring how women were to stay pure. Therefore, “possess his own body” is the preferred translation/interpretation. Cf. note on 1 Corinthians 9:27.

4:5 the Gentiles. Used here in a spiritual sense referring to non-Christians, and indicated by the defining statement, “who do not know God.” See notes on Ephesians 4:17, 18.

4:6 defraud his brother. The context, which remains unchanged throughout verses 1–8, demands that this refer to all the destructive social and spiritual implications of illegitimate sexual activity. See notes on Matthew 18:6–10. avenger. This means it is God who ultimately works out just recompense for such sins (cf. Col. 3:4–7; Heb. 13:4).

4:7 call us. Whenever the epistles refer to the “call” of God, it is always a reference to His effectual, saving call, never to a general plea. It is linked to justification (cf. Rom. 8:30).

4:8 given us His Holy Spirit. God’s Spirit is a free gift to all who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ for salvation. Cf. Acts 2:38; Romans 8:9; 1 Corinthians 3:16; 12:13; 2 Corinthians 6:16.

B. On Disciplined Living (4:9–12)

4:9, 10 taught by God to love. Through God’s Word (Ps. 119:97–102) and by God Himself, they were loving believers (cf. Rom. 5:5; 1 John 2:7–11; 3:14; 4:7, 8, 12).

4:11 a quiet life. This refers to a person who does not present social problems (see note on 1 Tim. 2:2) or generate conflict among others, but whose soul rests easy even in the midst of difficulty (cf. 1 Pet. 3:4). Paul later deals with those who did not “mind their own business” at Thessalonica (cf. 2 Thess. 3:6–15). work with your own hands. Greek culture looked down on manual labor but Paul exalts it (see note on Eph. 4:28).

4:12 those . . . outside. Non-Christians are in view here (cf. 1 Cor. 5:2; Col. 4:5; 1 Tim. 3:7).

C. On Death and the Rapture (4:13–18)

4:13–18 Even though Paul’s ministry in Thessalonica was brief, it is clear the people had come to believe in and hope for the reality of their Savior’s return (cf. 1:3, 9, 10; 2:19; 5:1, 2; 2 Thess. 2:1, 5). They were living in expectation of that coming, eagerly awaiting Christ. Verse 13 (cf. 2 Thess. 2:1–3) indicates they were even agitated about some things that were happening to them that might affect their participation in it. They knew Christ’s return was the climactic event in redemptive history and didn’t want to miss it. The major question they had was “What happens to the Christians who die before He comes? Do they miss His return?” Clearly, they had an imminent view of Christ’s return, and Paul had left the impression it could happen in their lifetime. Their confusion came as they were being persecuted, an experience they thought they were to be delivered from by the Lord’s return (cf. 3:3, 4).

4:13 those who have fallen asleep. Sleep is the familiar NT euphemism for death which describes the appearance of the deceased (see note on 1 Cor. 11:30). It describes the dead body, not the soul (cf. 2 Cor. 5:1–9; Phil. 1:23). Sleep is used of Jarius’s daughter (Matt. 9:24), whom Jesus raised from the dead and Stephen, who was stoned to death (Acts 7:60; cf. John 11:11; 1 Cor. 7:39; 15:6, 18, 51; 2 Pet. 3:4). Those who sleep are identified in verse 16 as “the dead in Christ.” The people, in ignorance, had come to the conclusion that those who die miss the Lord’s return, and they were grieved over their absence at such a glorious event. Thus, the departure of a loved one brought great anguish to the soul. But there is no reason for Christians to sorrow when a brother dies as if some great loss to that person has come.

4:14 God will bring with Him. As Jesus died and rose, so also will those who die believing in Him rise again so they can be taken to heaven with the Lord (see notes on John 14:1–3; 1 Cor. 15:51–58). These texts describe the Rapture of the church, which takes place when Jesus comes to collect His redeemed and take them back to heaven. Those who have died before that time (called “those who sleep”) will be gathered and taken back to heaven with the Lord.

4:15 the word of the Lord. Was Paul referring to some saying of Jesus found in the Gospels? No. There are none exact or even close. The only explicit reference to the rapture in the Gospels is John 14:1–3. Some suggest that Jesus had said the words while on earth, their substance being recorded later in such places as Matthew 24:30, 31 and John 6:39, 40; 11:25, 26. Similarities between this passage in 1 Thessalonians and the Gospel accounts include a trumpet (Matt. 24:31), a resurrection (John 1:26), and a gathering of the elect (Matt. 24:31). Yet, dissimilarities between it and the canonical sayings of Christ far outweigh the resemblances. Some of the differences between Matthew 24:30, 31 and verses 15–17 are as follows: (1) in Matthew the Son of Man is coming on the clouds (but see Mark 13:26; Luke 21:27), in 1 Thessalonians ascending believers are in them; (2) in the former the angels gather, in the latter Christ does personally; (3) in the former nothing is said about resurrection, while in the latter this is the main theme; and (4) Matthew records nothing about the order of ascent, which is the principal lesson in Thessalonians. On the other hand, did Paul mean a statement of Jesus that was spoken but not recorded in the Gospels (Acts 20:35)? No. There is reason to conclude this since Paul affirmed that he taught the Rapture as a heretofore hidden truth (1 Cor. 15:51), i.e., “mystery.” Apparently, the Thessalonians were informed fully about the Day of the Lord judgment (cf. 5:1, 2), but not the preceding event—the Rapture of the church. Until Paul revealed it as the revelation from God to him, it had been a secret, with the only prior mention being Jesus’ teaching in John 14:1–3. This was new revelation of what had previously been an unrevealed mystery. we who are alive and remain. This refers to Christians alive at the time of the Rapture, those who live on this earth to see the coming of the Lord for His own. Since Paul didn’t know God’s timing, he lived and spoke as if it could happen in his lifetime. As with all early Christians, he believed the event was near (cf. Rom. 13:11; 1 Cor. 6:14; 10:11; 16:22; Phil. 3:20, 21; 1 Tim. 6:14; Titus 2:13). Those alive at the Rapture will follow those dead who rise first (v. 16).

4:16 the Lord Himself will descend. This fulfills the pledge of John 14:1–3 (cf. Acts 1:11). Until then, Jesus remains in heaven (cf. 1:10; Heb. 1:1–3). archangel. Very little is known about the organization or rank of angels (cf. Col. 1:17). While only Michael is named as an archangel (Jude 9), there seems to be more than one in the archangelic ranks (Dan. 10:13). Perhaps it is Michael, the archangel, whose voice is heard as he is identified with Israel’s resurrection in Daniel 12:1–3. At that moment (cf. 1 Cor. 15:52, “twinkling of an eye”), the dead rise first. They will not miss the rapture, but be the first participants. trumpet of God. Cf. 1 Corinthians 15:52. This trumpet is not the judgment trumpets of Revelation 8–11, but is illustrated by the trumpet of Exodus 19:16–19, which called the people out of the camp to meet God. It will be a trumpet of deliverance (cf. Zeph. 1:16; Zech. 9:14).

4:17 caught up. After the dead come forth, their spirits, already with the Lord (2 Cor. 5:8; Phil. 1:23), are now being joined to resurrected new bodies (see notes on 1 Cor. 15:35–50); the living Christians will be raptured, literally snatched away (cf. John 10:28; Acts 8:39). This passage, along with John 14:1–3 and 1 Corinthians 15:51, 52, forms the biblical basis for the Rapture of the church. The time of the Rapture cannot be conclusively determined from this passage alone. However, when other texts such as Revelation 3:10 and John 14:3 are consulted and compared to the texts about Christ’s coming in judgment (Matt. 13:34–50; 24:29–44; Rev. 19:11–21) at the end of a seven year Tribulation, it has to be noted that there is a clear difference between the character of the Rapture in that there is no mention of any judgment, while the other texts feature judgment. So then, it is best to understand that the Rapture occurs at a time different from the coming of Christ in judgment. Thus, the Rapture has been described as pre-Tribulational (before the wrath of God unfolded in the judgments of Rev. 6–19). This event includes complete transformation (cf. 1 Cor. 15:51, 52; Phil 3:20, 21) and union with the Lord Jesus Christ that never ends.

4:18 comfort one another. The primary purpose of this passage is not to teach a scheme of prophecy, but rather to provide encouragement to those Christians whose loved ones have died. The comfort here is based on the following: (1) the dead will be resurrected and will participate in the Lord’s coming for His own; (2) when Christ comes the living will be reunited forever with their loved ones; and (3) they all will be with the Lord eternally (v. 17).

D. On Holy Living and the Day of the Lord (5:1–11)

5:1 But. Paul used familiar Greek words here to indicate a change of topics within the same general subject of prophecy (cf. 4:9, 13; 1 Cor. 7:1, 25; 8:1; 12:1; 16:1). The expression here points to the idea that within the broader context of the end time coming of the Lord Jesus, the subject is changing from a discussion of the blessings of the Rapture of believers to the judgment of unbelievers. times and the seasons. These two terms mean the measurement of time and the character of the times respectively (cf. Dan. 2:21; Acts 1:7). Many of them expected the Lord to come in their lifetime and were confused and grieved when their fellow believers died before His coming (see notes on 4:13–18). They were concerned about the delay. Apparently, the Thessalonians knew all that God intended believers to know about coming judgment, and Paul had taught them what they hadn't known about the Rapture (4:13–18), so Paul exhorted them, here, to live godly lives in light of coming judgment on the world, rather than to be distracted by probing into issues of prophetic timing. They could not know the timing of God's final judgment, but they knew well that it was coming unexpectedly (v. 2).

5:2 day of the Lord. There are nineteen indisputable uses of the Day of the Lord in the OT and four in the NT (cf. Acts 2:20; 2 Thess. 2:2; 2 Pet. 3:10). The OT prophets used Day of the Lord to describe near historical judgments (see Is. 13:6–22; Ezek. 30:2–19; Joel 1:15; Amos 5:18–20; Zeph. 1:14–18) or far eschatological divine judgments (see Joel 2:30–32; 3:14; Zech. 14:1; Mal. 4:1, 5). Six times it is referred to as the “day of doom” and four times “day of vengeance.” The NT calls it a day of “wrath,” day of “visitation,” and the “Great Day of God Almighty” (Rev. 16:14). These are terrifying judgments from God (cf. Joel 2:30, 31; 2 Thess. 1:7–10) for the overwhelming sinfulness of the world. The future Day of the Lord, which unleashes God's wrath, falls into two parts: (1) the end of the seven year Tribulation period (cf. Rev. 19:11–21), and (2) the end of the Millennium. These two are actually 1,000 years apart; and Peter refers to the end of the 1,000-year period in connection with the final Day of the Lord (cf. 2 Pet. 3:10; Rev. 20:7–15). Here, Paul refers to that aspect of the Day of the Lord, which concludes the Tribulation period. a thief in the night. This phrase is never used to refer to the Rapture of the church. It is used of Christ's coming in judgment on the Day of the Lord at the end of the seven-year Tribulation which is distinct from the Rapture of the church (see note on 4:15) and it is used of the judgment which concludes the Millennium (2 Pet. 3:10). As a thief comes unexpectedly and without warning, so will the Day of the Lord come in both its final phases.

5:3 “Peace and safety!” Just as false prophets of old fraudulently forecast a bright future, in spite of the imminence of God's judgment (Jer. 6:14; 8:11; 14:13, 14; Lam. 2:14; Ezek. 13:10, 16; Mic. 3:5), so they will again in future days just before the final Day of the Lord destruction. labor pains. The Lord used this same illustration in the Olivet Discourse (see note on Matt. 24:8). It portrays the inevitability, suddenness, inescapable nature, and painfulness of the Day of the Lord.

5:4 But you, brethren. Paul dramatically shifts from the third person plural pronoun (three times in v. 3) to the second person plural. Because the church is raptured before the judgment of the Day of the Lord, believers will not be present on earth to experience its terrors and destruction (v. 3). not in darkness. Believers have no part in the Day of the Lord, because they have been delivered from the domain of darkness and transferred to the kingdom of light (Col. 1:13). Jesus taught that to believe in Him would remove a person from spiritual darkness (John 8:12; 12:46). The contrast between believers and the lost is emphatic and Paul draws it out all the way through verse 7. Believers will not experience the wrath of God because they are different in nature. Unbelievers are in darkness (cf. v. 2, “in the night”), engulfed in mental, moral, and spiritual darkness because of sin and unbelief (cf. John 1:5; 3:19; 8:12; 2 Cor. 4:6; Eph. 4:17, 18; 5:8, 11). All these people are children of Satan (cf. John 8:44) who is called “the power of darkness” (Luke 22:53). The Day of the Lord will “overtake” them suddenly and with deadly results.

5:5 sons of light. This is a Hebrew expression that characterizes believers as children of God, their heavenly Father, who is light and in whom is no darkness at all (1 John 1:5–7). Cf. Luke 16:8; John 8:12; 12:36. Believers live in a completely different sphere of life than those who will be in the Day of the Lord.

5:6 let us not sleep. Because believers have been delivered from the domain of darkness, they are taken out of the night of sin and ignorance and put into the light of God. Because Christians are in the light, they should not sleep in spiritual indifference and comfort, but be alert to the spiritual issues around them. They are not to live like the sleeping, darkened people who will be jolted out of their coma by the Day of the Lord (v. 7), but to live alert, balanced, godly lives under control of the truth.

5:8 breastplate. Paul pictured the Christian life in military terms as being a life of soberness (alertness) and proper equipping. The breastplate covers the vital organs of the body. Faith is an essential protection against temptations, because it is trust in God’s promise, plan, and truth. It is unwavering belief in God’s Word that protects us from temptation’s arrows. Looking at it negatively, it is unbelief that characterizes all sin. When believers sin, they have believed Satan’s lie. Love for God is essential, as perfect love for Him yields perfect obedience to Him. Elsewhere, the warrior’s breastplate has been used to represent righteousness (Is. 59:17; Eph. 6:14). Faith elsewhere is represented by a soldier’s shield (Eph. 6:16). The helmet is always associated with salvation in its future aspects (cf. Is. 59:17; Eph. 6:17). Our future salvation is guaranteed, nothing can take it away (Rom. 13:11). Paul again combined faith, love, and hope (cf. 1:3). See notes on Ephesians 6:10–17.

5:9 wrath. This is the same wrath referred to in 1:10 (see note there). In this context (note especially the contrast), it appears obvious that this wrath refers to God’s eternal wrath, not His temporal wrath during the tribulation period (cf. Rom. 5:9).

5:10 wake or asleep. This analogy goes back to 4:13–15 and refers to being physically alive or dead with the promise that, in either case, we will one day live together (cf. 4:17; John 14:1–3) forever with the Savior who died as the substitute for our sins. Cf. Romans 4:9; Galatians 1:4; 2 Corinthians 5:15, 21.

E. On Church Relationships (5:12–15)

5:12 recognize. This does not mean simple face recognition, but that the people are to literally know their pastors well enough to have an intimate appreciation for them and to respect them because of their value. The work of pastors is summarized in a three-fold description which includes: (1) laboring, working to the point of exhaustion; (2) overseeing, literally standing before the flock to lead them in the way of righteousness; and (3) admonishing, instructing in the truths of God's Word. Cf. Hebrews 13:7, 17.

5:13 esteem. In addition to knowing pastors (see note on v. 12), congregations are to think rightly and lovingly of their pastors, not because of their charm or personality, but because of the fact that they work for the Chief Shepherd as His special servants (cf. 1 Pet. 5:2–4). They are also to submit to their leadership so that “peace” prevails in the church.

5:14, 15 we exhort you. Paul has discussed how the pastors are to serve the people and how the people are to respond to the pastors (vv. 12, 13). In these verses, he presents how the people are to treat each other in the fellowship of the church. The “unruly,” those out of line, must be warned and taught to get back in line. The “fainthearted,” those in fear and doubt, must be encouraged and made bold. The “weak,” those without spiritual and moral strength, must be held up firmly. Patience, forgiveness, and acts of goodness must prevail between all the people.

F. On the Basics of Christian Living (5:16–22)

5:16–22 Paul gave a summary of the Christian's virtues. These verses provide the foundational principles for a sound spiritual life in brief, staccato statements that, in spite of their brevity, give believers the priorities for successful Christian living.

5:16 Rejoice. Joy is appropriate at all times. Cf. Philippians 2:17, 18; 3:1; 4:4.

5:17 pray. This does not mean pray repetitiously or continuously without a break (cf. Matt. 6:7, 8), but rather pray persistently (cf. Luke 11:1–13; 18:1–8) and regularly (cf. Eph. 6:18; Phil. 4:6; Col. 4:2, 12).

5:18 give thanks. Thanklessness is a trait of unbelievers (cf. Rom. 1:21; 2 Tim. 3:1–5). “This is the will of God” includes verses 16, 17.

5:19 quench. The fire of God's Spirit is not to be doused with sin. Believers are also instructed to not grieve the Holy Spirit (Eph. 4:30), but to be controlled by the Holy Spirit (Eph. 5:18) and to walk by the Holy Spirit (Gal. 5:16).

5:20 prophecies. This word can refer to a spoken revelation from God (cf. Acts 11:27, 28; 1 Tim. 1:18; 4:14), but most often refers to the written word of Scripture (cf. Matt. 13:14; 2 Pet. 1:19–21; Rev. 1:3; 22:7, 10, 18, 19). These “prophecies” are authoritative messages from God through a well-recognized spokesman for God that, because of their divine origin, are not to be treated lightly. When God's Word is preached or read, it is to be received with great seriousness.

5:21, 22 Test all things. This call for careful examination and discernment is in response to the command of verse 20. One is never to downgrade the proclamation of God's Word, but to examine the preached word carefully (cf. Acts 17:10, 11). What is found to be “good” is to be wholeheartedly embraced. What is “evil” or unbiblical is to be shunned.

The Will of God

Christians ought to make God's will the practice of their life—nothing more, nothing less, and nothing else. There are at least ten specific statements of God's particular will in the Bible for true believers.

- |                   |                        |
|-------------------|------------------------|
| 1. Salvation      | 1 Tim. 2:4; 2 Pet. 3:9 |
| 2. Sacrifice      | Rom. 12:1, 2           |
| 3. Spirit-control | Eph. 5:17–21           |
| 4. Sanctification | 1 Thess. 4:3, 4        |
| 5. Submission     | 1 Pet. 2:13–15         |
| 6. Satisfaction   | 1 Thess. 5:18          |
| 7. Seeking        | 1 John 5:14, 15        |
| 8. Serving        | Ps. 103:21             |
| 9. Suffering      | 1 Pet. 3:17; 4:19      |
| 10. Shepherding   | 1 Pet. 5:2             |

IV. PAUL'S BENEDICTION (5:23, 24)

5:23 God . . . sanctify you. Having concluded all the exhortations beginning in 4:1, and especially from verses 16–22, Paul's ending benediction acknowledged the source for obeying and fulfilling them all. It is not within human power to be sanctified in all these ways (cf. Zech. 4:6; 1 Cor. 2:4, 5; Eph. 3:20, 21; Col. 1:29). Only God (cf. Rom. 15:33; 16:20; Phil. 4:9; Heb. 13:20 for references to God as "peace") "Himself" can separate us from sin to holiness "completely." whole spirit, soul, and body. This comprehensive reference makes the term completely more emphatic. By using spirit and soul, Paul was not indicating that the immaterial part of man could be divided into two substances (cf. Heb. 4:12). The two words are used interchangeably throughout Scripture (cf. Heb. 6:19; 10:39; 1 Pet. 2:11; 2 Pet. 2:8). There can be no division of these realities, but rather they are used as other texts use multiple terms for emphasis (cf. Deut. 6:5; Matt. 22:37; Mark 12:30; Luke 10:27). Nor was Paul a believer in a three-part human composition (cf. Rom. 8:10; 1 Cor. 2:11; 5:3–5; 7:34; 2 Cor. 7:1; Gal. 6:18; Col. 2:5; 2 Tim. 4:22), but rather two parts: material and immaterial. at the coming. This fourth mention of Christ's parousia refers to the rapture of the church as it has previously at 2:19; 3:13; 4:15.

5:24 calls you. This, as every time the divine call is mentioned in the NT, refers to God's effectual call of His chosen ones to salvation (cf. 2:12; 4:7; Rom. 1:6, 7; 8:28; 1 Cor. 1:9; Eph. 4:1, 4; 2 Tim. 1:9; 1 Pet. 2:9; 5:10; 2 Pet. 1:10). The God who calls will also bring those whom He calls to glory, and none will be lost (cf. John 6:37–44; 10:28, 29; Rom. 8:28–39; Phil. 1:6; Jude 24).

V. PAUL'S FINAL REMARKS (5:25–28)

5:26 holy kiss. This gesture of affection is commanded five times in the NT (Rom. 16:16; 1 Cor. 16:20; 2 Cor. 13:12; 1 Pet. 5:14) and refers to the cultural hug and kiss greeting of the first century which, for Christians, was to be done righteously in recognition that believers are brothers and sisters in the family of God.

5:27 Public reading was the foundation of spiritual accountability (cf. Gal. 4:16; 2 Thess. 3:14).

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL TO THE THESSALONIANS

Title

In the Greek NT, 2 Thessalonians is listed as “To the Thessalonians.” This represents the apostle Paul’s second canonical correspondence to the fellowship of believers in the city of Thessalonica (cf. 1:1).

Author and Date

Paul, as in 1 Thessalonians, identified himself twice as the author of this letter (1:1; 3:17). Silvanus (Silas) and Timothy, Paul’s collaborators in founding the church, were present with him when he wrote. Evidence, both within this letter and with regard to vocabulary, style, and doctrinal content, strongly supports Paul as the only possible author. The time of this writing was surely a few months after the first epistle, while Paul was still in Corinth with Silas and Timothy (1:1; Acts 18:5) in late A.D. 51 or early A.D. 52 (see Introduction to 1 Thessalonians: Author and Date).

Background and Setting

For the history of Thessalonica, see Introduction to 1 Thessalonians: Background and Setting. Some have suggested that Paul penned this letter from Ephesus (Acts 18:18–21), but his eighteen-month stay in Corinth provided ample time for both of the Thessalonian epistles to be authored (Acts 18:11).

Apparently, Paul had stayed informed of the happenings in Thessalonica through correspondence and/or couriers. Perhaps the bearer of the first letter brought Paul back an update on the condition of the church, which had matured and expanded (1:3); but pressure and persecution had also increased. The seeds of false doctrine concerning the Lord had been sown, and the people’s behavior was disorderly. So, Paul wrote to his beloved flock who were: (1) discouraged by persecution and needed incentive to persevere; (2) deceived by false teachers who confused them about the Lord’s return; and (3) disobedient to divine commands, particularly by refusing to work. Paul wrote to address those three issues by offering: (1) comfort for the persecuted believers (1:3–12); (2) correction for the falsely taught and frightened believers (2:1–15); and (3) confrontation for the disobedient and undisciplined believers (3:6–15).

Historical and Theological Themes

Although chapters 1 and 2 contain much prophetic material because the main issue was a serious misunderstanding generated by false teachers about the coming Day of the Lord (Paul reveals that the day had not come and would not until certain other events occurred), it is still best to call this “a pastoral letter.” The emphasis is on how to maintain a healthy church with an effective testimony in proper response to sound eschatology and obedience to the truth.

Eschatology dominates the theological issues. One of the clearest statements on personal eschatology for unbelievers is found in 1:9. Church discipline is the major focus of 3:6–15, which needs to be considered along with Matthew 18:15–20; 1 Corinthians 5:1–13; Galatians 6:1–5, and 1 Timothy 5:19, 20 for understanding the complete biblical teaching on this theme.

Interpretive Challenges

Eternal reward and retribution are discussed in 1:5–12 in such general terms that it is difficult to identify some of the details with regard to exact timing. Matters concerning the Day of the Lord (2:2), the restrainer (2:6, 7), and the lawless one (2:3, 4, 8–10) provide challenging prophetic material to interpret.

I. PAUL'S GREETING (1:1, 2)

1:1, 2 See note on 1 Thessalonians 1:1.

II. PAUL'S COMFORT FOR AFFLICTION (1:3–12)

A. By Way of Encouragement (1:3, 4)

1:3 bound to thank. There is a spiritual obligation to thank God in prayer when He accomplishes great things in the lives of His saints. That was the case with the obedient Thessalonians, who had demonstrated growth in faith and love since the first letter. This was in direct answer to Paul's prayers (cf. 1 Thess. 1:3; 3:12).

1:4 patience and faith. Nowhere was their growth in faith and love (v. 3) more evident than in the way they patiently and faithfully endured hostilities and suffering from the enemies of Christ. Although there was no need to speak, since the Thessalonians' lives spoke clearly enough (1 Thess. 1:8), Paul's joy before the Lord over their perseverance bubbled up.

B. By Way of Exhortation (1:5–12)

1:5 suffer. Having a right attitude toward suffering is essential, and that required attitude is concern for the kingdom of God. The Thessalonian believers were not self-centered, but concentrated on God's kingdom. Their focus was not on personal comfort, fulfillment, and happiness, but on the glory of God and the fulfillment of His purposes. They were not murmuring about the injustice of their persecutions. Rather, they were patiently enduring the sufferings they did not deserve (v. 4). This very attitude was "manifest evidence" or positive proof that God's wise process of purging, purifying, and perfecting through suffering was working to make His beloved people worthy of the kingdom (cf. 2:12) by being perfected (cf. James 1:2–4; 1 Pet. 5:10). For believers, afflictions are to be expected (cf. 1 Thess. 3:3) as they live and develop Christian character in a satanic world. Suffering is not to be thought of as evidence that God has forsaken them, but evidence that He is with them, perfecting them (cf. Matt. 5:10; Rom 8:18; 2 Cor. 12:10). So the Thessalonians demonstrated that their salvation, determined by faith alone in the Lord Jesus Christ, was genuine because they, like Christ, were willing to suffer on account of God and His kingdom. They suffered unjustly as objects of man's wrath against Christ and His kingdom (Acts 5:41; Phil. 3:10; Col. 1:24). "Kingdom of God" is used here in its spiritual sense of salvation (see note on Matt. 3:2).

1:6 God to repay. Just as the righteous judgment of God works to perfect believers (v. 5), so it works to repay the wicked (cf. v. 8). Vindication and retribution are to be exercised by God, not man, in matters of spiritual persecution (cf. Deut. 32:35; Prov. 25:21, 22; Rom. 12:19–21; 1 Thess. 5:15; Rev. 19:2). When God repays and how God repays are to be determined by Him.

1:7 rest with us. Paul was a fellow sufferer for the just cause of Christ. He, like the Thessalonians, hoped for that ultimate rest and reward for their suffering for the kingdom that was to come when Christ returned to judge the ungodly. The Lord Jesus promised this twofold coming for rest and retribution (cf. Matt. 13:40–43; 24:39–41; 25:31–33; Luke 21:27, 28, 34–36; John 5:24–29). when the Lord Jesus is revealed. This undoubtedly refers to Christ being unveiled in His coming as Judge. The first aspect of this revealing occurs at the end of the seven-year Tribulation period (cf. Matt. 13:24–30, 36–43; 24:29–51; 25:31–46; Rev. 19:11–15). The final and universal revelation of Christ as Judge occurs at the Great White Throne judgment following Christ's millennial reign on the earth (Rev. 20:11–15). Angels always accompany Christ in His coming for judgment (cf. Matt 13:41, 49; 24:30, 31; 25:31; Rev. 14:14, 15).

1:8 in flaming fire. Fire is a symbol of judgment (cf. Ex. 3:2; 19:16–20; Deut. 5:4; Ps. 104:4; Is. 66:15, 16; Matt. 3:11, 12; Rev. 19:12). taking vengeance. Lit. these words mean "to give full punishment" (cf. Deut. 32:35; Is. 59:17; 66:15; Ezek. 25:14; Rom. 12:19). do not know God. Cf. 1 Thessalonians 4:5. This speaks to the lack of a personal relationship with God through Jesus Christ (cf. John 17:3; Gal. 4:8; Eph. 2:12; 4:17, 18; Titus 1:16). Retribution is not dealt out because of persecuting Christians, but because they did not obey God's command to believe (cf. Acts 17:30, 31; Rom. 1:5; 10:16; 15:18; 16:19) and call upon the name of the Lord to be saved from their sin (Rom. 10:9–13; 1 Cor. 16:22; Heb. 10:26–31). Salvation is never obtained by works but always by placing one's faith alone in the Lord Jesus Christ (Eph. 2:8–10).

1:9 everlasting destruction. See note on Matthew 25:46. Paul explained the duration and extent of what is elsewhere in Scripture called "hell." First, it is forever; thus it is not a reversible experience. Second, destruction means ruin and does not involve annihilation, but a new state of conscious being which is significantly worse than the first (cf. Rev. 20:14, 15). This is described as the absence of God's presence and glory (cf. Matt. 8:12; 22:13; 25:30; Luke 16:24–26).

1:10 when He comes. When the Day of the Lord arrives, bringing retribution and ruin for unbelievers. As Christ's great glory is displayed, the result will be rest and relief for believers and the privilege of sharing His glory (cf. Phil. 3:21; 1 John 3:2). This is the "glorious manifestation" of believers of which Paul spoke (Rom. 8:18, 19). At the time, all believers will adore and worship Him, including those in the Thessalonian church who believed Paul's testimony of the gospel.

1:11 we also pray. Paul's prayer life is exemplified four times in this letter (cf. v. 12; 2:16, 17; 3:1–5, 16). Here, he prayed as he did in verse 5, that they might behave in ways consistent with their identity as Christians (cf. 1 Thess. 2:19; Eph. 4:1; Col. 1:10), living up to their "calling to salvation" (cf. Rom 8:30; 11:29; Gal. 4:13–15; 1 Cor. 1:26; Col.

Key Words in 2 Thessalonians

Destruction: Greek olethros—1:9—does not mean annihilation or extinction, in which one would cease to exist, but rather the loss of everything good and worthwhile. In 1 Corinthians, Paul uses the word to speak of the immediate consequences of sin (1 Cor. 5:5). Yet, in 1 Thessalonians 1:9, he uses the same word to describe the eternal consequences of sin (see also 1 Tim. 6:9). The punishment for sin is not annihilation, but eternal separation from the love of Christ. Just as eternal life belongs to believers, endless suffering awaits those who rebel against Christ.

The Lawless One: Greek ho anomos—2:8—literally “without law,” points to a man consumed with rebellion. This evil figure is also called “the Antichrist” (1 John 4:2, 3) and “the beast” (Rev. 13:1). He stands in direct defiance to Jesus Christ, the embodiment of righteousness. Yet, in the end, this man will be conquered by the Sovereign Ruler of the universe.

1:3–5; 1 Thess. 2:12) with lives marked by goodness and powerful works of faith.

1:12 that. The worthy walk of verse 11 allows God to be glorified in us, the light of all purposes (cf. 2:14; 1 Cor. 10:31; 1 Pet. 4:11).

III. PAUL’S CORRECTION FOR PROPHETIC ERROR (2:1–17)

A. Prophetic Crisis (2:1, 2)

2:1 coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. This is the fifth mention of Christ’s coming in the Thessalonian letters (cf. 1 Thess. 2:19; 3:13; 4:15; 5:23; see note at 1 Thess. 2:19). The aspect of His particular coming in view here is identified by the next phrase “our gathering together,” which conveys the idea of all believers meeting together with the Lord Jesus, obviously referring to the Rapture of the church described in 1 Thessalonians 4:13–18 and John 14:1–3. Cf. Hebrews 10:25 for the only other use of this phrase in the NT. This was the event the Thessalonians were anticipating (cf. 1 Thess. 1:10; 3:13; 5:9).

2:2 soon shaken. This term has been used of an earthquake (Acts 16:26) and a ship at anchor slipping its mooring in the midst of a heavy wind. Along with the word troubled, it describes the state of agitation and alarm that had gripped the church. They were greatly distressed because they had expected the rapture, the gathering together to the Lord, to take place before the Day of the Lord. They had expected to be taken to glory and heavenly rest, not left to persecution and divine wrath. Paul must have taught them that they would miss the Day of the Lord (1 Thess. 5:2–5; cf. Rev. 3:10), but they had become confused by the persecution they were experiencing, thinking they may have been in the Day of the Lord. This error had been reinforced by some messages to them claiming that they were indeed in the Day of the Lord. Paul noted the source of these as “spirit,” “word,” and “letter.” A “spirit” would most likely refer to a false prophet claiming divine revelation as in 1 John 4:1–3. A “word” would refer to a sermon or speech given, while a “letter” indicated a written report. The powerful but harmful effect of this false information was gained by claiming it was from the apostle Paul (“as if from us”). Whoever was telling the Thessalonians they were in the Day of the Lord claimed that it came from Paul who heard it, preached it, and wrote it. Thus their lie was given supposed apostolic sanction. The result was shock, fear, and alarm. Obviously, they had expected the rapture before the Day of the Lord. For if they had expected it after, they would have rejoiced because Christ’s coming was to be soon. Apostolic authenticity in this letter, which corrects the error, was important and accounts for Paul's care to close the letter in his distinctive handwriting (3:17; cf. Gal. 6:11). the day of Christ. The better text sources indicate "the Lord" rather than "Christ," (see note on 1 Thess. 5:2 for discussion of this "day"). The idea that the Day of the Lord had already come conflicted with what Paul had previously taught them about the rapture. This error, which so upset the Thessalonians, is what Paul corrected in verses 3–12, where he showed that the day hadn't come and couldn't until certain realities were in place, most especially "the man of sin" (v. 3).

B. Apostolic Correction (2:3–12)

2:3, 4 the falling away. The Day of the Lord cannot occur until a deliberate abandonment of a formerly professed position, allegiance, or commitment occurs (the term was used to refer to military, political, or religious rebellion). Some have suggested, on questionable linguistic evidence, that this refers to "departure" in the sense of the Rapture. Context, however, points to a religious defection, which is further described in verse 4. The language indicates a specific event, not general apostasy which exists now and always will. Rather, Paul has in mind the apostasy. This is an event which is clearly and specifically identifiable and unique, the consummate act of rebellion, an event of final magnitude. The key to identifying the event is to identify the main person, which Paul does, calling him the "man of sin." Some texts have "man of lawlessness," but there is no real difference in meaning since sin equals lawlessness (1 John 3:4). This is the one who is called "the prince who is to come" (Dan. 9:26) and "the little horn" (Dan. 7:8), whom John calls "the beast" (Rev. 13:2–10, 18) and most know as the Antichrist. The context and language clearly identify a real person in future times who actually does the things prophesied of him in Scripture. He is also called "the son of perdition" or destruction, a term used of Judas Iscariot (John 17:12). "The falling away" is the abomination of desolation that takes place at the midpoint of the Tribulation, spoken of in Daniel 9:27; 11:31; and Matthew 24:15 (see notes there). This man is not Satan, although Satan is the force behind him (v. 9) and he has motives like the desires of the devil (cf. Is. 14:13, 14). Paul is referring to the very act of ultimate apostasy which reveals the final Antichrist and sets the course for the events that usher in the Day of the Lord. Apparently, he will be seen as supportive of religion so that God and Christ will not appear as his enemies until the apostasy. He exalts himself and opposes God by moving into the temple, the place for worship of God, declaring himself to be God and demanding the worship of the world. In this act of satanic self-deification, he commits the great apostasy in defiance of God. For the first three and one-half years of the Tribulation, he maintains relations with Israel, but halts those (cf. Dan. 9:27); and for the last three and one-half years, there is great tribulation under his reign (cf. Dan. 7:25; 11:36–39; Matt. 24:15–21; Rev. 13:1–8) culminating with the Day of the Lord.

2:5 I told you. The imperfect tense is used, indicating repeated action in past time. Apparently, Paul on numerous occasions had taught the Thessalonians the details of God's future plans. Here, he reminded them of the issues which proved the false teachers wrong about the Day of the Lord. Paul had before told them that the revealing of the Antichrist preceded the Day of the Lord; since he had not yet been revealed, they could not possibly be in that day.

2:6 restraining. While the Thessalonians already had been taught and thus knew what was restraining the coming of the Antichrist, Paul does not say specifically in this letter; thus many suggestions have been made to identify the restraining force of verses 6 and 7. These include: (1) human government; (2) preaching of the gospel; (3) the binding of Satan; (4) the providence of God; (5) the Jewish state; (6) the church; (7) the Holy Spirit; and (8) Michael. Whatever now restrains the Antichrist of verses 3, 4, 8–10 from being revealed in the fullness of his apostasy and evil, must be more than human or even angelic power. The power that holds back Satan from bringing the final apostasy and unveiling of his Satan-possessed false Christ must be divinely supernatural. It must be God's power in operation that holds back Satan, so that the man of sin, the son of destruction, won't be able to come until God permits it by removing the restraining power. The reason for the restraint was so that Antichrist would be revealed at God's appointed time and no sooner, just as was Christ (cf. Gal. 4:4), because God controls Satan.

2:7 the mystery of lawlessness. This is the spirit of lawlessness already prevalent in society (cf. 1 John 3:4; 5:17), but still a mystery in that it is not fully revealed as it will be in the one who so blatantly opposes God that he blasphemously assumes the place of God on earth which God has reserved for Jesus Christ. The spirit of such a man is already in operation (cf. 1 John 2:18; 4:3), but the man who fully embodies that spirit has not come. For more on mystery, see notes on Matthew 13:11; 1 Corinthians 2:7; Ephesians 3:4, 5. taken out of the way. This refers not to spatial removal (therefore it could not be the rapture of the church) but rather "a stepping aside." The idea is "out of the way," not gone (cf. Col. 2:14 where our sins are taken out of the way as a barrier to God); see note on verses 3, 4. This restraint will be in place until the Antichrist is revealed, at the midpoint of the Tribulation, leaving him forty-two months to reign (Dan. 7:25; Rev. 13:5).

2:8 And then the . . . revealed. At the divinely decreed moment in the middle of the Tribulation when God removes the divine restraint, Satan, who has been promoting the spirit of lawlessness (v. 7), is finally allowed to fulfill his desire to imitate God by indwelling a man who will perform his will as Jesus did God's. This also fits God's plan for the consummation of evil and the judgment of the Day of the Lord. the Lord will consume. Death occurs at God's hand (cf. Dan 7:26; Rev. 17:11), and this man and his partner, the false prophet, will be cast alive into the lake of fire which burns with brimstone, where he will be eternally separated from God. (Rev. 19:20; 20:10). His coming. The aspect of His coming in view here is not the rapture of the church, but the Lord's coming in judgment on that day when He conquers the forces of Satan and sets up his millennial kingdom (Rev. 19:11–21).

2:9, 10 the lawless one. He will do mighty acts pointing to himself as supernaturally empowered. His whole operation will be deceptive, luring the world to worship him and be damned. The career of the coming lawless one is more fully described in Revelation 13:1–18 (see notes there).

2:10 those who perish. The influence of the lawless one is limited to deceiving the unsaved, who will believe his lies (cf. Matt. 24:24; John 8:41–44). They perish in the deception because of Satan-imposed blindness to the truth of the saving gospel. Cf. John 3:19, 20; 2 Corinthians 4:4.

2:11 strong delusion. People who prefer to love sin and lies rather than gospel truth will receive severe, divine recompense, as do all sinners. God Himself will send judgment

Christ and Antichrist Compared (2 Thess. 2:9)

Antichrist will attempt to deceptively convince the world that he is Messiah by imitating Christ in a powerful, but failed, effort to usurp His rightful kingdom authority to rule on earth. Here are some significant parallels:

|                         | Christ                    | Antichrist              |
|-------------------------|---------------------------|-------------------------|
| 1. Revelation           | 2 Thess. 1:7              | 2 Thess. 2:3, 6, 8      |
| 2. Coming               | 2 Thess. 2:1, 8           | 2 Thess. 2:9            |
| 3. Message              | 2 Thess. 2:10 (the truth) | 2 Thess. 2:11 (the lie) |
| 4. Deity                | John 1:1 (real)           | 2 Thess. 2:4 (claimed)  |
| 5. Authenticating signs | Acts 2:22                 | 2 Thess. 2:9            |
| 6. Empowerment          | Acts 2:22 (God)           | 2 Thess. 2:9 (Satan)    |
| 7. Death                | Mark 15:37                | Rev. 13:3, 12, 14       |
| 8. Resurrection         | Mark 16:6                 | Rev. 13:3, 12, 14       | that insures their fate in the form of a deluding influence so that they continue to believe what is false. They accept evil as good and a lie as the truth. Thus does God use Satan and Antichrist as His instruments of judgment (cf. 1 Kin. 22:19–23).

2:12 condemned. As God has always judged willful rejection by giving people over to impurity and degrading passions (Rom. 1:24–28), so in the last days God will seal the fate of those who persist in following Satan and his counterfeit Christ. As in all ages, those who habitually reject the truth are judged by being left to the consequences of their sin.

C. Pastoral Comfort (2:13–17)

2:13, 14 salvation . . . sanctification. Just as there were specific elements in the character of the Antichrist (vv. 10–12), so there are characteristics of the saved. In these two verses, Paul swept through the features of salvation, noting that believers are “beloved by the Lord,” chosen for salvation from eternity past (cf. Rev. 13:8; 17:8), set apart from sin by the Spirit, and called to eternal glory, i.e., the sharing of the very “glory of our Lord Jesus Christ.” Paul’s main point in this section was to remind the Thessalonians that there was no need to be agitated or troubled (v. 2), thinking they had missed the rapture and thus were in the Day of the Lord judgment. They were destined for glory, not judgment, and would not be included with those deceived and judged in that day.

2:15 stand fast . . . hold. This direct exhortation called for appropriate response to the great truths Paul had just written. In place of agitation should come strength and a firm stand. In place of false teaching should come faithful adherence to the truth.

2:16, 17 Now may. This is one of many benedictions Paul has given in his letters. In it, he invoked God’s power, based on His love and grace, as the true source of encouragement and strength (cf. 3:5, 16).

IV. PAUL’S CONCERN FOR THE CHURCH (3:1–15)

A. Regarding Prayer (3:1–5)

3:1 pray for us. Paul frequently enlisted prayer support from the churches for his ministry (cf. Rom. 15:30–32; Eph. 6:18, 19; Col. 4:2, 3; 1 Thess. 5:25; Philem. 22). In particular, he asked them to pray that the word of God would continue to spread rapidly as it had been already (cf. Acts 6:7; 12:24; 13:44–49), and be received with the honor it deserved.

3:2 unreasonable and wicked men. These were Paul's enemies at Corinth, where he ministered when he wrote (cf. Acts 18:9–17), who were perverse and aggressively unrighteous in their opposition to him and the gospel.

3:3 the Lord is faithful. Cf. Lamentations 3:23. God is faithful in regard to creation (Ps. 119:90), His promises (Deut. 7:9; 2 Cor. 1:18; Heb. 10:23), salvation (1 Thess. 5:24), temptation (1 Cor. 10:13), suffering (1 Pet. 4:19), and here He is faithful to strengthen and protect from Satan (cf. John 17:15; Eph. 6:16; 1 Thess. 3:5).

3:5 Another of Paul's benedictions (cf. v. 16; 2:16, 17), so common in his letters.

B. Regarding Undisciplined Living (3:6–15)

3:6 we command you. Paul's directions were not mere suggestions; they carried the weight and authority of a judge's court order which the apostle delivered and enforced (cf. vv. 4, 6, 10, 12). Here, he required separation so that obedient Christians were not to fellowship with habitually disobedient believers. This is further explained at verse 14. the tradition. There were false traditions (Mark 7:2–13; Col. 2:8) and true (cf. 2:15). Paul's traditions were the inspired teachings he had given.

3:7 follow us. Paul called for the believers at Thessalonica to imitate him (cf. v. 9; 1 Thess. 1:6) because he imitated Christ's example (cf. 1 Cor. 4:16; 11:1; Eph. 5:1).

3:8–10 worked. The specific issue related to working diligently to earn one's living. Though Paul had the "authority" as an apostle to receive support, he chose to earn his own living to set an example (cf. 1 Cor. 9:3–14; Gal. 6:4; 1 Tim. 5:17, 18).

3:11, 12 we hear. Word had come that, in spite of Paul teaching them to work and writing to them about it (1 Thess. 4:11), some were still not willing to work (cf. 1 Tim. 5:13). These were commanded to settle down and begin an ordered life of work.

3:13 do not grow weary. The hard-working believers were tired of having to support the lazy, and were ready to stop all help to those in need, giving up all charity. Paul reminded them that the truly needy still required help and that the Thessalonians must not be negligent toward them.

3:14 do not keep company. This means to "mix it up" in the sense of social interaction. Blatantly disobedient Christians were to be disciplined (v. 6) to produce shame and, hopefully, repentance if they refused to obey the Word of God. See Matthew 18:15–17; 1 Corinthians 5:9–13; Galatians 6:1 for additional details on how to deal with those engaged in unrepentant and repeated sin.

3:15 enemy . . . brother. The purpose of this church discipline is not final rejection. While an unrepentant pattern of sin is to be dealt with decisively, it is to be continually kept in mind that the one with whom one deals is a brother in the Lord, so all further warnings to him about his sin are done with a brotherly attitude. For instruction on the manner of church discipline, see notes on Matthew 18:15–20.

V. PAUL'S BENEDICTION (3:16–18)

3:16 the Lord of peace. Paul knew this characteristic of God would be most meaningful to reflect upon in light of the intense spiritual battle that raged all around the Thessalonians (cf. 1:2; 1 Thess. 1:1; 5:23). Cf. Paul's other benedictions to this church in verse 5; 2:16, 17; 1 Thessalonians 3:11–13; 5:23.

3:17 a sign. Paul often wrote through a secretary (cf. Rom. 16:22). When that was the case, as most likely with this letter, Paul added an identifying signature (cf. 1 Cor. 16:21; Col. 4:18) so his readers could be sure he was truly the author (see note on 2:2).

3:18 Cf. 1 Thessalonians 5:28.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL TO TIMOTHY

Title

This is the first of two inspired letters Paul wrote to his beloved son in the faith. Timothy received his name, which means “one who honors God,” from his mother (Eunice) and grandmother (Lois), devout Jews who became believers in the Lord Jesus Christ (2 Tim. 1:5) and taught Timothy the OT Scriptures from his childhood (2 Tim. 3:15). His father was a Greek (Acts 16:1) who may have died before Timothy met Paul.

Timothy was from Lystra (Acts 16:1–3), a city in the Roman province of Galatia (part of modern Turkey). Paul led Timothy to Christ (1:2, 18; 1 Cor. 4:17; 2 Tim. 1:2), undoubtedly during his ministry in Lystra on his first missionary journey (Acts 14:6–23). When he revisited Lystra on his second missionary journey, Paul chose Timothy to accompany him (Acts 16:1–3). Although Timothy was very young (probably in his late teens or early twenties, since about fifteen years later Paul referred to him as a young man, 4:12), he had a reputation for godliness (Acts 16:2). Timothy was to be Paul’s disciple, friend, and colaborer for the rest of the apostle’s life, ministering with him in Berea (Acts 17:14), Athens (Acts 17:15), Corinth (Acts 18:5; 2 Cor. 1:19), and accompanying him on his trip to Jerusalem (Acts 20:4).

Timothy was with Paul during his first Roman imprisonment and went to Philippi (Phil. 2:19–23) after Paul’s release. In addition, Paul frequently mentions Timothy in his epistles (Rom. 16:21; 2 Cor. 1:1; Phil. 1:1; Col. 1:1; 1 Thess. 1:1; 2 Thess. 1:1; Philem. 1). Paul often sent Timothy to churches as his representative (1 Cor. 4:17; 16:10; Phil. 2:19; 1 Thess. 3:2), and 1 Timothy finds him on another assignment, serving as pastor of the church at Ephesus (1:3). According to Hebrews 13:23, Timothy was imprisoned somewhere and released.

Author and Date

Many modernist critics delight in attacking the plain statements of Scripture and, for no good reason, deny that Paul wrote the Pastoral Epistles (1, 2 Tim.; Titus). Ignoring the testimony of the letters themselves (1:1; 2 Tim. 1:1; Titus 1:1) and that of the early church (which is as strong for the Pastoral Epistles as for any of Paul’s epistles, except Romans and 1 Corinthians), these critics maintain that a devout follower of Paul wrote the Pastoral Epistles in the second century.

As proof, they offer five lines of supposed evidence: (1) The historical references in the Pastoral Epistles cannot be harmonized with the chronology of Paul’s life given in Acts; (2) The false teaching described in the Pastoral Epistles is the fully-developed Gnosticism of the second century; (3) The church organizational structure in the Pastoral Epistles is that of the second century, and is too well developed for Paul’s day; (4) The Pastoral Epistles do not contain the great themes of Paul’s theology; and (5) The Greek vocabulary of the Pastoral Epistles contains many words not found in Paul's other letters, nor in the rest of the NT.

While it is unnecessary to dignify such unwarranted attacks by unbelievers with an answer, occasionally such an answer does enlighten. Thus, in reply to the critics' arguments, it can be pointed out that:

(1) This contention of historical incompatibility is valid only if Paul was never released from his Roman imprisonment mentioned in Acts. But he was released, since Acts does not record Paul's execution, and Paul himself expected to be released (Phil. 1:19, 25, 26; 2:24; Philem. 22). The historical events in the Pastoral Epistles do not fit into the chronology of Acts because they happened after the close of the Acts narrative which ends with Paul's first imprisonment in Rome.

(2) While there are similarities between the heresy of the Pastoral Epistles and second-century Gnosticism (see Introduction to Colossians: Background and Setting), there are also important differences. Unlike second-century Gnosticism, the false teachers of the Pastoral Epistles were still within the church (cf. 1:3–7) and their teaching was based on Judaistic legalism (1:7; Titus 1:10, 14; 3:9).

(3) The church organizational structure mentioned in the Pastoral Epistles is, in fact, consistent with that established by Paul (Acts 14:23; Phil. 1:1).

(4) The Pastoral Epistles do mention the central themes of Paul's theology, including the inspiration of Scripture (2 Tim. 3:15–17); election (2 Tim. 1:9; Titus 1:1, 2); salvation (Titus 3:5–7); the deity of Christ (Titus 2:13); His mediatorial work (2:5); and substitutionary atonement (2:6).

(5) The different subject matter in the Pastoral Epistles required a different vocabulary from that in Paul's other epistles. Certainly, a pastor today would use a different vocabulary in a personal letter to a fellow pastor than he would in a work of systematic theology.

The idea that a "pious forger" wrote the Pastoral Epistles faces several further difficulties: (1) The early church did not approve of such practices and surely would have exposed this as a ruse, if there had actually been one (cf. 2 Thess. 2:1, 2; 3:17). (2) Why forge three letters that include similar material and no deviant doctrine? (3) If a counterfeit, why not invent an itinerary for Paul that would have harmonized with Acts? (4) Would a later, devoted follower of Paul have put the words of 1:13, 15 into his master's mouth? (5) Why would he include warnings against deceivers (2 Tim. 3:13; Titus 1:10), if he himself were one?

The evidence seems clear that Paul wrote 1 Timothy and Titus shortly after his release from his first Roman imprisonment (c. A.D. 62–64), and 2 Timothy from prison during his second Roman imprisonment (c. A.D. 66–67), shortly before his death.

Background and Setting

After being released from his first Roman imprisonment (cf. Acts 28:30), Paul revisited several of the cities in which he had ministered, including Ephesus. Leaving Timothy behind to deal with problems that had arisen in the Ephesian church, such as false doctrine (1:3–7; 4:1–3; 6:3–5), disorder in worship (2:1–15), the need for qualified leaders (3:1–14), and materialism (6:6–19), Paul went on to Macedonia, from where he wrote Timothy this letter to help him carry out his task in the church (cf. 3:14, 15).

Historical and Theological Themes

First Timothy is a practical letter containing pastoral instruction from Paul to Timothy (cf. 3:14, 15). Since Timothy was well-versed in Paul's theology, the apostle had no need to give him extensive doctrinal instruction. This epistle does, however, express many important theological truths, such as the proper function of the law (1:5–11); salvation (1:14–16; 2:4–6); the attributes of God (1:17); the Fall (2:13, 14); the person of Christ (3:16; 6:15, 16); election (6:12); and the Second Coming of Christ (6:14, 15).

Interpretive Challenges

There is disagreement over the identity of the false teachers (1:3) and the genealogies (1:4) involved in their teaching. What it means to be “delivered to Satan” (1:20) has also been a source of debate. The letter contains key passages in the debate over the extent of the Atonement (2:4–6; 4:10). Paul's teaching on the role of women (2:9–15) has generated much discussion, particularly his declaration that they are not to assume leadership roles in the church (2:11, 12).

How women can be saved by bearing children (2:15) has also confused many. Whether the fact that an elder must be “the husband of one wife” excludes divorced or unmarried men has been disputed, as well as whether Paul refers to deacons' wives or deaconesses (3:11). Those who believe Christians can lose their salvation cite 4:1 as support for their view. There is a question about the identity of the widows in 5:3–16—are they needy women ministered to by the church, or an order of older women ministering to the church? Does the “double honor” accorded to elders who rule well (5:17, 18) refer to respect or money? These will all be dealt with in their respective notes.

I. GREETING (1:1, 2)

1:1 apostle of Jesus Christ. See notes on 2 Corinthians 12:11, 12; cf. Acts 1:2; 2:42; Romans 1:1; Ephesians 2:20; 4:11. God our Savior. A title unique to the Pastoral Epistles (1, 2 Tim., Titus) that has its roots in the OT (Pss. 18:46; 25:5; 27:9; Mic. 7:7; Hab. 3:18). God is by nature a saving God and the source of our salvation, which He planned from eternity past (see note on 4:10; cf. 2 Thess. 2:13). Jesus Christ, our hope. Christians have hope for the future because Christ purchased salvation for them on the Cross in the past (Rom. 5:1, 2), sanctifies them through His Spirit in the present (Gal. 5:16–25), and will lead them to glory in the future (Col. 1:27; 1 John 3:2, 3).

1:2 Timothy. See Introduction: Title. true son in the faith. Only Timothy (2 Tim. 1:2; 2:1) and Titus (1:4) received this special expression of Paul's favor. The Greek word for son is better translated "child," which emphasizes Paul's role as spiritual father to Timothy. True speaks of the genuineness of Timothy's faith (cf. 2 Tim. 1:5). Timothy was Paul's most cherished pupil, and protégé (1 Cor. 4:17; Phil. 2:19–22). Grace, mercy, and peace. Paul's familiar greeting that appears in all his epistles (see note on Rom. 1:7), but with the addition here of mercy (cf. 2 Tim. 1:2). Mercy frees believers from the misery that accompanies the consequences of sin.

II. INSTRUCTIONS CONCERNING FALSE DOCTRINE (1:3–20)

A. The False Doctrine at Ephesus (1:3–11)

1:3–11 In his opening charge to halt the spread of false teaching in the church at Ephesus, Paul characterizes the false teachers and their doctrine.

1:3 when I went into Macedonia—remain in Ephesus. Before Paul left Ephesus, he likely began the confrontation with the expulsion of Hymenaeus and Alexander (v. 20), then assigned Timothy to stay on and complete what he had begun. charge. This refers to a military command. It demands that a subordinate obey an order from a superior (cf. 2 Tim. 4:1). some. The false teachers were few in number, yet had a wide influence. Several reasons point toward these men being elders in the church at Ephesus and in the churches in the surrounding region: (1) they presumed to be teachers (v. 7), a role reserved for elders (3:2; 5:17). (2) Paul himself had to excommunicate Hymenaeus and Alexander, which implies they occupied the highest pastoral positions. (3) Paul detailed the qualifications of an elder (3:1–7), implying that unqualified men, who needed to be replaced by qualified ones, were occupying those roles. (4) Paul emphasized that sinning elders were to be publicly disciplined (5:19–22). teach no other doctrine. A compound word made up of two Greek words that mean "of a different kind" and "to teach." The false teachers were teaching doctrine different than apostolic doctrine (cf. 6:3, 4; Acts 2:42; Gal. 1:6, 7). This had to do with the gospel of salvation. Apparently they were teaching another gospel (see notes on Gal. 1:6–9) and not the "glorious gospel of the blessed God" (v. 11).

1:4 fables and endless genealogies. Legends and fanciful stories manufactured from elements of Judaism (v. 7; cf. Titus 1:14), which probably dealt with allegorical or fictitious interpretations of OT genealogical lists. In reality, they were "doctrines of demons" (4:1), posing as God's truth (cf. 4:7).

1:5 the commandment. See note on verse 3, where the verb form charge is used (also in v. 8). The purpose of the charge in verses 3 and 4 is the spiritual virtue defined in verse 5. Timothy was to deliver this charge to the church. The goal of preaching the truth and warning of error is to call people to true salvation in Christ, which produces a love for God from a purified heart (2 Tim. 2:22; 1 Pet. 1:22), a cleansed conscience (Heb. 9:22; 10:14), and genuine faith (Heb. 10:22). love. This is the love of choice and the will, characterized by self-denial and self-sacrifice for the benefit of others, and it is the mark of a true Christian (John 13:35; Rom. 13:10; 1 John 4:7, 8; see notes on 1 Cor. 13:1–7). In contrast, false doctrine produces only conflict and resultant disputes (v. 4; 6:3–5). good conscience. Cf. verse 19; 3:9; 4:2; see note on 2 Corinthians 1:12. The Greek word for good refers to that which is perfect and produces pleasure and satisfaction. God created man with a conscience as his self-judging faculty. Because God has written His law on man's heart (see note on Rom. 2:15), man knows the basic standard of right and wrong. When he violates that standard, his conscience produces guilt, which acts as the mind's security system that produces fear, guilt, shame, and doubt as warnings of threats to the soul's well-being (cf. John 8:9; 1 Cor. 8:7, 10, 12; Titus 1:15; Heb. 10:22). On the other hand, when a believer does God's will, he enjoys the affirmation, assurance, peace, and joy of a good conscience (cf. Acts 23:1; 24:16; 2 Tim. 1:3; Heb. 13:18; 1 Pet. 3:16, 21).

1:6 idle talk. Cf. Titus 1:10. Refers to speech that is aimless and has no logical end. It is essentially irrelevant and will not accomplish anything spiritual or edifying to believers. It can also be translated "fruitless discussion." False doctrine leads nowhere, but to the deadening end of human speculation and demonic deception (cf. 6:3–5).

1:7 desiring to be teachers. The false teachers wanted the kind of prestige enjoyed by Jewish rabbis; but they were not concerned about truly learning the law and teaching it to others (cf. 6:4; Matt. 23:5–7). Instead, they imposed on believers in Ephesus a legalistic heresy that offered salvation by works.

1:7, 8 the law. The Mosaic Law is in view here, not just law in general. These were Jewish would-be teachers who wanted to impose circumcision and the keeping of Mosaic ceremonies on the church as necessary for salvation. They plagued the early church (see notes on Gal. 3–5; Phil. 3:1–8).

1:8 the law is good. The Greek word for good can be translated "useful." The Law is good or useful because it reflects God's holy will and righteous standard (Ps. 19:7; Rom. 7:12) which accomplishes its purpose in showing sinners their sin (Rom. 3:19) and their need for a Savior (Gal. 3:24). The Law forces people to recognize that they are guilty of disobeying God's commands, and it thereby condemns every person and sentences them to hell (see notes on Rom. 3:19, 20).

1:9 not made for a righteous person. Those who think they are righteous will never be saved (Luke 5:32) because they do not understand the true purpose of the Law. The false teachers, with their works system of personally achieved self-righteousness (in their own minds), had shown clearly that they misunderstood the Law completely. It was not a means to self-righteousness, but a means to self-condemnation, sin, conviction, repentance, and pleading to God for mercy (v. 15). See notes on Luke 18:9–14; Romans 5:20; Galatians 3:10–13, 19. lawless . . . profane. These first six characteristics, expressed in three couplets, delineate sins from the first half of the Ten Commandments, which deal with a person's relationship to God. Lawless describes those who have no commitment to any law or standard, which makes such people insubordinate, or rebellious. Those who are ungodly have no regard for anything sacred, which means they are sinners because they disregard God's Law.

Unholy people are indifferent to what is right, which leads them to be the profane, who step on or trample what is sacred (cf. Heb. 10:29).

1:9, 10 *murderers of fathers . . . perjurers. These sins are violations of the second half of the Ten Commandments—those dealing with relationships among people. These specific sins undoubtedly characterized the false teachers, since they are characteristic behaviors related to false doctrine (v. 10). “Murderers of fathers” and “mothers” is a violation of the fifth Commandment (Ex. 20:12; cf. 21:15–17), which forbids everything from dishonor to murder. “Manslayers” (or “murderers”) is in violation of the sixth Commandment (Ex. 20:13). “Fornicators” and “sodomites” (or “homosexuals”) violate the seventh Commandment (Ex. 20:14), which prohibits sexual activity outside the marriage bed. Because the theft of children was commonplace in Paul’s day, he mentions “kidnappers” in connection with the eighth Commandment (Ex. 20:15), which prohibits stealing. Finally, “liars” and “perjurers” are violators of the ninth Commandment (Ex. 20:16).

1:10 *sound doctrine. A familiar emphasis in the Pastoral Epistles (cf. 2 Tim. 4:3; Titus 1:9; 2:1). Sound refers to that which is healthy and wholesome. It is the kind of teaching that produces spiritual life and growth, which implies that false doctrine produces spiritual disease and debilitation.

1:11 *the glorious gospel. The gospel reveals God’s glory, that is, the perfections of His person or His attributes, including His holiness (hatred of sin) and justice (demand of punishment for violations of His Law) and grace (forgiveness of sin). Those particular attributes are key to any effective gospel presentation. committed. This Greek word refers to committing something of value to another, and can be translated “entrusted.”

God entrusted Paul with the communication and guardianship of His revealed truth. Cf. 2:7; 6:20, 21; Romans 15:15, 16; 1 Corinthians 4:1, 2; 9:17; 2 Corinthians 5:18–20; Galatians 2:7; Colossians 1:25; 1 Thessalonians 2:4.

B. The True Doctrine of Paul (1:12–17)

1:12–17 Paul’s testimony of his own salvation in these verses provides a contrast between his proper understanding of the Law and the misconceptions of the false teachers, and between the glory of the true gospel and the emptiness of false doctrine.

1:12 *counted me faithful. God’s sovereign purpose for Paul and for all believers works through personal faith. Until Paul was turned by the Holy Spirit from self-righteous works (see Phil. 3:4–7) to faith alone in Christ, he could not be used by God. He was in the same condition as the useless false teachers (vv. 6, 7).

1:13 *a blasphemer, a persecutor, and an insolent man. This verse indicates that experience of Paul when he saw himself, in the light of God’s Law, for who he really was (see notes on Rom. 7:7–12). A blasphemer speaks evil of and slanders God. Paul violated the first half of the Ten Commandments through his overt attacks against Christ (cf. Acts 9:4, 5; 22:7, 8; 26:9, 14, 15). As a persecutor and an insolent man, Paul violated the second half through his attacks on believers. The Greek word for insolent man can be translated “violent aggressor,” indicating the violence Paul heaped on Christians. Cf. note on verse 20. because I did it ignorantly in unbelief. Paul was neither a Jewish apostate nor a Pharisee who clearly understood Jesus’ teaching and still rejected Him. He was a zealous, fastidious Jew trying to earn his salvation, thus lost and damned (see notes on Phil. 3:4–7). His plea of ignorance was not a claim to innocence nor an excuse denying his guilt. It was simply a statement indicating that he did not understand the truth of Christ's gospel and was honestly trying to protect his religion. His willing repentance when confronted by Christ (cf. Rom. 7:9; Phil. 3:8, 9) is evidence that he had not understood the ramifications of his actions. He truly thought he was doing God a service (Acts 26:9).

1:14 grace. God's loving forgiveness, by which He grants salvation apart from any merit on the part of those He saves (see notes on Rom. 3:24; Gal. 1:6). faith and love. Attitudes frequently linked with salvation in the NT (cf. Eph. 1:15; 3:17; Col. 1:4, 23). They are gifts of God's grace in Christ.

1:15 This is a faithful saying. A phrase unique to the Pastoral Epistles (cf. 3:1; 4:9; 2 Tim. 2:11; Titus 3:8), which announces a statement summarizing key doctrines. The phrase "worthy of all acceptance" gives the statement added emphasis. Apparently, these sayings were well known in the churches, as concise expressions of cardinal gospel truth. to save sinners. This faithful saying was based on the statements of Jesus recorded in Matthew 9:13; Luke 19:10. I am chief. Lit. "first in rank." Few could be considered a worse sinner than someone who blasphemed God and persecuted His church (see note on Eph. 3:8). Paul's attitude toward himself dramatically changed (cf. Phil. 3:7–9; see notes on Rom 7:7–12).

1:16 for this reason. Paul was saved so God could display to all His gracious and merciful patience with the most wretched sinners. longsuffering. Refers to patience with people (cf. Rom. 2:4). a pattern. A model or example. Paul was living proof that God could save any sinner, no matter how great a one he might be. The account of Paul's conversion has been instrumental in the salvation of many people. Paul's testimony is repeated six other times in the NT (Acts 9, 22, 26; Gal. 1, 2; Phil. 3:1–14).

C. The Exhortation to Timothy (1:18–20)

1:18 Timothy. See Introduction: Title. prophecies previously made concerning you. The Greek word for previously made literally means "leading the way to," implying that a series of prophecies had been given about Timothy in connection with his receiving his spiritual gift (see note on 4:14). These prophecies specifically and supernaturally called Timothy into God's service. wage the good warfare. Paul urged Timothy to fight the battle against the enemies of Christ and the gospel. Cf. 2 Corinthians 10:3–5; 2 Timothy 2:3, 4; 4:7.

1:19 faith . . . faith. The first is subjective and means continuing to believe the truth. The second is objective, referring to the content of the Christian gospel. a good conscience. See note on verse 5. shipwreck. A good conscience serves as the rudder that steers the believer through the rocks and reefs of sin and error. The false teachers ignored their consciences and the truth, and as a result, suffered shipwreck of the Christian faith (the true doctrine of the gospel), which implies severe spiritual catastrophe. This does not imply loss of salvation of a true believer (see notes on Rom. 8:31–39), but likely indicates the tragic loss that comes to the apostate. They had been in the church, heard the gospel and rejected it in favor of the false doctrine defined in verses 3–7. Apostasy is a turning away from the gospel, having once known it. See notes on Hebrews 2:3, 4; 3:12–19; 6:1–8; 10:26–31.

1:20 Hymenaeus and Alexander. Hymenaeus is mentioned in 2 Timothy 2:17 in

Timothy's Bio

Timothy (meaning “honoring God”), became Paul’s chief disciple (Phil. 2:19–22; 2 Tim. 2:2; 4:1–8), having been “well spoken of” by the brethren in Derbe and Iconium (Acts 16:1–3). Since Paul elsewhere speaks of him as “a true son in the faith” (1 Tim. 1:2; 2 Tim. 1:2), it is possible that Timothy believed at Paul’s preaching on the first missionary journey (Acts 13–14), even though he was raised by a godly mother and grandmother (Acts 16:1; 2 Tim. 1:5; 3:14, 15). Timothy’s father was an unbelieving Greek (Acts 16:1).

Timothy remained faithful to Paul from the beginning (Acts 16:1, 2) to the end (2 Tim. 4:21). Paul dispatched him on the second journey to Thessalonica (3:2); on the third journey to Corinth (Acts 19:22; 1 Cor. 4:17; 16:10); to Philippi during the first Roman house arrest (Phil. 2:19); and to Ephesus during Paul’s final travels (1 Tim. 1:3). He is named in the salutation, not only in both Thessalonian letters, but also in 2 Corinthians, Philippians, Colossians, Philemon, and even Romans 16:21. At some time, Timothy was imprisoned and later released (Heb. 13:23), presumably after Paul’s death.

connection with Philetus, another false teacher. Alexander may be the opponent of the faith referred to in 2 Timothy 4:14, 15. Nothing else is known about these two men (see note on v. 3). I delivered to Satan. Paul put both men out of the church, thus ending their influence and removing them from the protection and insulation of God’s people. They were no longer in the environment of God’s blessing but under Satan’s control. In some instances, God has turned believers over to Satan for positive purposes, such as revealing the genuineness of saving faith, keeping them humble and dependent on Him, enabling them to strengthen others, or offering God praise (cf. Job. 1:1–22; Matt. 4:1–11; Luke 22:31–33; 2 Cor. 12:1–10; Rev. 7:9–15). God hands some people over to Satan for judgment, such as King Saul (1 Sam. 16:12–16; 28:4–20), Judas (John 13:27), and the sinning member in the Corinthian church (see notes on 1 Cor. 5:1–5). may learn not to blaspheme. See note on verse 13. Paul learned not to blaspheme when confronted by the true understanding of the law and the gospel. That was what those men needed. God, the inspired text seems to indicate, would teach them and show them grace as He had Paul. But that evangelistic work could not go on at the expense of the purity of the church.

III. INSTRUCTIONS CONCERNING THE CHURCH (2:1–3:16)

A. The Importance of Prayer (2:1–8)

2:1–8 The Ephesian church had evidently stopped praying for the lost, since Paul urged Timothy to make it a priority again. The Judaistic false teachers in Ephesus, by a perverted gospel and the teaching that salvation was only for Jews and Gentile proselytes to Judaism, would have certainly restricted evangelistic praying. Religious exclusivism (salvation only for the elite) would preclude the need for prayer for the lost.

2:1 supplications. The Greek word is from a root that means “to lack,” “to be deprived,” or “to be without.” Thus, this kind of prayer occurs because of a need. The lost have a great need for salvation, and believers should always be asking God to meet that need. intercessions. This word comes from a root meaning “to fall in with someone,” or “to draw near so as to speak intimately.” The verb from which this word comes is used of Christ’s and the Spirit’s intercession for believers (Rom. 8:26; Heb. 7:25). Paul’s desire is for the Ephesian Christians to have compassion for the lost, to understand the depths of their pain and misery, and to come intimately to God pleading for their salvation. See notes on Titus 3:3, 4. all men. The lost in general, not the elect only. God's decree of election is secret; believers have no way of knowing who is elect until they respond. The scope of God's evangelistic efforts is broader than election (Matt. 22:14; John 17:21, 23; see note on v. 4).

2:2 kings and all who are in authority.

Because so many powerful and influential political rulers are hostile to God, they are often the targets of bitterness and animosity. But Paul urges believers to pray that these leaders might repent of their sins and embrace the gospel, which meant that the Ephesians were even to pray for the salvation of the Roman emperor, Nero, a cruel and vicious blasphemer and persecutor of the faith. a quiet and peaceable life. Quiet refers to the absence of external disturbances; peaceable refers to the absence of internal ones. While it remains uncompromising in its commitment to the truth, the church is not to agitate or disrupt the national life. When it manifests love and goodness to all and prays passionately for the lost, including rulers, the church may experience a certain amount of religious freedom. Persecution should only be the result of righteous living, not civil disobedience (see notes on Titus 3:1–4; 1 Pet. 2:13–23). godliness and reverence. Godliness is a key word in this letter (3:16; 4:7, 8; 6:3, 5, 6, 11; cf. 2 Tim. 3:5; Titus 1:1), indicating that there needed to be a call back to holy living, which had been negatively affected by the false doctrine. Godliness refers to having the proper attitude and conduct before God in everything; reverence can be translated “moral earnestness,” and refers to moral dignity and holy behavior before men.

2:3 God our Savior. See note on 1:1.

2:4 desires all men to be saved. The Greek word for desires is not that which normally expresses God's will of decree (His eternal purpose), but God's will of desire. There is a distinction between God's desire and His eternal saving purpose, which must transcend His desires. God does not want people to sin. He hates sin with all His being (Pss. 5:4; 45:7); thus, He hates its consequences—eternal wickedness in hell. God does not want people to remain wicked forever in eternal remorse and hatred of Himself. Yet, God, for His own glory, and to manifest that glory in wrath, chose to endure “vessels . . . prepared for destruction” for the supreme fulfillment of His will (Rom. 9:22). In His eternal purpose, He chose only the elect out of the world (John 17:6) and passed over the rest, leaving them to the consequences of their sin, unbelief, and rejection of Christ (cf. Rom. 1:18–32). Ultimately, God's choices are determined by His sovereign, eternal purpose, not His desires. See note on 2 Peter 3:9. the knowledge of the truth. Meaning “to be saved.” See note on 2 Timothy 3:7.

2:5 there is one God. There is no other way of salvation (Acts 4:12); hence there is the need to pray for the lost to come to know the one true God (cf. Deut. 4:35, 39; 6:4; Is. 43:10; 44:6; 45:5, 6, 21, 22; 46:9; 1 Cor. 8:4, 6). Mediator. This refers to someone who intervenes between two parties to resolve a conflict or ratify a covenant. Jesus Christ is the only mediator who can restore peace between God and sinners (Heb. 8:6; 9:15; 12:24). the Man Christ Jesus. The absence of the definite article before Man in the Greek suggests the better translation, “Christ Jesus, Himself a man.” Only the perfect God-Man could bring God and man together. Cf. Job 9:32, 33.

2:6 a ransom. This describes the result of Christ's substitutionary death for believers, which He did voluntarily (John 10:17, 18), and reminds one of Christ's own statement in Matthew 20:28, "a ransom for many." The all is qualified by the many. Not all will be ransomed (though His death would be sufficient), but only the many who believe by the work of the Holy Spirit and for whom the actual atonement was made. See note on 2 Peter 3:9. Christ did not pay a ransom only; He became the object of God's just wrath in the believer's place. He died his death and bore his sin (cf. 2 Cor. 5:21; 1 Pet. 2:24). for all. This should be taken in two senses: (1) there are temporal benefits of the Atonement that accrue to all people universally (see note on 4:10), and (2) Christ's death was sufficient to cover the sins of all people. Yet, the substitutionary aspect of His death is applied to the elect alone (see above and notes on 2 Cor. 5:14–21). Christ's death is therefore unlimited in its sufficiency, but limited in its application. Because Christ's expiation of sin is indivisible, inexhaustible, and sufficient to cover the guilt of all the sins that will ever be committed, God can clearly offer it to all. Yet, only the elect will respond and be saved, according to His eternal purpose (cf. John 17:12). in due time. At the proper time in God's redemptive plan (see note on Gal. 4:4).

2:7 for which. Paul's divine commission was based on the truths delineated in verses 3–6. preacher. The Greek word derives from the verb that means, "to herald," "to proclaim," or "to speak publicly." Paul was a public herald proclaiming the gospel of Christ. apostle. See note on 1:1. I am speaking the truth . . . not lying. Paul's emphatic outburst of his apostolic authority and integrity is to emphasize that he was a teacher of the Gentiles. teacher of the Gentiles. The distinctive feature of Paul's apostolic appointment, which demonstrates the universal scope of the gospel. Paul's need to make

Key Word

Ransom: 2:6—lit. "ransom"—actually composed of two words: anti meaning substitution, and lutron, ransom of a slave or prisoner. The antilutron is a payment given in substitution for a slave. The slave's owner accepts the payment for the release of his slave. Galatians 3:13 shows how Christ paid the ransom for sinners under the curse of the law. Christ's sacrifice on the cross redeemed us from the bondage of sin.

this distinction suggests he was dealing with some form of Jewish exclusivism that had crippled the Ephesians' interest in praying for Gentiles to be saved.

2:8 men. The Greek word for men as opposed to women. God intends for men to be the leaders when the church meets for corporate worship. When prayer for the lost is offered during those times, the men are to lead it. everywhere. Paul's reference to the official assembly of the church (cf. 1 Cor. 1:2; 2 Cor. 2:14; 1 Thess. 1:8). lifting up holy hands. Paul is not emphasizing a specific posture necessary for prayer, but a prerequisite for effective prayer (cf. Ps. 66:18). Though this posture is described in the OT (1 Kin. 8:22; Pss. 28:2; 63:4; 134:2), so are many others. The Greek word for holy means "unpolluted" or "unstained by evil." Hands symbolize the activities of life; thus, "holy hands" represent a holy life. This basis of effective prayer is a righteous life (James 5:16). without wrath and doubting. Wrath and righteousness are mutually exclusive (James 1:20; cf. Luke 9:52–56). A better translation for doubting is "dissension," and refers to a hesitant reluctance to be committed to prayer. "Effectual, fervent" prayer is effective (James 5:16). The two refer to one's inner attitude.

2:9–15 Women in the church were living impure and self-centered lives (cf. 5:6, 11–15; 2 Tim. 3:6), and that practice carried over into the worship service, where they became distractions. Because of the centrality of worship in the life of the church, Paul calls on Timothy to confront the problem.

B. The Role of Women (2:9–15)

2:9 adorn . . . modest apparel. The Greek word for adorn means “to arrange,” “to put in order,” or “to make ready.” A woman is to arrange herself appropriately for the worship service, which includes wearing decent clothing which reflects a properly adorned, chaste heart. propriety and moderation. The Greek word for propriety refers to modesty mixed with humility, which carries the underlying idea of shame. It can also refer to a rejection of anything dishonorable to God, or refer to grief over sin. Moderation basically refers to self-control over sexual passions. Godly women hate sin and control their passions so as not to lead another into sin. See notes on 1 Peter 3:3, 4. braided hair or gold or pearls or costly clothing. Specific practices that were causing distraction and discord in the church. Women in the first century often wove gold, pearls, or other jewelry into their hair styles (“braided hair”) to call attention to themselves and their wealth or beauty. The same was true of those women who wore costly clothing. By doing so they would draw attention to themselves and away from the Lord, likely causing the poorer women to be envious. Paul’s point was to forbid the preoccupation of certain women with flaunting their wealth and distracting people from worshiping the Lord.

2:10 Those women who have publicly committed themselves to pursuing godliness should support that claim not only in their demeanor, wardrobe, and appearance, but by being clothed with righteous behavior.

2:11 Let a woman learn. Women are not to be the public teachers when the church assembles, but neither are they to be shut out of the learning process. The form of the Greek verb translated “let . . . learn” is an imperative; Paul is commanding that women be taught in the church. That was a novel concept, since neither first-century Judaism nor Greek culture held women in high esteem. Some of the women in Ephesus probably overreacted to the cultural denigration they had typically suffered and took advantage of their opportunity in the church by seeking a dominant role in leadership. in silence with all submission. Silence (quiet) and submission (to line up under) were to characterize the role of a woman as a learner in the context of the church assembly. Paul explains his meaning in verse 12: Women are to be silent by not teaching, and they are to demonstrate submission by not usurping the authority of the pastors or elders.

2:12 I do not permit. The Greek word for permit is used in the NT to refer to allowing someone to do what he desires. Paul may have been addressing a real situation in which several women in Ephesus desired to be public preachers. to teach. Paul used a verbal form of this Greek word that indicates a condition or process and is better translated: “to be a teacher.” This was an important, official function in the church (see Acts 13:1; 1 Cor. 12:28; Eph. 4:11). Thus, Paul is forbidding women from filling the office and role of the pastor or teacher. He is not prohibiting them from teaching in other appropriate conditions and circumstances (cf. Acts 18:26; Titus 2:3, 4). to have authority over. Paul forbids women from exercising any type of authority over men in the church assembly, since the elders are those who rule (5:17). They are all to be men (as is clear from the requirements in 3:2, 5). in silence. See note on verse 11.

2:13, 14 A woman’s subordinate role did not result after the Fall as a cultural, chauvinistic corruption of God's perfect design; rather, God established her role as part of His original creation (v. 13). God made woman after man to be his suitable helper (see note on Gen. 2:18; cf. 1 Cor. 11:8, 9). The Fall actually corroborates God's divine plan of creation (see notes on Gen. 3:1–7). By nature Eve was not suited to assume the position of ultimate responsibility. By leaving Adam's protection and usurping his headship, she was vulnerable and fell, thus confirming how important it was for her to stay under the protection and leadership of her husband (see notes on 5:11, 12; 2 Tim. 3:6, 7). Adam then violated his leadership role, followed Eve in her sin, and plunged the human race into sinfulness—all connected with violating God's planned roles for the sexes. Ultimately, the responsibility for the Fall still rests with Adam, since he chose to disobey God apart from being deceived (Rom. 5:12–21; 1 Cor. 15:21, 22).

2:15 she. That Paul does not have Eve in mind here is clear because the verb translated “will be saved” is future, and he also uses the plural pronoun they. He is talking about women after Eve. will be saved*. This is better translated in this context, “will be preserved.” The Greek word can also mean “to rescue,” “to preserve safe and unharmed,” “to heal,” or “to deliver from.” It appears several times in the NT without reference to spiritual salvation (cf. Matt. 8:25; 9:21, 22; 24:22; 27:40, 42, 49; 2 Tim. 4:18). Paul is not advocating that women are eternally saved from sin through childbearing or that they maintain their salvation by having babies, both of which would be clear contradictions of the NT teaching of salvation by grace alone through faith alone (Rom. 3:19, 20) sustained forever (Rom. 8:31–39). Paul is teaching that, even though a woman bears the stigma of being the initial instrument who led the race into sin, it is women through childbearing who may be preserved or freed from that stigma by raising a generation of godly children (cf. 5:10). in childbearing*. Because mothers have a unique bond and intimacy with their children, and spend far more time with them than fathers do, they have far greater influence in their lives and thus a unique responsibility and opportunity for rearing godly children. While a woman may have led the human race into sin, women have the privilege of leading many out of sin to godliness. Paul is speaking in general terms; God does not want all women to be married (1 Cor. 7:25–40), let alone bear children. if they continue in faith, love, and holiness, with self-control*. The godly appearance, demeanor, and behavior commanded of believing women in the church (vv. 9–12) is motivated by the promise of deliverance from any inferior status and the joy of raising godly children.

C. The Qualifications for Leaders (3:1–13)

3:1–13 Paul's purpose in writing this letter was to instruct Timothy regarding the church (vv. 14, 15). Of primary importance to any church is that its leaders be qualified to teach and set the example for the rest. These verses delineate those qualifications for pastors and deacons (see also notes on Titus 1:5–9).

3:1 This is a faithful saying: See note on 1:15. desires . . . desires. Two different Greek words are used. The first means “to reach out after.” It describes external action, not internal motive. The second means “a strong passion,” and refers to an inward desire. Taken together, these two words aptly describe the type of man who belongs in the ministry—one who outwardly pursues it because he is driven by a strong internal desire. bishop*. The word means “overseer” and identifies the men who are responsible to lead the church (cf. 5:17; 1 Thess. 5:12; Heb. 13:7). In the NT the words bishop, elder, overseer, and pastor are used interchangeably to describe the same men (Acts 20:17, 28; Titus 1:5–9; 1 Pet. 5:1, 2). Bishops (pastors, overseers, elders) are responsible to lead (5:17), preach and teach (5:17), help the spiritually weak (1 Thess. 5:12–14), care for the church (1 Pet. 5:1, 2), and ordain other leaders (4:14).

3:2 must. The use of this Greek particle stresses emphatically that living a blameless life is absolutely necessary for church leaders. blameless*. Lit. “not able to be held” in a criminal sense; there is no valid accusation of wrongdoing that can be made against him. No overt, flagrant sin can mar the life of a person who must be an example for his people to follow (cf. v. 10; 4:16; 5:7; Ps. 101:6; Phil. 3:17; 2 Thess. 3:9; Heb. 13:7; 1 Pet. 5:3). This is the overarching requirement for elders; the rest of the qualifications elaborate on what it means to be blameless. Titus 1:6, 7 uses another Greek word to mean the same thing. the husband of one wife*. Lit. in Greek a “one-woman man.” This says nothing about marriage or divorce (for comments on that, see note on verse 4). The issue is not the elder’s marital status, but his moral and sexual purity. This qualification heads the list, because it is in this area that leaders are most prone to fail. Various interpretations of this qualification have been offered. Some see it as a prohibition against polygamy—an unnecessary injunction since polygamy was not common in Roman society and clearly forbidden by Scripture (Gen 2:24), the teaching of Jesus (Matt. 19:5, 6; Mark 10:6–9), and Paul (Eph. 5:31). A polygamist could not even have been a church member, let alone a church leader. Others see this requirement as barring those who remarried after the death of their wives. But, as already noted, the issue is sexual purity, not marital status. Further, the Bible encourages remarriage after widowhood (5:14; 1 Cor. 7:39). Some believe that Paul here excludes divorced men from church leadership. That again ignores the fact that this qualification does not deal with marital status. Nor does the Bible prohibit all remarriage after divorce (see notes on Matt. 5:31, 32; 19:9; 1 Cor. 7:15). Finally, some think that this requirement excludes single men from church leadership. But if that were Paul’s intent, he would have disqualified himself (1 Cor. 7:8). A “one-woman man” is one totally devoted to his wife, maintaining singular devotion, affection, and sexual purity in both thought and deed. To violate this is to forfeit blamelessness and no longer be “above reproach” (Titus 1:6, 7). Cf. Proverbs 6:32, 33. temperate*. The Greek word lit. means “wineless,” but is here used metaphorically to mean “alert,” “watchful,” “vigilant,” or “clear-headed.” Elders must be able to think clearly. sober-minded*. A sober-minded man is disciplined, knows how to properly order his priorities, and is serious about spiritual matters. good behavior*. The Greek word means “orderly.” Elders must not lead chaotic lives; if they cannot order their own lives, how can they bring order to the church?

Key Word

Bishop: 3:1–2—lit. “one who oversees.” In the New Testament, elders functioned as overseers of their congregations (Acts 20:17, 28). Elders were responsible to maintain the internal affairs of the church. To accomplish this task, several elders held positions of responsibility in any given congregation (see Acts 14:23; Titus 1:5–7). After New Testament times, the term elder was replaced with bishop, and it became customary for only one bishop to oversee each congregation.

hospitable. This is from a compound Greek word meaning “love of strangers” (see notes on Rom. 12:13; Heb. 13:2; cf. 1 Pet. 4:9). As with all spiritual virtues, elders must set the example; their lives and homes are to be open so all can see their spiritual character. able to teach. This word is used only here and in 2 Timothy 2:24. The only qualification relating to an elder’s giftedness and spiritual ability, and the only one that distinguishes elders from deacons. The preaching and teaching of God’s Word is the overseer/pastor/elder’s primary duty (4:6, 11, 13; 5:17; 2 Tim. 2:15, 24; Titus 2:1).

3:3 not given to wine. More than a mere prohibition against drunkenness (see note on Eph. 5:18). An elder must not have a reputation as a drinker; his judgment must never be clouded by alcohol (cf. Prov. 31:4, 5; 1 Cor. 6:12), his lifestyle must be radically different from the world and lead others to holiness, not sin (Rom. 14:21). See note on 5:23. not violent. Lit. “not a giver of blows.” Elders must react to difficult situations calmly and gently (2 Tim. 2:24, 25), and under no circumstances with physical violence. not greedy for money. The better Greek manuscripts omit this phrase. See note below on “not covetous.” The principle is included, however, in Titus 1:7; 1 Peter 5:2. gentle. Considerate, genial, gracious, quick to pardon failure, and one who does not hold a grudge. not quarrelsome. Peaceful, reluctant to fight; one who does not promote disunity or disharmony. not covetous. Elders must be motivated by love for God and His people, not money (cf. 1 Pet. 5:2). A leader who is in the ministry for money reveals a heart set on the world, not the things of God (Matt. 6:24; 1 John 2:15). Covetousness characterizes false teachers (Titus 1:11; 2 Pet. 2:1–3, 14; Jude 11), but not Paul’s ministry (Acts 20:33; 1 Cor. 9:1–16; 2 Cor. 11:9; 1 Thess. 2:5).

3:4 who rules his own house well. The elder’s home life, like his personal life, must be exemplary. He must be one who “rules” (presides over, has authority over) “his own house” (everything connected with his home, not merely his wife and children) “well” (intrinsically good; excellently). Issues of divorce should be related to this matter. A divorced man gives no evidence of a well-managed home, but rather that divorce shows weakness in his spiritual leadership. If there has been a biblically permitted divorce, it must have been so far in the past as to have been overcome by a long pattern of solid family leadership and the rearing of godly children (v. 4; Titus 1:6). submission. A military term referring to soldiers ranked under one in authority. An elder’s children must be believers (see note on “faithful” in Titus 1:6), well-behaved, and respectful.

3:5 take care of the church of God. An elder must first prove in the intimacy and exposure of his own home his ability to lead others to salvation and sanctification. There, he proves God has gifted him uniquely to spiritually set the example of virtue, to serve others, resolve conflicts, build unity, and maintain love. If he cannot do those essential things there, why would anyone assume he would be able to do them in the church?

3:6 not a novice, lest . . . puffed up with pride. Putting a new convert into a leadership role would tempt him to pride. Elders, therefore, are to be drawn from the spiritually mature men of the congregation (see notes on 5:22). fall into the same condemnation as the devil. Satan’s condemnation was due to pride over his position. It resulted in his fall from honor and authority (Is. 14:12–14; Ezek. 28:11–19; cf. Prov. 16:18). The same kind of fall and judgment could easily happen to a new and weak believer put in a position of spiritual leadership.

3:7 good testimony . . . outside. A leader in the church must have an unimpeachable reputation in the unbelieving community, even though people there may disagree with his moral and theological stands. How can he make a spiritual impact on those who do not respect him? Cf. Matthew 5:48; Philippians 2:15.

3:8 deacons. This is from a word group meaning “to serve.” Originally referring to menial tasks such as waiting on tables (see notes on Acts 6:1–4), deacon came to denote any service in the church. Deacons serve under the leadership of elders, helping them exercise oversight in the practical matters of church life. Scripture defines no official or specific responsibilities for deacons; they are to do whatever the elders assign them or whatever spiritual ministry is necessary. reverent. Serious in mind and character; not silly or flippant about important matters. not double-tongued. Deacons must not say one thing to some people and something else to others; their speech must not be hypocritical, but honest and consistent. not given to much wine. Not preoccupied with drink (see note on v. 3). not greedy. Like elders (see note on v. 3), deacons must not abuse their office to make money. Such a qualification was especially important in the early church, where deacons routinely handled money, distributing it to those in need.

3:9 the mystery. See notes on Matthew 13:11; 1 Corinthians 2:7; Ephesians 3:4, 5. Appearing frequently in Paul’s writings (cf. Rom. 11:25; 16:25; Eph. 1:9; 3:9; 6:19; Col. 2:2), the word mystery describes truth previously hidden, but now revealed, including Christ’s Incarnation (v. 16), Christ’s indwelling of believers (Col. 1:26, 27), the unity of Jews and Gentiles in the church (Eph. 3:4–6), the gospel (Col. 4:3), lawlessness (2 Thess. 2:7), and the Rapture of the church (1 Cor. 15:51, 52). a pure conscience. See note on 1:5.

3:10 first be tested. The present tense of this verb indicates an ongoing evaluation of deacons’ character and service by the church. being found blameless. See note on verse 2.

3:11 their wives. The Greek word rendered “wives” can also be translated “women.” Paul likely here refers not to deacons’ wives, but to the women who serve as deacons. The use of the word likewise as an introduction (cf. v. 8) suggests a third group in addition to elders and deacons. Also, since Paul gave no requirements for elders’ wives, there is no reason to assume these would be qualifications for deacons’ wives. reverent. See note on verse 8. not slanderers. Slanderers is the plural form of diabolos—a title frequently given to Satan (Matt. 4:5, 8, 11; 13:39; Luke 4:3, 5, 6, 13; 8:12; 1 Pet. 5:8; 1 John 3:8; Rev. 2:10; 12:9, 12; 20:2, 10). The women who serve must not be gossips. temperate. See note on verse 2. faithful in all things. Women servants in the church, like their male counterparts (see note on v. 2), must be absolutely trustworthy in all aspects of their lives and ministries.

3:12 the husbands of one wife. See note on verse 2. ruling . . . their own houses well. See note on verse 4.

last three. They reveal the heart of the church's mission (v. 15) and message (v. 16).

3:14, 15 I hope to come to you shortly. The Greek grammar suggests Paul's meaning is "These things I write, although I had hoped to come to you sooner." Delayed in Macedonia (see Introduction: Background and Setting), Paul sent Timothy this letter.

3:15 how you ought to conduct yourself. The second half of this verse expresses the theme of this epistle—setting things right in the church. house of God. This is better translated "household." Believers are members of God's household (Gal. 6:10; Eph. 2:19; Heb. 3:6; 1 Pet. 4:17) and must act accordingly. This is not a reference to any building, but to the people who make up the true church. church of the living God. The church is God's possession (Acts 20:28; Eph. 1:14; Titus 2:14; 1 Pet. 2:9). The title "the living God" has a rich OT heritage (Deut. 5:26; Josh. 3:10; 1 Sam. 17:26, 36; 2 Kin. 19:4, 16; Pss. 42:2; 84:2; Is. 37:4, 17; Jer. 10:10; 23:26; Dan. 6:20, 26; Hos. 1:10). pillar and ground. Paul's imagery may have referred to the magnificent temple of Diana (Artemis) in Ephesus, which was supported by 127 gold-plated, marble pillars. The word translated "ground" appears only here in the NT and denotes the foundation on which a building rests. The church upholds the truth of God's revealed Word. the truth. The content of the Christian faith recorded in Scripture and summed up in verse 16.

3:16 This verse contains part of an early church hymn, as its uniformity, rhythm, and parallelism indicate. Its six lines form a concise summary of the truth of the gospel. mystery of godliness. Mystery is that term used by Paul to indicate truth hidden in the OT age and revealed in the NT (see note on v. 9). Godliness refers to the truths of salvation and righteousness in Christ, which produce holiness in believers; namely, the manifestation of true and perfect righteousness in Jesus Christ. God was manifested. The better manuscripts read "He who" instead of "God." In either case, the reference is clearly to Christ, who manifested the invisible God to mankind (John 1:1–4; 14:9; Col. 1:15; Heb. 1:3; 2 Pet. 1:16–18). in the flesh. This is not sinful, fallen human nature here (cf. Rom. 7:18, 25; 8:8; Gal. 5:16, 17), but merely humanness (cf. John 1:14; Rom. 1:3; 8:3; 9:5; 1 Pet. 3:18; 1 John 4:2, 3; 2 John 7). Justified in the Spirit. Justified means "righteous," so that spirit may be written with lower case "s," indicating a declaration of Christ's sinless spiritual righteousness (John 8:46; 2 Cor. 5:21; Heb. 4:15; 5:9; 7:26; 1 Pet. 2:21, 22; 1 John 2:1), or it could refer to His vindication by the Holy Spirit (Rom. 1:4). Seen by angels. Both by fallen (see notes on Col. 2:15; 1 Pet. 3:18–20) and elect (Matt. 28:2; Luke 24:4–7; Acts 1:10, 11; Heb. 1:6–9) angels. Preached among the Gentiles. Or, nations. See Matthew 24:14; 26:13; 28:19, 20; Mark 13:10; Acts 1:8. Received up in glory. See Acts 1:9, 10; Philippians 2:8–11; Hebrews 1:3. Christ's Ascension and exaltation showed that the Father was pleased with Him and accepted His work fully.

IV. INSTRUCTIONS CONCERNING FALSE TEACHERS (4:1–16)

A. The Description of False Teachers (4:1–5)

4:1–5 Paul has already noted the presence of false teachers at Ephesus (1:3–7, 18–20). He has countered some of their erroneous teaching with the positive instruction of chapters 2 and 3. Now he deals directly with the false teachers themselves in this passage, focusing on their origin and content.

4:1 the Spirit expressly says. Paul repeats to Timothy the warning he had given many years earlier to the Ephesian elders (Acts 20:29, 30). The Holy Spirit through the Scriptures has repeatedly warned of the danger of apostasy (cf. Matt. 24:4–12; Acts 20:29, 30; 2 Thess. 2:3–12; Heb. 3:12; 5:11–6:8; 10:26–31; 2 Pet. 3:3; 1 John 2:18; Jude 18). in latter times. The period from the first coming of Christ until His return (Acts 2:16, 17; Heb. 1:1, 2; 9:26; 1 Pet. 1:20; 1 John 2:18). Apostasy will exist throughout that period, reaching a climax shortly before Christ returns (cf. Matt. 24:12). depart from the faith. Those who fall prey to the false teachers will abandon the Christian faith. The Greek word for depart is the source of the English word apostatize, and refers to someone moving away from an original position. These are professing or nominal Christians who associate with those who truly believe the gospel, but defect after believing lies and deception, thus revealing their true nature as unconverted. See notes on 1 John 2:19; Jude 24. deceiving spirits. Those demonic spirits, either directly or through false teachers, who have wandered away from the truth and lead others to do the same. The most defining word to describe the entire operation of Satan and his demons is deception (cf. John 8:44; 1 John 4:1–6). doctrines of demons. This is not teaching about demons, but false teaching that originates from them. To sit under such teaching is to hear lies from the demonic realm (Eph. 6:12; James 3:15; 2 John 7–11). The influence of demons will reach its peak during the Tribulation (2 Thess. 2:9; Rev. 9:2–11; 16:14; 20:2, 3, 8, 10). Satan and demons constantly work the deceptions that corrupt and pervert God's Word.

4:2 speaking lies in hypocrisy. Lit. "hypocritical lie-speakers." These are the human false teachers who propagate demon doctrine (cf. 1 John 4:1). conscience. See note on 1:5. seared. A medical term referring to cau-terization. False teachers can teach their hypocritical lies because their consciences have been desensitized (cf. Eph. 4:19), as if all the nerves that make them feel had been destroyed and turned into scar tissue by the burning of demonic deception.

4:3 forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from foods. A sample of the false teaching at Ephesus. Typically, it contained elements of truth, since Scripture commends both singleness (1 Cor. 7:25–35) and fasting (Matt. 6:16, 17; 9:14, 15). The deception came in making such human works a prerequisite for salvation—a distinguishing mark of all false religion. This ascetic teaching was probably influenced both by the Jewish sect known as the Essenes, and contemporary Greek thought (which viewed matter as evil and spirit as good). Paul addressed this asceticism in Colossians 2:21–23 (see note there). Neither celibacy nor any form of diet saves or sanctifies.

4:4 every creature of God is good. The false teachers' asceticism contradicted Scripture, which teaches that since God created both marriage and food (Gen. 1:28–31; 2:18–24; 9:3), they are intrinsically good (Gen. 1:31) and to be enjoyed with gratitude by believers. Obviously, food and marriage are essential for life and procreation.

4:5 sanctified. This means set apart or dedicated to God for holy use. The means for so doing are thankful prayer and an understanding that the Word of God has set aside the temporary Mosaic dietary restrictions (Mark 7:19; Acts 10:9–15; Rom. 14:1–12; Col. 2:16, 17). Contrast the unbeliever whose inner corruption and evil motives corrupt every good thing (Titus 1:15).

B. The Description of True Teachers (4:6–16)

4:6 nourished . . . words of faith . . . good doctrine. Continual feeding on the truths of Scripture is essential to the spiritual health of all Christians (2 Tim. 3:16, 17), but especially of spiritual leaders like Timothy. Only by reading the Word, studying it, meditating on it, and mastering its contents can a pastor fulfill his mandate (2 Tim. 2:15). Timothy had been doing so since childhood (2 Tim. 3:15), and Paul urged him to continue (cf. v. 16; 2 Tim. 3:14). Words of faith is a general reference to Scripture, God’s revealed truth. Good doctrine indicates the theology that Scripture teaches.

4:7 reject profane and old wives’ fables. In addition to being committed to God’s Word (see note on v. 6), believers must avoid all false teaching. Paul denounced such error as profane (worldly; the opposite of what is holy) fables (muthos from which the English word myths derives), fit only for old wives (a common epithet denoting something fit only for the uneducated and philosophically unsophisticated). See notes on 2 Timothy 2:14–18. exercise . . . toward godliness. Godliness (a proper attitude and response toward God; see note on 2:2) is the prerequisite from which all effective ministry flows. Exercise is an athletic term denoting the rigorous, self-sacrificing training an athlete undergoes. Spiritual self-discipline is the path to godly living (cf. 1 Cor. 9:24–27).

4:8 profits a little. Bodily exercise is limited both in extent and duration; it affects only the physical body during this earthly life. profitable for all things. In time and eternity.

4:9 faithful saying. See note on 1:15.

4:10 trust. Or hope. Believers are saved in hope, and live and serve in light of that hope of eternal life (Titus 1:2; 3:7; see note on Rom. 5:2). Working to the point of exhaustion and suffering rejection and persecution are acceptable because believers understand they are doing God’s work—which is the work of salvation. That makes it worth all of the sacrifices (Phil. 1:12–18, 27–30; 2:17; Col. 1:24, 25; 2 Tim. 1:6–12; 2:3, 4, 9, 10; 4:5–8). the Savior of all men, especially of those who believe. Paul is obviously not teaching universalism, that all people will be saved in the spiritual and eternal sense, since the rest of Scripture clearly teaches that God will not save everyone. Most will reject Him and spend eternity in hell (Matt. 25:41, 46; Rev. 20:11–15). Yet, the Greek word translated “especially” must mean that all people enjoy God’s salvation in some way like those who believe and enjoy His salvation. The simple explanation is that God is the Savior of all people, only in a temporal sense, while of believers in an eternal sense. Paul’s point is that while God graciously delivers believers from sin’s condemnation and penalty because He was their substitute (2 Cor. 5:21), all people experience some earthly benefits from the goodness of God. Those benefits are: (1) common grace—a term that describes God’s goodness shown to all mankind universally (Ps. 145:9) in restraining sin (Rom. 2:15) and judgment (Rom. 2:3–6), maintaining order in society through government (Rom. 13:1–5), enabling man to appreciate beauty and goodness (Ps. 50:2), and showering him with temporal blessings (Matt. 5:45; Acts 14:15–17; 17:25); (2) compassion—the broken-hearted love of pity which God shows to undeserving, unregenerate sinners (Ex. 34:6, 7; Ps. 86:5; Dan. 9:9; Matt. 23:37; Luke 19:41–44; cf. Is. 16:11–13; Jer. 48:35–37); (3) admonition to repent—God constantly warns sinners of their fate, demonstrating the heart of a compassionate Creator who has no pleasure in the death of the wicked (Ezek. 18:30–32; 33:11); and (4) the gospel invitation—salvation in Christ is indiscriminately offered to all (Matt. 11:28, 29; 22:2–14; John 6:35–40; Rev. 22:17; cf. John 5:39, 40). God is, by nature, a saving God. That is, He finds no pleasure in the death of sinners. His saving character is revealed even in how He deals with those who will never believe, but only in those four temporal ways. See notes on 2:6.

4:12 Let no one despise your youth. Greek culture placed great value on age and experience. Since Timothy was in his thirties, still young by the standards of that culture, he would have to earn respect by being a godly example. Because he had been with Paul since a young teenager, Timothy had much experience to mature him, so that looking down on him because he was under forty was inexcusable. be an example . . . in purity. Paul lists five areas (the better Greek manuscripts omit “in spirit”) in which Timothy was to be an example to the church: word (speech; cf. Matt. 12:34–37; Eph. 4:25, 29, 31); conduct (righteous living; cf. Titus 2:10; 1 Pet. 1:15; 2:12; 3:16); love (self-sacrificial service for others; cf. John 15:13); faith (not belief, but faithfulness or commitment; cf. 1 Cor. 4:2); purity (especially sexual purity; cf. 3:2). Timothy’s exemplary life in those areas would offset the disadvantage of his youth.

4:13 Till I come. See note on 3:14. give attention . . . to doctrine. These things were to be Timothy’s constant practice, his way of life. Reading refers to the custom of public reading of Scripture in the church’s worship service, followed by the exposition of the passage that had been read (cf. Neh. 8:1–8; Luke 4:16–27). Exhortation challenges those who hear the Word to apply it in their daily lives. It may involve rebuke, warning, encouragement, or comfort. Doctrine (teaching) refers to systematic instruction from the Word of God (cf. 3:2; Titus 1:9).

4:14 the gift. That grace given to Timothy and to all believers at salvation which consisted of a God-designed, Spirit-empowered spiritual ability for the use of ministry (see notes on Rom. 12:4–8; 1 Cor. 12:4–12; 1 Pet. 4:10, 11). Timothy’s gift (cf. 2 Tim. 1:6) was leadership with special emphasis on preaching (2 Tim. 4:2), and teaching (vv. 6, 11, 13; 6:2). by prophecy. Timothy’s gift was identified by a revelation from God (see note on 1:18) and apostolic confirmation (2 Tim. 1:6), probably when he joined Paul on the apostle’s second missionary journey (Acts 16:1–3). laying on of the hands of the eldership. See note on 5:22. This public affirmation of Timothy’s call to the ministry likely took place at the same time as the prophecy (cf. 2 Tim. 1:6). His call to the ministry was thus confirmed subjectively (by means of his spiritual gift), objectively (through the prophecy made about him), and collectively (by the affirmation of apostles and the church, represented by the elders).

4:15 progress. The word was used in military terms of an advancing force and in general terms of advancement in learning, understanding, or knowledge. Paul exhorted Timothy to let his progress toward Christlikeness be evident to all.

4:16 to yourself and to the doctrine. The priorities of a godly leader are summed up in his personal holiness and public teaching. All of Paul’s exhortations in verses 6–16 fit into

A Life of Discipleship

A young person seeking to live as a disciple of Jesus Christ can find essential guidelines in 1 Timothy 4:12–16, where Paul listed five areas (v. 12) in which Timothy was to be an example to the church:

1. In word or speech—see also Matthew 12:34–37; Ephesians 4:25, 29, 31.
2. In conduct or righteous living—see also Titus 2:10; 1 Peter 1:15; 2:12; 3:16.
3. In love or self-sacrificial service for others—see also John 15:13.
4. In faith or faithfulness or commitment, not belief—see also 1 Corinthians 4:2.
5. In purity and particularly sexual purity—see also 4:2.

The verses that follow hold several other building blocks to a life of discipleship:

1. Timothy was to be involved in the public reading, study, and application of Scripture. (v. 13).
2. Timothy was to diligently use his spiritual gift that others had confirmed and affirmed in a public way (v. 14).
3. Timothy was to be committed to a process of progress in his walk with Christ (v. 15).
4. Timothy was to “take heed” to pay careful attention to “yourself and to the doctrine” (v. 16).

one or the other of those two categories. you will save . . . yourself. Perseverance in believing the truth always accompanies genuine conversion (see note on Matt. 24:13; cf. John 8:31; Rom. 2:7; Phil. 2:12, 13; Col. 1:23). those who hear you. By careful attention to his own godly life and faithful preaching of the Word, Timothy would continue to be the human instrument God used to bring the gospel and to save some who heard him. Though salvation is God’s work, it is His pleasure to do it through human instruments.

V. INSTRUCTIONS CONCERNING PASTORAL RESPONSIBILITIES (5:1–6:2)

A. The Responsibility to Sinning Members (5:1, 2)

5:1 rebuke. Some translations add “sharply” to the word rebuke, which fills out the intensity of the Greek term. An older sinning believer is to be shown respect by not being addressed with harsh words (cf. 2 Tim. 2:24, 25). an older man. In this context, the Greek is indicating older men generally, not the office of elder. The younger Timothy was to confront sinning older men with deference and honor, which is clearly inferred from OT principles (cf. Lev. 19:32; Job 32:4, 6; Prov. 4:1–4; 16:31; 20:29). exhort. This Greek word, which is related to a title for the Holy Spirit (parakletos; cf. John 14:16, 26; 15:26; 16:7), refers to coming alongside someone to help. It may best be translated “strengthen.” We are to strengthen our fellow believers (cf. Gal. 6:1, 2) in the same way the Scripture (Rom. 15:4) and the Holy Spirit do.

B. The Responsibility to Widows (5:3–16)

5:3–16 This section supports the mandate of Scripture that women who have lost the support of their husbands are to be cared for (cf. Ex. 22:22–24; Deut. 27:19; Is. 1:17). God’s continual compassion for widows only reinforces this command (cf. Ps. 68:5; 146:9; Mark 12:41–44; Luke 7:11–17).

5:3 Honor. “To show respect or care,” “to support,” or “to treat graciously.” Although it includes meeting all kinds of needs, Paul had in mind here not only this broad definition, but primarily financial support (cf. Ex. 20:12; Matt. 15:1–6; 27:9). really widows. Not all widows are truly alone and without resources. Financial support from the church is mandatory only for widows who have no means to provide for their daily needs.

5:4 widow has children or grandchildren. Families, not the church, have the first responsibility for their own widows. repay their parents. Children and grandchildren are indebted to those who brought them into the world, reared them, and loved them. Fulfilling this responsibility is a mark of godly obedience (cf. Ex. 20:12).

5:5 left alone. See note on verse 3. The form of this Greek word denotes a permanent condition of being forsaken and left without resources. She is “really” a widow, since there is no family to support her. trusts in God. A continual state or settled attitude of hope in God (cf. 1 Kin. 17:8–16; Jer. 49:11). Since she has no one else, she pleads with God as her only hope.

5:6 dead while she lives. A widow who lives a worldly, immoral, ungodly life may be alive physically, but her lifestyle proves she is unregenerate and spiritually dead (cf. Eph. 2:1).

5:7 blameless. See notes on 3:2; Philippians 2:15. Blameless means “above reproach,” so that no one can fault their conduct.

5:8 if. This is better translated, “since.” Paul negatively restated the positive principle of verse 4, using the Greek construction that implies the condition is true, suggesting that there were numerous violations of that principle at Ephesus. Any believer who fails to obey this command is guilty of: (1) denying the principle of compassionate Christian love (cf. John 13:35; Rom. 5:5; 1 Thess. 4:9), and (2) being “worse than an unbeliever.” Most pagans naturally fulfill this duty, so believers who have God’s command and power to carry it out and do not, behave worse than pagans. Cf. 1 Corinthians 5:1, 2.

5:9 under sixty. In NT culture, sixty was considered retirement age. By that age, older women would have completed their child rearing and would have the time, maturity, and character to devote their lives in service to God and the church. They also would not be likely to remarry and become preoccupied with that commitment. be taken into the number. More clearly rendered, “be put on the list.” This was not a list of those widows eligible for specially recognized church support (all widows in the church who had no other means of support were; v. 3), but rather those eligible for specially recognized church ministry (cf. Titus 2:3–5). the wife of one man. Lit. “one-man woman” (cf. 3:2, 12). It does not exclude women who have been married more than once (cf. v. 14; 1 Cor. 7:39), but it refers to a woman totally devoted and faithful to her husband, a wife who had displayed purity of thought and action in her marriage.

5:10 has brought up children. This views the godly widow as a Christian mother who has nourished or reared children who have followed the Lord (see note on 2:15). washed the saints’ feet. The menial duty of slaves. It is used literally and metaphorically of widows who have humble servants’ hearts (see notes on John 13:5–17). every good work. Cf. Dorcas in Acts 9:36–39.

5:11 to grow wanton. Better translated “to feel the impulses of sensual desires”—an expression that includes all that is involved in the marriage relationship, including sexual passion. Paul saw the danger that younger widows might want to escape from their vows to remain single (see note on v. 12) and be devoted only to God’s service (cf. Num. 30:9); he knew the negative impact such feelings could have on young widows’ personal lives and ministry within the church. Such women were also marked out by false teachers as easy prey (2 Tim. 3:6, 7), causing them to leave the truth (v. 15).

5:12 cast off their first faith. In classical Greek, faith could also mean “pledge.” Taken that way here, it refers to a specific covenant young widows made when asking to be included on the widows' list. Likely, they promised to devote the rest of their lives in service to the church and the Lord. Though well-meaning at the time of their need and bereavement, they were surely to desire marriage again (see v. 11), and thus renege on their original pledge.

5:13 gossips. Such people speak nonsense, talk idly, make empty charges, or even accuse others with malicious words. This idleness and talk also made them suitable targets for the false teachers (1:6). busybodies. Lit. "one who moves around." The implication is that such people pry into things that do not concern them; they do not mind their own business.

5:14 bear children. The younger widows were still of childbearing age. Although they had lost their first husbands, there was still the potential privilege and blessing of remarrying and having children (see notes on 2:15; cf. Ps. 127:3, 5). manage the house. The Greek term denotes all the aspects of household administration, not merely the rearing of children. The home is the domain where a married woman fulfills herself in God's design. See notes on Titus 2:4, 5.

5:15 Some of the young widows had given up their commitment to serve Christ (see notes on vv. 11, 12), perhaps either by following false teachers and spreading their false doctrine or by marrying unbelievers and bringing disgrace upon the church. Satan. The devil, the believer's Adversary (see notes on Job 1:6–12; 2:1–7; Is. 14:12–15; Ezek. 28:12–15; Rev. 12:9).

5:16 woman. Paul restates the message of verses 4–8 with the addition that as the situation warrants, Christian women are included in this responsibility for support of widows.

C. The Responsibility to Elders (5:17–25)

5:17–25 The source of much of the Eph-esian church's difficulties was the inadequacy of the pastors. So Paul explains to Timothy how to restore proper pastoral oversight. He sets forth the church's obligations in regard to honoring, protecting, rebuking, and selecting elders.

5:17 elders. This identifies the bishop (3:1) or overseer, who is also called pastor (Eph. 4:11). See notes on 3:1–7; Titus 1:5–9. rule well. Elders are spiritual rulers in the church. Cf. 1 Thessalonians 5:12, 13; Hebrews 13:7, 17. double honor. Elders who serve with greater commitment, excellence, and effort should have greater acknowledgment from their congregations. This expression does not mean such men should receive exactly twice as much remuneration as others, but because they have earned such respect they should be paid more generously. especially. This means "chiefly" or "particularly." Implicit is the idea that some elders will work harder than others and be more prominent in ministry. labor. Lit. "work to the point of fatigue or exhaustion." The Greek word emphasizes the effort behind the work more than the amount of work. word and doctrine. Or better, "preaching and teaching" (see note on 4:13). The first emphasizes proclamation, along with exhortation and admonition, and calls for a heart response to the Lord. The second is an essential fortification against heresy and puts more stress on instruction.

5:18 For the Scripture says. A typical formula for introducing biblical references, in this instance both an OT (Deut. 25:4) and NT (Luke 10:7) reference. It is also very significant that this is a case of one NT writer (Paul) affirming the inspiration of another by referring to Luke's writing as "Scripture" (cf. 2 Pet. 3:15, 16), which shows the high view that the early church took of NT Scripture.

5:19 two or three witnesses. Serious accusations against elders must be investigated and confirmed by the same process as established in Matthew 18:15–20 (see notes there). This process for the whole church also applies to elders. This demand does not place elders beyond successful accusation, but protects them from frivolous, evil accusers by demanding the same process of confirmation of sin as for everyone in the church.

5:20 *Those who are sinning. Elders who continue in any kind of sin after the confrontation of two or three witnesses, especially any that violates the qualifications to serve (3:2–7). in the presence of all. The other elders and the congregation. The third step of confrontation, established in Matthew 18:17, is to tell the church, so that they can all confront the person and call him to repentance.

5:21 *charge . . . God . . . Lord. Cf. 6:13; see note on 2 Timothy 4:1. the elect angels. “Chosen angels,” or the unfallen angels, in contrast to Satan and his demons. This indicates that God’s sovereign purpose to choose those beings who would be part of His eternal kingdom included angels whom He chose to eternal glory. Christians are also called “elect” (Rom. 8:33; 11:7; Col. 3:12; 2 Tim. 2:10; Titus 1:1; 1 Pet. 1:2; 2 John 1, 13). without prejudice . . . partiality. All discipline of elders is to be done fairly, without prejudgment or personal preference, according to the standards of Scripture.

5:22 *Do not lay hands on . . . hastily. The ceremony that affirmed a man’s suitability for and acceptance into public ministry as an elder/pastor/overseer. This came from the OT practice of laying hands on a sacrificial animal to identify with it (Ex. 29:10, 15, 19; Lev. 4:15; cf. Num. 8:10; 27:18–23; Deut. 34:9; Matt. 19:15; Acts 8:17, 18; 9:17; Heb. 6:2). Hastily refers to proceeding with this ceremony without a thorough investigation and preparation period to be certain of the man’s qualifications (as in 3:1–7). nor share in other people’s sins. This refers to the sin of hasty ordination, which makes those responsible culpable for the man's sin of serving as an unqualified elder and, thus, misleading people. keep yourself pure. Some versions translate pure as "free from sin." Paul wanted Timothy, by not participating in the recognition of unqualified elders, to remain untainted by others' sins. The church desperately needed qualified spiritual leaders, but the selection had to be carefully executed.

5:23 No longer drink only water. Water in the ancient world was often polluted and carried many diseases. Therefore Paul urged Timothy not to risk illness, not even for the sake of a commitment to abstinence from wine. Apparently Timothy avoided wine, so as not to place himself in harm's way (see note on 3:3). use a little wine . . . infirmities. Paul wanted Timothy to use wine which, because of fermentation, acted as a disinfectant to protect his health problems due to the harmful effects of impure water. With this advice, however, Paul was not advocating that Timothy lower the high standard of behavior for leaders (cf. Num. 6:1–4; Prov. 31:4, 5).

5:24 sins are clearly evident. The sins of some men are manifest for all to see, thus obviously disqualifying them for service as elders. preceding them to judgment. The known sins of the unqualified announce those men's guilt and unfitness before all. Judgment refers to the church's process for determining men's suitability to serve as elders. follow later. The sins of other candidates for elder will come to light in time, perhaps even during the scrutiny of the evaluation process.

5:25 The same is true of good works. Some are evident; others come to light later. Time and truth go hand in hand. The whole emphasis in this instruction regarding choosing elders, according to the qualifications of 3:1–7, is to be patient, fair, impartial, and pure (vv. 21–25). Such an approach will yield the right choices.

D. The Responsibility to Slaves (6:1, 2)

6:1, 2 The Ephesian believers may have been struggling to maintain a biblical work ethic in the world of slavery, so these verses form Paul's instruction on that subject. Essentially, first-century slaves resembled the indentured servants of the American colonial period. In many cases, slaves were better off than day laborers, since much of their food, clothing, and shelter was provided. The system of slavery served as the economic structure in the Roman world, and the master-slave relationship closely parallels the twentieth-century employer-employee relationship. For more on slaves, see Introduction to Philemon: Background and Setting.

6:1 bondservants. This can be translated "slaves." They are people who are in submission to others. It carries no negative connotation and is often positive when used in connection with the Lord serving the Father (Phil. 2:7), and believers serving God (1 Pet. 2:16), the Lord (Rom. 1:1; Gal. 1:10; 2 Tim. 2:24; James 1:1), non-Christians (1 Cor. 9:19), and other believers (Gal. 5:13). under the yoke. A colloquial expression describing submissive service under another's authority, not necessarily describing an abusive relationship (cf. Matt. 11:28–30). masters. The Greek word for master, while giving us the English word despot, does not carry a negative connotation. Instead, it refers to one with absolute and unrestricted authority. all honor. This translates into diligent and faithful labor for one's employer. See notes on Ephesians 6:5–9; Colossians 3:22–25. His doctrine. The revelation of God summed up in the gospel. How a believer acts while under the authority of another affects how people view the message of salvation Christians proclaim (see notes on Titus 2:5–14). Displaying a proper attitude of submission and respect, and performing quality work, help make the gospel message believable (Matt. 5:48).

6:2 believing masters. The tendency might be to assume one's equality in Christ with a Christian master, and disdain the authority related to work roles. On the contrary, working for a Christian should produce more loyal and diligent service out of love for the brethren. exhort. Lit. "to call to one's side." The particular emphasis here is on a strong urging, directing, and insisting on following the principles for correct behavior in the workplace.

VI. INSTRUCTIONS CONCERNING THE MAN OF GOD (6:3–21)

A. The Peril of False Teaching (6:3–5)

6:3 Paul identifies three characteristics of false teachers: (1) they "teach otherwise"—a different doctrine, or any teaching that contradicts God's revelation in Scripture (see notes on Gal. 1:6–9); (2) they do "not consent to wholesome words"—they do not agree with sound, healthy teaching, specifically the teaching contained in Scripture (2 Pet. 3:16); and (3) they reject "doctrine which accords with godliness"—teaching not based on Scripture will always result in an unholy life. Instead of godliness, false teachers will be marked by sin (see notes on 2 Pet. 2:10–22; cf. Jude 4, 8–16).

6:4 disputes and arguments over words. Disputes refers to idle speculation; arguments over words lit. means "word battles." Because proud, ignorant false teachers do not understand divine truth (2 Cor. 2:14), they obsess over terminology and attack the reliability and authority of Scripture. Every kind of strife is mentioned to indicate that false teachers produce nothing of benefit out of their fleshly, corrupt, and empty minds (v. 5).

6:5 destitute of the truth. False teachers are in a state of apostasy; that is, although they once knew and seemed to embrace the truth, they turned to openly reject it. The Greek word for destitute means "to steal," "to rob," or "to deprive," and its form here indicates that someone or something was pulled away from contact with the truth (it does not mean they were ever saved; see note on 1:19; cf. 2 Tim. 2:18; 3:7, 8; Heb. 6:4–6; 2 Pet. 2:1, 4–9). a means of gain. Almost always behind all the efforts of the hypocritical, lying (4:2) false teachers is the driving motivation of monetary gain (cf. Acts 8:18–23; 2 Pet. 2:15). From such withdraw yourself. This phrase does not appear in the better manuscripts, although the idea expressed is self-evident.

B. The Peril of Loving Money (6:6–10)

6:6 contentment. This Greek word means "self-sufficiency," and was used by Stoic philosophers to describe a person who was unflappable and unmoved by external circumstances. Christians are to be satisfied and sufficient, and not to seek for more than what God has already given them. He is the source of true contentment (2 Cor. 3:5; 9:8; Phil. 4:11–13, 19).

6:8 having food and clothing . . . be content. The basic necessities of life are what ought to make Christians content. Paul does not condemn having possessions, as long as God graciously provides them (v. 17). He does, however, condemn a self-indulgent desire for money, which results from discontentment. See note on Matthew 6:33.

6:9 desire to be rich fall into temptation. Desire refers to a settled wish born of reason, and clearly describes those guilty of greed. The form of the Greek verb for fall indicates that those who have such a desire are continually falling into temptation. Greedy people are compulsive; they are continually trapped in sins by their consuming desire to acquire more. destruction and perdition. Such greed may lead these people to suffer the tragic end of destruction and hell. These terms refer to the eternal punishment of the wicked.

6:10 love of money. Lit. “affection for silver.” In the context, this sin applies to false teachers specifically, but the principle is true universally. Money itself is not evil since it is a gift from God (Deut. 8:18); Paul condemns only the love of it (cf. Matt. 6:24) which is so characteristic of false teachers (see notes on 1 Pet. 5:2; 2 Pet. 2:1–3, 15). strayed from the faith. From the body of Christian truth. Gold has replaced God for these apostates, who have turned away from pursuing the things of God in favor of money.

C. The Proper Character and Motivation of a Man of God (6:11–16)

6:11 O man of God. Cf. 2 Timothy 3:17. This is a term used in the NT only for Timothy; as a technical term, it is used about seventy times in the OT, always to refer to a man who officially spoke for God (see note on Deut. 33:1). This, along with 1:2; 2:1, indicates that the letter is primarily directed to Timothy, exhorting him to be faithful and strong in light of persecution and difficulty—and particularly with Paul’s death near (see Introduction to 2 Timothy: Background and Setting). The man of God is known by what he: (1) flees from (v. 11); (2) follows after (v. 11); (3) fights for (v. 12); and (4) is faithful to (vv. 13, 14). The key to his success in all these endeavors is the perfection produced in him by the Scripture (2 Tim. 3:16, 17). these things. Love of money and all that goes with it (vv. 6–10), along with the other proud obsessions of false teachers (vv. 3–5). righteousness, godliness. Righteousness means to do what is right, in relation to both God and man, and it emphasizes outward behavior. Godliness (see note on 2:2) refers to one’s reverence for God, and could be translated “Godlikeness.”

6:12 Fight the good fight of faith. The Greek word for fight gives us the English word agonize, and was used in both military and athletic endeavors to describe the concentration, discipline, and extreme effort needed to win. The “good fight of faith” is the spiritual conflict with Satan’s kingdom of darkness in which all men of God are necessarily involved. See notes on 2 Corinthians 10:3–5; 2 Timothy 4:2. lay hold on eternal life. Paul is here admonishing Timothy to “get a grip” on the reality of the matters associated with eternal life, so that he would live and minister with a heavenly and eternal perspective (cf. Phil. 3:20; Col. 3:2). to which you were also called. Refers to God’s effectual, sovereign call of Timothy to salvation (see note on Rom. 1:7). good confession. Timothy’s public confession of faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, which likely occurred at his baptism and again when he was ordained to the ministry (4:14; 2 Tim. 1:6).

6:13 urge . . . God . . . Christ. Cf. 5:21; see note on 2 Timothy 4:1. the good confession before Pontius Pilate. Knowing that such a confession would cost Him His life, Jesus nevertheless confessed that He was truly the King and Messiah (John 18:33–37). He rarely evaded danger (cf. John 7:1); He boldly and trustfully committed Himself to God who raises the dead (cf. Col. 2:12).

6:14 this commandment. The entire revealed Word of God, which Paul charged Timothy to preach (2 Tim. 4:2). Paul also repeatedly encouraged Timothy to guard it (v. 20; 1:18, 19; 4:6, 16; 2 Tim. 1:13, 14; 2:15–18). appearing. When the Lord returns to earth in glory (cf. 2 Tim. 4:1, 8; Titus 2:13) to judge and to establish His kingdom (Matt. 24:27, 29, 30; 25:31). Because Christ’s return is imminent, that ought to be motivation enough for the man of God to remain faithful to his calling until he dies or the Lord returns (cf. Acts 1:8–11; 1 Cor. 4:5; Rev. 22:12).

6:15 in His own time. The time, known only to Him, that God established in eternity past for Christ to return (Mark 13:32; Acts 1:7). Potentate. This word comes from a Greek word group that basically means “power,” but here it is best translated “Sovereign.” God is absolutely sovereign and omnipotently rules everything everywhere. King of kings and Lord of lords. A title used of Christ (Rev. 17:14; 19:16) is here used of God the Father. Paul probably used this title for God to confront the cult of emperor worship, intending to communicate that only God is sovereign and worthy of worship.

6:16 whom no man has seen or can see. God in spirit is invisible (cf. 1:17; Job 23:8, 9; John 1:18; 5:37; Col. 1:15) and, therefore, unapproachable in the sense that sinful man has never seen nor can he ever see His full glory (cf. Ex. 33:20; Is. 6:1–5).

D. The Proper Handling of Treasure (6:17–19)

6:17–19 Paul counsels Timothy what to teach those who are rich in material possessions, those who have more than the mere essentials of food, clothing, and shelter. Paul does not condemn such people, neither does he command them to get rid of their wealth. He does call them to be good stewards of their God-given resources (cf. Deut. 8:18; 1 Sam. 2:7; 1 Chr. 29:12).

6:17 haughty. This words mean, “To have an exalted opinion of oneself.” Those who have an abundance are constantly tempted to look down on others and act superior. Riches and pride often go together. The wealthier a person is, the more he is tempted to be proud (Prov. 18:23; 28:11; James 2:1–4). uncertain riches . . . gives us richly. Those who have much tend to trust in their wealth (cf. Prov. 23:4, 5). But God provides far more security

Key Word

Idle Babblings: 6:20—lit. “empty words.” Paul uses this term to express a total void of spiritual meaning. In other words, human achievement amounts to nothing if it does not come from the will of God. In Paul’s time, Judaizers were trying to entice believers by using clever-sounding philosophies. Paul described their hollow talk as idle babblings (see 6:20; Eph. 5:6; Col. 2:8; 2 Tim. 2:16). On the other hand, the teaching of Paul and the apostles was not futile; it would last throughout eternity because it originated in God’s unchanging will (Matt. 5:18; 1 Cor. 15:12–15).

than any earthly investment can ever give (Eccl. 5:18–20; Matt. 6:19–21).

6:18 ready to give. The Greek word means “liberal,” or “bountiful.” Those believers who have money must use it in meeting the needs of others, unselfishly and generously (see notes on Acts 4:32–37; 2 Cor. 8:1–4).

6:19 storing up . . . a good foundation. Storing up can be translated “amassing a treasure,” while foundation can refer to a fund. The idea is that the rich in this world should not be concerned with receiving a return on their earthly investment. Those who make eternal investments will be content to receive their dividends in heaven. See notes on Luke 16:1–13. lay hold on eternal life. See note on verse 12.

E. The Proper Handling of Truth (6:20, 21)

6:20, 21 The church’s main responsibility is to guard and proclaim the truths of Scripture, so Paul here instructs Timothy on how to guard and protect the Word of God.

6:20 what was committed to your trust. This translates one Greek word, which means “deposit.” The deposit Timothy was to guard is the truth—the divine revelation that God committed to his care. Every Christian, especially if he is in ministry, has that sacred trust to guard the revelation of God (cf. 1 Cor. 4:1; 1 Thess. 2:3, 4). what is falsely called knowledge. False doctrine—anything claiming to be the truth that is in fact a lie. False teachers typically claim to have the superior knowledge (as in Gnosticism). They claim to know the transcendent secrets, but actually are ignorant and infantile in their understanding (see notes on Col. 2:8).

6:21 Grace be with you. Paul’s closing salutation is plural, i.e., “you all”—it goes beyond Timothy to the entire congregation at Ephesus. All believers require the grace of God to preserve the truth and pass it on to the next generation.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL TO TIMOTHY

Title

This epistle is the second of two inspired letters Paul the apostle wrote to his son in the faith, Timothy (1:2; 2:1). For biographical information on Timothy, see Introduction to 1 Timothy: Title. It is titled, as are the other personal letters of Paul to individuals (1 Timothy, Titus, and Philemon), with the name of the addressee (1:2).

Author and Date

The issue of Paul's authorship of the Pastoral Epistles is discussed in the Introduction to 1 Timothy: Author and Date. Paul wrote 2 Timothy, the last of his inspired letters, shortly before his martyrdom (c. A.D. 67).

Background and Setting

Paul was released from his first Roman imprisonment for a short period of ministry, during which he wrote 1 Timothy and Titus. Second Timothy, however, finds Paul once again in a Roman prison (1:16; 2:9), apparently rearrested as part of Nero's persecution of Christians. Unlike Paul's confident hope of release during his first imprisonment (Phil. 1:19, 25, 26; 2:24; Philem. 22), this time he had no such hopes (4:6–8). In his first imprisonment in Rome (c. A.D. 60–62), before Nero had begun the persecution of Christians (A.D. 64), he was only under house arrest and had opportunity for much interaction with people and ministry (Acts 28:16–31). At this time, five or six years later (c. A.D. 66–67), however, he was in a cold cell (4:13), in chains (2:9), and with no hope of deliverance (4:6).

Abandoned by virtually all of those close to him for fear of persecution (cf. 1:15; 4:9–12, 16) and facing imminent execution, Paul wrote to Timothy, urging him to hasten to Rome for one last visit with the apostle (4:9, 21). Whether Timothy made it to Rome before Paul's execution is not known. According to tradition, Paul was not released from this second Roman imprisonment, but suffered the martyrdom he had foreseen (4:6).

In this letter, Paul, aware the end was near, passed the non-apostolic mantle of ministry to Timothy (cf. 2:2) and exhorted him to continue faithful in his duties (1:6), hold on to sound doctrine (1:13, 14), avoid error (2:15–18), accept persecution for the gospel (2:3, 4; 3:10–12), put his confidence in the Scripture, and preach it relentlessly (3:15–4:5).

Historical and Theological Themes

It seems that Paul may have had reason to fear that Timothy was in danger of weakening spiritually. This would have been a grave concern for Paul since Timothy needed to carry on Paul's work (cf. 2:2). While there are no historical indications elsewhere in the NT as to why Paul was so concerned, there is evidence in the epistle itself from what he wrote. This concern is evident, for example, in Paul's exhortation to "stir up" his gift (1:6), to replace fear with power, love, and a sound mind (1:7), to not be ashamed of Paul and the Lord, but willingly suffer for the gospel (1:8), and to hold on to the truth (1:13, 14).

Summing up the potential problem of Timothy, who might be weakening under the pressure of the church and the persecution of the world, Paul calls him to (1) generally “be strong” (2:1), the key exhortation of the first part of the letter, and to (2) continue to “preach the word” (4:2), the main admonition of the last part. These final words to Timothy include few commendations but many admonitions, including about twenty-five imperatives.

Since Timothy was well-versed in Paul’s theology, the apostle did not instruct him further doctrinally. He did, however, allude to several important doctrines, including salvation by God’s sovereign grace (1:9, 10; 2:10), the person of Christ (2:8; 4:1, 8), and perseverance (2:11–13); plus, Paul wrote the crucial text of the NT on the inspiration of Scripture (3:16, 17).

Interpretive Challenges

There are no major challenges in this letter involving theological issues. There is limited data regarding several individuals named in the epistle; e.g., Phygellus and Hermogenes (1:15), Onesiphorus (1:16; cf. 4:19), Hy-menaeus and Philetus (2:17, 18), Jannes and Jambres (3:8), and Alexander (4:14).

I. GREETING AND THANKSGIVING (1:1–5)

1:1, 2 Paul reminded Timothy that, despite their intimate spiritual relationship, the apostle wrote to him with spiritual authority given him by God. This established the necessity that not only Timothy, but also all others comply with the inspired mandates of the epistle.

1:1 apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God. See note on 1 Timothy 1:1. Paul's call was according to God's sovereign plan and purpose (cf. 1 Cor. 1:1; 2 Cor. 1:1; Eph. 1:1; Col. 1:1). promise of life . . . in Christ Jesus. The gospel promises that those who are spiritually dead, but by faith embrace the gospel's message, will be united to Christ and find eternal life in Him (John 3:16; 10:10; 14:6; Col. 3:4).

1:2 Timothy, a beloved son. See note on 1 Timothy 1:2. Grace . . . our Lord. See note on 1 Timothy 1:2. More than a standard greeting by Paul, this expressed his genuine desire for God's best in Timothy's life.

1:3 I thank God . . . in my prayers. See notes on Philippians 1:3, 4. pure conscience. See note on 1 Timothy 1:5.

1:4 greatly desiring to see you. Because of Paul's affection for Timothy and the urgency of the hour in Paul's life, as he faced death, Paul had an intense yearning to see Timothy again (cf. 4:9, 13, 21). mindful of your tears. Paul perhaps remembered this occurring at their latest parting, which occurred after a short visit to Ephesus, following the writing of 1 Timothy, and prior to Paul's arrest at Troas (see note on 4:13) and his second imprisonment in Rome. Years before, Paul had a similar parting with the elders at Ephesus (Acts 20:36–38).

1:5 Lois . . . Eunice. Mention of their names suggests that Paul knew them personally, perhaps because he (with Barnabas) led them to faith in Christ during his first missionary journey (cf. Acts 13:13–14:21). The women were true OT Jewish believers, who understood the Scripture well enough to prepare themselves and Timothy (3:15) to immediately accept Jesus as Messiah when they first heard the gospel from Paul.

II. THE PERSEVERANCE OF A MAN OF GOD (1:6–18)

A. The Exhortation (1:6–11)

1:6 stir up the gift of God. This seems to indicate Paul was unsatisfied with Timothy's level of current faithfulness. Stir up means literally "to keep the fire alive," and gift refers to the believer's spiritual gift (see notes on Rom. 12:4–8; 1 Cor. 12:7–11; regarding Timothy's spiritual gift, see notes on 4:2–6; 1 Tim. 4:14). Paul reminds Timothy that as a steward of his God-given gift for preaching, teaching, and evangelizing, he could not let it fall into disuse (cf. 4:2–5). laying on of my hands. See notes on 1 Timothy 4:14; 5:22; cf. 6:12. Paul might have done this at the time of Timothy's conversion, in which case it would have corresponded to when Timothy received his spiritual gift. The expression may also refer to an extraordinary spiritual endowment, which was received or enhanced at some point after his conversion.

1:7 a spirit of fear. The Greek word, which can also be translated "timidity," denotes a cowardly, shameful fear caused by a weak, selfish character. The threat of Roman persecution, which was escalating under Nero, the hostility of those in the Ephesian church who resented Timothy's leadership, and the assaults of false teachers with their sophisticated systems of deceptions may have been overwhelming Timothy. But if he was fearful, it didn't come from God. power. Positively, God has already given believers all the spiritual resources they need for every trial and threat (cf. Matt. 10:19, 20). Divine power—effective, productive spiritual energy—belongs to believers (Eph. 1:18–20; 3:20; cf. Zech. 4:6). love. See note on 1 Timothy 1:5. This kind of love centers on pleasing God and seeking others' welfare before one's own (cf. Rom. 14:8; Gal. 5:22, 25; Eph. 3:19; 1 Pet. 1:22; 1 John 4:18). sound mind. This refers to a disciplined, self-controlled, and properly prioritized mind. This is the opposite of fear and cowardice that causes disorder and confusion. Focusing on the sovereign nature and perfect purposes of our eternal God allows believers to control their lives with godly wisdom and confidence in every situation (cf. Rom. 12:3; 1 Tim. 3:2; Titus 1:8; 2:2).

1:8 the testimony of our Lord. The gospel message concerning Jesus Christ. Paul did not want Timothy to be “ashamed” to name the name of Christ because he was afraid of the potential persecution (cf. vv. 12, 16). me His prisoner. See Introduction: Author and Date; see notes on Ephesians 3:1; Philippians 1:12–14. Being linked to Paul, who was a prisoner because of his preaching of the gospel, could have put Timothy's life and freedom in jeopardy (cf. Heb. 13:23).

1:9 with a holy calling. As always in the NT epistles, this calling is not a general invitation to sinners to believe the gospel and be saved (as in Matt. 20:16), but refers to God's effectual call of the elect to salvation (see note on Rom. 1:7). This calling results in holiness, imputed (justification) and imparted (sanctification), and finally completed (glorification). not . . . works, but . . . grace. This truth is the foundation of the gospel. Salvation is by grace through faith, apart from works (see notes on Rom. 3:20–25; Gal. 3:10, 11; Eph. 2:8, 10; Phil. 3:8, 9). Grace is also the basis for God's sustaining work in believers (cf. Phil. 1:6; Jude 24, 25). according to His own purpose. God's sovereign plan of election (see notes on 2:10; John 6:37–40, 44; Acts 13:48; Rom. 8:29; 9:6–23; Eph. 1:4; 3:11; 2 Thess. 2:13, 14; Titus 1:1, 2; 1 Pet. 1:2). in Christ Jesus. His sacrifice made God's salvation plan possible, because He became the substitute sacrifice for the sins of God's people (see notes on 2 Cor. 5:21). before time began. The same Greek phrase appears in Titus 1:2. The destiny of God's chosen was determined and sealed from eternity past (John 17:24; cf. Eph. 1:4, 5; Phil. 1:29; 1 Pet. 1:2).

1:10 appearing. Epiphany is the English equivalent of this Greek word, most often used of Christ's Second Coming (4:18; 1 Tim. 6:14; Titus 2:13), but here of His first coming. abolished death . . . immortality to light. Abolished means “rendered inoperative.” Physical death still exists, but it is no longer a threat or an enemy for Christians (1 Cor. 15:54, 55; Heb. 2:14). It was not until the Incarnation and the gospel that God chose to make known fully the truth of immortality and eternal life, a reality only partially understood by OT believers (cf. Job 19:26).

1:11 preacher . . . teacher. See notes on 1 Timothy 2:7.

B. The Examples (1:12–18)

1:12 I also suffer. Cf. verse 8; see notes on 2 Corinthians 4:8–18; 6:4–10; 11:23–28; Galatians 6:17; Philippians 3:10. I am not ashamed. See notes on verse 8; Romans 1:16; 1 Peter 4:16. Paul had no fear of persecution and death from preaching the gospel in a hostile setting, because he was so confident God had sealed his future glory and blessing. know whom I have believed. Know describes the certainty of Paul's intimate, saving knowledge—the object of which was God Himself. The form of the Greek verb translated “I have believed” refers to something that began in the past and has continuing results (see note on Rom. 1:16). This knowing is equal to “the knowledge of the truth” (3:7;

1 Tim. 2:4). He is able to keep. See notes on Jude 24, 25. what I have committed. Paul's life in time and eternity had been given to his Lord. He lived with unwavering confidence and boldness because of the revealed truth about God's power and faithfulness, and his own experience of an unbreakable relationship to the Lord (Rom. 8:31–39). that Day. Cf. verse 18; 4:8; see notes on Philippians 1:6. This is also called the “Day of Christ” (see note on Phil. 1:10), when believers will stand before the judgment seat and be rewarded (see notes on 1 Cor. 3:13; 2 Cor. 5:10; 1 Pet. 1:5).

1:13 sound words. Cf. 1 Timothy 4:6; 6:3. The Scripture and the doctrine it teaches (see notes on 3:15–17). from me. Paul had been the source of this divine revelation (cf. 2:2; 3:10, 14; Phil. 4:9; see notes on Eph. 3:1–5). faith and love . . . in Christ Jesus. Faith is confidence that God's Word is true, and love is kindness and compassion in teaching that truth (cf. Eph. 4:15).

1:14 That good thing . . . committed to you. The treasure of the good news of salvation revealed in the Scripture (see note on 1 Tim. 6:20).

1:15 Asia. A Roman province that is part of modern Turkey; this is not a reference to the entire region of Asia Minor. Phygellus and Hermogenes. Nothing else is known about these two men, who apparently had shown promise as leaders, had been close to Paul, and were well known among the Asian churches, but deserted Paul under the pressure of persecution.

1:16 Onesiphorus. One of Paul's loyal coworkers who had not deserted Paul, but befriended him in prison and was not ashamed or afraid to visit the apostle there regularly and minister to his needs. Since Paul asks Timothy to greet those in his house (4:19), the family obviously lived in or near Ephesus.

1:17 when he arrived in Rome. For notes on Rome, see Introduction to Romans: Background and Setting. Onesiphorus was perhaps on a business trip, and the text implies that his search involved time, effort, and possibly even danger.

1:18 that Day. See note on verse 12. Ephesus. See Introduction to Ephesians: Background and Setting. Onesiphorus's faithfulness began here many years earlier, when Paul ministered on his third or fourth missionary journey.

III. THE PATTERNS OF A MAN OF GOD (2:1–26)

A. Paul (2:1, 2)

2:1 my son. Paul had led Timothy to Christ during his first missionary journey (cf. 1 Cor. 4:17; 1 Tim. 1:2, 18). be strong. Here is the main admonition in the first part of the letter. Paul is calling for Timothy to

A Comparison of Paul's Two Roman Imprisonments

First Imprisonment

Acts 28—Wrote the Prison Epistles
Accused by Jews of heresy and sedition

Local sporadic persecutions (A.D. 60–63)
Decent living conditions in a rented house (Acts 28:30,31)
Many friends visited him
Many opportunities for Christian witness were available
Was optimistic for release and freedom (Phil. 1:24–26)

Second Imprisonment

2 Timothy
Persecuted by Rome and arrested as a criminal against the Empire
Neronian persecution (A.D. 64–68)
Poor conditions, in a cold, dark dungeon
Virtually alone (only Luke with him)
Opportunities for witness were restricted Anticipated his execution (2 Tim. 4:6) overcome his apparent drift toward weakness and renew his commitment to his ministry (see Introduction: Historical and Theological Themes).

2:2 heard from me. See notes on 1:13; cf. 3:14. During Timothy's many years of close association with Paul (see Introduction to 1 Timothy: Author and Date), he had heard divine truth which God had revealed through the apostle. among many witnesses. These included Silas, Barnabas, Luke, and many others in the churches who could attest to the divine authenticity of Paul's teaching—a needed reminder to Timothy in light of the many defections at Ephesus (cf. 1:15). faithful men who will be able to teach others. Timothy was to take the divine revelation he had learned from Paul and teach it to other faithful men—men with proven spiritual character and giftedness, who would in turn pass on those truths to another generation. From Paul to Timothy to faithful men to others encompasses four generations of godly leaders. That process of spiritual reproduction, which began in the early church, is to continue until the Lord returns.

B. A Soldier (2:3, 4)

2:3 a good soldier. The metaphor of the Christian life as warfare (against the evil world system, the believer's sinful human nature, and Satan) is a familiar one in the NT (cf. 2 Cor. 10:3-5; Eph. 6:10-20; 1 Thess. 4:8; 1 Tim. 1:18; 4:7; 6:12). Here Paul is dealing with the conflict against the hostile world and the persecution (cf. v. 9; 1:8; 3:11, 12; 4:7).

2:4 entangles himself. Just as a soldier called to duty is severed from the normal affairs of civilian life, so also must the good soldier of Jesus Christ refuse to allow the things of the world to distract him (cf. James 4:4; 1 John 2:15-17).

C. An Athlete (2:5)

2:5 competes in athletics. The Greek verb (athleo) expresses the effort and determination needed to compete successfully in an athletic event (cf. 1 Cor. 9:24). This is a useful picture of spiritual effort and untiring pursuit of the victory to those familiar with events such as the Olympic games and the Isthmian games (held in Corinth). crowned . . . rules. All an athlete's hard work and discipline will be wasted if he or she fails to compete according to the rules. This is a call to obey the Word of God in the pursuit of spiritual victory.

D. A Farmer (2:6, 7)

2:6 *The hardworking farmer. Hardworking is from a Greek verb meaning “to labor to the point of exhaustion.” Ancient farmers worked long hours of backbreaking labor under all kinds of conditions, with the hope that their physical effort would be rewarded by a good harvest. Paul is urging Timothy not to be lazy or indolent, but to labor intensely (cf. Col. 1:28, 29) with a view to the harvest. Cf. 1 Corinthians 3:5–8.

2:7 *Consider. The Greek word denotes clear perception, full understanding, and careful consideration. The form of the verb suggests a strong admonition by Paul, not mere advice, to give deep thought to what he was writing.

E. Jesus (2:8–13)

2:8 *Remember . . . Jesus Christ. The supreme model of a faithful teacher (v. 2), soldier (vv. 3, 4), athlete (v. 5), and farmer (v. 6). Timothy was to follow His example in teaching, suffering, pursuing the prize, and planting the seeds of truth for a spiritual harvest. of the seed of David. See notes on Romans 1:3; Revelation 22:16. As David’s descendant, Jesus is the rightful heir to his throne (Luke 1:32, 33). The Lord’s humanity is emphasized. raised from the dead. The Resurrection of Christ is the central truth of the Christian faith (1 Cor. 15:3, 4, 17, 19). By it, God affirmed the perfect redemptive work of Jesus Christ (see note on Rom. 1:4).

2:9 *I suffer . . . but the word . . . is not chained. Paul contrasts his imprisonment for the sake of the gospel to the unfettered power of the Word of God.

2:10 *for the sake of the elect. Those of the elect, having been chosen for salvation from before the world began (see note on 1:9), who had not yet come to faith in Jesus Christ (see notes on Acts 18:10; Titus 1:1). the salvation which is in Christ Jesus. There is salvation in no one else (Acts 4:12; cf. Rom. 8:29; Eph. 1:4, 5). The gospel must be proclaimed (Matt. 28:19; Acts 1:8) because the elect are not saved apart from faith in Christ (Rom. 10:14). eternal glory. The ultimate outcome of salvation (see notes on Rom. 5:2; 8:17).

2:11 *faithful saying. The saying is in verses 11–13. See note on 1 Timothy 1:15. died with Him . . . live with Him. This refers to believers’ spiritual participation in Christ’s death and Resurrection (Rom. 6:4–8), including also the possibility of suffering martyrdom for the sake of Christ, as the context would indicate.

2:12 *endure. Believers who persevere give evidence of the genuineness of their faith (see note on Matt. 24:13; cf. Matt. 10:22; John 8:31; Rom. 2:7; Col. 1:23). reign with Him. In His future eternal kingdom (Rev. 1:6; 5:10; 20:4, 6). If we deny Him, He also will deny us. This speaks of a final, permanent denial, such as that of an apostate (see note on 1 Tim. 1:19), not the temporary failure of a true believer like Peter (Matt. 26:69–75). Those who so deny Christ give evidence that they never truly belonged to Him (1 John 2:19) and face the fearful reality of one day being denied by Him (Matt. 10:33).

2:13 *faithless. This refers to a lack of saving faith, not to weak or struggling faith. Unbelievers will ultimately deny Christ because their faith was not genuine (cf. James 2:14–26). He remains faithful; He cannot deny Himself. As faithful as Jesus is to save those who believe in Him (John 3:16), He is equally faithful to judge those who do not (John 3:18). To act any other way would be inconsistent with His holy, unchangeable nature. Cf. Hebrews 10:23.

F. A Worker (2:14–19)

2:14 *strive about words. Arguing with false teachers, i.e., deceivers who use human reason to subvert God’s Word, is not only foolish (Prov. 14:7) and futile (Matt. 7:6), but dangerous (vv. 16, 17; cf. v. 23). This is the first of three warnings to avoid useless arguments. See notes on verses 16, 23; 1 Timothy 4:6, 7; 6:3–5; 2 Peter 2:1–3. ruin. The Greek word means “overturned,” or “overthrown.” It appears only one other time in the NT (2 Pet. 2:6), where it describes the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah. Because it replaces the truth with lies, false teaching brings spiritual catastrophe to those who heed it. The ruin can be eternal.

2:15 Be diligent. This word denotes zealous persistence in accomplishing a goal. Timothy, like all who preach or teach the Word, was to give his maximum effort to impart God’s Word completely, accurately, and clearly to his hearers. This is crucial to counter the disastrous effects of false teaching (vv. 14, 16, 17). rightly dividing. Lit. “cutting it straight”—a reference to the exactness demanded by such trades as carpentry, masonry, and Paul’s trade of leather-working and tent-making. Precision and accuracy are required in biblical interpretation, beyond all other enterprises, because the interpreter is handling God’s Word. Anything less is shameful. the word of truth. All of Scripture in general (John 17:17), and the gospel message in particular (Eph. 1:13; Col. 1:5).

2:16 shun profane and idle babblings. See notes on verse 14; 1 Timothy 6:20; cf. Titus 3:9. Such destructive heresy leads only to “more ungodliness.” Heresy can’t save or sanctify. This is Paul’s second such warning. Cf. verses 14, 23.

2:17 cancer. The word refers to a disease which spreads rapidly in a deadly manner. The metaphor emphasizes the insidious danger of false teaching. It attacks and consumes one’s life. Hymenaeus. See note on 1 Timothy 1:20. Philetus. Alexander’s replacement (1 Tim. 1:20) as Hymenaeus’s accomplice.

2:18 the resurrection is already past. Like the false teachers who troubled the Corinthians (1 Cor. 15:12), Hymenaeus and Philetus denied the reality of believers’ bodily resurrection. They probably taught that believers’ spiritual identification with Christ’s death and Resurrection (Rom. 6:4, 5, 8) was the only resurrection they would experience and that had already happened. Such heretical teaching reflects the contemporary Greek philosophical view that matter was evil and spirit was good. overthrow the faith. This speaks of those whose faith was not genuine (cf. Matt. 24:24). Genuine saving faith cannot be finally and completely overthrown (see note on v. 12). False, non-saving faith is common (cf. 4:10). See notes on Matthew 7:21–28; 13:19–22; John 2:23, 24; 6:64–66; 8:31; 1 John 2:19.

2:19 the solid foundation of God. This is likely a reference to the church (cf. 1 Tim. 3:15), which cannot be overcome by the forces of hell (Matt. 16:18) and is made up of those who belong to Him. seal. A symbol of ownership and authenticity. Paul gives two characteristics of those with the divine seal of authenticity. The Lord knows those who are His. This is likely a reference to Numbers 16:5. He “knows,” not the sense of awareness, but as a husband knows his wife in the sense of intimate relationship (see notes on John 10:27, 28; Gal. 4:9). God has known His own ever since He chose them before time began. See note on 1:9. Let everyone . . . depart from iniquity. This statement is likely adapted from Numbers 16:26, and reflects a second mark of God’s ownership of believers, which is their pursuit of holiness (cf. 1 Cor. 6:19, 20; 1 Pet. 1:15, 16).

G. A Vessel (2:20–23)

2:20 vessels. The Greek word is very general and was used to describe various tools, utensils, and furniture found in the home. In this “great house” analogy, Paul contrasts two kinds of utensils or serving dishes. some for honor. In a wealthy home, the ones made of precious gold and silver were used for honorable purposes such as serving food to the family and guests. some for dishonor. Those made of wood and clay were not for any honorable use, but rather those uses which were repulsive—disposing of garbage and the filthy waste of the household. See note on 2 Corinthians 4:7.

2:21 anyone. Whoever wants to be useful to the Lord for noble purposes. Even a common wood bucket or clay pot becomes useful when purged and made holy. cleanses himself. See note on verse 19. The Greek word means “to thoroughly clean out,” or “to completely purge.” For any waste bucket in the house to be used for a noble purpose, it would have had to be vigorously scoured, cleansed, and purged of all vestiges of its former filth. the latter. The vessels of dishonor (v. 20). Associating with anyone who teaches error and lives in sin is corrupting (Prov. 1:10–19; 13:20; 1 Cor. 5:6, 11; 15:33; Titus 1:16)—all the more so when they are leaders in the church. This is clearly a call to separate from all who claim to serve God, but do so as filthy implements useful only for the most dishonorable duties.

2:22 youthful lusts. These include not merely illicit sexual desires, but also such lusts as pride, desire for wealth and power, jealousy, self-assertiveness, and an argumentative spirit.

2:23 disputes . . . strife. Paul’s third warning to avoid useless arguments with false teachers (see notes on vv. 14, 16).

H. A Servant (2:24–26)

2:24 able to teach. This is one word in Greek meaning “skilled in teaching.” See note on 1 Timothy 3:2.

2:25 those who are in opposition. Primarily unbelievers (captive to Satan, v. 26), but also could include believers deceived by the “foolish and ignorant” (v. 23) speculations of the false teachers; and, possibly, the false teachers themselves. God . . . will grant them repentance. Cf. Acts 11:18; see 2 Corinthians 7:9, 10. All true repentance is produced by God’s sovereign grace (Eph. 2:7), and without such grace human effort to change is futile (cf. Jer. 13:23). know the truth. See note on 3:7. When God, by grace, grants saving faith, it includes the granting of repentance from sin. Neither is a work carried out by humans.

2:26 the snare of the devil. Deception is Satan’s trap. He is an inveterate, scheming, clever, and subtle purveyor of lies. See notes on Genesis 3:4–6; John 8:44; 2 Corinthians 11:13–15; Revelation 12:9.

IV. THE PERILS OF A MAN OF GOD (3:1–17)

A. Facing Apostasy (3:1–9)

3:1 the last days. This phrase refers to this age, the time since the first coming of the Lord Jesus. See note on 1 Timothy 4:1. perilous times. Perilous is used to describe the savage nature of two demon-possessed men (Matt. 8:28). The word for times had to do with epochs, rather than clock or calendar time. Such savage, dangerous eras or epochs will increase in frequency and severity as the return of Christ approaches (v. 13). The church age is fraught with these dangerous movements accumulating strength as the end nears. Cf. Matthew 7:15; 24:11, 12, 24; 2 Peter 2:1, 2.

3:2–4 This list of attributes characterizing the leaders of the dangerous seasons is a description of unbelievers similar to the Lord’s in Mark 7:21, 22.

3:5 having a form of godliness but denying its power. Form refers to the outward shape or appearance. Like the unbelieving scribes and Pharisees, false teachers and their followers are concerned with mere external appearances (cf. Matt. 23:25; Titus 1:16). Their outward form of Christianity and virtue makes these individuals all the more dangerous.

3:6 gullible women. Weak in virtue and the knowledge of the truth, and weighed down with emotional and spiritual guilt over their sins, these women were easy prey for the deceitful, false teachers. See notes on 1 Timothy 2:13, 14; 5:11, 12.

3:7 the knowledge of the truth. First Timothy 2:4 uses this same phrase, equating it with being saved. Here, Paul identified those women (v. 6) and men who were often jumping from one false teacher or cult to another without ever coming to an understanding of God's saving truth in Jesus Christ. The present age, since the coming of Jesus Christ, has been loaded with perilous false teaching that can't save, but does damn (cf. vv. 14, 16, 17; 1 Tim. 4:1).

3:8 Jannes and Jambres. Although their names are not mentioned in the OT, they were likely two of the Egyptian magicians who opposed Moses (Ex. 7:11, 22; 8:7, 18, 19; 9:11). According to Jewish tradition, they pretended to become Jewish proselytes, instigated the worship of the golden calf, and were killed with the rest of the idolaters (Ex. 32). Paul's choice of them as examples may indicate the false teachers at Ephesus were practicing deceiving signs and wonders. the truth. See note on verse 7. disapproved. The same word is translated "debased" in Romans 1:28 (see note there) and comes from a Greek word meaning "useless" in the sense of being tested (like metal) and shown to be worthless.

3:9 folly . . . manifest. Sooner or later, it will be clear that these false teachers are lost fools, as it became clear in the case of Jannes and Jambres.

B. Defeating Apostasy (3:10–17)

3:11 persecutions. From a Greek verb that literally means "to put to flight." Paul had been forced to flee from Damascus (Acts 9:23–25), Pisidian Antioch (Acts 13:50), Iconium (Acts 14:6), Thessalonica (Acts 17:10), and Berea (Acts 17:14). Antioch . . . Iconium . . . Lystra. As a native of Lystra (Acts 16:1), Timothy vividly recalled the persecution Paul faced in those three cities. the Lord delivered me. Cf. 4:17, 18; Psalms 34:4, 6, 19; 37:40; 91:2–6, 14; Is. 41:10; 43:2; Daniel 3:17; Acts 26:16, 17; 2 Corinthians 1:10. The Lord's repeated deliverance of Paul should have encouraged Timothy in the face of persecution by those at Ephesus who opposed the gospel.

3:12 who desire to live godly in Christ Jesus will suffer persecution. Faithful believers must expect persecution and suffering at the hands of the Christ-rejecting world (cf. John 15:18–21; Acts 14:22).

3:13 All the dangerous movements of the false teachers (cf. vv. 1–9) will become increasingly more successful until Christ comes. Cf. 2 Thessalonians 2:11.

3:14 from whom you have learned. See note on 1:13. To further encourage Timothy to stand firm, Paul reminds him of his godly heritage. The plural form of the pronoun whom suggests Timothy was indebted not just to Paul, but to others as well (1:5).

3:15 from childhood. Lit. "from infancy." Two people whom Timothy was especially indebted to were his mother and grandmother (see note on 1:5), who faithfully taught him the truths of OT Scripture from his earliest childhood, so that he was ready to receive the gospel when Paul preached it. you have known the Holy Scriptures. Lit. "the sacred writings," a common designation of the OT by Greek-speaking Jews. wise for salvation. The OT Scriptures pointed to Christ (John 5:37–39) and revealed the need for faith in God's promises (Gen. 15:6; cf. Rom. 4:1–3). Thus, they were able to lead people to acknowledge their sin and need for justification in Christ (Gal. 3:24). Salvation is brought by the Holy Spirit using the Word. See notes on Romans 10:14–17; Ephesians 5:26, 27; 1 Peter 1:23–25. faith which is in Christ Jesus. Though not understanding all the details involved (cf. 1 Pet. 1:10–12), OT believers including Abraham (John 8:56) and Moses (Heb. 11:26) looked forward to the coming of the Messiah (Is. 7:14; 9:6) and His Atonement for sin (Is. 53:5, 6). So did Timothy, who responded when he heard the gospel.

3:16 All Scripture. Grammatically similar Greek constructions (Rom. 7:12; 2 Cor. 10:10; 1 Tim. 1:15; 2:3; 4:4) argue persuasively that the translation “all Scripture is given by inspiration . . .” is accurate. Both OT and NT Scripture are included (see notes on 2 Pet. 3:15, 16, which identify NT writings as Scripture). given by inspiration of God. Lit. “breathed out by God,” or “God-breathed.” Sometimes God told the Bible writers the exact words to say (e.g., Jer. 1:9), but more often He used their minds, vocabularies, and experiences to produce His own perfect infallible, inerrant Word (see notes on 1 Thess. 2:13; Heb. 1:1; 2 Pet. 1:20, 21). It is important to note that inspiration applies only to the original autographs of Scripture, not the Bible writers; there are no inspired Scripture writers, only inspired Scripture. So identified is God with His Word that when Scripture speaks, God speaks (cf. Rom. 9:17; Gal. 3:8). Scripture is called “the oracles of God” (Rom. 3:2; 1 Pet. 4:11), and cannot be altered (John 10:35; Matt. 5:17, 18; Luke 16:17; Rev. 22:18, 19). doctrine. The divine instruction or doctrinal content of both the OT and the NT (cf. 2:15; Acts 20:18, 20, 21, 27; 1 Cor. 2:14–16; Col. 3:16; 1 John 2:20, 24, 27). The Scripture provides the comprehensive and complete body of divine truth necessary for life and godliness. Cf. Psalm 119:97–105. reproof. Rebuke for wrong behavior or wrong belief. The Scripture exposes sin (Heb. 4:12, 13) that can then be dealt with through confession and repentance. correction. The restoration of something to its proper condition. The word appears only here in the NT, but was used in extrabiblical Greek of righting a fallen object, or helping back to their feet those who had stumbled. Scripture not only rebukes wrong behavior, but also points the way back to godly living. Cf. Psalm 119:9–11; John 15:1, 2. instruction in righteousness. Scripture provides positive training (“instruction” originally referred to training a child) in godly behavior, not merely rebuke and correction of wrong behavior (Acts 20:32; 1 Tim. 4:6; 1 Pet. 2:1, 2).

3:17 man of God. A technical term for an official preacher of divine truth. See note on 1 Timothy 6:11. complete. Capable of doing everything one is called to do (cf. Col. 2:10). thoroughly equipped. Enabled to meet all the demands of godly ministry and righteous living. The Word not only accomplishes this in the life of the man of God but in all who follow him (Eph. 4:11–13).

V. THE PREACHING OF THE MAN OF GOD (4:1–5)

A. The Charge to Preach (4:1, 2)

4:1 I charge you. Or better “command.” The Greek has the idea of issuing a forceful order or directive (cf. 2:14; 1 Tim. 1:18; 5:21). before God and the Lord Jesus Christ. The Greek construction also allows the translation “in the presence of God, even Christ Jesus,” which is probably the best rendering since He is about to be introduced as the judge (cf. John 5:22). Everyone who ministers the Word of God is under the omniscient scrutiny of Christ (see notes on

Key Words in 2 Timothy

Appearing: Greek epiphaneia—1:10; 4:1, 8—lit. means “a shining forth” and was used in Greek literature to denote a divine appearance. The English word epiphany is a close equivalent. The NT writers use the word to refer to Jesus’ first coming, the time when He entered this world as a man (see 1:10). They also use the word to speak of Jesus’ Second Coming, specifically to His appearance to all the world (see Matt. 24:27).

Books, Parchments: Greek biblion—4:13; Greek membrana—4:13, the word biblion is common in the NT but not the word membrana, which occurs only here. It is a word derived from Latin that means an animal skin used for writing. The two words in this passage have been interpreted in three different ways: (1) the scrolls were copies of OT books, and the parchments were copies of various NT books; (2) the books were copies of both OT and NT books, and the parchments were blank writing material or notebooks containing rough drafts; or (3) the two words signified the same thing: the books—that is, the parchment notebooks. If the third interpretation is correct, it suggests that Paul was anxious to recover some rough drafts he had left behind when he was arrested.

Inspiration of God: Greek theopneustos — 3:16—means “God-breathed,” from theos (God) and pneo (to breathe). Although it is difficult to fully recreate the thought of this Greek expression in English, we are sure that Paul meant to say that all Scripture was breathed out from God. This definition affirms the Bible’s divine origin; thus God not only inspired the authors who wrote the words of the Bible but He also inspires those who read it with a heart of faith.

2 Cor. 2:17; Heb. 13:17). Christ, who will judge. The grammatical construction suggests imminency—that Christ is about to judge. Paul is emphasizing the unique accountability that all believers, and especially ministers of the Word of God, have to Christ as Judge. Service to Christ is rendered both under His watchful eye and with the knowledge that as Judge He will one day appraise the works of every believer (see notes on 1 Cor. 3:12–15; 4:1–5; 2 Cor. 5:10). That is not a judgment of condemnation, but one of evaluation. With regard to salvation, believers have been judged already and declared righteous; they are no longer subject to the condemnation of sin (Rom. 8:1–4). the living and the dead. Christ will ultimately judge all people in three distinct settings: (1) the Bema-seat judgment of believers after the Rapture (1 Cor. 3:12–15; 2 Cor. 5:10); (2) the sheep and goats judgment of the nations, in which believers will be separated from unbelievers (Matt. 25:31–33, for entrance into the millennial kingdom); and (3) the Great White Throne judgment of unbelievers only (Rev. 20:11–15). Here, the apostle is referring to judgment in a general sense, encompassing all those elements. His appearing. The Greek word translated “appearing” literally means “a shining forth” and was used by the ancient Greeks of the supposed appearance to men of a pagan god. Here, Paul is referring generally to Christ’s Second Coming, when He will judge “the living and the dead” (see previous note) and establish His millennial and eternal kingdom (see note on 1 Tim. 6:14).

4:2 the word. The entire written Word of God, His complete revealed truth as contained in the Bible (cf. 3:15, 16; Acts 20:27). Be ready. The Greek word has a broad range of meanings, including suddenness (Luke 2:9; Acts 12:7) or forcefulness (Luke 20:1; Acts 4:1; 6:12; 23:27). Here, the form of the verb suggests the complementary ideas of urgency, preparedness, and readiness. It was used of a soldier prepared to go into battle or a guard who was continually alert for any surprise attack—attitudes which are imperative for a faithful preacher (Jer. 20:9; Acts 21:11–13; Eph. 5:15, 16; 1 Pet. 3:15). in season and out of season. The faithful preacher must proclaim the Word when it is popular and/or convenient, and when it is not; when it seems suitable to do so, and when it seems not. The dictates of popular culture, tradition, reputation, acceptance, or esteem in the community (or in the church) must never alter the true preacher’s commitment to proclaim God’s Word. Convince, rebuke. The negative side of preaching the Word (the reproof and correction; cf. 3:16). The Greek word for convince refers to correcting behavior or false doctrine by using careful biblical argument to help a person understand the error of his actions. The Greek word for rebuke deals more with correcting the person’s motives by convicting him of his sin and leading him to repentance. exhort . . . teaching. The positive side of preaching (the doctrine and instruction; cf. 3:16).

B. The Need for Preaching (4:3–5)

4:3 not endure. This refers to holding up under adversity, and can be translated “tolerate.” Paul here warns Timothy that, in the dangerous seasons of this age, many people would become intolerant of the confrontive, demanding preaching of God’s Word (1:13, 14; 1 Tim. 1:9, 10; 6:3–5). sound doctrine. See notes on 1:13; 1 Timothy 4:6; Titus 2:1. their own desires . . . itching ears. Professing Christians and nominal believers in the church follow their own desires and flock to preachers who offer them God’s blessings apart from His forgiveness, and His salvation apart from their repentance. They have an itch to be entertained by teachings that will produce pleasant sensations and leave them with good feelings about themselves. Their goal is that men preach “according to their own desires.” Under those conditions, people will dictate what men preach, rather than God dictating it by His Word.

4:4 fables. This refers to false ideologies, viewpoints, and philosophies in various forms that oppose sound doctrine (see notes on 2 Cor. 10:3–5; 1 Tim. 1:4; 4:7; cf. Titus 1:14; 2 Pet. 1:16).

4:5 an evangelist. Used only two other times in the NT (see notes on Acts 21:8; Eph. 4:11), this word always refers to a specific office of ministry for the purpose of preaching the gospel to non-Christians. Based on Ephesians 4:11, it is very basic to assume that all churches would have both pastor-teachers and evangelists. But the related verb “to preach the gospel” and the related noun “gospel” are used throughout the NT not only in relation to evangelists, but also to the call for every Christian, especially preachers and teachers, to proclaim the gospel. Paul did not call Timothy to the office of an evangelist, but to “do the work” of one.

VI. CONCLUDING REMARKS (4:6–18)

A. Paul’s Triumph (4:6–8)

4:6–8 As Paul neared the end of his life, he was able to look back without regret or remorse. In these verses, he examines his life from three perspectives: the present reality of the end of his life, for which he was ready (v. 6); the past, when he had been faithful (v. 7); and the future, as he anticipated his heavenly reward (v. 8).

4:6 already. Meaning his death was imminent. a drink offering*. In the OT sacrificial system, this was the final offering that followed the burnt and grain offerings prescribed for the people of Israel (Num. 15:1–16). Paul saw his coming death as his final offering to God in a life that had already been full of sacrifices to Him (see note on Phil. 2:17). my departure*. Paul’s death. The Greek word essentially refers to the loosening of something, such as the mooring ropes of a ship or the ropes of a tent; thus, it eventually acquired the secondary meaning of “departure.”

4:7 The form of the three Greek verbs “have fought, have finished, have kept,” indicate completed action with continuing results. Paul saw his life as complete. He had been able to accomplish, through the Lord’s power, all that God called him to do. He was a soldier (2:3, 4; 2 Cor. 10:3; 1 Tim. 6:12; Philem. 2), an athlete (1 Cor. 9:24–27; Eph. 6:12), and a guardian (1:13, 14; 1 Tim. 6:20, 21). the faith*. The truths and standards of the revealed Word of God.

4:8 the crown of righteousness. The Greek word for “crown” literally means “surrounding,” and it was used of the plaited wreaths or garlands placed on the heads of dignitaries and victorious military officers or athletes. Linguistically, “of righteousness” can mean either that righteousness is the source of the crown, or that righteousness is the nature of the crown. Like the “crown of life” (James 1:12), the “crown of rejoicing” (1 Thess. 2:19), the “imperishable crown” (1 Cor. 9:25), and the “crown of glory” (1 Pet. 5:4), in which life, rejoicing, imperishability, and glory describe the nature of the crown, the context here seems to indicate that the crown represents eternal righteousness. Believers receive the imputed righteousness of Christ (justification) at salvation (Rom. 4:6, 11). The Holy Spirit works practical righteousness (sanctification) in the believer throughout his lifetime of struggle with sin (Rom. 6:13, 19; 8:4; Eph. 5:9; 1 Pet. 2:24). But only when the struggle is complete will the Christian receive Christ’s righteousness perfected in him (glorification) when he enters heaven (see note on Gal. 5:5). the righteous Judge*. See note on verse 1. that Day*. See note on 1:12. His appearing*. See notes on verse 1; 1 Timothy 6:14.

4:9–22 In these closing verses, Paul brings Timothy up to date on the spiritual condition, activities, and whereabouts of certain men and women who either helped or harmed his ministry.

B. Paul’s Needs (4:9–18)

4:9 Be diligent to come to me quickly. Paul longed to see his beloved coworker, but it was imperative that Timothy make haste because Paul knew his days were numbered (v. 6).

4:10 Demas. He had been one of Paul’s closest associates along with Luke and Epaphras (see notes on Col. 4:14). forsaken*. This Greek word means “to utterly abandon,” with the idea of leaving someone in a dire situation. Demas was a fair-weather disciple who had never counted the cost of genuine commitment to Christ. His kind are described by our Lord in Matthew 13:20, 21;

cf. John 8:31; 1 John 2:1. loved this present world. See notes on 1 John 2:15–17. Thessalonica. Demas may have considered this city a safe haven (see Introduction to 1 Thessalonians: Background and Setting). Crescens. In contrast to Demas, Crescens must have been faithful and dependable, since Paul sent him to Galatia, a Roman province in central Asia Minor, where Paul ministered on each of his three missionary journeys. Titus. Paul's closest friend and coworker next to Timothy (Titus 1:5; see Introduction to Titus: Title). Dalmatia. Also known as Illyricum (Rom. 15:19), a Roman province on the east coast of the Adriatic Sea, just north of Macedonia.

4:11 Luke. The author of the Gospel of Luke and the Book of Acts, and Paul's devoted friend and personal physician, who could not carry the burden of ministry in Rome by himself (see Introductions to Luke and Acts: Author and Date). Get Mark and bring him with you. Evidently Mark lived somewhere along the route Timothy would take from Ephesus to Rome. The one who was the author of the Gospel of Mark (sometimes called John), cousin of Barnabas (Col. 4:10), and devoted fellow worker (Philem. 24), had once left Paul and Barnabas in shame (see notes on Acts 13:13; 15:36–39), but had become by this time a valued servant (see Introduction to Mark: Author and Date).

4:12 Tychicus. Paul had either sent him to Ephesus earlier, or he was sending him there to deliver this second letter to Timothy, just as Tychicus had previously delivered Paul's letters to the churches at Ephesus (Eph. 6:21), Colosse (Col. 4:7), and possibly to Titus (Titus 3:12; see note on Col. 4:7). Ephesus. See Introduction to Ephesians: Background and Setting; see note on Revelation 2:1.

4:13 cloak. A large, heavy wool garment that doubled as a coat and blanket in cold weather, which Paul would soon face (v. 21). Carpus. An otherwise unknown acquaintance of Paul whose name means "fruit." Troas. A seaport of Phrygia, in Asia Minor. the books, especially the parchments. Books refers to papyrus scrolls, possibly OT books. Parchments were vellum sheets made of treated animal hides; thus, they were extremely expensive. They may have been copies of letters Paul had written or blank sheets for writing other letters. That Paul did not have these already in his possession leads to the possible conclusion that he was arrested in Troas and had no opportunity to retrieve them.

4:14 Alexander the coppersmith. This was probably not the same man whom Paul delivered to Satan along with Hymenaeus (1 Tim. 1:20), since Paul singles him out as the one who was a "coppersmith." This Alexander, however, may have been an idol maker (cf. Acts 19:24). did me much harm. Alexander opposed Paul's teaching and likely spread his own false doctrine. He may have been instrumental in Paul's arrest and may even have borne false witness against him. Cf. Acts 19:23ff. May the Lord repay him. Paul left vengeance in God's hands (Deut. 32:35; Rom. 12:19).

4:16 first defense. The Greek word for defense gives us the English words apology and apologetics. It referred to a verbal defense used in a court of law. In the Roman legal system, an accused person received two hearings: the prima actio, much like a contemporary arraignment, established the charge and determined if there was a need for a trial. The secunda actio then established the accused's guilt or innocence. The defense Paul referred to was the prima actio. May it not be charged against them. Like Stephen (Acts 7:60) and the Lord Himself (Luke 23:34).

4:17 But the Lord stood with me. The Lord fulfills His promise never to “leave or forsake” His children (Deut. 31:6, 8; Josh. 1:5; Heb. 13:5). the message might be preached fully through me. As he had done in the past (Acts 26:2–29), Paul was able to proclaim the gospel before a Roman tribunal. all the Gentiles might hear. By proclaiming the gospel to such a cosmopolitan, pagan audience, Paul could say that he had reached all the Gentiles with the gospel. This was a fulfillment of his commission (Acts 9:15, 16; 26:15–18). the mouth of the lion. Cf. Daniel 6:26, 27. A common figure for mortal danger (Pss. 22:21; 35:17) and a common occurrence for Paul (cf. Acts 14:19; 2 Cor. 4:8–12; 6:4–10; 11:23–27). Peter pictured Satan as a lion in 1 Peter 5:8.

4:18 will deliver me from every evil work. On the basis of the Lord’s present work—strengthening Paul and standing with him (v. 17)—Paul had hope for the Lord’s future work. He knew God would deliver him from all temptations and plots against him (2 Cor. 1:8–10). preserve me for His heavenly kingdom. Paul knew the completion of his own salvation was nearer than when he first believed (cf. Rom. 13:11; 2 Cor. 5:8; Phil. 1:21).

VII. PAUL’S FAREWELLS (4:19–22)

4:19 Prisca and Aquila. Paul first met these two faithful friends in Corinth after they fled Italy (see note on Acts 18:2). They ministered for some time in Ephesus (Acts 18:18, 19), later returned to Rome for a period of time (Rom. 16:3), and had returned to Ephesus. the household of Onesiphorus. See note on 1:16.

4:20 Erastus. Probably the city treasurer of Corinth, who sent greetings through Paul to the church at Rome (see note on Rom. 16:23). Corinth. The leading city in Greece (see note on Acts 18:1; see Introduction to 1 Corinthians: Title). Trophimus. A native of Asia, specifically Ephesus, who had accompanied Paul from Greece to Troas (see note on Acts 20:4). Miletus. A city and seaport in the province of Lycia, located thirty miles south of Ephesus.

4:21 before winter. In view of the coming season and the cold Roman jail cell, Paul needed the cloak for warmth. He would also have less opportunity to use the books and parchments as the duration of light grew shorter in winter. Eubulus . . . Pudens, Linus, Claudia. The first three names are Latin, which could indicate they were from Italy and had been members in the church at Rome. Claudia was a believer and close friend, of whom nothing else is known.

4:22 Grace be with you. This is the same benediction as in Paul’s previous letter to Timothy (see note on 1 Tim. 6:21). The you is plural, which means it extended to the entire Ephesian congregation.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL TO TITUS

Title

This epistle is named for its recipient, Titus, who is mentioned by name thirteen times in the NT (1:4; Gal. 2:1, 3; 2 Tim. 4:10; for the nine times in 2 Corinthians, see Background and Setting). The title in the Greek NT literally reads “To Titus.” Along with 1 and 2 Timothy, these letters to Paul’s sons in the faith are classified as the Pastoral Epistles.

Author and Date

Authorship by the apostle Paul (1:1) is essentially uncontested (see Introduction to 1 Timothy). Titus was written, about A.D. 62–64, while Paul ministered to Macedonian churches between his first and second Roman imprisonments, from either Corinth or Nicopolis (cf. 3:12). The letter probably was delivered by Zenas and Apollos (3:13).

Background and Setting

Although Luke did not mention Titus by name in the Book of Acts, it seems probable that Titus, a Gentile (Gal. 2:3), met and may have been led to faith in Christ by Paul (1:4) before or during the apostle’s first missionary journey. Later, Titus ministered for a period of time with Paul on the island of Crete and was left behind to continue and strengthen the work (1:5). After Artemas or Tychicus (3:12) arrived to direct the ministry there, Paul wanted Titus to join him in the city of Nicopolis, in the province of Achaia in Greece, and stay through the winter (3:12).

Because of his involvement with the church at Corinth during Paul’s third missionary journey, Titus is mentioned nine times in 2 Corinthians (2:13; 7:6, 13, 14; 8:6, 16, 23; 12:18, 18), where Paul refers to him as “my brother” (2:13) and “my partner and fellow worker” (8:23). The young elder was already familiar with Judaizers, false teachers in the church, who among other things insisted that all Christians, Gentile as well as Jew, were bound by the Mosaic Law. Titus had accompanied Paul and Barnabas years earlier to the Council of Jerusalem where that heresy was the subject (Acts 15; Gal. 2:1–5).

Crete, one of the largest islands in the Mediterranean Sea, measuring 160 miles long by 35 miles at its widest, lying south of the Aegean Sea, had been briefly visited by Paul on his voyage to Rome (Acts 27:7–9, 12, 13, 21). He returned there for ministry and later left Titus to continue the work, much as he left Timothy at Ephesus (1 Tim. 1:3), while he went on to Macedonia. He most likely wrote to Titus in response to a letter from Titus or a report from Crete.

Historical and Theological Themes

In contrast to several of Paul’s other letters, such as those to the churches in Rome and Galatia, the epistle to Titus does not focus on explaining or defending doctrine. Paul had full confidence in Titus’s theological understanding and convictions, evidenced by the fact that he entrusted him with such a demanding ministry. Except for the warning about false teachers and Judaizers, the letter gives no theological correction, strongly suggesting that Paul also had confidence in the doctrinal grounding of most church members there, despite the fact that the majority of them were new believers. Doctrines that this epistle affirms include: (1) God's sovereign election of believers (1:1, 2); (2) His saving grace (2:11; 3:5); (3) Christ's deity and Second Coming (2:13); (4) Christ's substitutionary Atonement (2:14); and (5) the regeneration and renewing of believers by the Holy Spirit (3:5).

God and Christ are regularly referred to as Savior (1:3, 4; 2:10, 13; 3:4, 6), and the saving plan is so emphasized in 2:11–14 that it indicates a major thrust of the epistle is that of equipping the churches of Crete for effective evangelism. This preparation required godly leaders who not only would shepherd believers under their care (1:5–9), but also would equip those Christians for evangelizing their pagan neighbors, who had been characterized by one of their own famous natives as liars, evil beasts, and lazy gluttons (1:12).

In order to gain a hearing for the gospel among such people, the believers' primary preparation for evangelization was to live among them with the unarguable testimony of righteous, loving, selfless, and godly lives

(2:2–14) in marked contrast to the debauched lives of the false teachers (1:10–16). How they behaved with reference to governmental authorities and unbelievers was also crucial to their testimony (3:1–8).

Interpretive Challenges

The letter to Titus presents itself in a straightforward manner which should be taken at face value. The few interpretive challenges include: (1) Are the children of 1:6 merely "faithful" or are they "believing"? and (2) What is the "blessed hope" of 2:13?

I. SALUTATION (1:1-4)

1:1-3 This portion of the salutation emphasizes the nature of Paul's service as an apostle of Jesus Christ. He proclaimed: (1) salvation: God's purpose to save the elect by the gospel; (2) sanctification: God's purpose to build up the saved by the Word of God; and (3) glorification: God's purpose to bring believers to eternal glory.

1:1 Paul. See Introduction: Title; Author and Date; Background and Setting. bondservant. Paul pictures himself as the most menial slave of NT times (see notes on 2:9; 1 Cor. 4:1, 2), indicating his complete and willing servitude to the Lord, by whom all believers have been "bought at a price" (1 Cor. 6:20; cf. 1 Pet. 1:18, 19). This is the only time Paul referred to himself as a "bondservant of God" (cf. Rom. 1:1; Gal. 1:10; Phil. 1:1). He was placing himself alongside OT men of God (cf. Rev. 15:3). apostle. Cf. Romans 1:1; 1 Corinthians 1:1; 2 Corinthians 1:1; Ephesians 1:1. The word has the basic meaning of messenger or literally "sent one" and, though often used of royal emissaries who ministered with the extended authority of their sovereign, Paul's exalted position as "an apostle" also was an extension of his bondservice to "God," which came with great authority, responsibility, and sacrifice. God's elect. See notes on Ephesians 1:4, 5. Those who have been graciously chosen for salvation "before the foundation of the world" (Eph. 1:4), but who must exercise personal faith prompted and empowered by the Holy Spirit. God's choice of believers always precedes and enables their choice of Him (cf. John 15:16; Acts 13:46-48; Rom. 9:15-21; 2 Thess. 2:13; 2 Tim. 1:8, 9; 2:10; 1 Pet. 1:1, 2). the truth. Paul had in mind gospel truth, the saving message of the death and Resurrection of Jesus Christ (1 Tim. 2:3, 4; 2 Tim.

2:25). It is that saving truth that leads to godliness or sanctification (see 2:11, 12).

1:2 hope. This is divinely promised and divinely guaranteed to all believers, providing endurance and patience (cf. John 6:37-40; Rom. 8:18-23; 1 Cor. 15:51-58; Eph. 1:13, 14; Phil. 3:8-11, 20, 21; 1 Thess. 4:13-18; 1 John 3:2, 3). See notes on 1 Peter 1:3-9. cannot lie. Cf. 1 Samuel 15:29; Hebrews 6:18. Because God Himself is truth and the source of truth, it is impossible for Him to say anything untruthful (John 14:6, 17; 15:26; cf. Num. 23:19; Ps. 146:6). before time began. God's plan of salvation for sinful mankind was determined and decreed before man was even created. The promise was made to God the Son (see notes on John 6:37-44; Eph. 1:4, 5; 2 Tim. 1:9).

1:3 His word . . . preaching. God's Word is the sole source of content for all faithful preaching and teaching. Cf. 1 Corinthians 1:18-21; 9:16, 17; Galatians 1:15, 16; Colossians 1:25. God our Savior. Cf. 2:10; 3:4. The plan of salvation originated in eternity past with God.

1:4 true son. A spiritual son, a genuine believer in Christ, like Timothy (1 Tim. 1:2). common faith. This may refer to saving faith or to the content of the Christian faith, e.g., "The faith which was once for all delivered to the saints" (Jude 3). our Savior. Christ is called Savior each time He is mentioned after verse 1 (cf. 2:13; 3:6).

II. ESSENTIALS FOR EFFECTIVE EVANGELISM (1:5-3:11)

A. Among Leaders (1:5-16)

1. Recognition of elders (1:5-9)

1:5-9 God's standards for all believers are high; His requirement for church leaders is to set that standard and model it. Such leaders are not qualified on the basis of natural ability, intelligence, or education but on the basis of moral and spiritual character and the ability to teach with skill as the Spirit sovereignly has equipped them.

Paul's Travel After His First Roman Imprisonment

A suggested itinerary of Paul, based solely on information in the Pastoral Epistles, after his first Roman imprisonment.

1:5 Crete. See Introduction: Background and Setting. set in order. Titus was to correct wrong doctrine and practices in the Cretan churches, a task that Paul had been unable to complete. This ministry is mentioned nowhere else. elders. Cf. similar qualifications in 1 Timothy 3:1–7. Mature spiritual leaders of the church, also called bishops (v. 7; cf. 1 Tim. 3:2) or overseers (see 1 Pet. 2:25 where the same Greek word is used of Christ), and pastors (lit. “shepherds”; see Eph. 4:11), were to care for each city’s congregation. See also Acts 20:17, 28; 1 Peter 5:1, 2. This ministry of appointing leaders is consistently Pauline (cf. Acts 14:23). commanded you. A reminder of past apostolic instructions.

1:6 blameless. This word does not refer to sinless perfection but to a personal life that is beyond accusation and public scandal. It is a general and primary requirement of spiritual leaders that is repeated (v. 7) and explained in the next verses (cf. 1 Tim. 3:2, 10). husband of one wife. Lit. “a one-woman man,” i.e., a husband who is consistently, both inwardly and outwardly, devoted and faithful to his wife (cf. 1 Tim. 3:2). An otherwise qualified single man is not necessarily disqualified. This is not speaking of divorce, but of internal and external purity in the sexual area. See Proverbs 6:32, 33. This necessity was motivation for Paul’s commitment to control his body (1 Cor. 9:27). faithful children. Faithful is always used in the NT of believers and never for unbelievers, so this refers to children who have saving faith in Christ and reflect it in their conduct. Since 1 Timothy 3:4 requires children to be in submission, it may be directed at young children in the home, while this text looks at those who are older. dissipation or insubordination. Dissipation connotes debauchery, suggesting again, that the reference is to grown children. Insubordination carries the idea of rebelliousness to the gospel. Here, the elder shows his ability to lead his family to salvation and sanctification (see 1 Tim. 3:4, 5), an essential prerequisite for leading the church.

1:7 bishop. This is not a hierarchical title, but a word meaning “overseer.” Cf. Acts 20:28; Hebrews 13:17; 1 Peter 5:2. steward. The term refers to one who manages someone else’s properties for the well-being of those for whom his master cares. In this context, one who manages spiritual truths, lives on God’s behalf, and is wholly accountable to Him. The church is God’s (Acts 20:28; 1 Tim. 3:15; 1 Pet. 5:2–4), and elders or bishops are accountable to him for the way they lead it (Heb. 13:17). wine. Applies to drinking any alcoholic beverage in any way that dulls the mind or subdues inhibitions (cf. Prov. 23:29–35; 31:4–7). By application, it also indicts any other substance, e.g., drugs, which would cloud the mind. greedy. Even in the early church, some men became pastors in order to gain wealth (see v. 11; 1 Pet. 5:2; cf. 2 Pet. 2:1–3).

1:8 hospitable. The word actually means “a lover of strangers.” sober-minded. A man who is serious, with the right priorities, sensible.

1:9 faithful word. Sound biblical doctrine not only should be taught but also adhered to with deep conviction. Cf. 1 Timothy 4:6; 5:17; 2 Timothy 2:15; 3:16, 17; 4:2–4. exhort and convict. The faithful teaching and defending of Scripture which encourages godliness and confronts sin and error (those who contradict). See notes on verses 10–16; 3:10, 11; Acts 20:29, 30.

2. Rebuke of false teachers (1:10–16)

1:10–16 The false teachers in the Cretan churches were much like those with whom Timothy had to deal in Ephesus (see 1 Tim. 1:3–7; cf. Rom. 16:17, 18; 2 Pet. 2:1–3).

1:10 insubordinate. Because those men were so numerous, Titus’ job was especially difficult, which made the appointment of additional godly elders (v. 5) all the more crucial. Some of the false teachers may have opposed even Paul’s apostolic authority during his brief ministry on Crete. deceivers. Cf.

Jeremiah 14:14; 23:2, 21, 32. the circumcision. Cf. Acts 10:45; 11:2. These were Jews who taught that salvation required the physical cutting of circumcision (see notes on Gen. 17:9–14) and adherence to Mosaic ceremonies. See notes on Acts 15:1–12; Galatians 3:1–12; Ephesians 2:11, 12; Colossians 2:11, 12.

1:11 whole households. Cf. 2 Tim. 3:6. dishonest gain. False teachers are always in it for the money (1 Tim. 6:5; 1 Pet. 5:2).

1:12 a prophet. Epimenides, the highly esteemed sixth century B.C. Greek poet and native of Crete, had characterized his own people as the dregs of Greek culture. Elsewhere, Paul also quoted pagan sayings (cf. Acts 17:28; 1 Cor. 15:33). This quote is directed at the false teachers' character.

1:13 sound in the faith. True and pure doctrine was to be required of all who spoke to the church. Any who fell short of that were to be rebuked.

1:14 fables and commandments of men. Paul reemphasized (see v. 10, "those of the circumcision") that most of the false teachers were Jewish. They taught the same kind of externalism and unscriptural laws and traditions that both Isaiah and Jesus railed against (Is. 29:13; Matt. 15:1–9; Mark 7:5–13).

1:15, 16 False teachers are corrupt on the inside ("mind and conscience") and the outside ("works" and "disobedient"). Cf. Matthew 7:15, 16.

1:15 defiled. The outwardly despicable things that those men practiced (vv. 10–12) were reflections of their inner corruption. See Matthew 15:15–20. mind and conscience. If the mind is defiled, it cannot accurately inform the conscience, so conscience cannot warn the person. When conscience is accurately and fully infused with God's truth, it functions as the warning system God designed. See notes on 2 Corinthians 1:12; 4:2; 1 Timothy 1:19, 20.

1:16 profess . . . deny. Some of the false teachers in the church were not believers at all. Eventually, even the seemingly noble "works" of unbelievers will betray them. disqualified. They can do nothing that pleases God. See note on 1 Corinthians 9:27; cf. 2 Timothy 3:8.

B. In the Church (2:1–15)

1. Holy Living (2:1–10)

2:1–10 Sound doctrine for older men (v. 2), older women (v. 3), younger women (vv. 4, 5), young men (vv. 6–8), and bond servants (vv. 9, 10) reflects the duty of everyone in the church.

2:1 sound. Meaning healthy. Paul uses this word nine times in the Pastoral Epistles (five times in Titus), always in the sense that the truth produces spiritual well-being. The "things" Paul mentions in verses 2–10 pertain to truths, attitudes, and actions that correspond to and are based on biblical truth. In order not only to please God, but also to have an effective witness to unbelievers, God's people must know the truth that leads to spiritual health.

2:2 older men. Paul used this term for himself (Philem. 9) when he was over sixty. It refers to those of advanced age, using a different term from the one translated "elder" in 1:5. reverent. This requirement is not limited to reverence for God, which is assumed, but also refers to being honorable and dignified. They are to be sensible and spiritually healthy.

2:3 older women. Those who no longer had child-rearing responsibilities, typically around age sixty (cf. 1 Tim. 5:3–10). reverent. See note on verse 2. Cf. 1 Timothy 2:9–11, 15. not slanderers. A term used thirty-four times in the NT to describe Satan, the arch-slanderer. good things. Those that please God (cf. 1:16), particularly the lessons in verses 4, 5.

2:4 admonish the young women. Their own examples of godliness (v. 3) give older women the right and the credibility to instruct younger women in the church. The obvious implication is that older women must exemplify the virtues (vv. 4, 5) that they admonish. love their husbands. Like the other virtues mentioned here, this one is unconditional. It is based on God's will, not on a husband's worthiness. The Greek word phileo emphasizes affection. See notes on Ephesians 5:22–23.

2:5 discreet. This means pure. Cf. 1 Timothy 2:9–11, 15; 1 Peter 3:3–6. homemakers. Cf. 1 Timothy 5:14. Keeping a godly home with excellence for one's husband and children is the Christian woman's non-negotiable responsibility. obedient. The ideas of radical feminism were an integral part of ancient Babylonian and Assyrian mythology as well as of Greek Gnosticism, which flourished throughout the Roman Empire during NT times and posed a constant danger to the early church. Modern feminism is neither new nor progressive; it is age-old and regressive. See notes on Ephesians 5:22. not be blasphemed. This is the purpose of godly conduct—to eliminate any reproach on Scripture. For a person to be convinced God can save from sin, he needs to see someone who lives a holy life. When Christians claim to believe God's Word but do not obey it, the Word is dishonored. Many have mocked God and His truth because of the sinful behavior of those who claim to be Christians. Cf. Matthew 5:16; 1 Peter 2:9.

2:6 young men. These are males, twelve and older.

2:6, 7 sober-minded. This means sensible (see v. 2).

2:7 in all things. This rightly goes at the end of verse 6, qualifying young men and emphasizing the comprehensiveness of this admonition. pattern. Titus had a special obligation to exemplify the moral and spiritual qualities about which he was to admonish others. Cf. 1 Corinthians 4:16; 11:1; Philippians 3:17; 2 Thessalonians 3:8, 9; 1 Timothy 4:12; Hebrews 13:7. in doctrine. All three terms—integrity, reverence, and incorruptibility—qualify the appropriate commitment to doctrine.

2:8 sound speech. This refers to daily conversation. Cf. Ephesians 4:31; Colossians 3:16, 17; 4:6. cannot be condemned. This means beyond reproach. nothing evil to say. Again, as in verse 5, the purpose of godly living is to silence the opponents of Christianity and the gospel (see notes on 1 Pet. 2:11, 12), and make the power of Christ believable.

2:9 bondservants. The term applies generally to all employees, but direct reference is to slaves—men, women, and children who, in the Roman Empire and in much of the ancient world, were owned by their masters. They had few, if any, civil rights and often were accorded little more dignity or care than domestic animals. The NT nowhere condones or condemns the practice of slavery, but it everywhere teaches that freedom from the bondage of sin is infinitely more important than freedom from any human bondage a person may have to endure (see Rom. 6:22). obedient . . . well pleasing. Paul clearly teaches that, even in the most servile of circumstances, believers are “to be obedient” and seek to please those for whom they work, whether their

Paul's Audiences in Titus

1. Older men (2:2)
2. Older women (2:3)
3. Young women (2:4, 5)
4. Young men (2:6–8)
5. Servants (2:9–10)
6. Congregation (3:1, 2)

masters are believers or unbelievers, fair or unfair, kind or cruel. How much more obligated are believers to respect and obey employers for whom they work voluntarily! As with wives' obedience to their husbands (v. 5), the only exception would involve a believer being required to disobey God's Word. Cf. Ephesians 6:5–9; Colossians 3:22–4:1; 1 Timothy 6:1, 2.

2:10 not pilfering. A term used to refer to embezzlement. all good fidelity. This indicates loyalty. adorn the doctrine. Again (cf. v. 5), Paul emphasizes that the supreme purpose of a virtuous life is to make attractive the teaching that God saves sinners.

2. Sound doctrine (2:11–15)

2:11–13 This is the heart of the letter, emphasizing that God's sovereign purpose in calling out elders (1:5) and in commanding His people to live righteously (vv. 1–10) is to provide the witness that brings God's plan and purpose of salvation to fulfillment. Paul condensed the saving plan of God into three realities: (1) salvation from the penalty (v. 11); (2) the power (v. 12); and (3) the presence (v. 13) of sin.

2:11 grace of God. Not simply the divine attribute of grace, but Jesus Christ Himself, grace incarnate, God's supremely gracious gift to fallen mankind. Cf. John 1:14. all men. This does not teach universal salvation. Mankind is translated as "man" in 3:4 to refer to humanity in general, as a category, not to every individual. See notes on 2 Corinthians 5:19; 2 Peter 3:9. Jesus Christ made a sufficient sacrifice to cover every sin of every one who believes (John 3:16–18; 1 Tim. 2:5, 6; 4:10; 1 John 2:2). Paul makes clear in the opening words of this letter to Titus that salvation becomes effective only through "the faith of God's elect" (1:1). See note on 3:2. Out of all humanity, only those who believe will be saved (John 1:12; 3:16; 5:24, 38, 40; 6:40; 10:9; Rom. 10:9–17).

2:12 denying . . . live. Salvation is transforming (2 Cor. 5:17; Eph. 2:8–10), and transformation (new birth) produces a new life in which the power of sin has been broken (see notes on Rom 6:4–14; Phil. 3:8, 9; Col. 3:9, 10).

2:13 blessed hope. A general reference to the Second Coming of Jesus Christ, including the resurrection (cf. Rom. 8:22, 23; 1 Cor. 15:51–58; Phil. 3:20, 21; 1 Thess. 4:13–18; 1 John 3:2, 3) and the reign of the saints with Christ in glory (2 Tim. 2:10). glorious appearing. Cf. 2 Timothy 1:10. Lit. "the appearing of the glory." This will be our salvation from the presence of sin. God and Savior. A clear reference to the deity of Jesus. Cf. 2 Peter 1:1.

2:14 redeem . . . purify. Another expression (cf. v. 12) summarizes the dual effect of salvation (regeneration and sanctification). To redeem is to release someone held captive, on the payment of a ransom. The price was Christ's blood paid to satisfy God's justice. See notes on Acts 20:28; Galatians 1:4; 2:20; 1 Peter 1:18; cf. Mark 10:45. special people. People who are special by virtue of God's decree and confirmed by the grace of salvation which they have embraced (see notes on 1:1–4). Cf. 1 Corinthians 6:19, 20; 1 Peter 2:9. zealous. Cf. 3:8. Good works are the product, not the means, of salvation. Cf. Ephesians 2:10.

2:15 Speak . . . exhort . . . rebuke. These three verbs identify the need for proclamation, application, and correction by the Word. authority. Authority to command people in the spiritual realm comes only from God's Word. Cf. Matthew 7:28, 29. Let no one despise you. See 3:9–11. Rebellion against the truth has to be dealt with. Cf. Matthew 18:15–20; 1 Corinthians 5:9–13; 2 Thessalonians 3:14, 15.

C. In the World (3:1–11)

1. Holy living (3:1–4)

3:1–11 In his closing remarks, Paul admonished Titus to remind believers under his care of their attitudes toward: (1) the unsaved rulers (v. 1) and people in general (v. 2); (2) their previous state as unbelievers lost in sin (v. 3); (3) of their gracious salvation through Jesus Christ (vv. 4–7); (4) of their righteous testimony to the unsaved world (v. 8); and (5) and of their responsibility to oppose false teachers and factious members within the church (vv. 9–11). All of these matters are essential to effective evangelism.

3:1 subject. Submission to the authority of Scripture demands submission to human authorities as part of a Christian's testimony (see notes on Rom. 13:1–7; 1 Pet. 2:12–17).

3:2 all men. Christians are to exemplify these godly virtues in their dealings with everyone. The admonition applies especially to dealings with unbelievers. The use of this phrase here to refer to mankind in general (particularly those who cross our paths), rather than every person who lives, supports the fact that it has the same meaning in 2:11.

3:3 ourselves. It is not that every believer has committed every sin listed here, but rather that before salvation every life is characterized by such sins. That sobering truth should make believers humble in dealing with the unsaved, even those who are grossly immoral and ungodly. If it weren't for God's grace to His own, they would all be wicked. See note on 1 Peter 3:15; cf. 2 Timothy 2:25. For other lists of sins, see Romans 1:18–32; 1 Corinthians 6:9, 10; Galatians 5:19–21; Ephesians 4:17–19.

3:4 kindness . . . appeared. As in 2:11, Paul is speaking of Jesus Christ, who was kindness and love incarnate, appearing in human form. Cf. Ephesians 2:4–6.

2. Sound doctrine (3:5–11)

3:5 not by works. Salvation has never been by works (see Eph. 2:8, 9; cf. Rom. 3:19–28.) according to His mercy. Cf. Ephesians 2:4; 1 Timothy 1:13; 1 Peter 1:3; 2:10. washing of regeneration. See notes on Ezekiel 36:25–31; Ephesians 5:26, 27; James 1:18; 1 Peter 1:23. Salvation brings divine cleansing from sin and the gift of a new, Spirit-generated, Spirit-empowered, and Spirit-protected life as God's own children and heirs (v. 7). This is the new birth (cf. John 3:5; 1 John 2:29; 3:9; 4:7; 5:1). renewing of the Holy Spirit. Cf. Romans 8:2. He is the agent of the "working of regeneration."

3:6 abundantly. When believers are saved, Christ's Spirit blesses them beyond measure (cf. Acts 2:38, 39; 1 Cor. 12:7, 11, 13; Eph. 3:20; 5:18).

3:7 justified. The central truth of salvation is justification by faith alone. When a sinner repents and places his faith in Jesus Christ, God declares him just, imputes the righteousness of Christ to him, and gives him eternal life by virtue of the substitutionary death of Christ as the penalty for that sinner's iniquity. See notes on Romans 3:21–5:21; Galatians 3:6–22; Philippians 3:8, 9. heirs. As adopted children of God through faith in Jesus Christ, believers become "heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ" (Rom. 8:17; cf. 1 Pet. 1:3, 4).

3:8 faithful saying. This indicates a common expression in the early church, used five times in the Pastoral Epistles (cf. 1 Tim. 1:15; 3:1; 4:9; 2 Tim. 2:11). profitable to men. That is, for the sake of evangelism. Again men (cf. v. 2; 2:11) is general, referring to those who respond by the holy witness to the gospel.

3:9 foolish disputes. Paul again warns against becoming embroiled in senseless discussions with the many false teachers on Crete (see 1:10, 14, 15), especially the Judaizers who contended that a Christian must be obedient to “the [Mosaic] Law,” a view that assaulted the doctrine of justification by grace through faith alone and, contrary to holy living, which was good and profitable, was “unprofitable and useless.” Proclaiming the truth, not arguing error, is the biblical way to evangelize.

3:10 Reject. Anyone in the church who is unsubmissive, self-willed, and divisive should be expelled. Two warnings are to be given, following the basic pattern for church discipline set forth by Christ (see notes on Matt. 18:15–17; cf. Rom. 16:17, 18; 2 Thess. 3:14, 15).

3:11 self-condemned. By his own ungodly behavior, a factious believer brings judgment on himself.

III. CONCLUSION (3:12–14)

3:12 Artemas. Nothing is known of this man beyond Paul’s obvious confidence in him. Tychicus. This “beloved brother [and] faithful minister” (Col. 4:7) accompanied Paul from Corinth to Asia Minor (Acts 20:4), carried the apostle’s letter to the Colossian church (Col. 4:7), and possibly his letter to Ephesus (see Eph. 6:21). Nicopolis. The name means “city of victory,” and this was only one of perhaps nine different cities so named because of decisive military battles that were won in or near them. This particular Nicopolis was probably in southern Greece, on the west coast of Achaia, which was a good place “to spend the winter.”

3:13 Zenas. Nothing is known of this believer whose expertise was either in biblical law or Roman law. Apollos. Originally from

Major Themes in Titus

Three major themes repeat themselves throughout Titus.

1. Work(s) (1:16; 2:7, 14; 3:1, 5, 8, 14)
2. Soundness in faith and doctrine (1:4, 9, 13; 2:1, 2, 7, 8, 10; 3:15)
3. Salvation (1:3, 4; 2:10, 13; 3:4, 6)

Alexandria, he was an outstanding teacher of Scripture who was converted to Christ after being acquainted only with the teaching of John the Baptist (Acts 18:24–28). Some of his followers apparently formed a faction in the church at Corinth (1 Cor. 1:11, 12; 3:4).

3:14 good works. Again, the emphasis is on good works as the platform for witnessing effectively (cf. v. 8; 1:13–16; 2:5, 8, 10, 12, 14).

IV. BENEDICTION (3:15)

3:15 All who are with me. Cf. 1 Corinthians 16:20; 2 Corinthians 13:12; Philippian 4:22; cf. also Romans 16:21–23; Colossians 4:10–14, where those with Paul are mentioned by name.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL TO PHILEMON

Title

Philemon, the recipient of this letter, was a prominent member of the church at Colosse (vv. 1, 2; cf. Col. 4:9), which met in his house (v. 2). The letter was for him, his family, and the church.

Author and Date

The book claims that the apostle Paul was its writer (vv. 1, 9, 19), a claim that few in the history of the church have disputed, especially since there is nothing in Philemon that a forger would have been motivated to write. It is one of the prison epistles, along with Ephesians, Philippians, and Colossians. Its close connection with Colossians, which Paul wrote at the same time (c. A.D. 60–62; cf. vv. 1, 16), brought early and unquestioned vindication of Paul's authorship by the early church fathers (e.g., Jerome, Chrysostom, and Theodore of Mopsuestia). The earliest of NT canons, the Muratorian (c. A.D. 170), includes Philemon. For biographical information on Paul, see Introduction to Romans: Author and Date; for the date and place of Philemon's writing, see Introductions to Ephesians and Philippians: Author and Date.

Background and Setting

Philemon had been saved under Paul's ministry, probably at Ephesus (v. 19), several years earlier. Wealthy enough to have a large house (cf. v. 2), Philemon also owned at least one slave, a man named Onesimus (lit. "useful"; a common name for slaves). Onesimus was not a believer at the time he stole some money (v. 18) from Philemon and ran away. Like countless thousands of other runaway slaves, Onesimus fled to Rome, seeking to lose himself in the imperial capital's teeming and nondescript slave population. Through circumstances not recorded in Scripture, Onesimus met Paul in Rome and became a Christian.

The apostle quickly grew to love this runaway slave (vv. 12, 16) and longed to keep Onesimus in Rome (v. 13), where he was providing valuable service to Paul in his imprisonment (v. 11). But by stealing and running away from Philemon, Onesimus had broken Roman law and defrauded his master. Paul knew those issues had to be dealt with, and decided to send Onesimus back to Colosse. It was too hazardous for him to make the trip alone (because of the danger of slave-catchers), so Paul sent him back with Tychicus, who was returning to Colosse with the epistle to the Colossians (Col. 4:7–9). Along with Onesimus, Paul sent Philemon this beautiful personal letter, urging him to forgive Onesimus and welcome him back to service as a brother in Christ (vv. 15–17).

Historical and Theological Themes

Philemon provides valuable historical insights into the early church's relationship to the institution of slavery. Slavery was widespread in the Roman Empire (according to some estimates, slaves constituted one-third, perhaps more, of the population) and an accepted part of life. In Paul's day, slavery had virtually eclipsed free labor. Slaves could be doctors, musicians, teachers, artists, librarians, or accountants; in short, almost all jobs could be and were filled by slaves.

Slaves were not legally considered persons, but were the tools of their masters. As such, they could be bought, sold, inherited, exchanged, or seized to pay their master's debt. Their masters had virtually unlimited power to punish them, and sometimes did so severely for the slightest infractions. By the time of the NT, however, slavery was beginning to change. Realizing that contented slaves were more productive, masters tended to treat them more leniently. It was not uncommon for a master to teach a slave his own trade, and some masters and slaves became close friends.

While still not recognizing them as persons under the law, the Roman Senate in A.D. 20 granted slaves accused of crimes the right to a trial. It also became more common for slaves to be granted (or to purchase) their freedom. Some slaves enjoyed very favorable and profitable service under their masters and were better off than many freemen because they were assured of care and provision. Many freemen struggled in poverty.

The NT nowhere directly attacks slavery; had it done so, the resulting slave insurrections would have been brutally suppressed and the message of the gospel hopelessly confused with that of social reform. Instead, Christianity undermined the evils of slavery by changing the hearts of slaves and masters. By emphasizing the spiritual equality of master and slave (v. 16; Gal. 3:28; Eph. 6:9; Col. 4:1; 1 Tim. 6:1, 2), the Bible did away with slavery's abuses. The rich theological theme that dominates the letter is forgiveness, a featured theme throughout NT Scripture (cf. Matt. 6:12–15; 18:21–35; Eph. 4:32; Col. 3:13). Paul's instruction here provides the biblical definition of forgiveness, without ever using the word.

Interpretive Challenges

There are no significant interpretive challenges in this personal letter from Paul to his friend Philemon.

Outline

- I. Greeting (1–3)
- II. The Character of One Who Forgives (4–7)
- III. The Actions of One Who Forgives (8–18)
- IV. The Motives of One Who Forgives (19–25)

I. GREETING (1–3)

1, 2 Following first-century custom, the salutation contains the names of the letter's author and its recipient. This is a very personal letter, and Philemon was one of only three individuals (Timothy and Titus are the others) to receive a divinely inspired letter from Paul.

1 prisoner of Christ Jesus. At the time of writing, Paul was a prisoner in Rome (see Introductions to Ephesians and Philippians: Author and Date). Paul was imprisoned for the sake of and by the sovereign will of Christ (cf. Eph. 3:1; 4:1; 6:19, 20; Phil. 1:13; Col. 4:3). By beginning with his imprisonment and not his apostolic authority, Paul made this letter a gentle and singular appeal to a friend. A reminder of Paul's severe hardships was bound to influence Philemon's willingness to do the comparatively easy task Paul was about to request. Timothy. See Introduction to 1 Timothy: Background and Setting; see notes on Acts 16:1–3; Philippians 1:1; 1 Timothy 1:2. He was not the coauthor of this letter, but probably had met Philemon at Ephesus and was with Paul when the apostle wrote the letter. Paul mentions Timothy here and in the other epistles (e.g.,

2 Cor. 1:1; Phil. 1:1; Col. 1:1; 1 Thess. 1:1; 2 Thess. 1:1) because he wanted him recognized as a leader and the non-apostolic heir apparent to Paul. Philemon. A wealthy member of the Colossian church which met in his house (see Introduction: Background and Setting). Church buildings were unknown until the third century.

2 Apphia, Archippus. Philemon's wife and son, respectively. in your house. First-century churches met in homes, and Paul wanted this personal letter read in the church that met at Philemon's house. This reading would hold Philemon accountable, as well as instruct the church on the matter of forgiveness.

3 Grace to you. The standard greeting that appears in all thirteen of Paul's NT letters. It highlighted salvation's means (grace) and its results (peace) and linked the Father and Son, thus affirming the deity of Christ.

II. THE CHARACTER OF ONE WHO FORGIVES (4–7)

5 In the Greek text, this verse is arranged in what is called a chiasmic construction. "Love" relates to the final phrase "toward all the saints.” This love of will, choice, self-sacrifice, and humility (Gal. 5:22) was a manifestation of Philemon’s genuine faith “toward the Lord Jesus” (cf. Rom. 5:5; Gal. 5:6; 1 John 3:14).

6 sharing. Usually rendered “fellowship,” the Greek word means much more than simply enjoying one another’s company. It refers to a mutual sharing of all life, which believers do because of their common life in Christ and mutual partnership or “belonging to each other” in the “faith.” effective. Lit. “powerful.” Paul wanted Philemon’s actions to send a powerful message to the church about the importance of forgiveness. acknowledgment. The deep, rich, full, experiential knowledge of the truth (see notes on Col. 1:9; 3:10).

7 hearts. This Greek word denotes the seat of human feelings (see note on Col. 3:12 where the same Greek word is translated “tender mercies”). refreshed. This comes from the Greek military term that describes an army at rest from a march.

III. THE ACTIONS OF ONE WHO FORGIVES (8–18)

Paul’s Spiritual Motivation of Philemon

1. Motivation through humility (v. 1a)
2. Motivation through identification (vv. 1b–3)
3. Motivation through appreciation (vv. 4–7)
4. Motivation through appeal (vv. 8–17)
5. Motivation through commitment (vv. 18–19)
6. Motivation through expectation (vv. 20–21)
7. Motivation through accountability (vv. 22–25) apostolic authority (see notes on Rom. 1:1; 1 Thess. 2:6), Paul could have ordered Philemon to accept Onesimus.

9 I rather appeal. In this situation, however, Paul did not rely on his authority but called for a response based on the bond of love between himself and Philemon (v. 7; cf. 2 Cor. 10:1). the aged. More than a reference to his chronological age (which at the time of this letter was about sixty), this description includes the toll that all the years of persecution, illnesses, imprisonments, difficult journeys, and constant concern for the churches had taken on Paul (see notes on 2 Cor. 11:23–30), making him feel and appear even older than he actually was. prisoner. See note on verse 1.

10 my son Onesimus. See Introduction: Background and Setting. To Paul, he was a son in the faith (see note on 1 Tim. 1:2). begotten . . . in my chains. While in prison at Rome, Paul had led him to faith in Christ.

11 unprofitable . . . profitable. Better translated “useless . . . useful,” this play on words carries the same root meaning as the Greek word from which the name Onesimus comes. Paul was making a play on words that basically said, “Useful formerly was useless, but now is useful.” Paul’s point is that Onesimus had been radically transformed by God’s grace.

14 voluntary. Or “of your own personal will.” Paul wanted Onesimus to minister alongside him, but only if Philemon openly and gladly agreed to release him.

15 perhaps. Paul was suggesting that God providentially ordered the overturning of the evil of Onesimus’s running away to produce eventual good (cf. Gen. 50:20; Rom. 8:28).

16 more than a slave . . . beloved brother. Paul did not call for Onesimus’s freedom (cf. 1 Cor. 7:20–22), but that Philemon would receive his slave now as a fellow believer in

| Onesimus' "Before and After" Conversion |                  |                |                |
|-----------------------------------------|------------------|----------------|----------------|
| BEFORE                                  | Physically       | Spiritually    | Eternally      |
| AFTER                                   | Philemon's slave | sin's slave    | hell's slave   |
|                                         | Philemon's slave | free in Christ | free in heaven |

Christ (cf. Eph. 6:9; Col. 4:1; 1 Tim. 6:2). Christianity never sought to abolish slavery, but rather to make the relationships within it just and kind. in the flesh. In this physical life (see note on Phil. 1:22), as they worked together. in the Lord. The master and slave were to enjoy spiritual oneness and fellowship as they worshiped and ministered together.

17–19 Paul offered to pay whatever restitution was necessary for Onesimus to be reconciled to Philemon, following the example of Jesus in reconciling sinners to God.

IV. THE MOTIVES OF ONE WHO FORGIVES (19–25)

19 with my own hand. See notes on Galatians 6:11; Colossians 4:18; cf. 2 Thessalonians 3:17. even your own self. Philemon owed Paul something far greater than the material debt Paul was offering to repay, since Paul had led him to saving faith, a debt Philemon could never repay.

20 let me have joy. See note on Philippians 2:2. By forgiving Onesimus, Philemon would keep the unity in the church at Colosse and bring joy to the chained apostle (cf. v. 7).

21 even more than I say. The more than forgiveness that Paul was urging upon Philemon was: (1) to welcome Onesimus back enthusiastically, not grudgingly (cf. Luke 15:22–24); (2) to permit Onesimus, in addition to his menial tasks, to minister spiritually with Philemon; or (3) to forgive any others who might have wronged Philemon. Whichever Paul intended, he was not subtly urging Philemon to grant Onesimus freedom (see note on v. 16).

22 a guest room. Lit. "a lodging," a place where Paul could stay when he visited Colosse. I shall be granted to you. Paul expected to be released from prison in the near future (cf. Phil. 2:23, 24), after which he could be with Philemon and the other Colossians again.

23 Epaphras. See note on Colossians 4:12.

24 Mark, Aristarchus. See note on Colossians 4:10. The story of the once-severed but now-mended relationship between Paul and Mark (Acts 15:38–40; 2 Tim. 4:11) would have been well known to the believers in Colosse (Col. 4:10). Listing Mark's name here would serve to remind Philemon that Paul himself had worked through the issues of forgiveness, and that the instructions he was passing on to his friend were ones the apostle himself had already implemented in his relationship with John Mark. Demas, Luke. See note on Colossians 4:14.

THE BOOK OF HEBREWS

Title

When the various NT books were formally brought together into one collection, shortly after A.D. 100, the titles were added for convenience. This epistle's title bears the traditional Greek title, "To the Hebrews," which was attested by at least the second century A.D. Within the epistle itself, however, there is no identification of the recipients as either Hebrews (Jews) or Gentiles. Since the epistle is filled with references to Hebrew history and religion and does not address any particular Gentile or pagan practice, the traditional title has been maintained.

Author and Date

The author of Hebrews is unknown. Paul, Barnabas, Silas, Apollos, Luke, Philip, Priscilla, Aquila, and Clement of Rome have been suggested by different scholars, but the epistle's vocabulary, style, and various literary characteristics do not clearly support any particular claim. It is significant that the writer includes himself among those people who had received confirmation of Christ's message from others (2:3). That would seem to rule out someone like Paul, who claimed that he had received such confirmation directly from God and not from men (Gal. 1:12).

Whoever the author was, he preferred citing OT references from the Greek OT (LXX) rather than from the Hebrew text. Even the early church expressed various opinions on authorship, and current scholarship admits the puzzle still has no solution. Therefore, it seems best to accept the epistle's anonymity. Ultimately, of course, the author was the Holy Spirit (2 Pet. 1:21).

The use of the present tense in 5:1–4; 7:21, 23, 27, 28; 8:3–5, 13; 9:6–9, 13, 25; 10:1, 3, 4, 8, 11; and 13:10, 11 suggest that the Levitical priesthood and sacrificial system were still in operation when the epistle was composed. Since the temple was destroyed by General (later Emperor) Titus Vespasian in A.D. 70, the epistle must have been written prior to that date. In addition, it may be noted that Timothy had just been released from prison (13:23) and that persecution was becoming severe (10:32–39; 12:4; 13:3). These details suggest a date for the epistle around A.D. 67–69.

Background and Setting

Emphases on the Levitical priesthood and on sacrifices, as well as the absence of any reference to the Gentiles, support the conclusion that a community of Hebrews was the recipient of the epistle. Although these Hebrews were primarily converts to Christ, there were probably a number of unbelievers in their midst who were attracted by the message of salvation, but who had not yet made a full commitment of faith in Christ (see Interpretive Challenges). One thing is clear from the contents of the epistle: the community of Hebrews was facing the possibility of intensified persecution (10:32–39; 12:4).

As they confronted this possibility, the Hebrews were tempted to cast aside any identification with Christ. They may have considered demoting Christ from God's Son to a mere angel. Such a precedent had already been set in the Qumran community of messianic Jews living near the Dead Sea. They had dropped out of society, established a religious commune, and included the worship of angels in their brand of reformed Judaism. The Qumran community had even gone so far as to claim that the angel Michael was higher in status than the coming Messiah. These kinds of doctrinal aberrations could explain the emphasis in chapter 1 on the superiority of Christ over the angels.

Possible locations for the recipients of the epistle include Palestine, Egypt, Italy, Asia Minor, and Greece. The community that was the primary recipient may have circulated the epistle among those of Hebrew background in neighboring areas and churches. Those believers probably had not seen Christ personally. Apparently, they had been evangelized by "those who heard" Christ and whose ministries had been authenticated "with signs and wonders, with various miracles" (2:3, 4). Thus, the recipients could have been in a church outside Judea and Galilee or in a church in those areas, but established among people in the generation following those who had been eyewitnesses of Christ. The congregation was not new or untaught ("by this time you ought to be teachers"), yet some of them still needed "milk and not solid food" (5:12).

"Those from Italy" (13:24) is an ambiguous reference, since it could mean either those who had left Italy and were living elsewhere, or those who were still in Italy and being singled out as native residents of that country. Greece or Asia Minor must also be considered because of the apparently early establishment of the church there, and because of the consistent use of the LXX.

The generation of Hebrews receiving this epistle had practiced the Levitical sacrifices at the temple in Jerusalem. Jews living in exile had substituted the synagogue for the temple but still felt a deep attraction to the temple worship. Some had the means to make regular pilgrimages to the temple in Jerusalem. The writer of this epistle emphasized the superiority of Christianity over Judaism and the superiority of Christ's once-for-all sacrifice over the repeated and imperfect Levitical sacrifices observed in the temple.

Historical and Theological Themes

Since the Book of Hebrews is grounded in the work of the Levitical priesthood, an understanding of the Book of Leviticus is essential for properly interpreting Hebrews. Israel's sin had continually interrupted God's fellowship with His chosen and covenant people, Israel. Therefore, He graciously and sovereignly established a system of sacrifices that symbolically represented the inner repentance of sinners and His divine forgiveness.

However, the need for sacrifices never ended because the people and priests continued to sin. The need of all mankind was for a perfect priest and a perfect sacrifice that would once and for all actually remove sin. God's provision for that perfect priest and sacrifice in Christ is the central message of Hebrews.

The epistle to the Hebrews is a study in contrast, between the imperfect and incomplete provisions of the Old Covenant, given under Moses, and the infinitely better provisions of the New Covenant offered by the perfect high priest, God's only Son and the Messiah, Jesus Christ. Included in the "better" provisions are: a better hope, testament, promise, sacrifice, substance, country, and resurrection. Those who belong to the new covenant dwell in a completely new and heavenly atmosphere, worship a heavenly Savior, have a heavenly calling, receive a heavenly gift, are citizens of a heavenly country, look forward to a heavenly Jerusalem, and have their very names written in heaven.

One of the key theological themes in Hebrews is that all believers now have direct access to God under the New Covenant and, therefore, may approach the throne of God boldly (4:16; 10:22). One's hope is in the very presence of God, into which he follows the Savior (6:19, 20; 10:19, 20). The primary teaching symbolized by the tabernacle service was that believers under the covenant of law did not have direct access to the presence of God (9:8), so were shut out of the Holy of Holies. The Book of Hebrews may briefly be summarized in this way: Believers in Jesus Christ, as God's perfect sacrifice for sin, have the perfect High Priest through whose ministry everything is new and better than under the covenant of law.

This epistle is more than a doctrinal treatise, however. It is intensely practical in its application to everyday living (see ch. 13). The writer himself even refers to his letter as a "word of exhortation" (13:22; cf. Acts 13:15). Exhortations designed to stir the readers into action are found throughout the text.

Another significant aspect of this epistle is its clear exposition of selected OT passages. The writer was clearly a skilled expositor of the Word of God. His example is instructive for preachers and teachers:

Interpretive Challenges

A proper interpretation of this epistle requires the recognition that it addresses three distinct groups of Jews: (1) believers; (2) unbelievers who were intellectually convinced of the gospel; and (3) unbelievers who were attracted by the gospel and the person of Christ, but who had reached no final conviction about Him. Failure to acknowledge these groups leads to interpretations inconsistent with the rest of Scripture.

The primary group addressed were Hebrew Christians who suffered rejection and persecution by fellow Jews (10:32–34), although none as yet had been martyred (12:4). The letter was written to give them encouragement and confidence in Christ, their Messiah and High Priest. They were an immature group of believers who were tempted to hold on to the symbolic and spiritually powerless rituals and traditions of Judaism.

The second group addressed were Jewish unbelievers who were convinced of the basic truths of the gospel, but who had not placed their faith in Jesus Christ as their own Savior and Lord. They were intellectually persuaded but spiritually uncommitted. These unbelievers are addressed in such passages as 2:1–3; 6:4–6; 10:26–29; and 12:15–17.

The third group addressed were Jewish unbelievers who were not convinced of the gospel's truth, but had experienced some exposure to it. Chapter 9 is largely devoted to them (see especially vv. 11, 14, 15, 27, 28).

By far the most serious interpretive challenge is found in 6:4–6. The phrase "once enlightened" is often taken to refer to Christians, and the accompanying warning taken to indicate the danger of losing their salvation if "they fall away" and "crucify again for themselves the Son of God." But there is no mention of their being saved and they are not described with any terms that apply only to believers (such as "holy," "born again," "righteous," or "saints").

This problem arises from inaccurately identifying the spiritual condition of the ones being addressed. In this case, they were unbelievers who had been exposed to God's redemptive truth, and perhaps made a profession of faith, but had not exercised genuine saving faith. In 10:26, the reference once again is to apostate Christians, not to genuine believers who are often incorrectly thought to lose their salvation because of their sins.

I. THE SUPERIORITY OF JESUS CHRIST'S POSITION (1:1–4:13)

A. A Better Home (1:1–3)

1:1 various times. The meaning is “many portions” (as of books). Over the course of possibly 1,800 years (from Job, c. 2200 B.C. [?] to Nehemiah, c. 400 B.C.) the OT was written in thirty-nine different books reflecting different historical times, locations, cultures, and situations. various ways. These included visions, symbols, and parables, written in both poetry and prose. Though the literary form and style varied, it was always God's revelation of what He wanted His people to know. The progressive revelation of the OT described God's program of redemption (1 Pet. 1:10–12) and His will for His people (Rom. 15:4; 2 Tim. 3:16, 17).

1:2 last days . . . Jews understood the “last days” to mean the time when Messiah (Christ) would come (cf. Num. 24:14; Jer. 33:14–16; Mic. 5:1, 2; Zech. 9:9, 16). The fulfillment of the messianic prophecies commenced with the advent of the Messiah. Since He came, it has been the “last days” (cf. 1 Cor. 10:11; James 5:3; 1 Pet. 1:20; 4:7; 1 John 2:18). In the past, God gave revelation through His prophets, but in these times, beginning with the Messiah's advent, God spoke the message of redemption through the Son. heir. Everything that exists will ultimately come under the control of the Son of God, the Messiah (cf. Pss. 2:8, 9; 89:27; Rom. 11:36; Col. 1:16). This inheritance is the full extension of the authority which the Father has given to the Son (cf. Dan. 7:13, 14; Matt. 28:18), as the “firstborn” (see note on v. 6). worlds. The word can also be translated “ages.” It refers to time, space, energy, and matter—the entire universe and everything that makes it function (cf. John 1:3).

1:3 brightness. The term is used only here in the NT. It expresses the concept of sending forth light or shining (cf. John 8:12; 2 Cor. 4:4, 6). The meaning of “reflection” is not appropriate here. The Son is not just reflecting God’s glory; He is God and radiates His own essential glory. express image of His person. The term translated “express image” is used only here in the NT. In extrabiblical literature, it was employed for an engraving on wood, an etching in metal, a brand on animal hide, an impression in clay, and a stamped image on coins. Person is a word conveying nature, being, or essence. The Son is the perfect imprint, the exact representation of the nature and essence of God in time and space (cf. John 14:9; Col. 1:15; 2:9). upholding. The universe and everything in it is constantly sustained by the Son’s powerfully effective word (Col. 1:17). The term also conveys the concept of movement or progress. The Son of God directs all things toward the consummation of all things according to God’s sovereign purpose. He who spoke all things into existence also sustains His creation and consummates His purpose by His word. purged our sins. By the substitutionary sacrifice of Himself on the Cross (cf. Titus 2:14; Rev. 1:5). sat down at the right hand. The right hand is the place of power, authority, and honor (cf. v. 13; Rom.

8:34; 1 Pet. 3:22). It is also the position of subordination, implying that the Son is under the authority of the Father (cf. 1 Cor. 15:27, 28). The seat that Christ has taken is the throne of God (8:1; 10:12; 12:2) where He rules as sovereign Lord. This depicts a victorious Savior, not a defeated martyr. While the primary thrust of this phrase is the enthronement of Christ, His sitting might also imply the completion of His atoning work.

B. Better Than the Angels (1:4–2:18)

1. A greater message (1:4–14)

1:4 having become. The Greek verb used here refers to a change of state, not a change of existence. The Son in His divine essence has eternally existed, but for a while He was made lower than the angels (2:9) and afterward was exalted to an infinitely higher position by virtue of what He had accomplished in His redemptive work (see notes on Phil. 2:9–11). angels. Spirit beings created by God to minister to Him and do His bidding. The Jews held angels in very high regard as the highest beings next to God. The sect of Judaism which had established a community at Qumran taught that the archangel

| Exalted Lord (v. 3)                       | Psalms 110:1 (v. 13)                     |

Michael's authority rivaled or surpassed that of the Messiah. The writer of Hebrews clearly disclaims any such concept. The Son of God is superior to the angels. more excellent name. That name is Lord (see notes on Phil 2:9–11). No angel is Sovereign Lord (vv. 6, 13, 14).

1:5 Quoting from Psalm 2:7 and 2 Samuel 7:14, the writer presents the unique relationship which the Son has with the Father. No angel ever experienced such a relationship. Son. A title of Christ expressing the voluntary submission of the second person of the Godhead to the first person for the purpose of fulfilling the program of redemption established in eternity past (see note on 2 Tim. 1:9). Cf. verses 2, 8; 3:6; 4:14; 5:5, 8; 6:6; 7:3, 28; 10:29; 11:17 and many other references in the NT. His sonship was also expressed in the OT (cf. Ps. 2:12; Prov. 30:4). The word today indicates that God's Son was born in a point of time. He was always God, but He fulfilled His role as Son in space and time at His Incarnation and was affirmed as such by His Resurrection (Rom. 1:4).

1:6 again. This adverb can be taken with "brings" as a reference to the Second Coming of Christ or with "says" to indicate yet another quotation from the OT ("and again, when He brings the firstborn into the world, He says"; cf. v. 5; 2:13). The NKJV has chosen the former sense. firstborn. See notes on Romans 8:29; Colossians 1:15, where it refers to prominence of position or title, not to the order of time. Christ was not the first to be born on the earth, but He holds the highest position of sovereignty. As "firstborn," He is also set apart to the service of God and, being preeminent, is entitled to the inheritance (cf. v. 2; Gen. 43:33; Ex. 13:2; 22:29; Deut. 21:17; Ps. 89:27). Let all the angels. Quoted from the LXX translation of Deuteronomy 32:43 (cf. Ps. 97:7). Since the angels are commanded to worship the Messiah, the Messiah must be superior to them. Five of the seven OT passages quoted in this first chapter of Hebrews are in contexts related to the Davidic covenant, which emphasizes the concepts of sonship, kingship, and kingdom. Although Deuteronomy 32:43 is not in a Davidic covenant context, it has an affinity to the teaching of Psalm 89:6 (a psalm of the Davidic covenant), which declares that the heavenly beings themselves must recognize the lordship of God. Reference is made to "the firstborn" in the introduction to the Deuteronomy quote. In addition, "firstborn" is mentioned in Psalm 89:27.

1:7 of the angels. The writer continues biblical proofs that the angels are subservient to the Son of God by citing Psalm 104:4. This is the only one of the seven OT quotations in chapter 1 which has no connection at all to the Davidic covenant. The quote merely defines the primary nature and purpose of angels.

1:8, 9 He says. Quoting from Psalm 45:6, 7, the writer argues for the deity and the lordship of the Son over creation (cf. v. 3). The text is all the more significant since the declaration of the Son's deity is presented as the words of the Father Himself (cf. Is. 9:6; Jer. 23:5, 6; John 5:18; Titus 2:13; 1 John 5:20). It is clear that the writer of Hebrews had the three messianic offices in mind: Prophet (v. 1), Priest (v. 3), and King (vv. 3, 8). Induction into those three offices required anointing (v. 9). The title Messiah (Christ) means "anointed one" (cf. Is. 61:1–3; Luke 4:16–21).

1:9 companions. The term is used (in the NT) only in Hebrews (3:1, 14; 6:4; 12:8) and in Luke 5:7. In this occurrence, it might refer to angels or to other men who were similarly anointed for their offices: the OT prophets, priests, and kings. If the "oil of gladness" is the same as "oil of joy" referred to in Isaiah 61:3, the reference would clearly be to those who had mourned in Zion, but who would one day be clothed with praise and called “trees of righteousness”—references to men, not angels. No matter how noble such men were, Christ is superior.

1:10–12 Quoted from Psalm 102:25–27. The Son who created the universe (John 1:1–3) will one day destroy the heavens and earth that He created (see notes on 2 Pet. 3:10–12), but He remains unchanged. Immutability is yet another characteristic of the divine essence. Once again, the OT testifies of the Son’s deity.

1:13, 14 The writer reemphasizes the lordship of the Son by quoting Psalm 110:1. While Christ’s destiny is to reign (cf. v. 3; Matt. 22:44; Acts 2:35), the angels’ destiny is to serve the recipients of salvation (see note on 1 Cor. 6:3). This is the seventh and final quotation from the OT to bolster the argument that, as Son and Lord, the Messiah is superior to the angels.

1:13 enemies Your footstool. This quote from Psalm 110:1 is repeated in the NT at 10:13; Matthew 22:44; Mark 12:36; Luke 20:43; Acts 2:35, and expresses the sovereignty of Christ over all (cf. Phil. 2:10).

2. A greater message (2:1–18)

2:1–4 In order to drive home the importance of the superiority of the Son of God over angels, the writer urges the readers to respond. “We” includes all those who are Hebrews. Some had given intellectual assent to the doctrine of Messiah’s superiority to the angels, but had not yet committed themselves to Him as God and Lord. He deserves their worship as much as He deserves the worship of the angels.

2:1 earnest heed . . . drift away. Both phrases have nautical connotations. The first refers to mooring a ship, tying it up at the dock. The second was often used of a ship that had been allowed to drift past the harbor. The warning is to secure oneself to the truth of the gospel, being careful not to pass by the only harbor of salvation. The closest attention must be paid to these very serious matters of the Christian faith. The readers in their tendency to apathy are in danger of making shipwreck of their lives (cf. 6:19; see note on 1 Tim. 1:19).

2:2 if. The Greek term assumes a fulfilled condition and here carries the idea: “In view of the fact that . . .” angels. Angels were instrumental in bringing God’s Law to His people at Mount Sinai (cf. Deut. 33:1, 2; Ps. 68:17; Acts 7:38, 53; Gal. 3:19). transgression and disobedience. The former means to step across the line, in an overt sin of commission. The latter carries the idea of shutting one’s ears to God’s commands, thereby committing a sin of omission. Both are willful, serious, and require just judgment.

2:3 how shall we escape. If disobedience to the older covenant of law brought swift judgment, how much more severe will be the judgment of disobedience to the New Covenant gospel of salvation, which was mediated by the Son who is superior to the angels (cf. Matt. 10:14, 15; 11:20–24)? The messenger and message of the New Covenant are greater than the messengers and message of the older covenant. The greater the privilege, the greater the punishment for disobedience or neglect (10:29; cf. Luke 12:47). by those who heard Him. This phrase reveals the succession of evangelism. That generation of Hebrews would not have heard if the previous generation of witnesses had not passed the message along (cf. 1 Tim. 2:5–7).

2:4 signs . . . wonders . . . miracles . . . gifts. The supernatural powers demonstrated by Jesus and by His apostles were the Father’s divine confirmation of the gospel of Jesus Christ, His Son (cf. John 10:38; Acts 2:22; Rom. 15:19; 1 Cor. 14:22; see note on 2 Cor. 12:12). This authentication of the message was the purpose of such miraculous deeds. the Holy Spirit. The epistle's first reference to the Holy Spirit refers in passing to His ministry of confirming the message of salvation by means of miraculous gifts. Mentioned elsewhere in the epistle are the Holy Spirit's involvement in the revelation of Scripture (3:7; 10:15), in teaching (9:8), in pre-salvation operations (6:4, perhaps His convicting work; 10:29, common grace), and in ministry to Christ (9:14).

2:5 world. The term refers to the inhabited earth. The reference is to the great millennial kingdom (cf. Zech. 14:9; Rev. 20:1–5). Angels will not reign over the messianic kingdom.

2:6–8 Quoted from Psalm 8:4–6 (cf. 1 Cor. 15:27, 28; Eph. 1:22).

2:6 in a certain place. This is not an indication that the writer was ignorant of the source of the quotation that follows. The location of the quotation is not as significant as its divine authorship. Perhaps it is significant that the author of Hebrews is not identified either. The writer may have desired that his readers understand that the Holy Spirit is the real author of all Scripture (cf. 2 Tim. 3:16; 2 Pet. 1:21). man . . . son of man. Both refer to mankind, not to Christ. The passage asks why God would ever bother with man. As the following verses demonstrate (vv. 9, 10), the Incarnation of Christ is the greatest proof of God's love and regard for mankind. Christ was not sent in the form of an angel. He was sent in the form of a man.

2:7 angels. Angels were given supernatural powers by the Creator. They have continual access to the throne of God (cf. Job 1:6; 2:1; Rev. 5:11) and are not subject to death.

2:8 subjection. In spite of the superiority of angels to mankind, God had originally placed the administration of the earth into the hands of mankind (Gen. 1:26–28). Due to the Fall (Gen. 3), however, mankind has been incapable of fulfilling that divinely ordained position.

2:9 glory and honor. Because Jesus "became obedient to the point of death . . . God also has highly exalted Him" (Phil. 2:8, 9). By

Warning Passages

Beyond its value as a doctrinal treatise, Hebrews is intensely practical in its application to everyday living. The writer himself even refers to his letter as a "word of exhortation" (13:22). Exhortations designed to stir the readers into action are found throughout the text. Those exhortations are given in the form of six warnings:

1. Warning against drifting from "the things we have heard" (2:1–4)
2. Warning against disbelieving the "voice" of God (3:7–14)
3. Warning against degenerating from "the elementary principles of Christ" (5:11–6:20)
4. Warning against despising "the knowledge of the truth" (10:26–39)
5. Warning against devaluing "the grace of God" (12:15–17)
6. Warning against departing from Him "who speaks" (12:25–29)

For example, when the writer warns of the danger of drifting (2:1), he uses some vivid nautical terms. The phrase "earnest heed" refers to mooring a ship by securing it to a dock. The second phrase "drift away" was often used of a ship that had been allowed to drift past the harbor. The warning is to secure oneself to the truth of the gospel in such a way as to not pass by the only harbor of salvation. The alternate tendency toward apathy points to those who make a shipwreck of their lives.

His redemptive work, Christ has fulfilled all that is required as the supreme representative of mankind. By His Incarnation, substitutionary sacrifice, and victory over sin and death (cf. Rom. 6:23; 1 John 4:10), He has fulfilled man's original purpose. As the Second Adam (1 Cor. 15:47), He was for a short time lower than the angels. Now, He has glory and honor, and all things (including angels) are subject to Him. taste death for everyone. Everyone who believes, that is. The death of Christ can only be applied in its efficacy to those who come to God repentantly in faith, asking for saving grace and forgiveness of sins. See notes on 2 Corinthians 5:21; 1 Timothy 2:6; 4:10; Titus 2:11.

2:10 fitting. What God did through the humiliation of Jesus Christ was perfectly consistent with His sovereign righteousness and holiness. Without Christ's humiliation and suffering, there could be no redemption. Without redemption, there could be no glorification (cf. Rom. 8:18, 29, 30). captain. The term is also used in 12:2 and Acts 5:31. It could be translated "pioneer," "leader," or "originator." Christ is the source (cf. "author" in 5:9, which has the meaning of cause), the initiator, and the leader in regard to salvation. He has led the way into heaven as our forerunner (6:20). perfect. In His divine nature, Christ was already perfect. However, His human nature was perfected through obedience, including suffering, in order that He might be an understanding high priest, an example for believers (cf. 5:8, 9; 7:25–28; Phil. 2:8; 1 Pet. 2:21), and establish the perfect righteousness (Matt. 3:15) to be imputed to believers (2 Cor. 5:21; Phil. 3:8, 19).

2:11 sanctifies. Sanctification sets a person apart for service through purification from sin and conformity to the holiness of God (cf. 10:10).

2:12 My brethren. Quoted from Psalm

22:22. Jesus had taught that those who do the will of the Father in obedience to His word are His brothers and mother (Matt. 12:50; Luke 8:21). He never directly referred to His disciples by the title of "brethren" until after His Resurrection (Matt. 28:10; John 20:17). Not until He had paid the price for their salvation did they truly become His spiritual brothers and sisters. The use of the term demonstrates His full identification with mankind in order to provide complete redemption (Phil. 2:7–9).

2:13 The citation of Isaiah 8:17, 18 (cf. 2 Sam. 22:3) emphasizes the point made in verses 9–11: that Christ had fully identified Himself with mankind by taking a human nature. He demonstrated the reality of His human nature by His reliance upon God during His earthly sojourn.

2:14 partaken . . . shared. The Greek word for partaken means fellowship, communion, or partnership. Shared means to take hold of something that is not related to one's own kind. The Son of God was not by nature "flesh and blood," but took upon Himself that nature for the sake of providing redemption for mankind. death . . . power of death. This is the ultimate purpose of the Incarnation: Jesus came to earth to die. By dying, He was able to conquer death in His Resurrection (John 14:19). By conquering death, He rendered Satan powerless against all who are saved. Satan's using the power of death is subject to God's will (cf. Job 2:6).

2:15 fear of death. For the believer, "death is swallowed up in victory" (1 Cor. 15:54). Therefore, the fear of death and its spiritual bondage have been brought to an end through the work of Christ.

2:16 give aid. The literal meaning is to "take hold of." The sense of "giving aid" is from the picture of a taking hold of someone in order to push or pull him to safety, to rescue him. However, there was no thought in Judaism that the Messiah's entrance into the world would be to give aid to the angels. The contrast, using this translation, is weak in comparison with all that has been previously said about Christ's superiority to the angels. The context presents the identification of Christ with mankind in His Incarnation. He took upon Himself a human nature (vv. 9–14, 17). When the writer wished to express the concept of giving aid, he chose a different Greek word in verse 18 (also, 4:16). Therefore, the translation, "take on the nature of," is to be preferred. seed of Abraham. Christ is that promised seed (see notes on Gal. 3:16). Since the readers are Hebrews, they would certainly identify themselves with this description. The Messiah had been born in the line of Abraham in fulfillment of the OT prophecies (Matt. 1:1). One of the chief purposes for the Incarnation was the salvation of Israel (Matt. 1:21). Yet another purpose was the fulfillment of the Abrahamic covenant in regard to the promised seed. Of all peoples, the Hebrews should be the first to recognize the significance and importance of the Incarnation.

2:17 propitiation. The word means "to conciliate" or "satisfy." See note on Romans 3:25. Christ's work of propitiation is related to His high priestly ministry. By His partaking of a human nature, Christ demonstrated His mercy to mankind and His faithfulness to God by satisfying God's requirement for sin and thus obtaining for His people full forgiveness. Cf. 1 John 2:2; 4:10.

2:18 tempted. The genuineness of Christ's humanity is demonstrated by the fact that He was subject to temptation. By experiencing temptation, Jesus became fully capable of understanding and sympathizing with His human brethren (cf. 4:15). He felt the full force of temptation. Though we often yield to temptation before we feel its full force, Jesus resisted temptation even when the greatest enticement for yielding had become evident (cf. Luke 4:1–13). able to aid . . . tempted. See notes on 4:15, 16; 1 Corinthians 10:13.

C. Better Than Moses (3:1–19)

3:1–6 This section presents the superiority of Jesus over the highly revered Moses. The Lord had spoken with Moses "face to face, as a man speaks to his friend" (Ex. 33:11) and had given the Law to him (Neh. 9:13, 14). The commandments and rituals of the law were the Jews' supreme priorities, and to them Moses and the Law were synonymous. Both the OT and the NT refer to the commands of God as the "Law of Moses" (Josh. 8:31; 1 Kin. 2:3; Luke 2:22; Acts 13:39). Yet, as great as Moses was, Jesus was infinitely greater.

3:1 holy brethren. The phrase occurs only here and in 1 Thessalonians 5:27, where some manuscripts omit "holy." The writer addresses believers who have a "heavenly calling" (cf. Phil. 3:14). They are elsewhere described as desiring a "heavenly country" (11:16) and as coming to "the heavenly Jerusalem" (12:22). They are "holy" in the sense that they are set apart unto God and identified with the heavenly realm—citizens of heaven more than citizens of earth. calling. The reference, as always in the NT epistles, is to the effective summons to salvation in Christ (cf. Rom. 8:30; 1 Cor. 7:21). consider. The writer asks for the readers' complete attention and diligent observation of the superiority of Jesus Christ. Apostle and High Priest. An apostle is a "sent one" who has the rights, power, and authority of the one who sends him. Jesus was sent to earth by the Father (cf. John 3:17, 34; 5:36–38; 8:42). The topic of the high priesthood of Christ, which was begun in 2:17, 18 and is mentioned again here, will be taken up again in greater detail in 4:14–10:18. Meanwhile, the writer presents the supremacy of Christ to Moses (vv. 1–6), to Joshua (4:8), and to all other national heroes and OT preachers whom Jews held in high esteem. Jesus Himself spoke of His superiority to Moses in the same context in which He spoke of His being sent by the Father (John 5:36–38, 45–47; cf. Luke 16:29–31). Moses had been sent by God to deliver His people from historical Egypt and its bondage (Ex. 3:10). Jesus was sent by God to deliver His people from spiritual Egypt and its bondage (2:15). of our confession. Christ is the center of our confession of faith in the gospel, both in creed and public testimony. The term is used again in 4:14 and 10:23 (cf. 2 Cor. 9:13; 1 Tim. 6:12). In all three uses in Hebrews, there is a sense of urgency. Surely, the readers would not give up Christ, whom they had professed, and reject what He had done for them, if they could understand the superiority of His person and work.

3:2 house. The term refers to a family of people rather than a building or dwelling (cf. v. 6; 1 Tim. 3:15). Those who were stewards of a household must above all be faithful (1 Cor. 4:2). Both Moses (Num. 12:7) and Christ (2:17) faithfully fulfilled their individual, divine appointments to care for the people of God.

3:3, 4 He who built. Moses was only a part of God's household of faith, whereas Jesus was the creator of that household (cf. 2 Sam. 7:13; Zech. 6:12, 13; Eph. 2:19–22; 1 Pet. 2:4, 5) and, therefore, is greater than Moses and equal to God.

3:5, 6 servant . . . Son. The term for servant implies a position of dignity and freedom, not slavery (cf. Ex. 14:31; Josh. 1:2). However, even as the highest-ranking servant, Moses could never hold the position of Son, which is Christ's alone (cf. John 8:35).

3:5 spoken afterward. Moses was faithful primarily as a testimony to that which was to come in Christ (cf. 11:24–27; see note on John 5:46).

3:6 whose house we are. See notes on verse 2; Ephesians 2:22; 1 Timothy 3:15; 1 Peter 2:5; 4:17. if we hold fast. Cf. verse 14. This is not speaking of how to be saved or remain saved (cf. 1 Cor. 15:2). It means rather that perseverance in faithfulness is proof of real faith. The person who returns to the rituals of the Levitical system to contribute to his own salvation proves he was never truly part of God's household (see note on 1 John 2:19), whereas the one who abides in Christ gives evidence of his genuine membership in that household (cf. Matt. 10:22; Luke 8:15; John 8:31; 15:4–6). The promise of God will fulfill this holding fast (1 Thess. 5:24; Jude 24, 25). See note on Matthew 24:13. hope. See the writer's further description of this hope in 6:18, 19. This hope rests in Christ Himself, whose redemptive work has accomplished our salvation (Rom. 5:1, 2; see note on 1 Pet. 1:3).

3:7–11 The writer cites Psalm 95:7–11 as the words of its ultimate author, the Holy Spirit (cf. 4:7; 9:8; 10:15). This passage describes the Israelites' wilderness wanderings after their delivery from Egypt. Despite God's miraculous works and His gracious, providential faithfulness to them, the people still failed to commit themselves to Him in faith (cf. Ex. 17; Num. 14:22, 23; Ps. 78:40–53). The writer of Hebrews presents a three-point exposition of the OT passage: (1) beware of unbelief (vv. 12–19); (2) be afraid of falling short (4:1–10); and (3) be diligent to enter (4:11–13). The themes of the exposition include urgency, obedience (including faith), perseverance, and rest.

3:7 Today. The reference is to the present moment while the words of God are fresh in the mind. There is a sense of urgency to immediately give heed to the voice of God. This urgency is emphasized by repeating the reference to “today” from Psalm 95:7 three more times (vv. 13, 15; 4:7) and is the theme of the writer’s exposition (cf. 2 Cor. 6:2).

3:11 *My rest. The earthly rest which God promised to give was life in the land of Canaan which Israel would receive as their inheritance (Deut. 12:9, 10; Josh. 21:44; 1 Kin. 8:56). Because of rebellion against God, an entire generation of the children of Israel was prohibited from entering into that rest in the Promised Land (cf. Deut. 28:65; Lam. 1:3). The application of this picture is to an individual’s spiritual rest in the Lord, which has precedent in the OT (cf. Ps. 116:7; Is. 28:12). At salvation, every believer enters the true rest, the realm of spiritual promise, never again laboring to achieve through personal effort a righteousness that pleases God. God wanted both kinds of rest for that generation which was delivered from Egypt.

3:12 *brethren. This admonition is addressed to those having the same potential characteristics as the generation which perished in the wilderness without ever seeing the land of promise. They were unbelieving Jewish brethren who were in the company of the “holy brethren” (v. 1). They were admonished to believe and be saved before it was too late. See Introduction: Interpretive Challenges. an evil heart. All people are born with such a heart (Jer. 17:9). In the case of these Hebrews, that evil manifested itself in disbelief of the gospel which moved them in the opposite way from God.

3:13 *exhort one another daily. Both individual accountability and corporate responsibility are intended in this admonition. As long as the distressing days were upon them and they were tempted to return to the ineffective Levitical system, they were to encourage one another to identify completely with Jesus Christ. hardened. Repeated rejection of the gospel concerning Jesus results in a progressive hardening of the heart and will ultimately result in outright antagonism to the gospel. Cf. 6:4–6; 10:26–29; Acts 19:9. deceitfulness. Sin lies and deceives, using every trickery possible (cf. Rom. 7:11; 2 Thess. 2:10; James 1:14–16). The Hebrews deceived themselves with the reasoning that their rejection of Jesus Christ was being faithful to the older system. Their willingness to hang on to the Levitical system was really a rejection of the living Word (4:12) of the “living God” (v. 12), who through Christ had opened up a “new and living way” (10:20). Choosing the path of unbelief always leads to death (v. 17; 10:26–29; cf. 2:14, 15; Jude 5).

3:14 The exhortation is similar to that in verse 6. It repeats the theme of perseverance.

3:15–19 The quotation from Psalm 95:7, 8 is repeated (cf. v. 7). The first quotation was followed with exposition emphasizing “today” and the urgency that word conveys. This second quotation is followed with exposition emphasizing the word rebellion (vv. 15, 16) and presenting the theme of obedience by means of its antithesis, disobedience. Four different terms are employed to drive the point of rebellion home: rebelled (v. 16), sinned (v. 17), did not obey (v. 18), and unbelief (v. 19). This initial third (see notes on vv. 7–11) of the writer's exposition of Psalm 95:7–11 is summed up by the obvious conclusion that the Israelites who died in the wilderness were victims of their own unbelief (v. 19).

D. A Better Rest (4:1–13)

4:1–10 The second section of the writer's exposition of Psalm 95:7–11 goes beyond the description of unbelief and its dire consequences (3:12–19) to define the nature of the "rest" which the disobedient had forfeited. The first section dealt primarily with Psalm 95:7, 8; the second section deals primarily with Psalm 95:11.

4:1 promise. This is the first use of this important word in Hebrews. The content of this promise is defined as "entering His rest." His rest. See note on 3:11. This is the rest which God gives; therefore, it is called "My rest" (Ps. 95:11) and "His rest." For believers, God's rest includes His peace, confidence of salvation, reliance on His strength, and assurance of a future heavenly home (cf. Matt. 11:29). come short. The entire phrase could be translated "lest you think you have come too late to enter into the rest of God" (cf. 12:15). With reverential fear, all are to examine their own spiritual condition (cf. 1 Cor. 10:12; 2 Cor. 13:5) and to actively press for commitment on the part of others (cf. Jude 23).

4:2 faith. Mere knowledge of God's message is not sufficient. It must be appropriated by saving faith. Later in the epistle, a much longer exposition will take up this topic of faith (10:19–12:29). The writer's point of comparison is that, like the Jews who left Egypt (3:16–19), his generation had also received God's message through the preaching of the gospel; they had been evangelized.

4:3 we . . . do enter. Those who exercise faith in the message of God will enter into their spiritual rest. This is the corollary of Psalm 95:11 which states the opposite side: that the unbeliever will not enter into the rest which God provides. finished from the foundation of the world. The spiritual rest which God gives is not something incomplete or unfinished. It is a rest which is based on a finished work which God purposed in eternity past, just like the rest which God took after He finished creation (v. 4).

4:4, 5 By way of explanation for the statement in verse 3, the writer cites the illustration of the seventh day of creation and quotes Genesis 2:2. Then he repeats the last part of Psalm 95:11.

4:6, 7 The opportunity to enter God's rest remains open (cf. "a promise remains" in v. 1). It is not yet too late. God had offered the rest to His people in Moses' time and continued to offer it in David's time. He is still patiently inviting His people to enter His rest (cf. Rom. 10:21). Quoting Psalm 95:7, 8 once again (see 3:7, 15), the author urges an immediate, positive response. The themes of urgency and obedience are thus combined in a clear invitation to the readers.

4:8–10 God's true rest did not come through Joshua or Moses, but through Jesus Christ, who is greater than either one. Joshua led the nation of Israel into the land of their promised rest (see note on 3:11; Josh. 21:43–45). However, that was merely the earthly rest which was only the shadow of what was involved in the heavenly rest. The very fact that, according to Psalm 95, God was still offering His rest in the time of David (long after Israel had been in the land) meant that the rest being offered was spiritual—superior to that which Joshua obtained. Israel's earthly rest was filled with the attacks of enemies and the daily cycle of work. The heavenly rest is characterized by the fullness of heavenly promise (Eph. 1:3) and the absence of any labor to obtain it.

4:9 rest. A different Greek word for rest meaning “Sabbath rest” is introduced here, and this is its only appearance in the NT. The writer chose the word to draw the readers’ attention back to the “seventh day” mentioned in verse 4 and to set up the explanation in verse 10 (“ceased from his works as God did from His”).

4:11–13 The concluding third part of the exposition of Psalm 95:7–11 emphasizes the accountability which comes to those who have heard the Word of God. Scripture records the examples of those in the wilderness with Moses, those who entered Canaan with Joshua, and those who received the same opportunity in David’s day. It is the Word which must be believed and obeyed and the Word which will judge the disobedient (cf. 1 Cor. 10:5–13).

4:12 two-edged sword. While the Word of God is comforting and nourishing to those who believe, it is a tool of judgment and execution for those who have not committed themselves to Jesus Christ. Some of the Hebrews were merely going through the motions of belonging to Christ. Intellectually, they were at least partly persuaded, but inside they were not committed to Him. God’s Word would expose their shallow beliefs and even their false intentions (cf. 1 Sam. 16:7; 1 Pet. 4:5). division of soul and spirit. These terms do not describe two separate entities (any more than “thoughts and intents” do) but are used as one might say “heart and soul” to express fullness (cf. Luke 10:27; Acts 4:32; see note on 1 Thess. 5:23). Elsewhere, these two terms are used interchangeably to describe man’s immaterial self, his eternal inner person.

4:13 open to the eyes of Him. Open is a specialized term used just this one time in the NT. It originally meant to expose the neck either in preparation for sacrifice or for beheading. Perhaps the use of sword in the previous verse triggered the term. Each person is judged not only by the Word of God (cf. John 12:48), but by God Himself. We are accountable to the living, written Word (cf. John 6:63, 68; Acts 7:38) and to the living God who is its author.

II. THE SUPERIORITY OF JESUS CHRIST’S PRIESTHOOD (4:14–7:28)

A. Christ as High Priest (4:14–5:10)

4:14–7:28 Next, the writer expounds on Psalm 110:4, quoted in 5:6. Not only is Christ as Apostle superior to Moses and to Joshua, but as High Priest, He is superior to Aaron (4:14–5:10; cf. 3:1). In the midst of his exposition, the writer gives an exhortation related to the spiritual condition of his readers (5:11–6:20). At the conclusion of the exhortation, he then returns to the subject of Christ’s priesthood (7:1–28).

4:14 passed through the heavens. Just as the high priest under the Old Covenant passed through three areas (the outer court, the Holy Place, and the Holy of Holies) to make the atoning sacrifice, Jesus passed through three heavens (the atmospheric heaven, the stellar heaven, and God’s abode; cf. 2 Cor. 12:2–4) after making the perfect, final sacrifice. Once a year on the Day of Atonement the high priest of Israel would enter the Holy of Holies to make atonement for the sins of the people (Lev. 16). That tabernacle was only a limited copy of the heavenly reality (cf. 8:1–5). When Jesus entered into the heavenly Holy of Holies, having accomplished redemption, the earthly facsimile was replaced by the reality of heaven itself. Freed from that which is earthly, the Christian faith is characterized by the heavenly (3:1; Eph. 1:3; 2:6; Phil. 3:20; Col. 1:5; 1 Pet. 1:4). Jesus the Son of God. The use of both the title of humanity (Jesus) and of deity (Son of God) is significant. One of the few cases of such a juxtaposition is in 1 John 1:7, where Jesus' sacrifice for sins is emphasized (cf. 1 Thess. 1:10; 1 John 4:15; 5:5). hold fast our confession. See notes on 3:1, 6; 10:23.

4:15 all points tempted. See notes on 2:17, 18. The writer here adds to his statements in 2:18 that Jesus was sinless. He was able to be tempted (Matt. 4:1–11), but not able to sin (see notes on 7:26).

4:16 come boldly to the throne of grace. Most ancient rulers were unapproachable by anyone but their highest advisers (cf. Esth. 4:11). In contrast, the Holy Spirit calls for all to come confidently before God's throne to receive mercy and grace through Jesus Christ (cf. 7:25; 10:22; Matt. 27:51; see Introduction: Historical and Theological Themes). The ark of the covenant was viewed as the place on earth where God sat enthroned between the cherubim (cf. 2 Kin. 19:15; Jer. 3:16, 17). Oriental thrones included a footstool—yet another metaphor for the ark (cf. Ps. 132:7). It was at the throne of God that Christ made atonement for sins, and it is there that grace is dispensed to believers for all the issues of life (cf. 2 Cor. 4:15; 9:8; 12:9; Eph. 1:7; 2:7). "Grace to you" became a standard greeting among believers who celebrated this provision (Rom. 1:7; 16:20, 24; 1 Cor. 1:3; 16:23; 2 Cor. 1:2; 13:14; Gal 1:3; 6:18; Eph. 1:2; 6:24; Phil. 1:2; 4:18; Col. 1:2; 4:18; 1 Thess. 1:1; 5:28; 2 Thess. 1:2; 3:18; 1 Tim. 1:2; 6:21; 2 Tim. 1:2; 4:22; Titus 1:4; 3:15; Philem. 3, 25). to help in time of need. See notes on 2:16, 18.

5:1–4 No angel with supernatural power could serve as high priest. Only men with the weaknesses of humanity could serve as high priest (v. 2; 7:28). The position of high priest in the Levitical system was by appointment only. No man could legitimately appoint himself high priest. The use of the present tense in these verses would seem to indicate that the Levitical system still was being practiced at the time of this epistle (see Introduction: Author and Date).

5:1 gifts and sacrifices. The first term might refer especially to the grain offerings under the Old Covenant, which were for thanksgiving or dedication. That would leave the second term to refer to blood offerings for the expiation of sins (see Lev. 1–5). However, gifts is used in 8:4 to refer to all of the various sacrifices (cf. 8:3). The three occurrences of the phrase in the NT (cf. 8:3; 9:9) employ a Greek construction which expresses a closer relationship between the two terms than is normally indicated by the word and. This could indicate that no distinction should be made between the terms, and that for sins should be taken with both.

5:2 have compassion. This verb occurs only here in the NT. It carries the idea of maintaining a controlled but gentle attitude in the treatment of those who are spiritually ignorant and wayward. Impatience, loathing, and indignation have no part in priestly ministry. Such moderation and gentleness comes from realizing one's own human frailty. The priest would be reminded of his own sinful humanity every time he offered sacrifices for his own sins (v. 3).

5:4 called by God. A high priest was selected and called by God into service (cf. Ex. 28; Num. 16:1–40; 1 Sam. 16:1–3).

5:5, 6 With the quotations of Psalms 2:7 and 110:4, the writer demonstrates that Christ's sonship (see notes on 1:5) and His priesthood were both by divine appointment (cf. John 8:54). That means the two titles are titles of subordination—the subordination not being in regard to essence or nature (cf. John 10:30; 14:9, 11), but in regard to the fulfillment of the program of redemption. Neither office diminishes the eternal deity of Christ or the equality of the Trinity. Both offices had a beginning. It is noteworthy that Psalm 2 recognizes the Son as both King and Messiah. Christ is the King-Priest.

5:6 Quoted from Psalm 110:4, from which this whole section is expounded (see note on 4:14–7:28). Melchizedek. As king of Salem and priest of the Most High God in the time of Abraham, he was also a king-priest (Gen. 14:18–20). The Melchizedekan priesthood is discussed in detail in chapter 7.

5:7, 8 Having established the first requirement that a high priest be appointed (vv. 1, 4, 5, 6), the writer focused on the requirement of being humanly sympathetic (vv. 2, 3).

5:7 who. The subsequent context makes it clear that this refers back to Christ, the main subject in verse 5. In Gethsemane, Jesus agonized and wept, but committed Himself to do the Father's will in accepting the cup of suffering which would bring His death (Matt. 26:38–46; Luke 22:44, 45). Anticipating bearing the burden of judgment for sin, Jesus felt its fullest pain and grief (cf. Is. 52:14; 53:3–5, 10). Though He bore the penalty in silence and did not seek to deliver Himself from it (Is. 53:7), He did cry out from the agony of the fury of God's wrath poured on His perfectly holy and obedient person (Matt. 27:46; cf. 2 Cor. 5:21). Jesus asked to be saved from remaining in death, i.e., to be resurrected (cf. Ps. 16:9, 10).

5:8 learned obedience. Christ did not need to suffer in order to conquer or correct any disobedience. In His deity (as the Son of God), He understood obedience completely. As the incarnate Lord, He humbled Himself to learn (cf. Luke 2:52). He learned obedience for the same reasons He bore temptation: to confirm His humanity and experience its sufferings to the fullest (see notes on 2:10; cf. Luke 2:52; Phil. 2:8). Christ's obedience was also necessary so that He could fulfill all righteousness (Matt. 3:15) and thus prove to be the perfect sacrifice to take the place of sinners (1 Pet. 3:18). He was the perfectly righteous One, whose righteousness would be imputed to sinners (cf. Rom. 3:24–26).

5:9 perfected . . . author of eternal salvation. See notes on 2:10. Because of the perfect righteousness of Jesus Christ and His perfect sacrifice for sin, He became the cause of salvation. obey Him. True salvation evidences itself in obedience to Christ, from the initial obedience to the gospel command to repent and believe (cf. Acts 5:32; Rom. 1:5; 2 Thess. 1:8; 1 Pet. 1:2, 22; 4:17) to a life pattern of obedience to the Word (cf. Rom. 6:16).

5:10 Quoting from Psalm 110:4 a second time (cf. v. 6), the writer mentions again the call of God to the priesthood (v. 4).

B. Exhortation to Full Commitment to Christ (5:11–6:20)

5:11 of whom. An alternate translation would be “of which” (meaning the relationship of Christ's high priesthood to that of Melchizedek). Logically and stylistically, verse 11 appears to introduce the entire section from 5:11–6:12. The same Greek verb become forms brackets around the section: “become dull” (v. 11) and “become sluggish” (6:12). dull. The Hebrews’ spiritual lethargy and slow response to gospel teaching prevented additional teaching at this time. This is a reminder that failure to appropriate the truth of the gospel produces stagnation in spiritual advancement and the inability to understand or assimilate additional teaching (cf. John 16:12). Such a situation exists also among the Gentiles who have received revelatory truth (natural or general revelation) from God in the creation (Rom. 1:18–20). Rejection of that revelation results in a process of hardening (Rom. 1:21–32). The Hebrews had not only received the same general revelation, they had also received special revelation consisting of the OT Scriptures (Rom. 9:4), the Messiah Himself (Rom. 9:5), and the teaching of the apostles (2:3, 4). Until the Hebrews obeyed the revelation they had received and obtained eternal salvation (v. 8), additional teaching about the Messiah’s Melchizedekan priesthood would be of no profit to them.

5:12 teachers. Every believer is to be a teacher (Col. 3:16; 1 Pet. 3:15; cf. Deut. 6:7; 2 Tim. 3:15). If these Hebrews had really obeyed the gospel of Christ, they would have been passing that message on to others. The Jews were instructed in the law and prided themselves on the fact that they taught the law, but had not really understood or appropriated its truths to themselves (see notes on Rom. 2:17–23). oracles. These are contained in the OT Scripture, which had laid the foundation for the gospel and had been committed into the care of the Hebrews (Rom. 3:1, 2). The ABCs of the law tutored the Hebrews in order to lead them to faith in the Messiah (Gal. 3:23, 24). They had also heard the NT gospel (2:2–4; 1 Pet. 4:11).

5:12, 13 milk. Knowledge without obedience does not advance a person. In fact, by rejecting saving faith, the Hebrews were regressing in their understanding about the Messiah. They had long enough been exposed to the gospel to be teaching it to others, but were babies, too infantile and unskilled to comprehend, let alone teach, the truth of God.

5:13 word of righteousness. This is the message about the righteousness of Christ which we have by faith (Rom. 3:21, 22; 1 Cor. 1:30; 2 Cor. 5:21; Phil. 3:9; Titus 3:5). The phrase is equivalent to the gospel of salvation by faith rather than works.

5:14 of full age. The same Greek root is translated “perfection” in 6:1 and is elsewhere translated “perfect” (7:11, 19, 28; 9:9; 10:1, 14; 11:40; 12:23). It is used in Hebrews, including this text, as a synonym for salvation. In that sense, it refers to the completion which comes when a person becomes a believer in Christ, rather than referring to a Christian who has become mature, as is typical Pauline usage (cf. Col. 4:12). Jesus invited unbelieving Jews to the salvation perfection which came only through following Him in faith (Matt. 19:21). Paul wrote that those who had come to Christ by faith were thereby mature and able to receive the wisdom of God (1 Cor. 2:6). He described believers as “mature” when he referred to those whose righteousness was in Christ (Phil. 3:2–20), as opposed to those who had confidence in the flesh. Paul also declared that the apostles warned and taught everyone “that we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus” (Col. 1:28). exercised. The deeper, more “solid” truths about the priesthood of the Lord Jesus could only be given to those who knew Him as Savior. Athletic training and competition form the metaphor implied by this particular word (cf. 1 Tim. 4:7, 8). The person who has come to Christ for spiritual completion is then trained by the Word to discern truth from error and holy behavior from unholy (cf. 2 Tim. 3:16, 17).

6:1 leaving. This “leaving” does not mean to despise or abandon the basic doctrines. They are the place to start, not stop. They are the gate of entrance on the road to salvation in Christ. elementary principles of Christ. As “the oracles of God” in 5:12 refers to the OT, so does this phrase. The writer is referring to basic OT teaching that prepared the way for Messiah—the beginning teaching about Christ. These OT principles include the six features listed in verses 1, 2. go on to perfection. Salvation by faith in Messiah Jesus. See note on 5:14. The verb is passive, so as to indicate “let us be carried to salvation.” That is not a matter of learners being carried by teachers, but both being carried forward by God. The writer warns his Jewish readers that there is no value in stopping with the OT basics and repeating (“laying again”) what was only intended to be foundational. repentance from dead works. This OT form of repentance is the turning away from evil deeds that bring death (cf. Ezek. 18:4; Rom. 6:23) and turning to God. Too often the Jew only turned to God in a superficial fashion—fulfilling the letter of the law as evidence of his repentance. The inner man was still dead (Matt. 23:25–28; Rom. 2:28, 29). Such repentance was not the kind that brought salvation (v. 6; 12:17; cf. Acts 11:18; 2 Cor. 7:10). Under the new covenant, however, “repentance toward God” is coupled with “faith in our Lord Jesus Christ” (Acts 20:21). Christ’s atoning sacrifice saves from “dead works” (9:14; cf. John 14:6). faith toward God. Faith directed only toward the Father is unacceptable without faith in His Son, Jesus Christ (Acts 4:12; cf. James 2:14–20).

6:2 baptisms. A better translation would be “washings” as in 9:10. The Greek term is never used of Christian baptism. The plural also is inconsistent with the singular concept of Christian baptism. In the OT Levitical system, there were many ceremonial cleansings, which were outward signs of heart cleansing (cf. Ex. 30:18–21; Lev. 16:4, 24, 26, 28; Mark 7:4, 8). The new covenant called for an inner washing (Titus 3:5) that regenerated the soul. laying on of hands. Under the old covenant, the person who brought a sacrifice placed his hands on it to symbolize his identification with it as a substitute sacrifice for sin (Lev. 1:4; 3:8, 13; 16:21). There could also be a reference here to solemn priestly blessings (cf. Matt. 19:13). resurrection . . . and of eternal judgment. The Pharisees believed in the resurrection from the dead (Acts 23:8), but were still spiritually dead (Matt. 23:27). They also believed in the judgment of God and were headed for it. Significantly, all of the doctrines listed in verses 1 and 2 can be associated with the Pharisees, who were attracted to and sometimes associated with Jesus (Luke 7:36–50; 13:31; 14:1; John 3:1). Paul was a Pharisee before his conversion (Phil. 3:5). The Pharisees were products of the pursuit of righteousness by works of the law rather than by faith (Rom. 9:30–32; 10:1–3). A portion of the Hebrews to whom this epistle was written may have been Pharisees.

6:3 we will do. The writer is likely both giving his own testimony about going on from OT teaching to embrace the New Covenant in Jesus Christ and also identifying himself with the readers. Salvation always requires God's enablement (cf. John 6:44).

6:4–6 See Introduction: Interpretive Challenges. Five advantages possessed by the Jews are yet insufficient for their salvation.

6:4 enlightened. They had received instruction in biblical truth which was accompanied by intellectual perception. Understanding the gospel is not the equivalent of regeneration (cf. 10:26, 32). In John 1:9 it is clear that enlightenment is not the equivalent of salvation. Cf. 10:29. tasted the heavenly gift. Tasting in the figurative sense in the NT refers to consciously experiencing something (cf. 2:9). The experience might be momentary or continuing. Christ's "tasting" of death (2:9) was obviously momentary and not continuing or permanent. All people experience the goodness of God, but that does not mean they are all saved (cf. Matt. 5:45; Acts 17:25). Many Jews, during the Lord's earthly ministry, experienced the blessings from heaven He brought—in healings and deliverance from demons, as well as eating the food He created miraculously (John 6). Whether the gift refers to Christ (cf. John 6:51; 2 Cor. 9:15) or to the Holy Spirit (cf. Acts 2:38; 1 Pet. 1:12), experiencing either one was not the equivalent of salvation (cf. John 16:8; Acts 7:51). partakers of the Holy Spirit. See notes on 2:4. Even though the concept of partaking is used in 3:1; 3:14; and 12:8 of a relationship which believers have, the context must be the final determining factor. This context in verses 4–6 seems to preclude a reference to true believers. It could be a reference to their participation, as noted above, in the miraculous ministry of Jesus who was empowered by the Spirit (see notes on Matt. 12:18–32; cf. Luke 4:14, 18) or in the convicting ministry of the Holy Spirit (John 16:8) which obviously can be resisted without experiencing salvation (cf. Acts 7:51).

6:5 tasted. See note on verse 4. This has an amazing correspondence to what was described in 2:1–4 (see notes there). Like Simon Magus (Acts 8:9–24), these Hebrews had not yet been regenerated in spite of all they had heard and seen (cf. Matt. 13:3–9; John 6:60–66). They were repeating the sins of those who died in the wilderness after seeing the miracles performed through Moses and Aaron and hearing the voice of God at Sinai.

6:6 fall away. This Greek term occurs only here in the NT. In the LXX, it was used to translate terms for severe unfaithfulness and apostasy (cf. Ezek. 14:13; 18:24; 20:27). It is equivalent to the apostasy in 3:12. The seriousness of this unfaithfulness is seen in the severe description of rejection within this verse: they recrucify Christ and treat Him contemptuously (see also the strong descriptions in 10:29). The "impossible" of verse 4 goes with "to renew them again to repentance." Those who sinned against Christ in such a way had no hope of restoration or forgiveness (cf. 2:2, 3; 10:26, 27; 12:25). The reason is that they had rejected Him with full knowledge and conscious experience (as described in the features of vv. 5, 6). With full revelation, they rejected the truth, concluding the opposite of the truth about Christ, and thus had no hope of being saved. They can never have more knowledge than they had when they rejected it. They have concluded that Jesus should have been crucified, and they stand with his enemies. There is no possibility of these verses referring to losing salvation. Many Scripture passages make unmistakably clear that salvation is eternal (cf. John 10:27–29; Rom. 8:35, 38, 39; Phil. 1:6; 1 Pet. 1:4, 5). Those who want to make this verse mean that believers can lose salvation will have to admit that it would then also say that one could never get it back again. See Introduction: Interpretive Challenges.

6:7, 8 Here are illustrations showing that those who hear the gospel message and respond in faith are blessed; those who hear and reject it are cursed (cf. Matt. 13:18–23).

6:8 rejected. See the use of the term in Romans 1:28 (debased); 2 Corinthians 13:5 (disqualified); and 2 Timothy 3:8 (disproved).

6:9 beloved. This term shows a change of audience and a change from a message of warning to a message of encouragement. That the address is to believers is further confirmed by the expression of confidence that “better things” could be said of them (as compared to those who were being warned in the preceding verses). The “things that accompany salvation” are their works which verify their salvation (v. 10; cf. Eph. 2:10; James 2:18, 26). The very statement implies that the things described in 5:11–6:5 do not accompany salvation, but are indicative of unbelief and apostasy. though we speak in this manner. Though it had been necessary to speak about judgment in the preceding verses, the writer assures the “beloved,” those who are believers, that he is confident of their salvation.

6:10 work and labor of love. See 1 Thessalonians 1:3, 4. toward His name. Throughout this epistle, name has the Hebraic sense of the authority, character, and attributes of the Son of God (1:4) or of God the Father (2:12; 13:15; cf. John 14:13, 14). saints. All true Christians are saints, or “holy ones” (cf. 13:24; Acts 9:13; Rom. 1:7; see note on 1 Cor. 1:2).

6:11 you. The author is speaking again to unbelievers, but appears to intentionally distance this particular group from the would-be apostates of verses 4–6, who are in danger of being impossible to restore. diligence. This term can carry the idea of eagerness or haste. It is a plea for unbelieving Jews to come to Christ immediately. If these uncommitted Jews followed the example of the active faith of the saints (vv. 9, 10, 12), they would obtain the salvation which gives “full assurance of hope until the end” (cf. 10:22; Col. 2:2). Salvation should not be postponed.

6:12 sluggish. See note on 5:11, where the same Greek word is translated “dull.” imitate. This concept is repeated in 13:7 and is inherent in the many illustrations of faith given in chapter 11. inherit the promises. The inheritance and the promises of salvation are a theme of this epistle (cf. vv. 13, 15, 17; 1:14; 4:1, 3; 9:15; 10:36; 11:7, 8, 9, 11, 13, 17, 33, 39).

6:13–20 The persecution and trials that the believing Hebrews faced required patient perseverance. That persevering faith would enable them to inherit the promises of God, which at the time of suffering seemed so distant. Regardless of their circumstances, they were to remember that God is faithful (cf. v. 10) and that in Him their hope was secure (cf. v. 11).

6:13 Abraham. To encourage the Hebrews to rely on faith as opposed to holding on to the Levitical system of worship, the writer cited the example of Abraham, who, as the great model of faith (cf. Rom. 4), should be imitated (v. 12). swore by Himself.

As recorded in Genesis 22:15–19, God promised unilaterally to fulfill the Abrahamic covenant.

6:14 Quoted from Genesis 22:17, this summarizes the essence of God's promise. The fact that God had said it assured its fulfillment. It is significant that the quote in Genesis is in the context of Abraham's sacrifice of Isaac, who was the immediate fulfillment of God's promise to Abraham. Ultimate fulfillment would also take place through Isaac and his descendants.

6:15 patiently endured. Abraham was an example of the patience mentioned in verse 12. He received the promise in the beginning of its fulfillment by the birth of Isaac (see note on v. 14), but he did not live to see all the promises fulfilled (11:13).

6:16–18 God's Word does not need any confirmation from someone else. It is reliable because God Himself is faithful. People confirm their promises by appealing to someone greater (especially to God) as witness. Since no one is greater than God, He can only provide an oath from Himself. By doing so, He is willingly (v. 17) accommodating Himself to human beings who desire the confirmation because of the characteristic unreliability of human promises.

6:18 two immutable things. These are God's promise and His oath. The Greek term behind immutable was used of a legal will, which was unchangeable by anyone but the maker of the will. fled for refuge. In the LXX, the Greek word is used for the cities of refuge God provided for those who sought protection from avengers for an accidental killing (Num. 35:9–34; Deut. 19:1–13; Josh. 20:1–9; cf. Acts 14:5, 6). hope. See note on 3:6. Hope is one of the themes of Hebrews. It is also the product of OT studies (Rom. 15:4). Hope for the fulfillment of God's salvation promises is the "anchor of the soul" (v. 19), keeping the believer secure during times of trouble and turmoil.

6:19, 20 Our hope is embodied in Christ, who has entered into God's presence in the heavenly Holy of Holies on our behalf (see note on 4:14). By this line of reasoning, the writer returned to the topic which he left in 5:10—the Melchizedekan priesthood.

C. Christ's Priesthood Like Melchizedek's (7:1–28)

7:1–28 Using the two OT references to Melchizedek (Gen. 14:18–20; Ps. 110:4), chapter 7 explains the superiority of Christ's priesthood to that of this unique high priest, who was a type of Christ in certain respects (see note on 5:6). Chapter 7 is the focal point of the epistle to the Hebrews because of its detailed comparison of the priesthood of Christ and the Levitical high priesthood.

7:1, 2 A summary of the account of Melchizedek in Genesis 14:18–20 (see notes there).

7:3 The Levitical priesthood was hereditary, but Melchizedek's was not. His parentage and origin are unknown because they were irrelevant to his priesthood. Contrary to some interpretations, Melchizedek did have a father and a mother. The ancient Syriac Peshitta gives a more accurate translation of what was intended by the Greek phrase: "whose father and mother are not written in genealogies." No record existed of Melchizedek's birth or death. This is quite a contrast to the details of Aaron's death (Num. 20:22–29). like. Lit. "made to be like"; this word is used nowhere else in the NT. The implication is that the resemblance to Christ rests upon the way Melchizedek's history is reported in the OT, not upon Melchizedek himself. Melchizedek was not the preincarnate Christ, as some maintain, but was similar to Christ in that his priesthood was universal (v. 1), royal (v. 1, 2; cf. Zech. 6:13), righteous (v. 2; cf. Ps. 72:2; Jer. 23:5; 1 Cor. 1:30), peaceful (v. 2; cf. Ps. 72:7; Is. 9:6; Rom. 5:1), and unending (v. 3; cf. vv. 24, 25).

7:4–28 This section presents the superiority of the Melchizedekan priesthood to the Levitical. The major arguments for superiority are related to the receiving of tithes (vv. 2–10), the giving of blessing (vv. 1, 6, 7), the replacement of the Levitical priesthood (vv. 11–19), and the perpetuity of the Melchizedekan priesthood (vv. 3, 8, 16, 17, 20–28).

7:4 In antiquity, it was common for people to give a tithe to a god or his representative. Abraham, the father of the Hebrew faith, gave a tithe to Melchizedek. That proves that Melchizedek was superior to Abraham. The lesser person tithes to the greater (v. 7).

7:5 By the authority invested in them after the establishment of the Mosaic Law, the Levitical priests collected tithes from their fellow Israelites (see note on Num. 18:21–24). The submission of the Israelites was not to honor the priests, but to honor the law of God.

7:6, 7 Melchizedek not only received a tithe from Abraham; he also blessed him. This proves again Melchizedek's superiority.

7:8 Here . . . there. The adverbs have reference to the Levitical law whose system was still active at the time ("here") and to the earlier historical incident recorded in Genesis 14 ("there"). The Levitical priesthood changed as each priest died until it passed away altogether, but Melchizedek's priesthood is perpetual since the record about his priesthood does not record his death (cf. v. 3).

7:9, 10 In an argument based upon semi-nal headship, the writer observes that it is possible to speak of Levi paying tithes to Melchizedek. It is the same kind of argument Paul used to demonstrate that when Adam sinned we all sinned (see notes on Rom. 5:12–14).

7:11–28 In this section, the argument is extended a step further. Since the Melchizedekan priesthood is superior to the Levitical priesthood (vv. 1–10) and Christ's priesthood is Melchizedekan rather than Levitical, Christ's priesthood is also superior to the Levitical priesthood

7:11 perfection. See note on 5:14. Throughout Hebrews, the term refers to complete reconciliation with God and unhindered access to God—salvation. The Levitical system and its priesthood could not save anyone from his sins. See notes on 10:1–4.

7:12–14 Since Christ is the Christian's High Priest and He was of the tribe of Judah, not Levi (cf. Matt. 2:1, 6; Rev. 5:5), His priesthood is clearly beyond the law which was the authority for the Levitical priesthood (cf. v. 11). This is proof that the Mosaic Law had been abrogated. The Levitical system was replaced by a new Priest, offering a new sacrifice, under a New Covenant. Christ abrogated the law by fulfilling it (cf. Matt. 5:17) and providing the perfection which the law could never accomplish (cf. Matt. 5:20).

7:13, 15 another. In both cases, the term is "another of a different kind" (heteros), emphasizing the contrast with the Levitical priesthood.

7:16 fleshly commandment. The law dealt only with the temporal existence of Israel. The forgiveness which could be obtained even on the Day of Atonement was temporary. Those who ministered as priests under the law were mortals receiving their office by heredity. The Levitical system was dominated by matters of physical existence and transitory ceremonialism. power of an endless life. Because He is the eternal second person of the Godhead, Christ's priesthood cannot end. He obtained His priesthood, not by virtue of the law, but by virtue of His deity.

7:17 Quoted from Psalm 110:4 again (see notes on 5:6, 10).

7:18 annulling. See note on verses 12–14. The law was weak in that it could not save or bring about inward change in a person (cf. Rom. 8:3; Gal. 4:9).

7:19 the law made nothing perfect. See note on verse 11. The law saved no one (cf. Rom. 3:19, 20); rather, it cursed everyone (cf. Gal. 3:10–13). a better hope. See notes on 3:6; 6:18. draw near to God. See Introduction: Historical and Theological Themes; see note on 4:16. This is the key phrase in this passage. Drawing near to God is the essence of Christianity as compared with the Levitical system, which kept people outside His presence. As believer-priests, we are all to draw near to God—that is a characteristic of priesthood (cf. Ex. 19:22; see notes on Matt. 27:51).

7:20, 21 oath. God's promises are unchangeable, sealed with an oath (cf. 6:17). The Melchizedekan priesthood of Christ is confirmed with God's oath in Psalm 110:4. God's mind on this matter will not change ("relent," v. 21).

7:22 surety. This is the only use of the Greek term in the NT and could also be translated "guarantor." Jesus Himself guarantees the success of His New Covenant of salvation. a better covenant. The New Covenant (8:8, 13; 9:15). See notes on Jeremiah 31:31–34; Matthew 26:28. The first mention of covenant in this epistle is coupled with one of the key themes of the book ("better," cf. verse 19; see Introduction: Historical and Theological Themes). This covenant will be more fully discussed in chapter 8.

7:23, 24 See notes on verses 3, 8, 16.

7:23 many. It is claimed that there were eighty-four high priests who served from Aaron until the destruction of the temple by the Romans in A.D. 70. The lesser priests' numbers were much larger.

7:25 uttermost. Virtually the same concept was expressed in perfection (v. 11) and make perfect (v. 19). The Greek term is used only here and in Luke 13:11 (the woman's body could not be straightened completely). who come to God. See note on 4:16 (cf. John 6:37). intercession. The word means "to intercede on behalf of another." It was used to refer to bringing a petition to a king on behalf of someone. See note on Romans 8:34. Cf. the high priestly intercessory prayer of Christ in John 17. Since rabbis assigned intercessory powers to angels, perhaps the people were treating angels as intercessors. The writer makes it clear that only Christ is the intercessor (cf. 1 Tim. 2:5).

7:26–28 Christ's divine and holy character is yet another proof of the superiority of His priesthood.

7:26 In His relationship to God, Christ is "holy" (piety without any pollution; Matt. 3:17; 17:5; Mark 1:24; Luke 4:24; Acts 2:27; 13:35). In His relationship to man, He is "harmless" (without evil or malice; John 8:46). In relationship to Himself, He is "undefiled" (free from contamination; 1 Pet. 1:19) and "separate from sinners" (He had no sin nature which would be the source of any act of sin; cf. "without sin" in 4:15). See notes on 2 Corinthians 5:21. higher than the heavens. See notes on 3:1; 4:14.

7:27 daily. Whenever the Levitical high priest sinned, he was required to offer sacrifices for himself (Lev. 4:3). Whenever the people sinned, he also had to offer a sacrifice for them (Lev. 4:13). These were daily occasions. Then, annually, on the Day of Atonement, he had again to offer sacrifices for himself and for the people (Lev. 16:6, 11, 15). Christ had no sin and needed no sacrifice for Himself. And only one sacrifice (by Him) was needed—one time only, for all people, for all time. once for all. This is a key emphasis in Hebrews. The sacrificial work of Christ never needed to be repeated, unlike the OT priestly sacrifices. Cf. 9:12, 26, 28; 10:2, 10; 1 Peter 3:18.

7:28 word of the oath. God confirmed Christ as High Priest. See notes on verses 20, 21; 6:16–18. perfected forever. See note on 2:10.

III. THE SUPERIORITY OF JESUS CHRIST'S PRIESTLY MINISTRY (8:1–10:18)

A. Through a Better Covenant (8:1–13)

8:1–10:18 This entire section is an exposition of the New Covenant promised in Jeremiah 31:31–34 and its contrast to the Old Covenant of law.

Men Die Once

First, this passage (Heb. 9:27) offers a direct answer to those tempted to flirt with any form of reincarnation. Second, it states the general rule for all humankind, with very rare and only partial exceptions. Lazarus had to die again (see John 14:43–44). Those, like Lazarus, who were raised from the dead by a miraculous act of our Lord were not resurrected to a glorified body and unending life. They only experienced resuscitation. Another exception will be those who don't die even once, but who will be "caught up . . . to meet the Lord in the air" (1 Thess. 4:17). Enoch (Gen. 5:24) and Elijah (2 Kin. 2:11) are also part of this last group.

The general rule for all human beings includes another shared event—judgment. The judgment noted here refers to the judgment of all people, believers (2 Cor. 5:10) and unbelievers alike (Rev. 20:11–15).

8:1–5 A brief description of Jesus' priesthood in the heavenly sanctuary, which is better than Aaron's because He serves in a better sanctuary (vv. 1–5; cf. 9:1–12).

8:1 main point. Here the writer arrived at his central message. The fact is that "we have" (current possession) a superior high priest, Jesus Christ, who is the fulfillment of all that was foreshadowed in the OT. seated. See notes on 1:3, 13.

8:2 Minister. This is the same word used of the angels in 1:7. In Jeremiah 33:21 it was used of the priests. sanctuary. Cf. 9:3. The holiest place where God dwelt (cf. Ex. 15:17; 25:8; 26:23, 24; 1 Chr. 22:17). true tabernacle. The definition is given in the phrase, "which the Lord erected, and not man," as well as in 9:11, 24 (cf. v. 5). It refers to the heavenly dwelling place of God.

8:3 gifts and sacrifices. See note on 5:1.

8:4 not be a priest. Jesus was not qualified to be a Levitical priest because He was not of the tribe of Levi. See note on 7:12–14. Because of its use of the present tense, this verse indicates that the Levitical system was still in operation at the time of writing, indicating it was before the destruction of the temple in A.D. 70 (see note on 5:1–4).

8:5 The quote is from Exodus 25:40. copy and shadow. This does not mean that there are actual buildings in heaven which were copied in the tabernacle, but rather that the heavenly realities were adequately symbolized and represented in the earthly tabernacle model.

8:6 Mediator. Cf. 9:15. The word describes a go-between or an arbitrator, in this case between man and God. See note on 1 Timothy 2:5 (cf. Gal. 3:19, 20). better covenant . . . better promises. See notes on 7:19, 22; John 1:17, 18. This covenant is identified as the New Covenant in verses 8, 13; 9:15.

8:7 Cf. the same argument in 7:11. The

Melchizedek

Melchizedek shows up abruptly and briefly in the Old Testament, but his special role in Abraham's life makes him a significant figure. He is mentioned again in Psalm 110:4, the passage under consideration in Hebrews 4:14–7:28. As the king of Salem and priest of the Most High God in the time of Abraham, Melchizedek offered a 'historical precedent for the role of king-priest (Gen. 14:18–20), filled perfectly by Jesus Christ.

By using the two Old Testament references to Melchizedek, the writer of Hebrews (7:1–28) explains the superiority of Christ's priesthood by reviewing Melchizedek's unique role as a type of Christ and his superiority to the Levitical high priesthood. The Levitical priesthood was hereditary, but Melchizedek's was not. Through Abraham's honor, Melchizedek's rightful role was established. The major ways in which the Melchizedekan priesthood was superior to the Levitical priesthood are these:

1. The receiving of tithes (7:2–10), as when Abraham the ancestor of the Levites gave Melchizedek a tithe of the spoils.
2. The giving of the blessing (7:1, 6, 7), as when Abraham accepted Melchizedek's blessing.
3. The continual replacement of the Levitical priesthood (7:11–19), which passed down from father to son.
4. The perpetuity of the Melchizedekan priesthood (7:3, 8, 16, 17, 20–28), since the record about his priesthood does not record his death.

older covenant, incomplete and imperfect, was only intended to be temporary.

8:8–12 Quoted from Jeremiah 31:31–34 (see notes there).

8:9 I disregarded them. Jeremiah 31:32 says, “though I was a husband to them.” The NT writer is quoting from the LXX, which uses a variant reading that does not essentially change the meaning.

8:10 mind . . . hearts. By its nature, the covenant of law was primarily external, but the New Covenant is internal (cf. Ezek. 36:26, 27).

8:12 The LXX represents a slight expansion of the last sentence of Jeremiah 31:34.

8:13 ready to vanish. Soon after the Book of Hebrews was written, the temple in Jerusalem was destroyed and its Levitical worship ended (see note on 5:1–4; see Introduction: Author and Date).

B. In a Better Sanctuary (9:1–12)

9:1–10 In these verses, the author gives a brief description of the tabernacle, to which some fifty chapters in the OT are devoted, including the tabernacle service (cf. Ex. 25–40). The section is marked off by its beginning with a reference to “ordinances” (v. 1) and closing with a reference to “ordinances” (v. 10).

9:2 first part . . . sanctuary. This is the Holy Place, the first room of the tabernacle (Ex. 26:33). For the items in the Holy Place, see Exodus 25:23–40; 40:22–25; Leviticus 24:5–9.

9:3 Holiest of All. This is the Most Holy Place where the ark of the covenant and the mercy seat dwelt—the place of Atonement (Ex. 26:33, 34).

9:4 golden censer. This is best understood as the golden altar of incense. See note on Exodus 30:1–10 (cf. Ex. 40:5, 26, 27). Though it was outside the Holy Place (Ex. 30:6), the writer of Hebrews pictures the golden altar inside the Most Holy Place because uppermost in his mind is its role in the liturgy of the Day of Atonement. On that day, the high priest brought incense from that altar into the Most Holy Place (Lev. 16:12, 13). The altar of golden incense marked the boundary

Covenant: 8:6, 8–10; 9:4; 10:16, 29; 12:24—lit. “agreement,” “will,” or “testament.” In 9:15–20, the author of Hebrews explains why the New Covenant (8:7) has completed the first covenant made at Mount Sinai. The author uses the word diathēkē throughout the section as an analogy to a “will.” Just as the contents of a will go into effect when a person dies, so Christ’s death initiated the New Covenant that frees us from bondage to the first covenant.

of the Holy of Holies as well as the curtain. The high priest went beyond the altar of incense only once a year. the ark. See notes on Exodus 25:11–18; 26:31–34. golden pot that had the manna. See note on Exodus 16:32–36. Aaron’s rod. See notes on Numbers 17:2–10. tablets of the covenant. See note on Exodus 25:16 (cf. 1 Kin. 8:9).

9:5 cherubim . . . mercy seat. See notes on Exodus 25:17, 18. cannot now speak in detail. The writer has no desire to obscure his main point with details (cf. 8:1).

9:7 This was the Day of Atonement. See notes on 4:14; 7:27; Leviticus 16:16, 20–22, 30. not without blood. See note on verse 22. This is the first of many references to the blood of sacrifice. The term is especially central to 9:1–10:18 where it identifies the deaths of OT sacrifices and of Christ (cf. vv. 12–14). Note, however, that the shedding of blood in and of itself is an insufficient sacrifice. Christ had not only to shed His blood, but to die. Hebrews 10:10 indicates that He gave His body as the sacrificial offering. Without His death, His blood had no saving value. See notes on verse 14, 18, 22; 10:10.

9:8 The Levitical system did not provide any direct access into God’s presence for His people. Rather, it kept them away. Nearness had to be provided by another way (v. 12).

This is the primary lesson that the Holy Spirit taught about the tabernacle. It teaches how inaccessible God is apart from the death of Jesus Christ. See Introduction: Historical and Theological Themes. See the counterpart to this lesson in 10:20. Holy Spirit. See note on 2:4. By the Spirit-inspired instruction given for the holiest of all, He was indicating that there was no way to God in the ceremonial system. Only Christ could open the way (cf. John 14:6).

9:9 symbolic. The Greek word is parabole, from which the English word parable is derived. The Levitical system was a parable, an object lesson, about what was to come in Christ. for the present time. For is ambiguous enough to allow for two different meanings and interpretations: (1) “during” the time of the OT, or (2) “until” and “pointing to” the current Christian era. The NKJV’s translation “in which” indicates the first interpretation. The second interpretation is “according to which” (from an alternate Greek reading) referring to the “parable” rather than to the time, “It was an object lesson from the past pointing to the present time.” This latter interpretation is preferable because of the explanation in verse 10. “The present time” is “the time of reformation.” gifts and sacrifices. See note on 5:1. perfect . . . conscience. Again, this term refers to salvation. See notes on 5:14; 7:11; 10:1 (cf. 7:25). The sacrifices of the OT did not remove the offerers’ guilty conscience or provide them with full forgiveness for their sins (cf. 10:1–4). It was only “symbolic” of something else that would—namely Christ. The conscience is a divinely given warning device that reacts to sin and produces accusation and guilt (see notes on Rom. 2:14, 15) that cannot be relieved apart from the work of Christ (cf. v. 14; 10:22). At the time of salvation it is quieted from its convicting ravings, but it is not deactivated. Rather, it continues its work, warning the believer about sin. Believers should seek a clear conscience (see notes on 2 Cor. 1:12).

9:10 foods and drinks. See notes on Leviticus 11:1–47; Deuteronomy 14:3–21 (cf. Col. 2:16). washings. See note on 6:2. fleshly ordinances. The Levitical ordinances regulated the visible actions without changing the inner man (cf. 10:4). reformation. The Greek term means “restoring what is out of line.” All things are set straight in Christ. The reformation is the New Covenant and its application. See note on verse 9.

9:11 the good things to come. The reference appears to be to the “eternal redemption” (v. 12). In 10:1, the “good things” refer back to the “salvation” of verse 28 (cf. Rom. 10:15). Most Greek editions of the NT accept the reading “that have come.” In the context, both readings refer to the things of the New Covenant. It is just a matter of perspective: whether from the viewpoint of the Levitical system where the realities of redemption were “to come,” or the viewpoint of those in the Christian era where the realities of redemption “have come” because Christ has completed His work. not of this creation. The phrase is the explanation of “not made with hands”—it is the creation of God alone. The sanctuary where Christ serves is heaven itself (cf. v. 24; 8:2).

9:12 goats and calves. Only one of each was sacrificed on the Day of Atonement (cf. Lev. 16:5–10). The plural here represents the numbers sacrificed as the Day of Atonement was observed year after year. with His own blood. A better translation would be “through His own blood.” The same phrase is used in 13:12. Nothing is said which would indicate that Christ carried His actual physical blood with Him into the heavenly sanctuary. The sacrificer was also the sacrifice. once for all. See note on 7:27. eternal redemption. This word for redemption is found only here and in Luke 1:68; 2:38. Its original use was for the release of slaves by payment of a ransom.

C. By a Better Sacrifice (9:13–10:18)

9:13–22 Christ’s death was necessary for the fulfillment of the older covenant and the establishment of the new.

9:13 ashes of a heifer. See notes on Numbers 19. It is said that, in the history of Israel, only six red heifers were killed and their

The Shedding of Blood

Beginning with 9:7, the writer of Hebrews examined the significance of the blood of sacrifice. This term is especially central to 9:1–10:18 where the passage identifies the deaths of OT sacrifices with the death of Christ (9:12–14). Note, however, that this shedding of blood in and of itself was an insufficient sacrifice. Christ had not only to shed His blood, but He also had to die. Hebrews 10:10 indicates that He gave His body as a sacrificial offering. Without His death, His blood had no saving value.

The expression, “blood of Christ,” then (9:14), refers not simply to the fluid but to the whole atoning sacrificial work of Christ in His death. Blood is used as a substitute word for death (see, e.g., Matt. 23:30, 35; 27:6, 8, 24, 25; John 6:54–56; Acts 18:6; 20:26). By reviewing the significance of the blood sacrifices in the Old Testament, the writer was pointing to a pattern of lessons that prepared the world to understand the necessity of Christ’s death.

The emphatic phrase “without shedding of blood there is no remission” (9:22) repeats the lesson that sin creates a debt that must be paid by someone. “It is the blood that makes atonement for the soul” (Lev. 17:11). The phraseology is reminiscent of Christ’s words, “For this is My blood of the new covenant, which is shed for many for the remission of sins” (Matt. 26:28). Remission means forgiveness in these verses—forgiveness for the sinner and payment of the debt. Christ’s death (blood) provides the remission.

ashes used. One heifer's ashes would suffice for centuries since only a minute amount of the ash was required. unclean. The Greek term is literally "common" or "profane." Not that it was ceremonially unclean, but that it was not sanctified or set apart to God. The word was used in Jesus' discourse on what defiles a person (cf. Matt. 15:11, 18, 20; Mark 7:15, 18, 20, 23), in the Jews' complaint that Paul had defiled the temple by bringing Gentiles into it (Acts 21:28), and in reference to the meats that Peter had been invited to eat (Acts 10:15; 11:9). According to the Mosaic regulation, the red heifer's ashes were to be placed "outside the camp" and used in a ceremony for symbolic purifying from sin (Num. 19:9; cf. 13:11–13).

9:14 how much more. Superior to the cleansing capability of the ashes of an animal is the cleansing power of the sacrifice of Christ. the blood of Christ. This is an expression that refers not simply to the fluid, but the whole atoning sacrificial work of Christ in His death. Blood is used as a substitute word for death (cf. Matt. 23:30, 35; 27:6, 8, 24, 25; John 6:54–56; Acts 18:6; 20:26). See notes on Matthew 26:28; Romans 3:25; 5:9; Colossians 1:14. the eternal Spirit. See note on 2:4 (cf. Is. 42:1; 61:1; Luke 4:1, 14). Some interpreters argue that the lack of the definite article in the Greek makes this a reference to Christ's own "eternal spirit" (in the sense of an endless life, cf. 7:16). However, the references to the Holy Spirit in 2:4 and 6:4 are also without the definite article. The use of eternal as a qualifier serves to relate the Spirit to the "eternal redemption" (v. 12) and the "eternal inheritance" (v. 15) which Christ accomplished by His sacrificial death. offered Himself. See notes on verse 7; John 10:17, 18. The animals in the Levitical system were brought involuntarily and without understanding to their deaths. Christ came of His own volition with a full understanding of the necessity and consequences of His sacrifice. His sacrifice was not just His blood; it was His entire human nature (cf. 10:10). without spot. In the LXX, the term is used for describing acceptable sacrifices, including the red heifer (Num. 19:3; cf. Ex. 29:1; Lev. 1:3). A similar reference is found in 1 Peter 1:19. conscience. See note on verse 9. dead works. See note on 6:1. The works are dead because the unregenerate are "dead in trespasses and sins" (Eph. 2:1), their works are worthless and unproductive (Gal. 2:16; 5:19–21), and they end in death (Rom. 6:23). to serve the living God. Salvation is not an end in itself. The believer has been freed from sin to serve God, saved to serve (cf. Rom. 6:16–18; 1 Thess. 1:9). The contrast between dead works and the living God (cf. 3:12; 10:31; 12:22) is basic. Cf. James 2:14–26.

9:15 Mediator. See note on 8:6. death. In the making of some biblical covenants, sacrifices were involved. When God made the covenant with Abraham, five different animals were sacrificed in the ceremony (Gen. 15:9, 10). The Mosaic covenant was affirmed by animal sacrifices (Ex. 24:5–8). redemption. The compound term used here is found more frequently than the term used in verse 12 (cf. 11:35; Luke 21:28; Rom. 3:24). Jesus' death retroactively redeemed all those who had believed in God under the Old Covenant (cf. Rom. 3:24–26). This is in keeping with the symbolism of the Day of Atonement. Annually, the high priest would atone for or cover the sins that the people had committed in the preceding year (Lev. 16:16, 21, 30). first covenant. See note on Genesis 9:16. The actual first covenant historically was made with Noah (Gen. 6:18; 9:9). Next came the covenant made with Abraham (Gen. 15:18). By context, however, the older covenant under discussion in this epistle is that which is called the Mosaic covenant or the covenant of law (Ex. 19:1–20:21). First in this verse, therefore, means the former, older covenant with which the Levitical system is connected. those who are called. Lit. “the ones having been called,” looking back to those under the Old Covenant who were called to salvation by God on the basis of the sacrifice of Jesus Christ which was to come long after most of them had died. The reference, as always in the NT epistles, is to the effectual calling related to salvation (cf. 3:1), which in this context refers to OT believers. promise of the eternal inheritance. That is, salvation in its fullness (see notes on 3:11; 4:1, 9; 6:12; 1 Pet. 1:3–5).

9:16, 17 A last will and testament illustrates the necessity of Christ’s death. Testament is the same Greek word translated “covenant,” but the term takes on the more specialized meaning in this context. The benefits and provisions of a will are only promises until the one who wrote the will dies. Death activates the promises into realities.

9:18–20 The shedding of blood in the covenant ratification ceremony at Sinai (Ex. 24:1–8) also illustrates the necessity of Christ’s death (see note on v. 15).

9:18 blood. Death in verses 15, 16 is replaced by blood (see notes on vv. 7, 14). The term is used to emphasize the violent aspect of His sacrificial death.

9:19 water, scarlet wool, and hyssop. These items were used at the Passover in Egypt (Ex. 12:22) for sprinkling of blood, and in the ritual cleansing for lepers (Lev. 14:4), and in the red heifer ceremony (Num. 19:6). More of those are in view here. These elements were a part of the sprinkling of blood in the covenant ceremony described in Exodus 24:1–8, though not mentioned there. The added details came either by direct revelation to the writer or had been preserved in other records or traditions known to the writer and his readers. the book . . . the people. See note on Exodus 24:8. The Redemption: 9:15—lit. “redemption.” When used by the New Testament writers, this word, and its related term, lutrosis, signify redemption. Redemption reflects the act of freeing, releasing, or buying back by paying a ransom price. The ransom price for humanity’s sin is death. Yet, Christ paid this ransom price through His own sacrifice (1 Pet. 1:18–19) and thus freed us from the bondage of sin, to be brought back into the family of God (Gal. 3:13, 4:5).

Key Word

consecration of Aaron and his sons to the priesthood is the only other occasion in the OT when any persons were sprinkled with blood (Ex. 29:21; Lev. 8:30; cf. 1 Pet. 1:2). The detail about the book also being sprinkled with the blood is not recorded in the Exodus account.

9:20 This is the blood. Cf. Exodus 24:8 with Matthew 26:28. The same formula was utilized in the inaugural ceremonies for the Mosaic covenant and for the New Covenant.

9:21 likewise. The dedication of the tabernacle and its vessels was accompanied by a blood-sprinkling ritual similar to that observed at the inauguration of the Mosaic covenant (cf. Ex. 29:10–15, 21, 36, 37).

9:22 almost all. There were a few exceptions. Water, incense, and fire were also used to purify (cf. Ex. 19:10; Lev. 15:5; Num. 16:46, 47; 31:21–24). Those who were too poor to bring even a small animal for sacrifice were allowed to bring fine flour instead (Lev. 5:11). blood . . . remission. “It is the blood that makes atonement for the soul” (Lev. 17:11). The phraseology is reminiscent of Christ’s own words (Matt. 26:28). “Shedding of blood” refers to death (see notes on vv. 7, 14, 18). Remission (meaning forgiveness) is the emphatic last word in this section (vv.

18–22) of the Greek NT, and it forms the transition to the next section (vv. 23–28).

9:23–28 Christ's high priestly ministry is to be exercised in the perfect tabernacle of heaven. The real High Priest who offered the real sacrifice for sin serves in the real tabernacle. He is the complete fulfillment of the shadowy copies in the Levitical system.

9:23 copies. See note on 8:5. The earthly tabernacle and its vessels were only symbolic replicas of the true heavenly tabernacle (8:2), and they were also made unclean by the transgressions of the people (Lev. 16:16). the heavenly things. As the preceding context indicated, the inauguration of the Mosaic covenant by sacrifices was necessary (vv. 18–21). That concept is here applied to the heavenly sanctuary; it is dedicated or inaugurated as the central sanctuary of the New Covenant by Christ's sacrifice. The better covenant required a better sacrifice. better sacrifices. Christ's superior sacrifice is a major theme in 9:13–10:18. The many sacrifices of the Levitical system were to be superseded by better sacrifices that would be represented in the one, all-inclusive, perfect sacrifice of Christ (cf. 10:12). See note on 7:22.

9:24 copies. The term is not the same as that used in verse 23 and 8:5. This is literally "antitype." It is used only twice in the NT.

The antitype either prefigures the type (as here), or is a later illustration of the type (as in 1 Pet. 3:21). In both cases, the antitype is not the real thing, but only a copy of it. The earthly "holy places" in the tabernacle were only types of the heavenly abode of God. now to appear. On the Day of Atonement, the high priest entered the Most Holy Place where God made an appearance (Lev. 16:2). The high priest, however, was hidden from the presence of God by the cloud of incense (Lev. 16:12, 13). See also "has appeared" (v. 26) and "will appear" (v. 28). Each verb is a different term in the Greek. The term for Christ's present appearance in heaven (v. 24) alludes to His official presentation to report to the Father on the fulfillment of His mission. The concept of making an appearance or being revealed is involved in the incarnational appearance in order to die once for sin (v. 26). At Christ's appearing at the Second Advent (v. 28), the term used emphasizes the visible nature of the appearance (cf. 2:8; 12:14). All three tenses of Christ's soteriological ministry are also covered: (1) His First Advent to save us from the penalty of sin; (2) His present intercessory ministry in heaven to save us from the power of sin; and (3) His Second Advent to deliver us from the presence of sin. for us. Christ is our representative and the provider of our spiritual benefits (cf. 2:9; 6:20; 7:25; John 14:12–14; Eph. 1:3).

9:26 since the foundation of the world. This is a reference to creation (see notes on 4:3). end of the ages. All the eras and ages came together and were consummated in the coming of the Messiah. The eschatological era was inaugurated (see note on 1:2; cf. Gal. 4:4).

9:27 to die once. This is a general rule for all mankind. There have been very rare exceptions (e.g., Lazarus died twice; cf. John 11:43, 44). Those, like Lazarus, who were raised from the dead by a miraculous act of our Lord were not resurrected to a glorified body and unending life. They only experienced resuscitation. Another exception will be those who don't die even once, but who will be "caught up . . . to meet the Lord in the air" (1 Thess. 4:17; cf. Enoch, Gen. 5:24; Elijah, 2 Kin. 2:11). the judgment. A general term encompassing the judgment of all people, believers (see note on 2 Cor. 5:10) and unbelievers (see notes on Rev. 20:11–15).

9:28 to bear the sins of many. See note on Isaiah 53:12 (cf. 2 Cor. 5:21; 1 Pet. 2:24). eagerly wait. See note on Philippians 3:20. second time. On the Day of Atonement, the people eagerly waited for the high priest to come back out of the Holy of Holies. When he appeared, they knew that the sacrifice on their behalf had been accepted by God. In the same way, when Christ appears at His Second Coming, it will be confirmation that the Father has been fully satisfied with the Son's sacrifice on behalf of believers. At that point salvation will be consummated (cf. 1 Pet. 1:3–5). apart from sin. See notes on 2:17, 18; 4:15. This phrase testifies to the completed work of Christ in removing sins by His sacrifice at His First Coming. No such burden will be upon Him in His Second Coming.

10:1–18 Christ's offering was a once-for-all sacrifice which is superior to all the sacrifices of the Levitical system.

10:1 shadow. See note on 8:5. The Greek term translated "shadow" refers to a pale reflection, as contrasted with a sharp, distinct one. The term behind "very image," on the other hand, indicates an exact and distinct replica (cf. Col. 2:17). good things. See note on 9:11. perfect. This term is used repeatedly in Hebrews to refer to salvation. See notes on 5:14; 7:11; 9:9. As much as those living under the law desired to approach God, the Levitical system provided no way to enter His holy presence (cf. Pss. 15:1; 16:11; 24:3, 4).

10:2 consciousness of sins. This is the same word translated "conscience" in verse 22; 9:9; 13:18. See note on 9:9. If sin had really been overpowered by that system of sacrifices, the OT believers' consciences would have been cleansed from condemning guilt (cf. v. 22). There was not freedom of conscience under the Old Covenant.

10:3 reminder. The OT sacrifices not only could not remove sin, but their constant repetition was a constant reminder of that deficiency. The promise of the New Covenant was that the sin would be removed and even God would "remember" their sins "no more" (8:12, quoting Jer. 31:34).

10:4 not possible. The Levitical system was not designed by God to remove or forgive sins. It was preparatory for the coming of the Messiah (Gal. 3:24) in that it made the people expectant (cf. 1 Pet. 1:10). It revealed the seriousness of their sinful condition, in that even temporary covering required the death of an animal. It revealed the reality of God's holiness and righteousness by indicating that sin had to be covered. Finally, it revealed the necessity of full and complete forgiveness so that God could have fellowship with His people.

10:5, 6 You did not desire. God was not pleased with sacrifices given by a person who did not give them out of a sincere heart (cf. 1 Sam. 15:22; Ps. 51:17; Is. 1:11; Jer. 6:20; Hos. 6:6; Amos 5:21–25). To sacrifice only as a ritual, without obedience, was a mockery and worse than no sacrifice at all (cf. Is. 1:11–18).

10:5 a body You have prepared for Me. Psalm 40:6 reads, “My ears you have opened.” This does not represent a significant alteration in the meaning of the psalm, as indicated by the fact that the writer quoted the LXX version of the Hebrew idiom, which was an accurate representation for Greek readers. The Greek translators regarded the Hebrew words as a figure of speech, in which a part of something signified the whole, i.e., the hollowing out of ears was part of the total work of fashioning a human body. And ears were selected as the part to emphasize because they were symbols of obedience as the organ of the reception of God’s Word and will (cf. 1 Sam. 15:22). Christ needed a body in order to offer Himself as the final sacrifice (2:14).

10:7 To do Your will. Cf. Matthew 26:39, 42.

10:8, 9 The writer quotes from Psalm 40:6–8 again, but in a condensed form.

10:9 first . . . second. The old, repetitious sacrificial system was removed to make way for the new, once-for-all sacrifice of Christ, who had obediently done God’s will (cf. 5:8; Phil. 2:8).

10:10 sanctified. Sanctify means to “make holy,” to be set apart from sin for God (cf. 1 Thess. 4:3). When Christ fulfilled the will of God, He provided for the believer a continuing, permanent condition of holiness (Eph. 4:24; 1 Thess. 3:13). This is the believer’s positional sanctification as opposed to the progressive sanctification that results from daily walking by the will of God (see notes on Rom. 6:19; 12:1, 2; 2 Cor. 7:1). body. Refers to His atoning death, as the term blood has been used to do (9:7, 12, 14, 18, 22). Mention of the body of Christ in such a statement is unusual in the NT, but it is logically derived from the quotation from Psalm 40:6.

10:11, 12 The old and new are contrasted: thousands of priests versus one Priest; the old priests continually standing versus the sitting down of the new; repeated offerings versus a once-for-all offering; and the ineffective sacrifices that only covered sin versus the effective sacrifice that completely removes sin.

10:11 stands. See note on 1:3. In 2 Chronicles 6:10, 12, Solomon sat on his throne as king, but stood at the altar when acting in a priestly role (cf. Deut. 17:12; 18:7).

10:13 footstool. See note on 1:13. This is yet another reference to Psalm 110:1. This prediction will be fulfilled when Christ returns and all creation acknowledges His lordship by bowing at His feet (Phil. 2:10).

10:14 perfected. See note on verse 1. This involves a perfect standing before God in the righteousness of Christ (see notes on Rom. 1:16; Phil. 3:8, 9). sanctified. See notes on verse 10.

10:15–17 The writer confirms his interpretation of Psalm 40:6–8 by repeating from Jeremiah 31:31–34 what he had already quoted in 8:8–12.

IV. THE SUPERIORITY OF THE BELIEVER'S PRIVILEGES (10:19–12:29)

A. Saving Faith (10:19–25)

10:19–25 For the second time (cf. 8:1–6 for the first), the writer gives a summary of the arguments for the superiority of Christ's priestly ministry.

10:19 brethren. See note on 3:12. As on the earlier occasion, the writer addresses his Jewish brethren with an invitation to leave behind the Levitical system and to appropriate the benefits of the New Covenant in Christ. boldness. Or "confidence," an important emphasis in the epistle (see note on 4:16). Because of the high priestly ministry of Christ and His finished sacrifice, the Hebrews can enter boldly into the presence of God.

10:20 new. In Greek, this word originally meant "newly slain," but was understood as "recent" when the epistle was written. The way is new because the covenant is new. It is not a way provided by the Levitical system. living way. Though it is the path of eternal life, it was not opened by Christ's sinless life; it required His death. See notes on 2:17, 18; 4:16. The Hebrews were invited to embark on this way which is characterized by the eternal life of the Son of God who loved them and gave Himself for them (cf. John 14:6; Gal. 2:20). The Christian faith was known as "the Way" among the Jews of Jerusalem (Acts 9:2) as well as among the Gentiles (Acts 19:23). Those receiving this epistle understood quite clearly that the writer was inviting them to become Christians—to join those who had been persecuted for their faith. True believers in their midst were even then suffering persecution, and those who had not committed themselves to the Way were asked to become targets of the same persecution. veil . . . flesh. When Jesus' flesh was torn at His Crucifixion, so was the temple veil that symbolically separated people from God's presence (Matt. 27:51). When the high priest on the Day of Atonement entered the Holy of Holies, the people waited outside for him to return. When Christ entered the heavenly temple, He did not return. Instead, He opened the curtain and exposed the Holy of Holies so that we could follow Him there. Here flesh is used as was body (v. 10) and blood (9:7, 12, 14, 18, 22) to refer to the sacrificial death of the Lord Jesus.

10:21 the house of God. See note on 3:6.

10:22 let us draw near. See note on 7:19. Based on what had been written, this was the heart of the invitation to those in the assembly who had not come to Christ. The same invitation is found in the first NT book to be written (James 4:8), where James reveals the corollary of drawing near to God: God will draw near to you. Asaph taught that it is a good thing to draw near to God (Ps. 73:28). The full restoration of Israel to God's blessing is dependent upon them drawing near to Him (Jer. 30:18–22). In other words, it is an eschatological invitation coming to them in "these last days" (1:2). This verse describes the prerequisites for entering the presence of God (cf. Ps. 15): sincerity, security, salvation, and sanctification. true heart. The Greek term behind true carries the ideas of being sincere, genuine, and without ulterior motive (cf. Jer. 24:7; Matt. 15:8). This one thing these particular Hebrews lacked: genuine commitment to Christ. full assurance of faith. See note on 6:11. Utter confidence in the promises of God is intended by the phrase. Such confidence will result in heartfelt assurance or security which will allow them to persevere through the coming trials. This is the first of a familiar triad: faith, hope

(v. 23), and love (v. 24). hearts sprinkled. See notes on 9:9, 14; 10:1–4; 1 Peter 1:2. pure water. The imagery in this verse is taken from the sacrificial ceremonies of the Old Covenant, where blood was sprinkled as a sign of cleansing, and the priests were continually washing themselves and the sacred vessels in basins of clear water. The “washing with pure water” does not refer to Christian baptism, but to the Holy Spirit’s purifying one’s life by means of the Word of God (cf. Eph. 5:25, 26; Titus 3:5). This is purely a New Covenant picture (Jer. 31:33; Ezek. 36:25, 26).

10:23 hold fast. Holding on, or the perseverance of the saints, is the human side of eternal security. It is not something done to maintain salvation, but is rather an evidence of salvation. See note on 3:6. confession of our hope. Affirmation of salvation. See note on 3:1. without wavering. The idea is not to follow any inclination that leads back to the Old Covenant. In other ancient literature, the same Greek term is used of enduring torture. Persecution will come (2 Tim. 3:12), but God is faithful. Temptations will abound, but God is faithful to provide an escape (cf. 1 Cor. 10:13). God’s promises are reliable (1 Cor. 10:13; 1 Thess. 5:24; Jude 24, 25). With that confidence, the believer can persevere.

10:24 consider. The same verb is used about Jesus in 3:1. The invitation must be responded to individually, but the response also has a corporate side. They are members of a community of Hebrews whose initial attraction to Christ is in danger of eroding. They have been considering a return to the Levitical system of Judaism to avoid the persecution (cf. John 12:42, 43). Mutual encouragement to make full commitment is crucial. stir up. The English word paroxysm is derived from the Greek term used here. The meaning in this context is that of stimulating or inciting someone to do something. love and good works. An example of such mutual effort in the midst of persecution was to be found at Corinth (cf. 2 Cor. 8:1–7).

10:25 not forsaking the assembling. Collective and corporate worship is a vital part of spiritual life. The warning here is against apostasy in an eschatological context (cf. 2 Thess. 2:1). The reference is to the approaching “day” (the Second Coming of Christ; cf. Rom. 13:12; 1 Cor. 3:13; 1 Thess. 5:4). exhorting. Exhortation takes the form of encouragement, comfort, warning, or strengthening. There is an eschatological urgency to the exhortation which requires an increased activity as the coming of Christ approaches (cf. 3:13; cf. 1 Thess. 4:18).

B. False Faith (10:26–39)

10:26–39 See notes on 6:1–8. This warning passage deals with the sin of apostasy, an intentional falling away, or defection. Apostates are those who move toward Christ, hear and understand His gospel, and are on the verge of saving belief, but then rebel and turn away. This warning against apostasy is one of the most serious warnings in all of Scripture. Not all of the Hebrews would respond to the gentle invitation of verses 19–25. Some were already beyond response.

10:26 we. The author is speaking rhetorically. In verse 39, he excludes himself and genuine believers from this category. sin willfully. The Greek term carries the idea of deliberate intention that is habitual. The sin is rejecting Christ deliberately. These are not isolated acts. According to the Mosaic legislation, such acts of deliberate, premeditated sin required exclusion from the congregation of Israel (cf. Num. 15:30, 31) and from its worship (cf. Ex. 21:14). Such sins also excluded the individual from sanctuary in the cities of refuge (cf. Deut. 19:11–13).

knowledge. The Greek term denotes specific knowledge, not general spiritual knowledge (cf. 6:4; cf. 1 Tim. 2:4). Though the knowledge was not defective or incomplete, the application of the knowledge was certainly flawed. Judas Iscariot is a good example of a disciple who had no lack of knowledge, but lacked faith and became the arch-apostate. no longer. See note on 6:6. The apostate is beyond salvation because he has rejected the only sacrifice that can cleanse him from sin and bring him into God's presence. To turn away from that sacrifice leaves him with no saving alternative. This is parallel to Matthew 12:31 (see note there).

10:27 fearful expectation. The judgment is certain to happen, so it engenders fear. judgment and fiery indignation. The description is similar to that in Isaiah 26:11 and Zephaniah 1:18 (cf. 2 Thess. 1:7–9). Ultimately, such judgment is that of eternity in the lake of fire (cf. Matt. 13:38–42, 49, 50). adversaries. Actual opposition against God and toward the program of God in salvation (see notes on Phil. 3:18, 19).

10:28 Cf. Deuteronomy 17:2–7.

10:29 how much worse punishment. There will be degrees of punishment in hell. This is also clearly indicated in Matthew 11:22, 24 (see notes there). trampled. In the ancient Near East, one of the gestures used to show contempt for someone was to “lift up the foot” against or toward them (cf. Ps. 41:9). To walk on top of someone or something was a more extreme gesture showing utter contempt and scorn (cf. 2 Kin. 9:33; Is. 14:19; Mic. 7:10; Zech. 10:5). Such contempt demonstrates a complete rejection of Christ as Savior and Lord. counted . . . common. To reckon Christ's blood as something “common” is the same thing as saying that it is unclean or defiled (see note on 9:13) and implies that Christ was a sinner and a blemished sacrifice. Such thinking is truly blasphemous. blood of the covenant. See notes on 9:14, 15. Christ's death inaugurated or ratified the New Covenant. sanctified. This refers to Christ, in that He was set apart to God (cf. John 17:19). It cannot refer to the apostate, because only true believers are sanctified. See Introduction: Interpretive Challenges. insulted the Spirit of grace. See notes on 6:4 and 9:14. The same title is utilized in Zechariah 12:10. Rejecting Christ insults the Spirit who worked through Him (Matt. 12:31, 32) and who testifies of Him (John 15:26; 16:8–11).

10:30 Quoted from Deuteronomy 32:35, 36 (cf. Ps. 135:4; Rom. 12:19).

10:31 living God. See note on 3:12.

10:32–39 In this section, a word of encouragement is presented to counterbalance the preceding grave warning (vv. 19–31). The writer points out that the Hebrews' former experiences should stimulate them, the nearness of reward should strengthen them, and the fear of God's displeasure should prevent them from going back to Judaism.

10:32 recall. Carries the idea of carefully thinking back and reconstructing something in one's mind, not merely remembering (cf. Acts 5:41; 2 Cor. 7:15). illuminated. See note on 6:4 (cf. “knowledge of the truth” in v. 26). a great struggle. The word is found only here in the NT. It is a picture of the struggling athlete engaged in a rigorous contest (cf. 2 Tim. 2:5). After being enlightened, they suffered (v. 33), became offended, and began to fall away (see notes on Matt. 13:20).

10:33 a spectacle. The theater is alluded to with regard to the actors being placed on a stage where they can be observed by everyone. In the context of this verse, the idea is exposure to disgrace and ridicule (cf. 1 Cor. 4:9). companions. These unconverted Hebrews had been close to persecution when it happened to the believers with whom they associated. They perhaps had actually sufferred for that identification, including the seizure of their property, but had not yet turned away because they were still interested in the prospects of heaven (v. 34). In the NT, there are examples of those who willingly exposed themselves to possible arrest and harassment because they sought to help those who were persecuted for their faith. Surprisingly, on one occasion, the Pharisees were among them. The Pharisees warned Jesus about Herod's pending attempt on Jesus' life (Luke 13:31). Among genuine believers who might be given as examples of helping the persecuted, there was Onesiphorus (2 Tim. 1:16–18).

10:34 in my chains. This is one of the supposed indicators used for identifying the author of this epistle as the apostle Paul (cf. Eph. 3:1; 2 Tim. 1:8). However, many other Christians were also imprisoned. joyfully accepted. Cf. Acts 5:41; 16:24, 25; Romans 5:3; James 1:2. a better and an enduring possession. See note on 9:15 (cf. Matt. 6:19, 20; 1 Pet. 1:4).

10:35 cast away. Due to their current persecutions, they were tempted to run away from their outward identification with Christ and Christians and to apostatize (cf. v. 23; Deut. 32:15, 18). reward. They are closer than ever to the eternal reward. It is no time to turn back.

10:36 done the will of God. To trust in Christ fully by living daily in the will of the Father. See notes on Matthew 7:21–28; James 1:22–25; cf. John 6:29. receive the promise. See notes on 4:1; 6:12; 9:15. If they would remain with the new covenant and put their trust exclusively in Christ, they would obtain the promise of salvation for themselves.

10:37, 38 The loose reference to Habakkuk 2:3, 4 (cf. Rom. 1:17; Gal. 3:11) is introduced by a phrase taken from Isaiah 26:20. This is the second reference to the Isaiah passage (cf. v. 27) which is part of a song of salvation. The passage in Isaiah 26 (or, its greater context, Is. 24–27) is perhaps uppermost in the writer's mind. The Habakkuk reference is altered considerably so that it is more of an interpretive paraphrase drawing on other OT concepts and contexts. Habakkuk 2:4, 5 is descriptive of the proud who do not live by faith. It is the proud who are self-sufficient and who fail to realize the necessity of patient endurance and trust in God. The proud Jew will be rejected if he does not exercise faith. He will be judged along with the nations.

10:38 the just shall live by faith. See note on Romans 1:17. The opposite of apostasy is faith. This is a preview of the subsequent chapter. It is faith which pleases God. The person who draws back from the knowledge of the gospel and faith will prove his apostasy.

10:39 draw back to perdition. The writer expresses confidence that believing readers ("we") will not be counted among "those" who fall away to destruction. Apostates will draw back from Christ, but there are some who are near to believing who can be pulled "out of the fire" (cf. Jude 23). Perdition is commonly used in the NT of the everlasting punishment or judgment of unbelievers (cf. Matt. 7:13; Rom. 9:22; Phil. 1:28; 3:19; 1 Tim. 6:9). Judas and the Man of Sin are called "son of perdition" (a Semitism meaning "perdition bound"; John 17:12; 2 Thess. 2:3). saving of the soul. Preservation from eschatological destruction is the concept of "saving" in this context. In the context of Isaiah 26:20, 21 (v. 19) the eschatological preservation includes resurrection from the dead. The writer connects faith and resurrection in the example of Abraham (11:19).

11:1–40 The eleventh chapter is a moving account of faithful OT saints and given such titles as, "The Saints' Hall of Fame," "The Honor Roll of Old Testament Saints," and "Heroes of Faith." They all attest to the value of living by faith. They compose "the cloud of witnesses" (12:1) who give powerful testimony to the Hebrews that they should come to faith in God's truth in Christ.

C. Genuine Faith (11:1–3)

11:1 This verse is written in a style of Hebrew poetry (used often in the Psalms), in which two parallel and nearly identical phrases are used to state the same thing. Cf. 1 Peter 1:7—God tests our faith in the crucible. substance. This is from the same Greek word translated "express image" in 1:3 and "confidence" in 3:14. The faith described here involves the most solid possible conviction, the God-given present assurance of a future reality. evidence of things not seen. True faith is not based on empirical evidence but on divine assurance, and is a gift of God (Eph. 2:8).

11:2 elders. Meaning "men of old." In this context, the term refers to all saints, both men and women, under the older covenant, a select few of whom are described in verses 4–40. obtained a good testimony. Lit. "were testified to" or "had witness given about them" (cf. vv. 4, 39). God bears witness on the behalf of these saints that they lived by faith and divine approval is granted to them.

11:3 By faith. Each example of faith in verses 3–31 is formally introduced with this specific phrase. True saving faith works in obedience to God (see notes on James 2:14–25). we. This refers to the writer and all other true believers, present and past. worlds. The physical universe itself, as well as its operation and administration. were framed. The concept involved in this verb (used also in 13:21) is that of equipping so that something might be made ready to fulfill its purpose. word of God. God's divine utterance (see, e.g., Gen. 1:3, 6, 9, 11, 14). not made. God created the universe out of something which cannot be seen. There is the possibility that the invisible something was God's own energy or power. For more on creation, see notes on Genesis 1:1–31.

D. Heroes of the Faith (11:4–40)

11:4–40 Adam and Eve are passed over in this portion regarding creation because they had seen God, fellowshiped with Him, and talked with Him. Their children were the first to exercise faith in the unseen God.

11:4 Abel. See Genesis 4:1–15. more excellent. The precise reason for the excellence of Abel's sacrifice is not specifically revealed by the writer of Hebrews, but implied in 12:24 (see notes there). Here his concern is with Abel's faith. Both brothers knew what God required. Abel obeyed and Cain did not. Abel acted in faith, Cain in unbelief (see note on Gen. 4:4, 5). through which . . . it. The antecedent of both "which" and "it" is Abel's faith, not his offering. Through that faith, he left testimony to all succeeding generations that a person comes to God by faith to receive righteousness. righteous. Because of his faith, evidenced in obedience to God's requirement for sacrifice, Abel was accounted as righteous by God (cf. Rom. 4:4–8). Christ Himself referred to the righteousness of Abel (Matt. 23:35). Cain's sacrifice was evidence that he was just going through the motions of ritual in a disobedient manner, not evidencing authentic faith. Without faith, no one can receive imputed righteousness (cf. Gen. 15:6). testifying of his gifts. Abel's offering proved something about his faith that was not demonstrated by Cain's offering.

11:5 The quote is from Genesis 5:24. Enoch. See note on Genesis 5:24. The LXX translated the Hebrew idiom "Enoch walked with God" with "he pleased God." The writer combines both in the reference. Enoch was miraculously taken to heaven without dying (cf. 1 Thess. 4:17).

11:6 impossible to please. Enoch pleased God because he had faith. Without such faith, it is not possible for anyone to “walk with God” or “please Him” (cf. 10:38). He is. The emphasis here is on “He,” the true God. Genuine faith does not simply believe that a divine being exists, but that the God of Scripture is the only real and true God who exists. Not believing that God exists is equivalent to calling Him a liar (cf. 1 John 5:10). rewarder. A person must believe not only that the true God exists, but also that He will reward people’s faith in Him with forgiveness and righteousness, because He has promised to do so (cf. 10:35; Gen. 15:1; Deut. 4:29; 1 Chr. 28:9; Ps. 58:11; Is. 40:10).

11:7 Noah. See Genesis 5:28–9:29; Ezekiel 14:14. things not yet seen. See notes on verses 1, 6. The world had not seen anything resembling the great flood (not even rain; see notes on Gen. 7:11), yet Noah spent 120 years (Gen. 6:3) fulfilling God’s command to build the massive ark (Gen. 6:13–22). godly fear. Noah treated God’s message with great respect and awe (cf. 5:7). His faith was expressed in obedience (cf. Gen. 6:22; 7:5). condemned. Noah warned the people of his time about God’s impending judgment (cf. 1 Pet. 3:20), and is called “a preacher of righteousness” (2 Pet. 2:5). heir of the righteousness. See notes on 6:12; 9:15. He who was a preacher of righteousness (2 Pet. 2:5) also became an heir of righteousness. He believed the message he preached. Like Enoch before him (see notes on v. 5), Noah walked with God in faith and obedience (Gen. 6:9).

11:8–19 Abraham. See Genesis 11:27–25:11.

11:8 the place . . . inheritance. The land of Canaan, far from Abraham’s original home in Ur of the Chaldees (Gen. 11:31). He went by faith.

11:9 promise. Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob were not able to settle permanently in or possess the land God promised to them (v. 10). Abraham first went there in faith, and they all lived there in faith, believing in a promise of possession that would not be fulfilled for many generations beyond their lifetimes (Gen. 12:7).

11:10 city. Abraham’s ultimate and permanent Promised Land was heaven which, through faith, he knew he would ultimately inherit. This city is mentioned again in verse 16; 12:22; 13:14.

11:11, 12 Sarah. See Genesis 11:27–23:2; 1 Peter 3:5, 6.

11:11 past the age. At ninety (Gen. 17:17), Sarah was long past child-bearing age and had never been able to conceive. God enabled her to do so, however, because of her faith in His promise (Gen. 21:1–3).

11:12 as good as dead. At ninety-nine, Abraham was well beyond the age to father children apart from divine intervention (Gen. 17:1, 15–17; 21:1–5). stars . . . sand. The writer used hyperbole to emphasize the vastness of the population that would come from Abraham’s loins. See Genesis 15:4, 5; 22:17.

11:13 These all. The reference is to the patriarchs only (Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob). This interpretation is supported by the fact that the promises began with Abraham (cf. Acts 7:17; Rom. 4:13; Gal. 3:14–18) and were passed on to Isaac (Gen. 26:2–5, 24) and Jacob (Gen. 28:10–15). In addition, only those individuals fit the description in verse 15, and Enoch did not die. See note on 6:15. These people of faith didn’t know when they would inherit the promise. They had a life in the land, but did not possess it.

11:13–16 strangers and pilgrims. See Genesis 23:4. Their faith was patient and endured great hardships because they believed God had something better. They had no desire to go back to Ur, but did long for heaven (Job 19:25, 26; Ps. 27:4).

11:16 their God. God referred to Himself as “the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob” (Ex. 3:6; cf. Gen. 28:13; Matt. 22:32). This is a significant covenant formula whereby an individual or a people identified with God and He with them (cf. Lev. 26:12). a city. See note on 12:22.

11:17–19 See Genesis 22:1–18. Abraham again proved his faith by his willingness to give back to God his son of promise, Isaac, whom he had miraculously received because of his faith. It would take an even greater miracle for them to replace Isaac by natural means. He trusted God for a resurrection. Cf. Romans 4:16–21.

11:17, 18 only begotten. Isaac was not the only son of Abraham; there was also Ishmael through Hagar (Gen. 16:1–16). The term refers to someone who is unique, one of a kind (cf. John 1:14). Isaac was the only son born according to God’s promise and was the only heir of that promise. The quotation from Genesis 21:12 proves this latter point.

11:19 even from the dead. Believing that God’s promise regarding Isaac was unconditional, Abraham came to the conclusion that God would fulfill that promise even if it required raising Isaac from the dead (cf. Gen. 22:5). figurative sense. The word is the same as in 9:9, which is the basis for the English word parable. Abraham received Isaac back from the dead, in a sense, even though Isaac had not been slain.

11:20 Isaac. See Genesis 27:1–28:5.

11:21 Jacob. See Genesis 47:28–49:33. each of the sons. Both of Joseph’s sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, received a blessing from Jacob. Consequently, two tribes descended from Joseph, whereas only one tribe descended from each of his brothers (see Gen. 47:31; 48:1, 5, 16). top of his staff. According to Genesis 47:31, Jacob leaned upon his “bed.” The two words (staff, bed) in Hebrew have exactly the same consonants. Old Testament Hebrew manuscripts were copied without vowels. Later Hebrew manuscripts, between the sixth and ninth centuries A.D., took the word as “bed.” The LXX, in the third century B.C., rendered it “staff,” which seems more likely, although both could be factual.

11:22 Joseph. See Genesis 37:1–50:26. Joseph spent all of his adult life in Egypt and, even though he was a fourth-generation heir

Faithful People in Hebrews

Abel—son of Adam and Eve; offered a more acceptable sacrifice to God than his brother did (11:4; 12:24)

Enoch—lived in close fellowship with God; taken up to heaven without dying (11:5)

Noah—obeyed God and built the ark (11:7)

Abraham—followed God to become the father of the Jewish nation (2:16; 6:13–11:19)

Sarah—trusted God to give her a child in her old age (11:11)

Isaac—son of Abraham and Sarah; blessed his sons, Jacob and Esau, according to the will of God (11:9–20)

Jacob—son of Isaac; blessed and adopted Joseph’s sons before his death (11:9, 20–21)

Joseph—believed God would deliver the nation of Israel from Egyptian bondage (11:22)

Moses—courageously served God and led Israel out of Egypt (3:2–16; 7:14–12:25)

Rahab—obeyed God by sheltering Israelite spies in her home (11:31)

Old Testament people of faith—accomplished great deeds for God and also suffered great persecution (11:32–40) of the promise given to Abraham, he never returned to Canaan while he was alive. Yet, facing death, he still had faith that God would fulfill His promise and demonstrated that confidence by making his brothers promise to take his bones back to Canaan for burial (Gen. 50:24, 25; cf. Ex. 13:19; Josh. 24:32).

11:23–29 Moses. See Exodus 1–15; Acts 7:17–36.

11:23 beautiful child. Meaning “favored,” in this case divinely favored (Acts 7:20; cf. Ex. 2:2). The faith described here is actually that exercised by Moses’ parents, although it is unclear how much Moses’ parents understood about God’s plan for their child.

11:24 Moses refused the fame he could have in Egypt if he had capitalized on his position as the adopted son of Pharaoh’s daughter (cf. Ex. 2:10).

11:25 with the people of God. Moses would have sinned had he refused to take on the responsibility God gave him regarding Israel, and he had a clear and certain conviction that “God would deliver them by his hand” (Acts 7:25). Moses repudiated the pleasures of Egypt.

11:26 reproach of Christ. Moses suffered reproach for the sake of Christ in the sense that he identified with Messiah’s people in their suffering (v. 25). In addition, Moses identified himself with the Messiah because of his own role as leader and prophet (cf. 12:2; Deut. 18:15; Pss. 69:9; 89:51). Moses knew of the sufferings and glory of the Messiah (cf. John 5:46; Acts 26:22, 23; 1 Pet. 1:10–12). Anyone who suffers because of genuine faith in God and for the redemptive gospel suffers for the sake of Christ (cf. 13:12, 13; 1 Pet. 4:14).

11:27 forsook Egypt. Moses left Egypt for the first time when he fled for his life after killing an Egyptian slave master (Ex. 2:14, 15). That time he did fear Pharaoh’s wrath. On the second occasion, he turned his back on Egypt and all that it represented. This leaving was not for fear of Pharaoh, so this latter departure is the one in view here. seeing Him*. Moses’ faith was such that he responded to God’s commands as though God were standing visibly before him. This was the basis for his loyalty to God, and it should be a believer’s example for loyalty (cf. 2 Cor. 4:16–18).

11:28 Passover. See Exodus 12.

11:29 Red Sea. See Exodus 14, 15. When the Israelites first reached the shores of the Red Sea, the people feared for their lives (Ex. 14:11, 21). But upon hearing Moses’ pronouncement of God’s protection (Ex. 14:13, 14), they went forward in faith.

11:30 Jericho. See Joshua 6. The people did nothing militarily to cause the fall of Jericho; they simply followed God’s instructions in faith. Cf. 2 Corinthians 10:4.

11:31 Rahab. See Joshua 2:1–24; 6:22–25; Matthew 1:5; James 2:25.

11:32 All of the men listed in this verse held a position of power or authority, but none of them is praised for his personal status or abilities. Instead, they are recognized for what each one had accomplished by faith in God. They are not listed chronologically, but are listed in pairs with the more important member mentioned first (cf. 1 Sam. 12:11). See Judges 6–9 (Gideon); 4, 5 (Barak); 13–16 (Samson); 11, 12 (Jephthah).

David*. David is the only king mentioned in this verse. All the others are judges or prophets. David could also be considered a prophet (see 4:7; 2 Sam. 23:1–3; Mark 12:36). Cf. 1 Sam. 13:14; 16:1, 12; Acts 13:22.

Samuel and the prophets*. Samuel was the last of the judges and the first of the prophets (cf. 1 Sam. 7:15; Acts 3:24; 13:20). He anointed David as king (1 Sam. 16:13) and was known as a man of intercessory prayer (1 Sam. 12:19, 23; Jer. 15:1).

11:33–38 The many accomplishments and sufferings described in these verses apply generally to those faithful saints. Some experienced great success, whereas others suffered great affliction. The point is that they all courageously and uncompromisingly followed God, regardless of the earthly outcome. They placed their trust in Him and His promises (cf. 6:12; 2 Tim. 3:12).

11:33 subdued kingdoms. Joshua, the judges, David, and others. worked righteousness. Righteous kings like David, Solomon, Asa, Jehoshaphat, Joash, Hezekiah, and Josiah. obtained promises. Abraham, Moses, David, and Solomon. stopped the mouths of lions. Samson (Judg. 14:5, 6), David (1 Sam. 17:34, 35), Daniel (Dan. 6:22).

11:34 quenched the violence of fire. Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego (Dan. 3:19–30). escaped the edge of the sword. David (1 Sam. 18:4, 11; 19:9, 10), Elijah (1 Kin. 19:1–3, 10), and Elisha (2 Kin. 6:15–19). weakness. Ehud (Judg. 3:12–30), Jael (Judg. 4:17–24), Gideon (Judg. 6:15, 16; 7:1–25), Samson (Judg. 16:21–30), and Hezekiah (Is. 38:1–6). Cf. 1 Corinthians 1:27; 2 Corinthians 12:10.

11:35 Women received their dead. The widow of Zarephath (1 Kin. 17:22) and the woman of Shunem (2 Kin. 4:34). tortured. The word indicates that they were beaten to death while strapped to some sort of rack (cf. 2 Macc. 6, 7 about Eleazar and the mother with seven sons who were martyrs). better resurrection. See note on 9:27. The deliverance from certain death or near death would be like returning from the dead, but would not be the promised resurrection. This was especially true of those who had died and were raised. The first time they were raised from the dead was resuscitation, not the true and glorious final resurrection (Dan. 12:2; cf. Matt. 5:10; James 1:12).

11:36 others. Joseph (Gen. 39:20), Micahiah (1 Kin. 22:27), Elisha (2 Kin. 2:23), Hanani (2 Chr. 16:10), Jeremiah (Jer. 20:1–6; 37:15), and others (2 Chr. 36:16).

11:37 stoned. The prophet Zechariah (son of Jehoiada) was killed in this fashion (see notes on 2 Chr. 24:20–22; Matt. 23:35). sawn in two. According to tradition, this was the method Manasseh used to execute Isaiah. slain with the sword. Urijah the prophet died in this fashion (Jer. 26:23; cf. 1 Kin. 19:10). However, the expression here may refer to the mass execution of God's people; several such incidents occurred during the time of the Maccabees in the 400 years between the OT and NT (see Introduction to the Intertestamental Period). wandered about. Many of God's people suffered from poverty and persecution (cf. Ps. 107:4–9).

11:38 See 1 Kings 18:4, 13; 19:9.

11:39, 40 something better. They had faith in the ultimate fulfillment of the eternal promises in the covenant (v. 13). See Introduction: Historical and Theological Themes.

11:40 apart from us. The faith of OT saints looked forward to the promised salvation, whereas the faith of those after Christ looks back to the fulfillment of the promise. Both groups are characterized by genuine faith and are saved by Christ's atoning work on the cross (cf. Eph. 2:8, 9).

E. Persevering Faith (12:1–29)

12:1 Therefore. This is a very crucial transition word offering an emphatic conclusion (cf. 1 Thess. 4:8) to the section which began in 10:19. witnesses. The deceased people of chapter 11 give witness to the value and blessing of living by faith. Motivation for running "the race" is not in the possibility of receiving praise from "observing" heavenly saints. Rather, the runner is inspired by the godly examples those saints set during their lives. The great crowd is not comprised of spectators but rather is made up of ones whose past life of faith encourages others to live that way (cf. 11:2, 4, 5, 33, 39). let us. The reference is to those Hebrews who had made a profession of Christ, but had not gone all the way to full faith. They had not yet begun the race, which starts with salvation. The writer has invited them to accept salvation in Christ and join the race. every weight. Different from the “sin” mentioned next, this refers to the main encumbrance weighing down the Hebrews which was the Levitical system with its stifling legalism. The athlete would strip away every piece of unnecessary clothing before competing in the race. The outward things emphasized by the Levitical system not only impede; they also “ensnare.” sin. In this context, this focuses first on the particular sin of unbelief—refusing to turn away from the Levitical sacrifices to the perfect sacrifice, Jesus Christ (cf. John 16:8–11), as well as other sins cherished by the unbeliever. endurance. Endurance is the steady determination to keep going, regardless of the temptation to slow down or give up (cf. 1 Cor. 9:24, 25). race. The athletic metaphor presents the faith-filled life as a demanding, grueling effort. The English word agony is derived from the Greek word used here. See note on Matthew 7:14.

12:2 looking. They were to fix their eyes on Jesus as the object of faith and salvation (cf. 11:26, 27; Acts 7:55, 56; Phil. 3:8). author. See note on 2:10. The term means originator or preeminent example. finisher. See note on 5:14. The term is literally “perfecter,” having the idea of carrying through to perfect completion (cf. John 19:30). the joy. Jesus persevered so that He might receive the joy of accomplishment of the Father’s will and exaltation (cf. 1:9; Ps. 16:9–11; Luke 10:21–24). right hand. See note on 1:3.

12:3 consider Him. Jesus is the supreme example of willingness to suffer in obedience to God. He faced hostility (the same word as spoken against in Luke 2:34) and endured even the cruel cross. The same opposition is faced by all who follow Him (Acts 28:22; Gal. 6:17; Col. 1:24; 2 Tim. 3:12). weary and discouraged. Believers’ pressures, exhaustion, and persecutions (cf. Gal. 6:9) are as nothing compared to Christ’s.

12:4 bloodshed. None of the Hebrews had experienced such intense exhaustion or persecution that it brought them to death or martyrdom. Since Stephen (Acts 7:60), James (Acts 12:1), and others (cf. Acts 9:1; 22:4; 26:10) had faced martyrdom in Jerusalem, it would appear to rule out that city as the residence of this epistle’s recipients (see Introduction: Author and Date).

12:5, 6 Here the writer recalls and expounds Proverbs 3:11, 12. Trials and sufferings in the Christian’s life come from God, who uses them to educate and discipline believers by such experiences. Such dealings are evidence of God’s love for His own children (cf. 2 Cor. 12:7–10).

12:6 scourges. This refers to flogging with a whip, a severe and painful form of beating that was a common Jewish practice (cf. Matt. 10:17; 23:34).

12:7, 8 sons. Because all people are imperfect and need discipline and training, all true children of God are chastened at one time or another, in one way or another.

12:8 illegitimate. The word is found only here in the NT, but is used elsewhere in Greek literature of those born to slaves or concubines. There could be in this an implied reference to Hagar and Ishmael (Gen. 16), Abraham's concubine and illegitimate son.

12:9 subjection. Respect for God equals submission to His will and law, and those who willingly receive the Lord's chastening will have a richer, more abundant life (cf. Ps. 119:165). Father of spirits. Probably best translated as "Father of our spirits," it is in contrast to "human fathers" (lit. "fathers of our flesh").

12:10 our profit. Imperfect human fathers discipline imperfectly; but God is perfect and, therefore, His discipline is perfect and always for the spiritual good of His children.

12:11 fruit of righteousness. This is the same phrase as in James 3:18. trained. The same word was used in 5:14 and translated "exercised" (see note there; cf. 1 Tim. 4:7).

12:12–17 This passage exhorts believers to act on the divine truths laid out in the previous passages. Truth that is known but not obeyed becomes a judgment rather than a benefit (cf. 13:22).

12:12, 13 The author returns to the race metaphor begun in verses 1–3 (cf. Prov. 4:25–27) and incorporates language taken from Isaiah 35:3 to describe the disciplined individual's condition like a weary runner whose arms drop and knees wobble. When experiencing trials in his life, the believer must not allow the circumstances to get the best of him. Instead, he must endure and get his second wind so as to be renewed to continue the race.

12:14 Pursue . . . holiness. In this epistle, it is explained as (1) a drawing near to God with full faith and a cleansed conscience (10:14, 22), and (2) a genuine acceptance of Christ as the Savior and sacrifice for sin, bringing the sinner into fellowship with God. Unbelievers will not be drawn to accept Christ if believers' lives do not demonstrate the qualities God desires, including peace and holiness (cf. John 13:35; 1 Tim. 4:3; 5:23; 1 Pet. 1:16).

12:15 looking carefully. Believers are to watch their own lives in order to give a testimony of peace and holiness, as well as to look out for and help those in their midst who are in need of salvation. fall short of the grace of God. See notes on 4:1; 6:6; 10:26. This means to come too late and be left out. Here is another mention of the intellectually convinced Jews in that assembly who knew the gospel and were enamored with Christ, but still stood on the edge of apostasy. root of bitterness. This is the attitude of apostates within the church who are corruptive influences. Cf. Deuteronomy 29:18.

12:16, 17 See Genesis 25:29–34 and 27:1–39. Esau desired God's blessings, but he did not want God. He regretted what he had done, but he did not repent. Esau is an example of those who willfully sin against God and who are given no second chance because of their exposure to the truth and their advanced state of hardness (cf. 6:6; 10:26). Esau was an example of the "profane" person.

12:16 fornicator. In this context, it refers to the sexually immoral in general. Apostasy is often closely linked with immorality (cf. 2 Pet. 2:10, 14, 18; Jude 8, 16, 18).

12:18–29 The writer proceeds to give an exposition based on Israel's encounter with God at Mt. Sinai (see Ex. 19, 20; Deut. 4:10–24).

12:18 See Exodus 19:12, 13; Deut. 4:11; 5:22.

12:19 sound of a trumpet. See Exodus 19:16, 19; Deut. 4:12.

12:20 Quoted from Exodus 19:12, 13 (cf. 20:19; Deut. 5:23, 24).

12:21 Quoted from Deuteronomy 9:19.

12:22 Mount Zion. As opposed to Mount Sinai, where God gave the Mosaic Law which was foreboding and terrifying, Mount Zion here is not the earthly one in Jerusalem, but God's heavenly abode, which is inviting and gracious. No one could please God on Sinai's terms, which was perfect fulfillment of the law (Gal. 3:10–12). Zion, however, is accessible to all who come to God through Jesus Christ (cf. Ps. 132:13, 14; Is. 46:13; Zech. 2:10; Gal. 4:21–31). Mount Zion . . . city of the living God . . . heavenly Jerusalem. These are synonyms for heaven itself. For a description of the abode of God, the city of Jerusalem in heaven, see notes on Revelation 21:1–22:5. innumerable. The Greek word is often translated as “10,000.” See Revelation 5:11, 12.

12:23 general assembly. The term here means “a gathering for public festival.” It does not likely describe a distinct group as if different from the church, but describes the attitude of the innumerable angels in heaven in a festal gathering around the throne of God. church of the firstborn. The firstborn is Jesus Christ (see note on 1:6). The church is comprised of believers who are fellow heirs with Christ, the preeminent One among many brethren (Rom. 8:17, 29). just men made perfect. See notes on 5:14 (cf. 11:40). These are the OT saints in distinction from the “church of the firstborn,” who are the NT believers.

12:24 Mediator. See note on 7:22 (cf. 8:6–10; 9:15). better things. See notes on 6:9; 9:23. Abel's sacrifice was pleasing to God because it was offered in faith and obedience (cf. 11:4), but it had no atoning power. Jesus' blood alone was sufficient to cleanse sin (cf. 1 John 1:7). The sacrifice of Christ brought redemption (9:12), forgiveness (9:26), and complete salvation (10:10, 14). than that

Key Word

Mediator: 8:6; 9:15; 12:24—lit. “a go-between” or “intermediary.” Paul characterizes Moses as a mediator of the covenant at Mount Sinai. Moses acted as a communication link between God and the Israelites. He informed the Israelites of their covenant obligations and also appealed to God on Israel's behalf (see Gal. 3:19–20). Acting in the same position, Jesus is the Mediator of the New Covenant. He activated this covenant through His own sacrifice on the Cross. He now sits at the right hand of the Father interceding for us (7:25).

of Abel. The blood of Abel's sacrifice only provided a temporary covering, but Christ's blood sacrifice declares eternal forgiveness (cf. Col. 1:20).

12:25 refused. See note on verse 19, where the same word describes the conduct of the Israelites at Mount Sinai. much more. The consequences for apostates is dire indeed. The judgment to be experienced and the expected terror is far in excess of that on Mount Sinai.

12:26 Quoted from Haggai 2:6.

12:26, 27 shook the earth. At Mount Sinai, God shook the earth. From Zion, He will shake the heavens, the entire universe (cf. Is. 13:13; 34:4; 65:17, 22; 2 Pet. 3:10–13; Rev. 6:12–14; 20:11; 21:1).

12:27 Everything physical (“things . . . being shaken”) will be destroyed; only eternal things (“which cannot be shaken”) will remain.

12:28 kingdom. God will create “a new heaven and a new earth . . . the holy city, New Jerusalem” (Rev. 21:1, 2), which will be eternal and immovable. let us have grace. See note on 4:16. with reverence and godly fear. See note on 11:7 (cf. 5:7). The second word has to do with the apprehension felt because of being in God's presence.

12:29 consuming fire. See Deuteronomy 4:24. God's Law given at Sinai prescribed many severe punishments, but the punishment is far worse for those who reject His offer of salvation through His own Son, Jesus Christ (cf. Luke 3:16, 17). This verse is to be related to 10:29–31.

V. THE SUPERIORITY OF CHRISTIAN BEHAVIOR (13:1–21)

A. In Relation to Others (13:1–3)

13:1 The last chapter of the epistle focuses on some of the essential practical ethics of Christian living. These ethics help portray the true gospel to the world, encourage others to believe in Christ, and bring glory to God. The first of these is love for fellow believers (cf. John 13:35). Although the primary reference would be to Christians, the writer must have had emotions similar to those of the apostle Paul when it came to considering his fellow Hebrews (see Rom. 9:3, 4).

13:2 entertain. The second grace needing development was the extension of love to those who were strangers (cf. Rom. 12:13; 1 Tim. 3:2). Hospitality in the ancient world often included putting up a guest overnight or longer. This is hardest to do when experiencing a time of persecution. The Hebrews would not know whether a guest would prove to be a spy or a fellow believer being pursued. angels. This is not given as the ultimate motivation for hospitality, but to reveal that one never knows how far-reaching an act of kindness might be (cf. Matt. 25:40, 45). This is exactly what happened to Abraham and Sarah (Gen. 18:1–3), Lot (Gen. 19:1, 2), Gideon (Judg. 6:11–24), and Manoah (Judg. 13:6–20).

13:3 yourselves. Believers should be able to identify with the suffering of others because they also suffer physical (“in the body”) pain and hardship.

B. In Relation to Ourselves (13:4–9)

13:4 honorable. God highly honors marriage, which He instituted at creation (Gen. 2:24); but some people in the early church considered celibacy to be holier than marriage, an idea Paul strongly denounces in 1 Timothy 4:3 (see notes on 1 Cor. 7:1–5). Sexual activity in a marriage is pure, but any sexual activity outside marriage brings one under divine judgment. God will judge. God prescribes serious consequences for sexual immorality (see notes on Eph. 5:3–6).

13:5 covetousness. Lusting after material riches is “a root of all kinds of evil, for which some have strayed from the faith in their greediness” (1 Tim. 6:10; cf. 1 Tim. 3:3). I will never. Quoted from Genesis 28:15; Deuteronomy 31:6, 8; Joshua 1:5; 1 Chronicles 28:20. Believers can be content in every situation because of this promise. Five negatives are utilized in this statement to emphasize the impossibility of Christ deserting believers. It is like saying, “there is absolutely no way whatsoever that I will ever, ever leave you.”

13:6 boldly. Not the usual word for boldness, this word has the idea of being confident and courageous. Cf. its use in Matthew 9:2; 2 Corinthians 5:6, 8. Quoted from Psalm 118:6.

13:7 In addition to the roll of the faithful in chapter 11, the writer reminds the Hebrews of their own faithful leaders within the church. In so doing, he outlines the duties of pastors: (1) rule; (2) speak the Word of God; and (3) establish the pattern of faith for the people to follow. Cf. Acts 20:28; 1 Timothy 3:1–7; Titus 1:5–9.

These would include any teachings contrary to God's Word. The NT contains countless warnings against false teaching and false teachers (cf. Acts 20:29, 30; Rom. 16:17; 2 Cor. 10:4, 5; Gal. 1:6–9; Eph. 4:14; 2 Tim. 3:16). established by grace. Those who are experiencing God's grace in Christ have hearts and minds that remain stable. foods. The Mosaic Law had regulations for everything, including food (Lev. 11). But for Christians, those laws have been abrogated (Acts 10:9–16; cf. 1 Cor. 8:8; Rom. 14:17; 1 Tim. 4:1–5).

C. In Relation to God (13:10–21)

13:10–13 See notes on 11:26; 12:2. The writer presents an analogy for the believers' identification with Christ in His rejection by Jews. The bodies of animals offered on the Day of Atonement were not eaten but burned "outside the camp" (Lev. 4:21; 16:27). Jesus, who was the ultimate atoning sacrifice, was similarly crucified outside the gates of Jerusalem (John 19:17). Figuratively, believers must join Him outside the camp of the world, no longer being a part of its unholy systems and practices (cf. 2 Tim. 2:4). By extension, this would also depict the departure from the Levitical system. The uncommitted Hebrews needed to take the bold step of leaving that system and being outside the camp of old covenant Israel.

13:10 an altar. The altar, the offerer, and the sacrifice are all closely related. Association with an altar identifies the offerer with the sacrifice. With certain offerings, the individual further identified himself with the altar and sacrifice by eating some of the sacrifice. The apostle Paul referred to this relationship to an altar when giving instruction to the Corinthians regarding eating meat offered to idols (1 Cor. 9:13) and regarding the observation of the Lord's Supper (1 Cor. 10:18). Here, the altar is equivalent to the sacrifice of Christ, especially as seen in the comparison to the Day of Atonement.

13:15 praise . . . thanks. As seen throughout the Book of Hebrews, sacrifices were extremely important under the Old Covenant. Under the New Covenant, God desires the praise and thanksgiving of His people rather than offerings of animals or grain. Since NT believers are all priests (1 Pet. 2:5, 9), they have offerings of praise and thanks to God (cf. Rom. 12:1). The "sacrifice of praise" is also mentioned in Leviticus 7:12; Psalm 54:6. For "fruit of the lips," see Isaiah 57:19; Hosea 14:2.

13:16 do good . . . share. The sacrifices of praise coming from the lips of God's people please Him only when accompanied by loving action (cf. Is. 58:6, 7; James 1:27; 1 John 3:18).

13:17 rule over you. See note on verse 7. The pastors/elders of the church exercise the very authority of Christ when they preach, teach, and apply Scripture (see notes on Acts 20:28; 1 Thess. 5:12, 13). They serve the church on behalf of Christ and must give Him an account of their faithfulness. See notes on 1 Corinthians 4:1–5; 1 Peter 5:1–4. These may include both secular and spiritual rulers. Even those who do not acknowledge God are nevertheless ordained and used by Him (cf. Rom. 13:1, 4). joy. The church is responsible to help its leaders do their work

A Believer's Obligation to the Elders

13:7: "Remember those who rule over you, who have spoken the word of God to you, whose faith follow, considering the outcome of their conduct."

13:17: "Obey those who rule over you, and be submissive, for they watch out for your souls, as those who must give account. Let them do so with joy and not with grief, for that would be unprofitable for you."

with satisfaction and delight. See notes on 1 Thessalonians 5:12, 13.

13:19 restored. The author had been with these Hebrews and was anxious to once again be in their fellowship.

13:20, 21 This benediction is among the most beautiful in Scripture (cf. Num. 6:24–26; 2 Cor. 13:14; Jude 24, 25). It is an example of how grace can be manifested in mutual blessing and prayer.

13:20 God of peace. Paul uses this title six times in his epistles (cf. 1 Thess. 5:23). great Shepherd of the sheep*. See Isaiah 63:11. The figure of the Messiah as a Shepherd is found frequently in Scripture (cf. Ps. 23; Is. 40:11; Ezek. 34:23; John 10:11; 1 Pet. 2:25; 5:4). through the blood of the everlasting covenant*. This must refer, in the context of Hebrews, to the New Covenant that is eternal (in a future sense) compared to the Mosaic covenant that was temporary and had been abrogated (see notes on 8:6–13; 9:15).

13:21 make you complete. This is not the Greek word for perfect or perfection used throughout Hebrews to indicate salvation (see note on 5:14), but is a word which is translated “prepared” in 10:5 and “framed” in 11:3. It refers to believers being edified. The verb has the idea of equipping by means of adjusting, shaping, mending, restoring, or preparing (see note on 11:3; cf. 1 Cor. 1:10; 2 Cor. 13:11; 2 Tim. 3:17).

VI. POSTSCRIPT (13:22–25)

13:22 bear with. Readers are encouraged to receive this message with open minds and warm hearts, in contrast to those who “will not endure sound doctrine” (2 Tim. 4:3). word of exhortation*. Cf. 3:13. This is the writer’s own description of his epistle (see Introduction: Historical and Theological Themes).

13:23 set free. The details of Timothy’s imprisonment are unknown (cf. 2 Tim. 4:11, 21).

13:24 Those from Italy. The group to which the author wrote may have been in Italy, or the meaning might be that Italian Christians who were with him sent their greetings (see Introduction: Author and Date). The use of similar phrases elsewhere is ambiguous since some are clearly referring to people still in their location (Acts 10:23; 17:13) and others who were away from their homes (Acts 21:27).

THE EPISTLE OF JAMES

Title

James, like all of the general epistles except Hebrews, is named after its author (v. 1).

Author and Date

Of the four men named James in the NT, only two are candidates for authorship of this epistle. No one has seriously considered James the Less, the son of Alphaeus (Matt. 10:3; Acts 1:13), or James the father of Judas (not Iscariot) (Luke 6:16; Acts 1:13). Some have suggested James the son of Zebedee and brother of John (Matt. 4:21), but he was martyred too early to have written it (Acts 12:2). That leaves only James, the oldest half-brother of Christ (Mark 6:3) and brother of Jude (Matt. 13:55) who also wrote the epistle that bears his name (Jude 1).

James had at first rejected Jesus as Messiah (John 7:5), but later believed (1 Cor. 15:7). He became the key leader in the Jerusalem church (cf. Acts 12:17; 15:13; 21:18; Gal. 2:12), being called one of the “pillars” of that church, along with Peter and John (Gal. 2:9). Also known as James the Just because of his devotion to righteousness, he was martyred c. A.D. 62, according to the first-century Jewish historian Josephus. Comparing James’s vocabulary in the letter he wrote which is recorded in Acts 15 with that in the epistle of James further corroborates his authorship.

James wrote with the authority of one who had personally seen the resurrected Christ (1 Cor. 15:7), who was recognized as an associate of the apostles (Gal. 1:19), and who was the leader of the Jerusalem church.

James most likely wrote this epistle to believers scattered (1:1) as a result of the unrest recorded in Acts 12 (c. A.D. 44). There is no mention of the Council of Jerusalem described in Acts 15 (c. A.D. 49), which would be expected if that Council had already taken place. Therefore, James can be reliably dated c. A.D. 44–49, making it the earliest written book of the NT canon.

Background and Setting

The recipients of this book were Jewish believers who had been dispersed (1:1), possibly as a result of Stephen’s martyrdom (Acts 7, c. A.D. 31–34), but more likely due to the persecution under Herod Agrippa I (Acts 12, c. A.D. 44). The author refers to his audience as “brethren” fifteen times (1:2, 16, 19; 2:1, 5, 14; 3:1, 10, 12; 4:11; 5:7, 9, 10, 12, 19), which was a common epithet among the first-century Jews. Not surprisingly then, James is Jewish in its content. For example, the Greek word translated “assembly” (2:2) is the word for synagogue. Further, James contains more than forty allusions to the OT (and more than twenty to the Sermon on the Mount, Matt. 5–7).

Historical and Theological Themes

James, with its devotion to direct, pungent statements on wise living, is reminiscent of the Book of Proverbs. It has a practical emphasis, not emphasizing theoretical knowledge, but godly behavior. James wrote with a passionate desire for his readers to be uncompromisingly obedient to the Word of God. He used at least thirty references to nature (e.g., “wave of the sea” [1:6]; “reptile” [3:7]; and “heaven gave rain” [5:18]), as befits one who spent a great deal of time outdoors. He complements Paul’s emphasis on justification by faith with his own emphasis on spiritual fruitfulness demonstrating true faith.

Interpretive Challenges

At least two significant texts challenge the interpreter: In 2:14–26, what is the relationship between faith and works? Does James’s emphasis on works contradict Paul’s focus on faith? In 5:13–18, do the promises of healing refer to the spiritual or physical realm? These difficult texts are treated in the notes.

| Outline                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |

| Due to its complexity, there are a number of ways to outline the book in order to grasp the arrangement of its content. One way is to order it around a series of tests by which the genuineness of a person’s faith may be measured. |
| Introduction (1:1)                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| I. The Test of Perseverance in Suffering (1:2–12)                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| II. The Test of Blame in Temptation (1:13–18)                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| III. The Test of Response to the Word (1:19–27)                                                                                                                                                                                       |

| V. The Test of Righteous Works (2:14–26)                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| VI. The Test of the Tongue (3:1–12)                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| VII. The Test of Humble Wisdom (3:13–18)                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| VIII. The Test of Worldly Indulgence (4:1–12)                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| IX. The Test of Dependence (4:13–17)                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| X. The Test of Patient Endurance (5:1–11)                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| XI. The Test of Truthfulness (5:12)                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| XII. The Test of Prayerfulness (5:13–18)                                                                                                                                                                                              |

Introduction (1:1)

1:1 James. The half-brother of the Lord Jesus (see Introduction: Author and Date; cf. Gal. 1:19; 2:9). bondservant. See note on Romans 1:1. twelve tribes. A common NT title for Jews (cf. Matt. 19:28; Acts 26:7; Rev. 7:4). When the kingdom split after Solomon's reign, ten tribes constituted the northern kingdom, called Israel; and Benjamin and Judah combined to form the southern kingdom, called Judah. After the fall and deportation of the northern kingdom to Assyria (722 B.C.), some of the remnant of those in the ten northern tribes filtered down into Judah and came to Jerusalem to worship (2 Chr. 29, 30, 34), thus preserving all twelve tribes in Judah's land. Although tribal identity could not be established with certainty after the southern kingdom was led captive by Babylon (586 B.C.), the prophets foresaw a time when God would reconstitute the whole nation and delineate each person's tribal membership once again (cf. Is. 11:12, 13; Jer. 3:18; 50:4; Ezek. 37; Rev. 7:5–8). scattered abroad. The Greek word diaspora, which literally means "through a sowing" (cf. John 7:35), became a technical term referring to Jews living outside the land of Palestine (cf. 1 Pet. 1:1). Besides the expulsions from the land by the Assyrians (2 Kin. 17; 1 Chr. 5) and Babylonians (2 Kin. 24, 25; 2 Chr. 36), many Jews were taken to Rome as slaves when the Romans conquered them c. 63 B.C. In addition, during the centuries leading up to Christ's First Coming, thousands of Jews drifted out of Palestine and settled throughout the Mediterranean world (see notes on Acts 2:5–11). But James's primary audience was those who were scattered because of persecution (see Introduction: Background and Setting).

I. THE TEST OF PERSEVERANCE IN SUFFERING (1:2–12)

1:2 brethren. Believing Jews among those scattered (cf. 1 Pet. 1:1, 2; see note on Acts 8:1). count it all joy. The Greek word for count may also be translated "consider" or "evaluate." The natural human response to trials is not to rejoice; therefore, the believer must make a conscious commitment to face them with joy (see note on Phil. 3:1). trials. This Greek word connotes trouble, or something that breaks the pattern of peace, comfort, joy, and happiness in someone's life. The verb form of this word means "to put someone or something to the test," with the purpose of discovering that person's nature or that thing's quality. God brings such tests to prove—and increase—the strength and quality of one's faith and to demonstrate its validity (vv. 2–12). Every trial becomes a test of faith designed to strengthen. If the believer fails the test by wrongly responding, that test then becomes a temptation, or a solicitation to evil (see notes on vv. 13–15).

1:3 testing. This means "proof," or "proving" (see Introduction: Outline). patience. Better translated "endurance," or "perseverance." Through tests, a Christian will learn to withstand tenaciously the pressure of a trial until God removes it at His appointed time and even cherish the benefit. See notes on 2 Corinthians 12:7–10.

1:4 perfect. This is not a reference to sinless perfection (cf. 3:2), but to spiritual maturity (cf. 1 John 2:14). The testing of faith drives believers to deeper communion and greater trust in Christ—qualities that in turn produce a stable, godly, and righteous character (see note on 1 Pet. 5:10; cf. Gal. 4:19). complete. This is from a compound Greek word that literally means “all the portions whole.”

1:5 wisdom. James’s Jewish audience recognized this as the understanding and practical skill that was necessary to live life to God’s glory. It was not a wisdom of philosophical speculation, but the wisdom contained in the pure and peaceable absolutes of God’s will revealed in His Word (cf. 3:13, 17) and lived out. Only such divine wisdom enables believers to be joyous and submissive in the trials of life. ask of God. This command is a necessary part of the believer’s prayer life (cf. Job 28:12–23; Prov. 3:5–7; 1 Thess. 5:17). God intends that trials will drive believers to greater dependency on Him, by showing them their own inadequacy. As with all His riches (Eph. 1:7; 2:7; 3:8; Phil. 4:19), God has wisdom in abundance (Rom. 11:33) available for those who seek it. See notes on Proverbs 2:1–8.

1:6 ask in faith. Prayer must be offered with confident trust in a sovereign God (see note on Heb. 11:1). with no doubting. This refers to having one’s thinking divided within himself, not merely because of mental indecision but an inner moral conflict or distrust in God (see note on v. 8). wave of the sea. The person who doubts God’s ability or willingness to provide this wisdom is like the billowing, restless sea, moving back and forth with its endless tides, never able to settle (cf. Josh. 24:15; 1 Kin. 18:21; Rev. 3:16).

1:8 double-minded man. A literal translation of the Greek expression that denotes having one’s mind or soul divided between God and the world (see note on 4:4). This man is a hypocrite who occasionally believes in God but fails to trust Him when trials come, and thus receives nothing. The use of this expression in 4:8 makes it clear that it refers to an unbeliever. unstable. See notes on verse 6.

1:9, 10 lowly brother . . . the rich. Trials make all believers equally dependent on God and bring them to the same level with each other by keeping them from becoming preoccupied with earthly things. Poor Christians and wealthy ones can rejoice that God is no respecter of persons and that they both have the privilege of being identified with Christ.

1:9 glory. This word refers to the boasting of a privilege or possession; it is the joy of legitimate pride. Although having nothing in this world, the poor believer can rejoice in his high spiritual standing before God by grace and the hope which that brings (cf. Rom. 8:17, 18; 1 Pet. 1:4).

1:10 his humiliation. This refers to the rich believer’s being brought low by trials. Such experiences help him rejoice and realize that genuine happiness and contentment depend on the true riches of God’s grace, not earthly wealth.

1:11 grass . . . flower. A picture of Palestine’s flowers and flowering grasses, which colorfully flourish in February and dry up by May. This is a clear allusion to Isaiah 40:6–8, which speaks of the scorching sirocco wind that burns and destroys plants in its path. This picture from nature illustrates how divinely wrought death and judgment can quickly end the wealthy person’s dependence on material possessions (see note on v. 10; cf. Prov. 27:24).

1:12 Blessed. See notes on Matthew 5:4, 10. Believers who successfully endure trials are truly happy (cf. 5:11). endures. See note on verse 3. In this context, it also describes the passive, painful survival of a trial and focuses on the victorious outcome. Such a person never relinquishes his saving faith in God; thus this concept is closely related to the doctrine of eternal security and perseverance of the believer (see note on Matt. 24:13; cf. John 14:15, 23; 1 John 2:5, 6, 15, 19; 4:19; 1 Pet. 1:6–8). temptation. This is better translated “trials” (see note on v. 2). approved. Lit.

“passed the test” (see note on v. 2, “trials”). The believer has successfully and victoriously gone through his trials, indicating he is genuine because his faith has endured like Job’s. crown of life. This is best translated “the crown which is life.” A crown was the wreath put on the victor’s head after ancient Greek athletic events. Here, it denotes the believer’s ultimate reward, eternal life, which God has promised to him and will grant in full at death or at Christ’s coming (see notes on 2 Tim. 4:8; Rev. 2:10; cf. 1 Pet. 5:4).

II. THE TEST OF BLAME IN TEMPTATION (1:13–18)

1:13 The same Greek word translated “trials” (vv. 2–12) is also translated “temptation” here. James’s point is that every difficult circumstance that enters a believer’s life can either strengthen him if he obeys God and remains confident in His care, or become a solicitation to evil if the believer chooses instead to doubt God and disobey His Word. God cannot be tempted. God by His holy nature has no capacity for evil, or vulnerability to it (Hab. 1:13; cf. Lev. 19:2; Is. 6:3; 1 Pet. 1:16). nor does He Himself tempt anyone. God purposes trials to occur and in them He allows temptation to happen, but He has promised not to allow more than believers can endure and never without a way to escape (1 Cor. 10:13). They choose whether to take the escape God provides or to give in (see note on v. 14; cf. 2 Sam. 24:1; 1 Chr. 21:1).

1:14 drawn away. This Greek word was used to describe wild game being lured into traps. Just as animals can be drawn to their deaths by attractive baits, temptation promises people something good, which is actually harmful. his own desires. This refers to lust, the strong desire of the human soul to enjoy or acquire something to fulfill the flesh. Man’s fallen nature has the propensity to strongly desire whatever sin will satisfy it (see notes on Rom. 7:8–25). “His own” describes the individual nature of lust—it is different for each person as a result of inherited tendencies, environment, upbringing, and personal choices. The Greek grammar also indicates that these “desires” are the direct agent or cause of one’s sinning. Cf. Matthew 15:18–20. enticed. A fishing term that means “to capture” or “to catch with bait” (cf. 2 Pet. 2:14, 18). It is a parallel to “drawn away.”

1:15 Sin is not merely a spontaneous act, but the result of a process. The Greek words for “has conceived” and “brings forth” liken the process to physical conception and birth. Thus, James personifies temptation and shows that it can follow a similar sequence and produce sin with all its deadly results. While sin does not result in spiritual death for the believer, it can lead to physical death (1 Cor. 11:30; 1 John 5:16).

1:16 Do not be deceived. The Greek expression refers to erring, going astray, or wandering. Christians are not to make the mistake of blaming God rather than themselves for their sin.

1:17 Every good . . . perfect gift is from above. Two different Greek words for gift emphasize the perfection and inclusiveness of God’s graciousness. The first denotes the act of giving, and the second is the object

James’ Vocabulary

| James         |              | Acts 15   |
|---------------|--------------|-----------|
| 1:1           | “greetings”  | 15:23     |

| 2:10          | “keep”       | 15:24     |
| 5:19, 20      | “turn”       | 15:19     |

given. Everything related to divine giving is adequate, complete, and beneficial. Father of lights. An ancient Jewish expression for God as the Creator, with “lights” referring to the sun, moon, and stars (cf. Gen. 1:14–19). no variation or shadow of turning. From man’s perspective, the celestial bodies have different phases of movement and rotation, change from day to night, and vary in intensity and shadow. But God does not follow that pattern; He is changeless (cf. Mal. 3:6; 1 John 1:5).

1:18 Of His own will. This phrase translates a Greek word that makes the point that regeneration is not just a wish, but an active expression of God’s will, which He always has the power to accomplish. This phrase occurs at the beginning of the Greek sentence, which means James intends to emphasize that the sovereign will of God is the source of this new life. He brought us forth. The divine act of regeneration, or the new birth (see notes on John 3:3–8; 1 Pet. 1:23; cf. Ezek. 36:25–27; John 1:12, 13; Eph. 2:5, 6; 5:26). word of truth. Cf. John 17:17. Scripture, or the Word of God. He regenerates sinners through the power of that Word (cf. 2 Cor. 6:7; Col. 1:5; 1 Thess. 2:13; Titus 3:5; 1 Pet. 1:23–25). firstfruits. This was originally an OT expression referring to the first and best harvest crops, which God expected as an offering (cf. Ex. 23:19; Lev. 23:9–14; Deut. 26:1–19). Giving God that initial crop was an act of faith that He would fulfill His promise of a full harvest to come (Prov. 3:9, 10). In the same way, Christians are the first evidence of God’s new creation that is to come (cf. 2 Pet. 3:10–13) and enjoy presently in their new life a foretaste of future glory (see notes on Rom. 8:19–23).

III. THE TEST OF RESPONSE TO THE WORD (1:19–27)

1:19 swift to hear, slow to speak. Believers are to respond positively to Scripture, and eagerly pursue every opportunity to know God’s Word and will better (cf. Ps. 119:11; 2 Tim. 2:15). But at the same time, they should be cautious about becoming preachers or teachers too quickly (see notes on 3:1, 2; cf. Ezek. 3:17; 33:6, 7; 1 Tim. 3:6; 5:22).

1:20 wrath. This is from the Greek word that describes a deep, internal resentment and rejection, in this context, of God’s Word (see notes on 4:1–3; cf. Gal. 4:16).

1:21 lay aside. Lit. “having put off,” as one would do with dirty clothes (see notes on Rom. 13:12–14; Eph. 4:22; Col. 3:8; Heb. 12:1; 1 Pet. 2:1, 2). The tense of this Greek verb stresses the importance of putting off sin prior to receiving God’s Word. filthiness . . . wickedness. The first term was used of moral vice as well as dirty garments. Sometimes it was even used of ear wax—here, of sin that would impede the believer’s spiritual hearing. Wickedness refers to evil desire or intent. implanted word. See note on verse 18.

1:22 be doers. The fact that James calls professing believers to be “doers,” rather than simply to do, emphasizes that their entire personality should be characterized in that way. See notes on Matthew 7:21–28. deceiving. Lit. “reasoning beside or alongside” (as in “beside oneself”). This word was used in mathematics to refer to a miscalculation. Professing Christians who are content with only hearing the Word have made a serious spiritual miscalculation.

1:23 observing. A forceful Greek word meaning to look carefully and cautiously, as opposed to taking a casual glance. mirror. First-century mirrors were not glass but metallic, made of bronze, silver—or for the wealthy—gold. The metals were beaten flat and polished to a high gloss, and the image they reflected was adequate, but not perfect (cf. 1 Cor. 13:12).

1:24 forgets what kind of man he was.

Unless professing Christians act promptly after they hear the Word, they will forget the changes and improvements that their reflection showed them they need to make.

1:25 perfect law. In both the OT and NT, God's revealed, inerrant, sufficient, and comprehensive Word is called "law" (cf. Ps. 19:7). The presence of His grace does not mean there is no moral law or code of conduct for believers to obey. Believers are enabled by the Spirit to keep it (see note on Rom. 8:4). liberty. Genuine freedom from sin. As the Holy Spirit applies the principles of Scripture to believers' hearts, they are freed from sin's bondage and enabled to obey God (John 8:34–36).

1:26 religious. This refers to ceremonial public worship (cf. Acts 26:5). James chose this term, instead of one referring to internal godliness, to emphasize the external trappings, rituals, routines, and forms that were not followed sincerely. bridle his tongue. Bridle means "control," or as another translation renders it, "keep a tight rein." Purity of heart is often revealed by controlled and proper speech (see note on Matt. 12:36).

1:27 Pure and undefiled religion. James picks two synonymous adjectives to define the most spotless kind of religious faith—that which is measured by compassionate love (cf. John 13:35). orphans and widows. Those without parents or husbands were and are an especially needy segment of the church (see notes on 1 Tim. 5:3; cf. Ex. 22:22; Deut. 14:28, 29; Ps. 68:5; Jer. 7:6, 7; 22:16; Acts 6:1–6). Since they are usually unable to reciprocate in any way, caring for them clearly demonstrates true, sacrificial, Christian love. world. The evil world system (see notes on 4:4; 1 John 2:15).

IV. THE TEST OF IMPARTIAL LOVE (2:1–13)

2:1 the faith. This refers not to the act of believing, but to the entire Christian faith (cf. Jude 3), which has as its central focus Jesus Christ. the Lord of glory. Christ is the One who reveals the glory of God (cf. John 1:14; 2 Cor. 4:4–6; Heb. 1:1–3). In His Incarnation, He showed only impartiality (cf. Matt. 22:16). For example, consider the non-elite people included in His genealogy (see notes on Matt. 1:1–16), His choice of the humble village of Nazareth as His residence for thirty years, and His willingness to minister in Galilee and Samaria, both regions held in contempt by Israel's leaders. partiality. Originally, this word referred to raising someone's face or elevating the person, but it came to refer to exalting someone strictly on a superficial, external basis, such as appearance, race, wealth, rank, or social status (Lev. 19:15; Job 34:19; cf. Deut. 10:17; 15:7–10; 2 Chr. 19:7; Prov. 24:23; 28:21; Matt. 22:8–10; Acts 10:34, 35; Rom. 2:11; Eph. 6:9; Col. 3:25; 4:1; 1 Pet. 1:17).

2:2 assembly. Lit. "a gathering together" or "synagogue." Since James was writing early in the church's history (see Introduction: Author and Date) to Jewish believers (1:1), he used both this general word and the normal Greek word for church (5:14) to describe the church's corporate meetings during that period of transition. gold rings. While Jews commonly wore rings (cf. Luke 15:22), few could afford gold ones. However, there are some reports that in the ancient world the most ostentatious people wore rings on every finger but the middle one to show off their economic status (some ancient sources indicate that there were even ring rental businesses). fine apparel. This word refers to bright, shining garments and is used of the gorgeous garment Herod's soldiers put on Jesus to mock Him (Luke 23:11) and of the apparel of an angel (Acts 10:30). It can also refer to bright, flashy color and to brilliant, glittering, sparkling ornamentation. James is not condemning this unbeliever for his distracting dress, but the church's flattering reaction to it. a poor man. Although there were people of means in the early church (Matt. 27:57–60; John 19:38, 39; Acts 4:36, 37; 8:27; 10:1, 2; 16:14; 17:4; 1 Tim. 6:17–19), it consisted mostly of common, poor people (cf. v. 5; Acts 2:45; 4:35–37; 6:1–6; 1 Cor. 1:26; 2 Cor. 8:2, 14). Throughout Scripture, the poor are objects of God's special concern (1:27; Lev. 25:25, 35–37, 39; Pss. 41:1; 68:10; 72:4, 12; 113:7; Prov. 17:5; 21:13; 28:27; 29:7; 31:9, 20; Is. 3:14, 15; 10:1, 2; 25:4; Gal. 2:10).

2:3 sit . . . in a good place. A more comfortable, prominent place of honor. The synagogues and assembly halls of the first century sometimes had benches around the outside wall and a couple of benches in front. Most of the congregation either sat cross-legged on the floor or stood. There were a limited number of good seats; they were the ones the Pharisees always wanted (Mark 12:38, 39).

2:4 shown partiality. See note on verse 1. The true nature of the sin in this passage, not the lavish apparel or rings of the rich man or that he was given a good seat. judges with evil thoughts. This is better translated "judges with vicious intentions." James feared that his readers would behave just like the sinful world by catering to the rich and prominent, while shunning the poor and common.

2:5 Has God not chosen. See note on Romans 8:29; cf. 1 Corinthians 1:26–29. the kingdom. See note on Matthew 3:2. Here, James intends the kingdom in its present sense of the sphere of salvation—those over whom Christ rules—as well as its future millennial and eternal glory.

2:6 oppress. Lit. "to tyrannize." drag you into the courts. A reference to civil court.

2:7 blaspheme that noble name. This is probably a reference to religious courts.

Wealthy Jewish opponents of Christ were harassing these poor Christians. Cf. John 16:2–4.

2:8 royal law. This is better translated "sovereign law." The idea is that this law is supreme or binding. love your neighbor as yourself. This sovereign law (quoted from Lev. 19:18), when combined with the command to love God (Deut. 6:4, 5), summarizes all the Law and the Prophets (Matt. 22:36–40; Rom. 13:8–10). James is not advocating some kind of emotional affection for oneself—self-love is clearly a sin (2 Tim. 3:2). Rather, the command is to pursue meeting the physical health and spiritual well-being of one's neighbors (all within the sphere of one's influence; Luke 10:30–37) with the same intensity and concern as one does naturally for one's self (cf. Phil. 2:3, 4).

2:9 if. Better translated as "since," the Greek construction of this conditional statement indicates that this practice was in fact happening among James's readers. show partiality. See note on verse 1. The form of this Greek verb indicates that their behavior was not an occasional slip, but a continual practice. convicted by the law. Specifically, by the commands in Deuteronomy 1:17 and 16:19. transgressors. This refers to one who goes beyond the Law of God. Respect of persons makes one a violator of God's Law.

2:10 whole law . . . one point. See notes on Gal. 3:10–13. The Law of God is not a series of detached injunctions but a basic unity that requires perfect love of Him and neighbors (Matt. 22:36–40). Although all sins are not equally damaging or heinous, they all shatter that unity and render people transgressors, much like hitting a window with a hammer at only one point will shatter and destroy the whole window. guilty of all. Not in the sense of having violated every command, but in the sense of having violated the Law's unity. One transgression makes fulfill-

What Is the Royal Law (2:8)?

The phrase “royal law” translates better as “sovereign law.” The idea is that this law is supreme or binding. James quotes the second half of what Jesus taught was the whole of the sovereign law. “Love your neighbor as yourself,” which James quotes from Leviticus 19:18 as well as from Mark 12:31, when combined with the command to love God (Deut. 6:4–5), summarizes all the Law and the Prophets (Matt. 22:36–40; Rom. 13:8–10).

James has already alluded to the first part of the great commandment (2:5). Here he focuses on the theme of this section, which is human relationships. James is not advocating some kind of emotional affection for oneself; self-love is clearly a sin (2 Tim. 3:2). Rather, the command is to pursue meeting the physical and spiritual needs of one’s neighbors with the same intensity and concern as one does naturally for one’s self (Phil. 2:3–4), while never forgetting we are under royal law to do so.

ing the Law’s most basic commands—to love God perfectly and to love one’s neighbor as oneself—impossible.

2:11 These quotations are taken from Exodus 20:13, 14 and Deuteronomy 5:17, 18.

2:12 judged. Cf. Romans 2:6–16. law of liberty*. See note on 1:25.

2:13 A person who shows no mercy and compassion for people in need demonstrates that he has never responded to the great mercy of God and, as an unredeemed person, will receive only strict, unrelieved judgment in eternal hell (cf. Matt. 5:7). Mercy triumphs over judgment*. The person whose life is characterized by mercy is ready for the day of judgment, and will escape all the charges that strict justice might bring against him because, by showing mercy to others, he gives genuine evidence of having received God’s mercy.

V. THE TEST OF RIGHTEOUS WORKS (2:14–26)

2:14–26 James continues his series of tests by which his readers can evaluate whether their faith is living or dead (see Introduction: Background and Setting). This passage contains the composite test—the one test that pulls the others together: the test of works, or righteous behavior that obeys God’s Word and manifests a godly nature (cf. 1:22–25). James’ point is not that a person is saved by works (he has already strongly and clearly asserted that salvation is a gracious gift from God; 1:17, 18; cf. Eph. 2:8, 9), but that there is a kind of apparent faith that is dead and does not save (vv. 14, 17, 20, 24, 26; cf. Matt. 3:7, 8; 5:16; 7:21; 13:18–23; John 8:30, 31; 15:6). It is possible James was writing to Jews (cf. 1:1) who had jettisoned the works righteousness of Judaism but, instead, had embraced the mistaken notion that since righteous works and obedience to God’s will were not efficacious for salvation, they were not necessary at all. Thus, they reduced faith to a mere mental assent to the facts about Christ.

2:14 if someone says. This important phrase governs the interpretation of the entire passage. James does not say that this person actually has faith, but that he claims to have it. faith*. This is best understood in a broad sense, speaking of any degree of acceptance of the truths of the gospel. does not have*. Again, the verb’s form describes someone who continually lacks any external evidence of the faith he routinely claims. works*. This refers to all righteous behavior that conforms to God’s revealed Word, but specifically, in the context, to acts of compassion (v. 15). Can faith save him? Better translated, “Can that kind of faith save?” James is not disputing the importance of faith. Rather, he is opposing the notion that saving faith can be a mere intellectual exercise void of a commitment to active obedience (cf. Matt. 7:16–18). The grammatical form of the question demands a negative answer. See note on Romans 2:6–10.

2:15, 16 James illustrates his point by comparing faith without works to words of compassion without acts of compassion (cf. Matt. 25:31–46).

2:17 faith by itself . . . is dead. Just as professed compassion without action is phony, the kind of faith that is without works is empty profession, not genuine saving faith.

2:18 someone. Interpreters disagree on whether (1) “someone” is James’ humble way of referring to himself or whether it refers to one of James’ antagonists who objected to his teaching; and (2) how much of the following passage should be attributed to this antagonist as opposed to James himself. Regardless, James’ main point is the same: the only possible evidence of true faith is works (cf. 2 Pet. 1:3–11).

2:19 You believe that there is one God. A clear reference to the passage most familiar to his Jewish readers: the shema (Deut. 6:4, 5), the most basic doctrine of the OT. demons believe. Even fallen angels affirm the oneness of God and tremble at its implications. Demons are essentially orthodox in their doctrine (cf. Matt. 8:29, 30; Mark 5:7; Luke 4:41; Acts 19:15). But orthodox doctrine by itself is no proof of saving faith. They know the truth about God, Christ, and the Spirit, but hate it and them.

2:20 foolish. Lit. “empty, defective.” The objector’s claim of belief is fraudulent, and his faith is a sham. faith without works is dead. Lit. “the faith without the works.” James is not contrasting two methods of salvation (faith versus works). Instead, he contrasts two kinds of faith: living faith that saves and dead faith that does not (cf. 1 John 3:7–10).

2:21–26 James cites three illustrations of living faith: (1) Abraham (vv. 21–24); (2) Rahab (v. 25); and (3) the human body and spirit (v. 26).

2:21 justified by works. This does not contradict Paul’s clear teaching that Abraham was justified before God by grace alone through faith alone (Rom. 3:20; 4:1–25; Gal. 3:6, 11). For several reasons, James cannot mean that Abraham was constituted righteous before God because of his own good works: (1) James has already emphasized that salvation is a gracious gift (1:17, 18); (2) in the middle of this disputed passage (v. 23), James quoted Genesis 15:6, which forcefully claims that God credited righteousness to Abraham solely on the basis of his faith (see notes on Rom. 1:17; 3:24; 4:1–25); and (3) the work that James said justified Abraham was his offering up of Isaac (Gen. 22:9, 12), an event that occurred many years after he first exercised faith and was declared righteous before God (Gen. 12:1–7; 15:6). Instead, Abraham’s offering of Isaac demonstrated the genuineness of his faith and the reality of his justification before God. James is emphasizing the vindication before others of a person’s claim to salvation. James’s teaching perfectly complements Paul’s writings; salvation is determined by faith alone (Eph. 2:8, 9) and demonstrated by faithfulness to obey God’s will alone (Eph. 2:10).

2:22 was made perfect. This refers to bringing something to its end, or to its fullness. Just as a fruit tree has not arrived at its goal until it bears fruit, faith has not reached its end until it demonstrates itself in a righteous life.

2:23 the Scripture . . . says. Quoted from Genesis 15:6; see notes on Romans 4:1–5. friend of God. Abraham is so called in 2 Chronicles 20:7 and Isaiah 41:8 because of his obedience (John 15:14, 15).

2:24 justified by works, and not by faith only. See note on verse 21.

2:25 Rahab the harlot. The OT records the content of her faith, which was the basis of her justification before God (see note on Josh. 2:11). She demonstrated the reality of her saving faith when, at great personal risk, she protected the messengers of God (Josh. 2:4, 15; 6:17; cf. Heb. 11:31). James did not intend, however, for those words to be a commendation of her occupation or her lying. justified by works. See note on verse 21.

VI. THE TEST OF THE TONGUE (3:1–12)

3:1–12 In this passage, James used the common Jewish literary device of attributing blame to a specific bodily member (cf. Rom. 3:15; 2 Pet. 2:14). He personified the tongue as being representative of human depravity and wretchedness. In this way, he echoed the scriptural truth that the mouth is a focal point and vivid indicator of man's fallenness and sinful heart condition (cf. Is. 6:5; Matt. 15:11, 16–19; Mark 7:20–23; Rom. 3:13, 14).

3:1 teachers. This word refers to a person who functions in an official teaching or preaching capacity (cf. Luke 4:16–27; John 3:10; Acts 13:14, 15; 1 Cor. 12:28; Eph. 4:11). stricter judgment. The word translated “judgment” usually expresses a negative verdict in the NT, and here refers to a future judgment: (1) for the unbelieving false teacher, at the Second Coming (Jude 14, 15); and (2) for the believer, when he is rewarded before Christ (1 Cor. 4:3–5). This is not meant to discourage true teachers, but to warn the prospective teacher of the role's seriousness (cf. Ezek. 3:17, 18; 33:7–9; Acts 20:26, 27; Heb. 13:17).

3:2 Scripture contains much about all the evil which the tongue can cause (cf. Pss. 5:9; 34:13; 39:1; 52:4; Prov. 6:17; 17:20; 26:28; 28:23; Is. 59:3; Rom. 3:13). The tongue has immense power to speak sinfully, erroneously, and inappropriately. Human speech is a graphic representation of human depravity (see notes on vv. 1–12). stumble. This refers to sinning, or offending God's person. The form of the Greek verb emphasizes that everyone continually fails to do what is right. perfect man. Perfect may refer to true perfection, in which case James is saying that, hypothetically, if a human being were able to perfectly control his tongue, he would be a perfect man. But, of course, no one is immune from sinning with his tongue. More likely, perfect describes those who are spiritually mature and thus able to control their tongues.

3:3–5 James provided several analogies that show how the tongue, even though small, has the power to control one's whole person and influence everything in his life.

3:6 tongue is a fire. Like fire, the tongue's sinful words can spread destruction rapidly, or as its accompanying smoke, those words can permeate and ruin everything around it. defiles. This means “to pollute or contaminate” (cf. Mark 7:20; Jude 23). the course of nature. Better translated “the circle of life,” this underscores that the tongue's evil can extend beyond the individual to affect everything in his sphere of influence. hell. See note on Matthew 25:46. A translation of the Greek word gehenna (or valley of Hinnom). In Christ's time, this valley that lay southwest of Jerusalem's walls served as the city dump and was known for its constantly burning fire. Jesus used that place to symbolize the eternal place of punishment and torment (cf. Mark 9:43, 45). To James, hell conjures up not just the place but the satanic host that will some day inherit it. They use the tongue as a tool for evil.

3:8 no man can tame the tongue. Only

Nature in James

- 1:6 "wave of the sea"
 1:6 "tossed by the wind"
 1:10 "flower of the field"
 1:11 "sun . . . with a burning heat"
 1:11 "flower falls"
 1:17 "from the Father of lights"
 1:17 "shadow of turning"
 1:18 "firstfruits"
 3:3 "bits in horses' mouths"
 3:4 "ships . . . driven by fierce winds"
 3:5 "how great a forest a little fire kindles!"
 3:7 "beast and bird, of reptile and creature of the sea"
 3:8 "deadly poison"
 3:11 "fresh water and bitter"
 3:12 "Can a fig tree . . . bear olives, or a grapevine bear figs?"
 3:18 "the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace"
 4:14 "your life . . . It is even a vapor"
 5:2 "your garments are moth-eaten"
 5:3 "gold and silver are corroded"
 5:4 "laborers who mowed your fields"
 5:4 "the cries of the reapers"
 5:5 "fattened your hearts as in a day of slaughter"
 5:7 "the farmer waits for the precious fruit"
 5:7 "waiting patiently for it until it receives the early and latter rains"
 5:17 "prayed . . . that it would not rain"
 5:17 "it did not rain on the land"
 5:18 "the heaven gave rain"
 5:18 "the earth produced its fruit"

God, by His power, can do this (cf. Acts 2:1–11).

3:9 bless . . . curse. It was traditional for Jews to add "blessed be He" to a mention of God's name (cf. Ps. 68:19, 35). However, the tongue also wishes evil on people made in God's image. This points out the hypocritical inconsistency of the tongue's activities. made in the similitude of God. Man was made in God's image (see notes on Gen. 1:26).

3:11, 12 Three illustrations from nature demonstrate the sinfulness of cursing. The genuine believer will not contradict his profession of faith by the regular use of unwholesome words.

VII. THE TEST OF HUMBLE WISDOM (3:13–18)

3:13–18 In verse 13, James makes a transition from discussing teachers and the tongue to dealing with wisdom's impact on everyone's life. He supports the truth of OT wisdom literature (Job through the Song of Solomon) that wisdom is divided into two realms—man's and God's.

3:13 wise and understanding. Wise is the common Greek word for speculative knowledge and philosophy, but the Hebrews infused it with the much richer meaning of skillfully applying knowledge to the matter of practical living. The word for understanding is used only here in the NT and means a specialist or professional who could skillfully apply his expertise to practical situations. James is inquiring about who is truly skilled in the art of living. meekness. Also rendered "gentleness," it is the opposite of arrogance and self-promotion (see note on Matt. 5:5; cf. 1:21; Num. 12:3; Gal. 5:23). The Greeks described it as power under control. wisdom. The kind that comes only from God (see note on 1:5; cf. Job 9:4; 28; Pss. 104:24; 111:10; Prov. 1:7; 2:1–7; 3:19, 20; 9:10; Jer. 10:7, 12; Dan. 1:17; 2:20–23; Rom. 11:33; 1 Cor. 1:30; Eph. 3:10; Col. 2:3).

3:14 bitter envy. The Greek term for bitter was used of undrinkable water. When combined with envy, it defines a harsh, resentful attitude toward others. self-seeking. Sometimes translated “strife,” it refers to selfish ambition that engenders antagonism and factionalism. The Greek word came to describe anyone who entered politics for selfish reasons and sought to achieve his agenda at any cost (i.e., even if that meant trampling on others).

3:15 from above. See notes on verse 13. Self-centered wisdom that is consumed with personal ambition is not from God. earthly, sensual, demonic. A description of man’s wisdom as: (1) limited to earth; (2) characterized by humanness, frailty, an unsanctified heart, and an unredeemed spirit; and (3) generated by Satan’s forces (cf. 1 Cor. 2:14; 2 Cor. 11:14, 15).

3:16 confusion. This is the disorder that results from the instability and chaos of human wisdom (see notes on 1:6, 8; cf. v. 8). every evil thing. Lit. “every worthless (or vile) work.” This denotes things that are not so much intrinsically evil as they are simply good for nothing.

3:17 wisdom . . . from above. See note on verse 13. pure. This refers to spiritual integrity and moral sincerity. Every genuine Christian has this kind of heart motivation (cf. Pss. 24:3, 4; 51:7; Matt. 5:8; Rom. 7:22, 23; Heb. 12:14). peaceable. This means “peace-loving” or “peace-promoting” (cf. Matt. 5:9). gentle. This word is difficult to translate, but most nearly means a character trait of sweet reasonableness. Such a person will submit to all kinds of mistreatment and difficulty with an attitude of kind, courteous, patient humility, without any thought of hatred or revenge (cf. Matt. 5:10, 11). willing to yield. The original term described someone who was teachable, compliant, easily persuaded, and who willingly submitted to military discipline or moral and legal standards. For believers, it defines obedience to God’s standards (cf. Matt. 5:3–5). full of mercy. The gift of showing concern for those who suffer pain and hardship, and the ability to forgive quickly (cf. Matt. 5:7; Rom. 12:8). without partiality. The Greek word occurs only here in the NT and denotes a consistent, unwavering person who is undivided in his commitment and conviction and does not make unfair distinctions (see notes on 2:1–13).

3:18 fruit of righteousness. Good works that result from salvation (cf. v. 17; Matt. 5:6; see notes on 2:14–20; Gal. 5:22, 23; Phil. 1:11). those who make peace. See note on verse 17. Righteousness flourishes in a climate of spiritual peace.

VIII. THE TEST OF WORLDLY INDULGENCE (4:1–12)

4:1 wars and fights . . . among you. These are between people in the church, not internal conflict in individual people. Wars speaks of the conflict in general; fights of its specific manifestations. Discord in the church is not by God’s design (John 13:34, 35; 17:21; 2 Cor. 12:20; Phil. 1:27), but results from the mix of tares (false believers) and wheat (truly redeemed people) that make up the church. desires. The Greek word (from which the English word hedonism derives) always has a negative connotation in the NT. The passionate desires for worldly pleasures that mark unbelievers (1:14; Eph. 2:3; 2 Tim. 3:4; Jude 18) are the internal source of the external conflict in the church. Cf. 1:14, 15. your members. Not church members, but bodily members (see note on Rom. 6:13). James, like Paul, uses members to speak of sinful, fallen human nature (cf. Rom. 6:19; 7:5, 23). Unbelievers (who are in view here) fight (unsuccessfully) against the evil desires they cannot control.

4:2 murder. The ultimate result of thwarted desires. James had in mind actual murder, and the gamut of sins (hate, anger, bitterness) leading up to it. The picture is of unbelievers so driven by their uncontrollable evil desires that they will fight to the death to fulfill them. you do not ask. True joy, peace, happiness, meaning, hope, and fulfillment in life come only from God. Unbelievers, however, are unwilling to ask for them on His terms. They refuse to submit to God or acknowledge their dependence on Him.

4:3 amiss. This refers to acting in an evil manner, motivated by personal gratification and selfish desire. Unbelievers seek things for their own pleasures, not the honor and glory of God.

4:4 Adulterers and adulteresses! A metaphorical description of spiritual unfaithfulness (cf. Matt. 12:39; 16:4; Mark 8:38). It would have been especially familiar to James's Jewish readers, since the OT often describes unfaithful Israel as a spiritual harlot (cf. 2 Chr. 21:11, 13; Jer. 2:20; 3:1, 6, 8, 9; Ezek. 16:26–29; Hos. 1:2; 4:15; 9:1). James has in view professing Christians, outwardly associated with the church, but holding a deep affection for the evil world system. friendship. Appearing only here in the NT, the Greek word describes love in the sense of a strong emotional attachment. Those with a deep and intimate longing for the things of the world give evidence that they are not redeemed (1 John 2:15–17). world. See note on 1:27. enmity with God. The necessary corollary to friendship with the world. The sobering truth that unbelievers are God's enemies is taught throughout Scripture (cf. Deut. 32:41–43; Pss. 21:8; 68:21; 72:9; 110:1, 2; Is. 42:13; Nah. 1:2, 8; Luke 19:27; Rom. 5:10; 8:5–7; 1 Cor. 15:25).

4:5 Scripture says. A common NT way of introducing an OT quote (John 19:37; Rom. 4:3; 9:17; 10:11; 11:2; Gal. 4:30; 1 Tim. 5:18). The quote that follows, however, is not found as such in the OT; it is a composite of general OT teaching. The Spirit . . . yearns jealously. This difficult phrase is best understood by seeing the “spirit” as a reference not to the Holy Spirit, but to the human spirit, and translating the phrase “yearns jealously” in the negative sense of “lusts to envy.” James's point is that an unbelieving person's spirit (inner person) is bent on evil (cf. Gen. 6:5; 8:21; Prov. 21:10; Eccl. 9:3; Jer. 17:9; Mark 7:21–23). Those who think otherwise defy the biblical diagnosis of fallen human nature; and those who live in worldly lusts give evidence that their faith is not genuine (cf. Rom. 8:5–11; 1 Cor. 2:14).

4:6 more grace. The only ray of hope in man's spiritual darkness is the sovereign grace of God, which alone can rescue man from his propensity to lust for evil things. That God gives “more grace” shows that His grace is greater than the power of sin, the flesh, the world, and Satan (cf. Rom. 5:20). The OT quote (from Prov. 3:34; cf. 1 Pet. 5:5) reveals who obtains God's grace—the humble, not the proud enemies of God. The word humble does not define a special class of Christians, but encompasses all believers (cf. Is. 57:15; 66:2; Matt. 18:3, 4).

4:7–10 In a series of ten commands (ten imperative verbs in the Greek text), James reveals how to receive saving grace. These verses delineate man's response to God's gracious offer of salvation, and disclose what it means to be humble.

4:7 submit. Lit. “to line up under.” The word was used of soldiers under the authority of their commander. In the NT, it describes Jesus' submission to His parents' authority (Luke 2:51), submission to human government (Rom. 13:1), the church's submission to Christ (Eph. 5:24), and servants' submission to their masters (Titus 2:9; 1 Pet. 2:18). James used the word to describe a willing, conscious submission to God's authority as sovereign ruler of the universe. A truly humble person will give his allegiance to God, obey His commands, and follow His leadership (cf. Matt. 10:38). Resist the devil and he will flee from you. The flip side of the first command. “Resist” literally means “take your stand against.” All people are either under the lordship of Christ or the lordship of Satan (John 8:44; Eph. 2:2; 1 John 3:8; 5:19); there is no middle ground. Those who transfer their allegiance from Satan to God will find that Satan “will flee from” them; he is a defeated foe.

4:8 Draw near. Pursue an intimate love relationship with God (cf. Phil. 3:10). The concept of drawing near to God was associated originally with the Levitical priests (Ex. 19:22; Lev. 10:3; Ezek. 44:13), but eventually came to describe anyone's approach to God (Ps. 73:28; Is. 29:13; Heb. 4:16; 7:19; 10:22). Salvation involves more than submitting to God and resisting the devil; the redeemed heart longs for communion with God (Pss. 27:8; 42:1, 2; 63:1, 2; 84:2; 143:6; Matt. 22:37). Cleanse your hands. The OT priests had to ceremonially wash their hands before approaching God (Ex. 30:19–21), and sinners (a term used only for unbelievers; see note on 5:20) who would approach Him must recognize and confess their sin. purify your hearts. Cleansing the hands symbolizes external behavior; this phrase refers to the inner thoughts, motives, and desires of the heart (Ps. 24:3, 4; Jer. 4:4; Ezek. 18:31; 36:25, 26; 1 Tim. 1:5; 2 Tim. 2:22; 1 Pet. 1:22). double-minded. See note on 1:8.

4:9 Lament. This means to be afflicted, wretched, and miserable. This is the state of those truly broken over their sin. mourn. See note on Matthew 5:4. God will not turn away a heart broken and contrite over sin (Ps. 51:17; 2 Cor. 7:10). Mourning is the inner response to such brokenness. weep. The outward manifestation of inner sorrow over sin (cf. Mark 14:72). laughter. Used only here in the NT, the word signifies the flippant laughter of those foolishly indulging in worldly pleasures. The picture is of people who give no thought to God, life, death, sin, judgment, or holiness. James calls on such people to mourn over their sin (cf. Luke 18:13, 14).

4:10 See Psalm 75:6; Matthew 23:12. This final command sums up the preceding nine (see notes on vv. 7–10) commands, which mark the truly humble person. Humble comes from a word meaning “to make oneself low.” Those conscious of being in the presence of the majestic, infinitely holy God are humble (cf. Is. 6:5).

4:11 speak evil. This means to slander or defame. James does not forbid confronting those in sin, which is elsewhere commanded in Scripture (Matt. 18:15–17; Acts 20:31; 1 Cor. 4:14; Col. 1:28; Titus 1:13; 2:15; 3:10). Rather, he condemns careless, derogatory, critical, slanderous accusations against others (cf. Ex. 23:1; Pss. 50:20; 101:5; 140:11; Prov. 10:18; 11:9; 16:28; 17:9; 26:20; Rom. 1:29; 2 Cor. 12:20; Eph. 4:31; 1 Tim. 3:11; 2 Tim. 3:3; Titus 2:3; 3:2). speaks evil of a brother . . . speaks evil of the law. Those who speak evil of other believers set themselves up as judges and condemn them (cf. 2:4). They thereby defame and disregard God’s law, which expressly forbids such slanderous

Ten Commands in James 4:7–10

These verses contain a series of ten commands that prepare a person to receive saving grace. These commands delineate a person’s response to God’s gracious offer of salvation and reveal what it means to be humble. Each command uses a Greek imperative to define the expected action:

1. Submit to God (v. 7). James used the word to describe a willing, conscious submission to God’s authority as sovereign ruler of the universe.
2. Resist the devil (v. 7). Those who consciously “take [their] stand against” Satan and transfer their allegiance to God will find that Satan “will flee from” them; he is a defeated foe.
3. Draw near to God (v. 8). Pursue an intimate love relationship with God (Phil. 3:10).
4. Cleanse your hands (v. 8). The added term *sinner*s addresses the unbelievers’ need to recognize and confess their sin (5:20).
5. Purify your hearts (v. 8). Cleansing the hands symbolizes external behavior; this phrase refers to the inner thoughts, motives, and desires of the heart (Ps. 24:3, 4).
6. Lament (v. 9). This means to be afflicted, wretched, and miserable. This is the state of those who are truly broken over their sin (Matt. 5:4).
7. Mourn (v. 9). This is the internal experience of brokenness over sin (Ps. 51:17; Matt. 5:4).
8. Weep (v. 9). This is the outward manifestation of inner sorrow over sin (Mark 14:72).
9. Grieve without laughter or joy (v. 9). This describes the signs of denial; the flippant laughter of those foolishly indulging in worldly pleasures without regard to God, life, death, sin, judgment, or holiness.
10. Humble yourself (v. 10). This final command sums up the preceding nine. The word humble comes from a word meaning “to make oneself low.” Those conscious of being in the presence of the majestic, infinitely holy God are humble (Is. 6:5).

condemnation. judges the law. By refusing to submit to the law, slanderers place themselves above it as its judges.

4:12 one Lawgiver. God, who gave the law (cf. Is. 33:22). He alone has the authority to save those who repent from its penalty, and destroy those who refuse to repent.

IX. THE TEST OF DEPENDENCE (4:13–17)

4:13 James does not condemn wise business planning, but rather planning that leaves out God. The people so depicted are practical atheists, living their lives and making their plans as if God did not exist. Such conduct is inconsistent with genuine saving faith, which submits to God (see note on v. 7).

4:14 know what will happen. See Proverbs 27:1. James exposes the presumptuous folly of the practical atheists he condemned in verse 13—those who do not know what the future holds for them (cf. Luke 12:16–21). God alone knows the future (cf. Is. 46:9, 10). vapor. This refers either to a puff of smoke or one's breath that appears for a moment in cold air. It emphasizes the transitory nature of life (cf. 1:10; Job 7:6, 7; 9:25, 26; 14:1, 2; Pss. 39:5, 11; 62:9; 89:47; 90:5, 6, 10).

4:15 If the Lord wills. The true Christian submits his plans to the lordship of Christ (see note on v. 7; cf. Prov. 19:21; Acts 18:21; 21:14; Rom. 1:10; 15:32; 1 Cor. 4:19; 16:7).

4:16 boasting. Arrogant bragging about their anticipated business accomplishments (see note on v. 13).

4:17 sin. The implication is that they also did what they shouldn't do. Sins of omission lead directly to sins of commission.

X. THE TEST OF PATIENT ENDURANCE (5:1–11)

5:1 rich. Those with more than they need to live. James condemns them not for being wealthy, but for misusing their resources. Unlike the believing rich in Timothy's congregation (1 Tim. 6:17–19), these are the wicked wealthy who profess Christian faith and have associated themselves with the church, but whose real god is money. For prostituting the goodness and generosity of God, they can anticipate only divine punishment (v. 5).

5:2, 3 corrupted . . . moth-eaten . . . corroded. James points out the folly of hoarding food, expensive clothing, or money—all of which is subject to decay, theft, fire, or other forms of loss.

5:3 last days. The period between Christ's First and Second Comings (see note on 1 Tim. 4:1). James rebukes the rich for living as if Jesus were never coming back.

5:4 wages . . . you kept back. The rich had gained some of their wealth by oppressing and defrauding their day laborers—a practice strictly forbidden in the OT (cf. Lev. 19:13; Deut. 24:14, 15). the Lord of Sabaoth. An untranslated Greek word meaning "hosts." The One who hears the cries of the defrauded laborers, James warns, is the Lord of hosts (a name for God used frequently in the OT), the commander of the armies of heaven (angels). The Bible teaches that angels will be involved in the judgment of unbelievers (Matt. 13:39–41, 49; 16:27; 25:31; 2 Thess. 1:7, 8).

5:5 pleasure and luxury. After robbing their workers to accumulate their wealth, the rich indulged themselves in an extravagant lifestyle. Pleasure has the connotation of wanton pleasure. Luxury leads to vice when a person becomes consumed with the pursuit of pleasure, since a life without self-denial soon becomes out of control in every area. a day of slaughter. Like fattened cattle ready to be slaughtered, the rich that James condemns had indulged themselves to the li mit. This is a vivid depiction of divine judgment, in keeping with the metaphor comparing the overindulgent rich to fattened cattle.

5:6 condemned . . . murdered. This describes the next step in the sinful progression of the rich. Hoarding led to fraud, which led to self-indulgence. Finally, that overindulgence has consumed the rich to the point that they will do anything to sustain their lifestyle. Condemned comes from a word meaning “to sentence.” The implication is that the rich were using the courts to commit judicial murder (cf. 2:6).

5:7 patient. The word emphasizes patience with people (cf. 1 Thess. 5:14), not trials or circumstances (as in 1:3). Specifically, James has in mind patience with the oppressive rich. the coming. The Second Coming of Christ (see note on Matt. 24:3). Realizing the glory that awaits them at Christ’s return should motivate believers to patiently endure mistreatment (Rom. 8:18). the early and latter rain. The early rain falls in Israel during October and November and softens the ground for planting. The latter rain falls in March and April, immediately before the spring harvest. Just as the farmer waits patiently from the early rain to the latter for his crop to ripen, so must Christians patiently wait for the Lord’s return (cf. Gal. 6:9; 2 Tim. 4:8; Titus 2:13).

5:8 Establish your hearts. A call for resolute, firm courage and commitment. James exhorts those about to collapse under the weight of persecution to shore up their hearts with the hope of the Second Coming. at hand. The imminency of Christ’s return is a frequent theme in the NT (cf. Rom. 13:12; Heb. 10:25; 1 Pet. 4:7; 1 John 2:18).

5:9 Do not grumble . . . the Judge is standing at the door! James pictured Christ as a judge about to open the doors to the courtroom and convene His court. Knowing that the strain of persecution could lead to grumbling, James cautioned his readers against that sin (Phil. 2:14), lest they forfeit their full reward (2 John 8).

5:11 the perseverance of Job. Job is the classic example of a man who patiently endured suffering and was blessed by God for his persevering faith. James reassured his readers that God had a purpose for their suffering, just as He did for Job’s. Cf. Job 42. compassionate and merciful. Remembering the Lord’s character is a great comfort in suffering. The Scriptures repeatedly affirm His compassion and mercy (Ex. 34:6; Num. 14:18; 1 Chr. 21:13; 2 Chr. 30:9; Pss. 25:6; 78:38; 86:5, 15; 103:8, 13; 116:5; 136:1; 145:8; Lam. 3:22; Joel 2:13; Jon. 4:2; Mic. 7:18; Luke 6:36).

XI. THE TEST OF TRUTHFULNESS (5:12)

5:12 above all. Or “especially.” As he has done repeatedly in his epistle, James emphasized that a person’s speech provides the most revealing glimpse of his spiritual condition (cf. 1:26; 2:12; 3:2–11; 4:11). do not swear . . . any other oath. As Jesus did before him (Matt. 5:33–36; 23:16–22), James condemned the contemporary Jewish practice of swearing false, evasive, deceptive oaths by everything other than the name of the Lord (which alone was considered binding). Yes be Yes. Again echoing Jesus (Matt. 5:37),

OT Names in James

|----------------------------|------|
| 1. Twelve tribes           | 1:1  |
| 2. Abraham                 | 2:23 |
| 3. Rahab                   | 2:25 |
| 4. Lord of Sabaoth (Hosts) | 5:4  |
| 5. The prophets (OT)       | 5:10 |
| 6. Job                     | 5:11 |
| 7. Elijah                  | 5:17 |

James called for straightforward, honest, plain speech. To speak otherwise is to invite God's judgment.

XII. THE TEST OF PRAYERFULNESS (5:13–18)

5:13 suffering. The antidote to the suffering caused by evil treatment or persecution is seeking God's comfort through prayer (cf. Pss. 27:13, 14; 55:22; Jon. 2:7; Phil. 4:6; 1 Pet. 5:7). Let him sing psalms. The natural response of a joyful heart is to sing praise to God.

5:14, 15 sick. James directs those who are sick, meaning weakened by their suffering, to call for the elders of the church for strength, support, and prayer.

5:14 anointing him with oil. Lit. "rubbing him with oil": (1) possibly this is a reference to ceremonial anointing (see notes on Lev. 14:18; Mark 6:13) or (2) on the other hand, James may have had in mind medical treatment of believers physically bruised and battered by persecution. Perhaps it is better to understand the anointing in a metaphorical sense of the elders' encouraging, comforting, and strengthening the believer.

5:15 prayer of faith. The prayer offered on their behalf by the elders. save the sick. Deliver them from their suffering because they have been weakened by their infirmity, not from their sin, which was confessed. committed sins . . . be forgiven. Not by the elders, since God alone can forgive sins (Is. 43:25; Dan. 9:9; Mark 2:7). That those who are suffering called for the elders implies they had a contrite, repentant heart, and that part of their time with the overseers would involve confessing their sins to God.

5:16 Confess your trespasses. Mutual honesty, openness, and sharing of needs will enable believers to uphold one another in the spiritual struggle. The effective . . . avails

Key Words

Anointing: Greek aleiphō—5:14—lit. "to daub" or "to smear." Greek chriō—5:14—lit. "to anoint." The term aleiphō was commonly used to describe a medicinal anointing. A similar Greek work chriō was used to express a sacramental anointing. In biblical times, oil was commonly used as a medicine (Luke 10:30–37). Yet, oil also symbolized the Spirit of God (1 Sam. 16:1–13).

Good Gift/Perfect Gift: Greek dosis agathē—1:17—lit. "the act of giving" and "good." Greek dōrēma telion—1:17—lit. "actual gifts" and "perfect." The Greek text uses two separate words to describe gifts from God. The first expression, good gift, reveals the value of receiving something from God, while perfect gift represents the flawless quality of God's gifts. God's giving is continuously good, and His gifts are always perfectly suited for His children.

much. The energetic, passionate prayers of godly people have the power to accomplish much. Cf. Numbers 11:2.

5:17, 18 Elijah . . . prayed . . . he prayed again. Elijah provides one of the most notable illustrations of the power of prayer in the OT. His prayers (not mentioned in the OT account) both initiated and ended a three-year, six-month drought (cf. Luke 4:25).

XIII. THE TEST OF TRUE FAITH (5:19, 20)

5:19 if anyone among you. This introduces a third category of people in the church (cf. vv. 13, 14)—those professing believers who have strayed from the truth. wanders from the truth. Apostatizes from the faith they once professed (cf. Heb. 5:12–6:9; 10:29; 1 John 2:19). Such people are in grave danger (v. 20), and the church must call them back to the true faith.

5:20 sinner. Cf. 4:8. A word used to describe the unregenerate (cf. Prov. 11:31; 13:6, 22; Matt. 9:13; Luke 7:37, 39; 15:7, 10; 18:13; Rom. 5:8; 1 Tim. 1:9, 15; 1 Pet. 4:18). James has in mind here those with dead faith (cf. 2:14–26), not sinning, true believers. the error of his way. Those who go astray doctrinally (v. 19) will also manifest an errant lifestyle, one not lived according to biblical principles. save a soul from death. A person who wanders from the truth puts his soul in jeopardy. The “death” in view is not physical death, but eternal death—eternal separation from God and eternal punishment in hell (cf. Is. 66:24; Dan. 12:2; Matt. 13:40, 42, 50; 25:41, 46; Mark 9:43–49; 2 Thess. 1:8, 9; Rom. 6:23; Rev. 20:11–15; 21:8). Knowing how high the stakes are should motivate Christians to aggressively pursue such people. cover a multitude of sins. See Psalm

5:10. Since even one sin is enough to condemn a person to hell, James’s use of the word multitude emphasizes the hopeless condition of lost, unregenerate sinners. The good news of the gospel is that God’s forgiving grace (which is greater than any sin; Rom. 5:20) is available to those who turn from their sins and exercise faith in the Lord Jesus Christ (Eph. 2:8, 9).

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PETER

Title

The letter has always been identified (as are most general epistles, like James, John, and Jude) with the name of the author, Peter, and with the notation that it was his first inspired letter.

Author and Date

The opening verse of the epistle claims it was written by Peter, who was clearly the leader among Christ's apostles. The Gospel writers emphasize this fact by placing his name at the head of each list of apostles (Matt. 10; Mark 3; Luke 6; Acts 1), and including more information about him in the four Gospels than any person other than Christ. Originally known as Simon (Greek) or Simeon (Hebrew), cf. Mark 1:16; John 1:40, 41, Peter was the son of Jonas (Matt. 16:17) who was also known as John (John 1:42), and a member of a family of fishermen who lived in Bethsaida, and later in Capernaum. Andrew, Peter's brother, brought him to Christ (John 1:40–42). He was married, and his wife apparently accompanied him in his ministry (Mark 1:29–31; 1 Cor. 9:5).

Peter was called to follow Christ in His early ministry (Mark 1:16, 17), and was later appointed to apostleship (Matt. 10:2; Mark 3:14–16). Christ renamed him Peter (Greek), or Cephas (Aramaic), both words meaning "stone" or "rock" (John 1:42). The Lord clearly singled out Peter for special lessons throughout the Gospels (e.g., Matt. 10; 16:13–21; 17:1–9; 24:1–7; 26:31–33; John 6:6; 21:3–7, 15–17). He was the spokesman for the Twelve, articulating their thoughts and questions as well as his own. His triumphs and weaknesses are chronicled in the Gospels and Acts 1–12.

After the Resurrection and Ascension, Peter initiated the plan for choosing a replacement for Judas (Acts 1:15). Following the coming of the Holy Spirit (Acts 2:1–4), he was empowered to become the leading gospel preacher from the day of Pentecost on (Acts 2:12). He also performed notable miracles in the early days of the church (Acts 3–9), and opened the door of the gospel to the Samaritans (Acts 8) and to the Gentiles (Acts 10). According to tradition, Peter had to watch as his wife was crucified, but encouraged her with the words, "Remember the Lord." When it came time for him to be crucified, he reportedly pled that he was not worthy to be crucified like his Lord, but rather should be crucified upside down (c. A.D. 67–68), which tradition says he was.

Because of his unique prominence, there was no shortage in the early church of documents falsely claiming to be written by Peter. That the apostle Peter is the author of 1 Peter, however, is certain. The material in this letter bears definite resemblance to his messages in the Book of Acts. The letter teaches, for example, that Christ is the stone rejected by the builder (2:7, 8; Acts 4:10, 11), and that Christ is no respecter of persons (1:17; Acts 10:34). Peter teaches his readers to "gird yourself with humility" (5:5), an echo of the Lord's girding Himself with a towel and washing the disciples' feet (John 13:3–5). There are other statements in the letter similar to Christ's sayings (4:14; 5:7, 8).

Moreover, the author claims to have been a witness of the sufferings of Christ (5:1; cf. 3:18; 4:1). In addition to these internal evidences, it is noteworthy that the early Christians universally recognized this letter as the work of Peter.

The only significant doubt to be raised about Peter's authorship arises from the rather classical style of Greek used in the letter. Some have argued that Peter, being an "unlearned" fisherman (Acts 4:13), could not have written in sophisticated Greek, especially in light of the less classical style of Greek used in the writing of 2 Peter. However, this argument is not without a good answer. In the first place, that Peter was "unlearned" does not mean that he was illiterate, but only that he was without formal, rabbinical training in the Scriptures. Moreover, though Aramaic may have been Peter's primary language, Greek would have been a widely spoken second language in Palestine. It is also apparent that at least some of the authors of the NT, though not highly educated, could read the Greek of the OT Septuagint (see James's use of the LXX in Acts 15:14–18).

Beyond these evidences of Peter's ability in Greek, Peter also explained (5:12) that he wrote this letter "by Silvanus," also known as Silas. Silvanus was likely the messenger designated to take this letter to its intended readers. But more is implied by this statement, in that Peter is acknowledging that Silvanus served as his secretary, or amanuensis. Dictation was common in the ancient Roman world (cf. Paul and Tertius; Rom. 16:22), and secretaries often could aid with syntax and grammar. So Peter, under the superintendence of the Spirit of God, dictated the letter to Silvanus, while Silvanus, who also was a prophet (Acts 15:32), may have aided in some of the composition of the more classical Greek.

First Peter was most likely written just before or shortly after July of A.D. 64 when the city of Rome burned, thus a writing date of c. A.D. 64–65.

Background and Setting

When the city of Rome burned, the Romans believed that their emperor, Nero, had set the city on fire, probably because of his incredible lust to build. In order to build more, he had to destroy what already existed.

The Romans were totally devastated. Their culture, in a sense, went down with the city. All the religious elements of their life were destroyed. Their great temples, shrines, and even their household idols were burned up. This had great religious implications because it made them believe that their deities had been unable to deal with this conflagration and were also victims of it. The people were homeless and hopeless. Many had been killed. Their bitter resentment was severe, so Nero realized that he had to redirect the hostility.

The emperor's chosen scapegoat was the Christians, who were already hated because they were associated with Jews, and because they were seen as being hostile to the Roman culture. Nero spread the word quickly that the Christians had set the fires. As a result, a vicious persecution against Christians began, and soon spread throughout the Roman Empire, touching places north of the Taurus mountains, like Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia (1:1) and impacting the Christians, whom Peter calls "pilgrims." These "pilgrims," who were probably Gentiles for the most part (1:14, 18; 2:9, 10; 4:3), possibly led to Christ by Paul and his associates, and established on Paul's teachings, needed spiritual strengthening because of their sufferings. Thus, the apostle Peter, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, wrote this epistle to strengthen them.

Peter wrote that he was in “Babylon” when he penned the letter (5:13). Three locations have been suggested for this “Babylon.”

First, a Roman outpost in northern Egypt was named Babylon; but that place was too obscure, and there are no reasons to think that Peter was ever there.

Second, ancient Babylon in Mesopotamia is a possibility; but it would be quite unlikely that Peter, Mark, and Silvanus were all at this rather small, distant place at the same time.

Third, “Babylon” is an alias for Rome; perhaps even a code word for Rome. In times of persecution, writers exercised unusual care not to endanger Christians by identifying them. Peter, according to some traditions, followed James and Paul and died as a martyr near Rome about two years after he wrote this letter; thus, he had written this epistle near the end of his life, probably while staying in the imperial city. He did not want the letter to be found and the church to be persecuted, so he may have hidden its location under the code word Babylon, which aptly fit because of the city’s idolatry (cf. Rev. 17, 18).

Historical and Theological Themes

Since the believers addressed were suffering escalating persecution (1:6; 2:12, 19–21; 3:9, 13–18; 4:1, 12–16, 19), the purpose of this letter was to teach them how to live victoriously in the midst of that hostility: (1) without losing hope; (2) without becoming bitter; (3) while trusting in their Lord; and (4) while looking for His Second Coming. Peter wished to impress on his readers that by living an obedient, victorious life under duress, a Christian can actually evangelize his hostile world (cf. 1:14; 2:1, 12, 15; 3:1–6, 13–17; 4:2; 5:8, 9).

Believers are constantly exposed to a world system energized by Satan and his demons. Their effort is to discredit the church and to destroy its credibility and integrity. One way these spirits work is by finding Christians whose lives are not consistent with the Word of God, and then parading them before the unbelievers to show what a sham the church is. Christians, however, must stand against the enemy and silence the critics by the power of holy lives.

In this epistle, Peter is rather effusive in reciting two categories of truth. The first category is positive and includes a long list of blessings bestowed on Christians. As he speaks about the identity of Christians and what it means to know Christ, Peter mentions one privilege and blessing after another. Interwoven into this list of privileges is the catalog of suffering. Christians, though most greatly privileged, should also know that the world will treat them unjustly. Their citizenship is in heaven and they are strangers in a hostile, Satan-energized world. Thus, the Christian life can be summed up as a call to victory and glory through the path of suffering.

So the basic question that Peter answers in this epistle is: How are Christians to deal with animosity? The answer features practical truths and focuses on Jesus Christ as the model of one who maintained a triumphant attitude in the midst of hostility.

First Peter also answers other important practical questions about Christian living such as: Do Christians need a priesthood to intercede with God for them (2:5–9)? What should be the Christian’s attitude toward secular government and civil disobedience (2:13–17)? What should a Christian employee’s attitude be toward a hostile employer (2:18)? How can a believing wife win her unsaved husband to Christ (3:1, 2)? How should a Christian woman conduct herself (3:3, 4)?

Interpretive Challenges

First Peter 3:18–22 stands as one of the most difficult NT texts to translate and then interpret. For example, does “Spirit” in 3:18 refer to the Holy Spirit, or to Christ’s Spirit? Did Christ preach through Noah before the flood, or did He preach Himself after the Crucifixion (3:19)? Was the audience to this preaching composed of the humans in Noah’s day, or demons in the abyss (3:19)? Does 3:20, 21 teach baptismal regeneration (salvation), or salvation by faith alone in Christ? Answers to these questions will be found in the notes.

Conclusion (5:12–14)

SALUTATION (1:1, 2)

1:1 Peter. See Introduction: Author and Date. apostle of Jesus Christ*. Peter was one of a unique group of men who were personally called (Matt. 10:1–4) and commissioned (John 20:19–23) by Christ, and who ministered with Christ after His Resurrection. See note on 5:1. The church was built upon the foundation of their teaching (see notes on Acts 2:42; Eph. 2:20). pilgrims*. These were strangers dispossessed in a land not their own—temporary residents or foreigners. Like all believers, they were residents of an eternal city (Phil. 3:20; Heb. 13:13, 14). the Dispersion*. With the Greek definite article, dispersion is sometimes a technical term for the scattering of the Jews from Israel throughout the world (John 7:35; James 1:1). But here, without the article, it is used in a non-technical sense referring to spiritual pilgrims, aliens to the earth, whether Jews or Gentiles (cf. v. 17; 2:11), i.e., the church. Pontus . . . Bithynia*. Peter's letter is addressed to churches in provinces located in modern-day Turkey, which were part of the Roman Empire.

1:2 elect. This is from the Greek word which connotes the “called-out ones.” The word means “to pick out” or “to select.” In the OT, it was used of Israel (Deut. 7:6), indicating that God sovereignly chose Israel from among all the nations of the world to believe in and belong to Him (cf. Deut. 14:2; Pss. 105:43; 135:4). Here the word is used as a term for Christians, those chosen by God for salvation (cf. Rom. 8:33; Col. 3:12; 2 Tim. 2:10). The word is also used for those who receive Christ during the Tribulation time (Matt. 24:22, 24), and holy, unfallen angels (1 Tim. 5:21). To be reminded that they were elected by God was a great comfort to those persecuted Christians (see notes on Eph. 1:3–14). foreknowledge*. The same Greek word is translated “foreordained” in verse 20.

In both verses, the word does not refer to awareness of what is going to happen; rather, it clearly means a predetermined relationship in the knowledge of God. God brought the salvation relationship into existence by decreeing it into existence ahead of time. Christians are foreknown for salvation in the same way Christ was foreordained before the foundation of the world to be a sacrifice for sins (cf. Acts 2:23). Foreknowledge means that God planned before, not that He observed before (cf. Ex. 33:17; Jer. 1:5; Amos 3:2; Matt. 7:23). Thus, God prethought and predetermined or predestined each Christian's salvation (see notes on Rom. 8:29; Eph. 1:4). sanctification of the Spirit*. To sanctify means “to consecrate,” “to set apart.” The objective of election is salvation, which comes to the elect through the sanctifying work of the Spirit. The Holy Spirit thus makes God's chosen holy, by setting them apart from sin and unbelief to faith and righteousness (cf. 1 Thess. 1:4; 2 Thess. 2:13). Sanctification thus begins with justification (declaring the sinner just before God by graciously imputing Christ's righteousness to him, cf. Phil. 3:9), and continues as a process of purification that goes on until glorification, when the Christian sees Jesus face to face. for obedience*. Believers are set apart from sin to God in order that they might obey Jesus Christ. True salvation produces obedience to Christ (cf. Eph. 2:10; 1 Thess. 1:4–10). sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ*. This phrase is based on Moses' sprinkling sacrificial blood on the people of Israel as a symbol sealing their covenant as they promised to obey God's Word (see notes on Ex. 24:4–8). Likewise, in the New Covenant, faith in the shedding of Christ's blood on the Cross not only activates God's promise to give the believer perfect atonement for sin, but also brings the believer into the covenant by one's promise of obedience to the Lord and His Word.

I. REMEMBER OUR GREAT SALVATION (1:3–2:10)

A. The Certainty of Our Future Inheritance (1:3–12)

1. Preserved by the power of God (1:3–5)

1:3 Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. Though God was known as Creator and Redeemer in the OT, He was rarely called Father. Christ, however, always addressed God as His Father in the Gospels (as John 5:17), except in the separation on the Cross (Matt. 27:46). In so doing, Christ was claiming to be of the same nature, being, or essence as the Father (cf. Matt. 11:27; John 10:29–39; 14:6–11; 2 Cor. 1:3; Eph. 1:3, 17; 2 John 3). Also, by speaking of “our” Lord, Peter personalized the Christian’s intimate relationship with the God of the universe through His Son (cf. 1 Cor. 6:17), an important truth for suffering Christians to remember. abundant mercy. The reason God provided a glorious salvation for mankind is that He is merciful. Sinners need God’s mercy because they are in a pitiful, desperate, wretched condition as sinners (cf. Eph. 2:4; Titus 3:5; see also Ex. 34:6; Ps. 108:4; Is. 27:4; Lam. 3:22; Mic. 7:18). has begotten us again. God gave the New Birth as part of His provision in salvation. When a sinner comes to Christ and puts his faith in Him, he is born anew into God’s family and receives a new nature (see notes on v. 23; John 1:13; 3:1–21). a living hope. The living hope is eternal life. Hope means confident optimism, and: (1) comes from God (Ps. 43:5); (2) is a gift of grace (2 Thess. 2:16); (3) is defined by Scripture (Rom. 15:4); (4) is a reasonable reality (3:15); (5) is secured by the Resurrection of Jesus Christ (John 11:25, 26; 14:19; 1 Cor. 15:17); (6) is confirmed in the believer by the Holy Spirit (Rom. 15:13); (7) defends the Christian against Satan’s attacks (1 Thess.

5:8); (8) is confirmed through trials (Rom. 5:3, 4); (9) produces joy (Ps. 146:5); and (10) is fulfilled in Christ’s return (Titus 2:13).

1:4 inheritance. Peter showed those persecuted Christians how to look past their troubles to their eternal inheritance. Life, righteousness, joy, peace, perfection, God’s presence, Christ’s glorious companionship, rewards, and all else God has planned is the Christian’s heavenly inheritance (v. 5; cf. Matt. 25:34; Acts 26:18; Eph. 1:11; Col. 1:12; Heb. 9:15; also Pss. 16:5; 23; 26; 72; Lam. 3:24). According to Ephesians 1:14, the indwelling Holy Spirit is the resident guarantee of that inheritance. incorruptible. The inheritance is not subject to passing away, nor liable to decay. The word was used in secular Greek of something that was unravaged by an invading army (cf. Matt. 6:19–21). undefiled. This word means unpolluted, unstained with evil. The undefiled inheritance of the Christian is in marked contrast to an earthly inheritance, all of which is corrupted and defiled. does not fade away. Fading was often used of flowers that wither and decay. Though earthly inheritances eventually fade away, the eternal inheritance of a Christian has no decaying elements.

1:5 kept by the power of God. Supreme power, omniscience, omnipotence, and sovereignty not only keep the inheritance (v. 4), but also keep the believer secure. No one can steal the Christian’s treasure, and no one can disqualify him from receiving it. See notes on Romans 8:31–39. through faith. The Christian’s response to God’s election and the Spirit’s conviction is faith, but even faith is empowered by God (see note on Eph. 2:8). Moreover, the Christian’s continued faith in God is the evidence of God’s keeping power. At the time of salvation, God energizes faith, and continues to preserve it. Saving faith is permanent; it never dies. See notes on Matthew 24:13; Hebrews 3:14.

2. Proven by the trials of persecution (1:6–9)

1:6 greatly rejoice. That is, to be exceedingly glad, exuberantly jubilant. This kind of joy is not based on changing, temporal circumstances, but is used of joy that comes from the unchanging, eternal relationship with God. Peter relates this joy to (1) the assurance of one's protected eternal inheritance (vv. 4, 5; cf. John 16:16–33) and (2) the assurance from one's proven faith (v. 7). various trials. Peter teaches several important principles about trouble in this verse: (1) trouble does not last ("little while"); (2) trouble serves a purpose ("if need be"); (3) trouble brings distress ("grieved"); (4) trouble comes in various forms ("various trials"); and (5) trouble should not diminish the Christian's joy ("greatly rejoice").

1:7 genuineness of your faith. God's purpose in allowing trouble is to test the reality of one's faith. But the benefit of such a testing, or "fire," is immediately for the Christian, not God. When a believer comes through a trial still trusting the Lord, he is assured that his faith is genuine (cf. Gen. 22:1–12; Job 1:20–22). revelation of Jesus Christ. The revelation or unveiling of Christ refers to His Second Coming, particularly focusing on the time when He comes to call and reward His redeemed people (cf. v. 13; 4:13; 1 Cor. 1:7), i.e., the rapture (1 Thess. 4:13–18).

1:8 having not seen. This is in the sense of His appearing (v. 7). Cf. 2 Corinthians 5:7. At that time, the fiery trials that believers have endured will benefit God by bringing Him "praise, honor, and glory" eternally.

1:9 receiving . . . salvation. Receiving could literally be translated "presently receiving for yourselves." In one sense, Christians now possess the result of their faith, a constant deliverance from the power of sin.

In another sense, we are waiting to receive the full salvation of eternal glory in the redemption of our bodies (Rom. 8:23).

3. Predicted by the prophets of God (1:10–12)

1:10 this salvation. In this section, Peter looks at the greatness of salvation from the viewpoint of the divine agents who made it possible: (1) OT prophets (vv. 10, 11); (2) the Holy Spirit (vv. 11, 12); (3) the NT apostles (v. 12); and (4) the angels (v. 12). inquired and searched carefully. The OT prophets studied their own writings in order to know more about the promised salvation. Though they believed and were personally saved from their sin by that faith (through the sacrifice God would provide in Christ), they could not fully understand what was involved in the life and death of Jesus Christ (cf. Num. 24:17; Heb. 11:13, 39, 40). grace that would come. God is by nature gracious and was so, even under the conditional Old Covenant (cf. Ex. 33:19; Jon. 4:2). But the prophets foretold an even greater exhibit of grace than what they had ever known (Is. 45:20–25; 52:14, 15; 55:1–7; 61:1–3; cf. Rom. 9:24–33; 10:11, 13, 20; 15:9–21).

1:11 what, or what manner of time. "Who would be the person?" and "When would He come?" were the questions the OT prophets searched to know. Spirit of Christ who was in them. Jesus Christ, in the person of the Holy Spirit, took up residence within the writers of the OT, enabling them to write about the glorious salvation to be consummated in the future (2 Pet. 1:19–21).

1:12 to us they were ministering. The OT prophets who wrote of the coming of salvation (vv. 10, 11) knew it was a future Savior who would come, and thus they were really writing for those who are on this side of the Cross. those who have preached the gospel.

The NT apostles and preachers of the gospel had the privilege of proclaiming that the prophecies written by the OT prophets had come to pass (cf. 2 Cor. 6:1, 2).

B. The Consequences of Our Future Inheritance (1:13–2:10)

1. Perseverance of hope (1:13–16)

1:13 gird up the loins of your mind. The ancient practice of gathering up one's robes when needing to move in a hurry; here, it is metaphorically applied to one's thought process. The meaning is to pull in all the loose ends of one's thinking, by rejecting the hindrances of the world and focusing on the future grace of God (cf. Eph. 6:14; Col. 3:2). be sober. Spiritual sober-mindedness includes the ideas of steadfastness, self-control, clarity of mind, and moral decisiveness. The sober Christian is correctly in charge of his priorities and not intoxicated with the various allurements of the world. rest your hope fully. In light of their great salvation, Christians, especially those undergoing suffering, should unreservedly live for the future, anticipating the consummation of their salvation at the Second Coming of Christ (see v. 7). Cf. Colossians 3:2–4. grace that is to be brought to you. Christ's future ministry of glorifying Christians and giving them eternal life in His presence will be the final culmination of the grace initiated at salvation (cf. Eph. 2:7).

1:15 you also be holy. Holiness essentially defines the Christian's new nature and conduct in contrast with his pre-salvation lifestyle. The reason for practicing a holy manner of living is that Christians are associated with the holy God and must treat Him and His Word with respect and reverence. We, therefore, glorify Him best by being like Him (see vv. 16, 17; Matt. 5:48; Eph. 5:1; cf. Lev. 11:44, 45; 18:30; 19:2; 20:7; 21:6–8).

2. Persistence of wonder (1:17–21)

1:17 if you call on the Father. This is another way of saying, "if you are a Christian." The believer who knows God and that He judges the works of all His children fairly will respect God and His evaluation of his life, and long to honor his heavenly Father.

1:18 redeemed. See note on 1 Timothy 2:6. That is, to buy back someone from bondage by the payment of a price; to set free by paying a ransom. Redemption was a technical term for money paid to buy back a prisoner of war. Here it is used of the price paid to buy the freedom of a person in the bondage of sin and under the curse of the law (i.e., eternal death, cf. Gal. 3:13). The price paid to a holy God was the shed blood of His own Son (cf. Ex. 12:1–13; 15:13; Ps. 78:35; Acts 20:28; Rom. 3:24; Gal. 4:4, 5; Eph. 1:7; Col. 1:14; Titus 2:14; Heb. 9:11–17).

1:20 foreordained. In eternity past, before Adam and Eve sinned, God planned the redemption of sinners through Jesus Christ (cf. Acts 2:23; 4:27, 28; 2 Tim. 1:9). See note on verse 2. last times. The "last times" are the times of the Messiah, from His First Coming to His Second Coming (cf. Acts 2:17; 1 Tim. 4:1; 1 John 2:18).

1:21 gave Him glory. God, through the Ascension, returned Christ to the glory that He had with Him before the world began (cf. Luke 24:51–53; John 17:4, 5; Acts 1:9–11; Phil. 2:9–11; Heb. 1:1–3; 2:9).

3. Power of love (1:22–2:3)

1:22 love one another fervently. The love indicated here by Peter is the love of choice, the kind of love that can respond to a command. Fervently means to stretch to the limits (cf. 10:27ff.; Luke 22:44; Acts 12:5). Only those whose souls have been “purified,” i.e., saved, have the capacity to love like this. Such love exhibits itself by meeting others at the point of their need (cf. 2:17; 3:8; 4:8; John 13:34; Rom. 12:10; Phil. 2:1–8; Heb. 13:1; 1 John 3:11).

1:23 not of corruptible seed. The spiritual life implanted by the Holy Spirit to produce the new birth is unfailing and permanent. through the word of God. The Spirit uses the Word to produce life. It is the truth of the gospel that saves. See note on Romans 10:17.

1:24, 25 Peter enforces his point about the power of the Word to regenerate by quoting from Isaiah 40:6–8 (see note there).

2:1 laying aside. The Christian’s new life can’t grow unless sins are renounced. When that purging takes place, then the Word does its work (v. 2). malice. The Greek word for evil is used eleven times in the NT to indicate that wickedness which comes from within a person (cf. v. 16; Rom. 1:29; Eph. 4:31; Titus 3:3).

2:2 desire the pure milk of the word. Spiritual growth is always marked by a craving for and a delight in God’s Word with the intensity with which a baby craves milk (cf. Job 23:12; Pss. 1:1, 2; 19:7–11; 119:16, 24, 35, 47, 48, 72, 92, 97, 103, 111, 113, 127, 159, 167, 174; Jer. 15:16). A Christian develops a desire for the truth of God’s Word by: (1) remembering his life’s source (1:25; cf. Is. 55:10, 11; John 15:3; Heb. 4:12); (2) eliminating sin from his life (v. 1); (3) admitting his need for God’s truth (v. 2, “as newborn babes”; cf. Matt. 4:4); (4) pursuing spiritual growth (v. 2, “that you may grow thereby”); and (5) surveying his blessings (v. 3, “the Lord is gracious”).

2:3 tasted. At salvation, all believers experience how gracious the Lord is to those who trust Him. That should compel believers to seek more of that grace in pursuing His Word.

4. Praises of Christ (2:4–10)

2:4 Coming to Him. Coming means to come with the idea of remaining. Here, it means to remain in Christ’s presence with intimate fellowship (cf. John 15:5–15). a living stone. Both a metaphor and a paradox, this phrase from the OT (see vv. 6–8) emphasizes that Christ, the “cornerstone” and “stone of stumbling,” is alive from the dead and has a living relationship with saved humanity (v. 5; cf. 1 Cor. 15:45; 1 John 5:11, 12). rejected . . . but chosen. See verse 7. The messianic credentials of Jesus were examined by the false religious leaders of Israel and contemptuously rejected (vv. 6–8; cf. Matt. 12:22–24; John 1:10, 11). But Jesus Christ was God’s precious and elect Son, ultimately authenticated through His Resurrection from the dead (cf. Ps. 2:10, 11; Matt. 3:17; Acts 2:23, 24, 32; 4:11, 12; 5:30, 31; 10:39–41).

2:5 you also, as living stones. Christians are so closely identified and united with Christ that the very life that exists in Christ exists in them also (cf. Gal. 2:20; Col. 3:3, 4; 2 Pet. 2:4). built up a spiritual house. Metaphorically, God is building a spiritual house, putting all believers in place, integrating each one with others, and each one with the life of Christ (cf. Eph. 2:19; Heb. 3:6). a holy priesthood. OT priests and NT believer-priests share a number of characteristics: (1) priesthood is an elect privilege (Ex. 28:1; John 15:16); (2) priests are cleansed of sins (Lev. 8:6–36; Titus 2:14); (3) priests are clothed for service (5:5; Ex. 28:42; Lev. 8:7ff.; Ps. 132:9, 16); (4) priests are anointed for service (Lev. 8:12, 30; 1 John 2:20, 27); (5) priests are prepared for service (Lev. 8:33; 9:4, 23; Gal. 1:16; 1 Tim. 3:6); (6) priests are ordained to obedience (v. 4; Lev. 10:1ff.); (7) priests are to honor the Word of God (v. 2; Mal. 2:7); (8) priests are to walk with God (Mal. 2:6; Gal. 5:16, 25); (9) priests are to impact sinners (Mal. 2:6; Gal. 6:1); and (10) priests are messengers of God (Mal. 2:7; Matt. 28:19, 20). The main privilege of a priest, however, is access to God. to offer up spiritual sacrifices. Spiritual sacrifices mean God-honoring works done because of Christ under the direction of the Holy Spirit and the guidance of the Word of God. These would include: (1) offering the strength of one's body to God (Rom. 12:1, 2); (2) praising God (Heb. 13:15); (3) doing good (Heb. 13:16); (4) sharing one's resources (Heb. 13:16); (5) bringing people to Christ (Rom. 15:16); (6) sacrificing one's desires for the good of others (Eph. 5:2); and (7) praying (Rev. 8:3).

2:6–8 Three OT passages employing the “stone” metaphor are used by Peter to show that Christ's position as chief cornerstone of the new spiritual house was foreordained by God. That same stone is also going to be the stumbling stone that brings down the unbelieving in judgment (cf. Matt. 21:42, 44).

2:6 Zion. Quoted from Isaiah 28:16. Figuratively, Zion, i.e., Jerusalem, is in the realm of the New Covenant, as Sinai is in the realm of the Old Covenant.

2:6, 7 cornerstone. See note on Ephesians 2:20; cf. Psalm 118:22.

2:7 disobedient. Unbelieving (v. 8).

2:8 A stone of stumbling . . . a rock of offense. Quoted from Isaiah 8:14. To every human being, Christ is either the means of salvation if they believe, or the means of judgment if they reject the gospel. He is like a stone in the road that causes a traveler to fall. disobedient to the word. Unbelief is their disobedience, since the call of the gospel to repent and believe is a command from God. they also were appointed. These were not appointed by God to disobedience and unbelief. Rather, these were appointed to doom because of their disobedience and unbelief. Judgment on unbelief is as divinely appointed as salvation by faith. See notes on Romans 9:22; 2 Corinthians 2:15, 16.

2:9 a chosen generation. Peter uses OT concepts to emphasize the privileges of NT Christians (cf. Deut. 7:6–8). In strong contrast to the disobedient who are appointed by God to wrath (v. 8), Christians are chosen by God to salvation (cf. 1:2). a royal priesthood. The concept of a kingly priesthood is drawn from Exodus 19:6. Israel temporarily forfeited this privilege because of its apostasy and because its wicked leaders executed the Messiah. At the present time, the church is a royal priesthood united with the royal priest, Jesus Christ. A royal priesthood is not only a priesthood that belongs to and serves the king, but is also a priesthood which exercises rule. This will ultimately be fulfilled in Christ's future kingdom (1 Cor. 6:1–4; Rev. 5:10; 20:6). a holy nation. This is another allusion to Exodus 19:6 (cf. Lev. 19:2; 20:26; Deut. 7:6; Is. 62:12). Tragically, Israel temporarily forfeited the great privilege of being the unique people of God through unbelief. Until Israel's future acceptance of its Messiah, God has replaced the nation with the church. See notes on Romans 11:1, 2, 25–29 for Israel's salvation. His own special people. This combines phraseology found in Exodus 19:5; Isaiah 43:21; Malachi 3:17. Cf. Titus 2:14. proclaim the praises. Proclaim, an unusual word found in no other place in the NT, means to tell forth, to tell something not otherwise known. Praises are excellencies, virtues, eminent qualities. darkness . . . light. Cf. Acts 26:18; Ephesians 5:8; Colossians 1:13.

2:10 the people of God. The ideas of this verse come from Hosea 1:6–10; 2:23. Cf. Romans 9:23–26 where the reference is explicitly to the calling of a people made up of Jews and Gentiles. now have obtained mercy. God generally has temporal mercy and the compassion of common grace on His creation as a whole (Ps. 145:9; Lam. 3:22). Paul made reference to this when he said that God is the “Savior of all men” (see note on 1 Tim. 4:10). But God has eternal mercy on His elect church by forgiving their sins and eliminating their judgment (cf. Rom. 9:15; Titus 3:5). In the OT, the prophet Hosea promised that Israel, though remaining outside of God's blessings for a long period of time, would eventually come under God's mercy. God's dealing with Israel was somewhat of a pattern for His dealings with the believers under the New Covenant, who previously were outside God's covenant, but have been brought under the mercy of God by faith in Christ (cf. Eph. 2:4–13).

II. REMEMBER OUR EXAMPLE BEFORE MEN (2:11–4:6)

A. Honorable Living Before Unbelievers (2:11–3:7)

1. Submission to the government (2:11–17)

2:11 sojourners and pilgrims. In this section, Peter called his readers to a righteous life in a hostile world. Christians are foreigners in a secular society because their citizenship is in heaven. There are three perspectives from which Christians can look at their obligations: (1) pilgrims (vv. 11, 12); (2) citizens (vv. 13–17); and (3) servants (vv. 18–20). In verses 21–25, Peter shows how Christ set the example by living a perfect life in the midst of His hostile environment. abstain from fleshly lusts. Perhaps more literally, “hold yourself away from fleshly lusts.” In order to have an impact for God on the world, Christians must be disciplined in an inward and private way by avoiding the desires of the fallen nature (cf. Gal. 5:19–21, where “fleshly lusts” include much more than sexual temptations). which war against the soul. War, i.e., to carry on a military campaign. Fleshly lusts are personified as if they were an army of rebels or guerrillas who incessantly search out and try to destroy the Christian's joy, peace, and usefulness (cf. 4:2, 3).

2:12 conduct honorable. The Greek word for honorable is rich in meaning and implies the purest, highest, noblest kind of goodness. It means “lovely,” “winsome,” “gracious,” “noble,” and “excellent.” Having been disciplined in the inward and private side, the Christian must outwardly live among non-Christians in a way which reflects that inward discipline. evildoers. The early Christians were falsely accused of rebellion against the government with such false accusations as: terrorism (burning Rome; see Introduction: Background and Setting), atheism (no idols or emperor worship), cannibalism (rumors about the Lord's Supper), immorality (because of their love for one another), damaging trade and social progress, and leading slaves into insurrection. Cf. Acts 16:18–21; 19:19, 24–27. day of visitation. A common phrase in the OT (Is. 10:3; Jer. 27:22) warning of God's "visitation," His drawing near to people or nations in either judgment or blessing. In the NT, "visitation" speaks of redemption (Luke 1:68; 7:16; 19:44). Peter was teaching that when the grace of God visits the heart of an unbeliever, he will respond with saving faith and glorify God because he remembers the testimony of believers he had observed. Those who don't believe will experience the visitation of His wrath in the final judgment.

2:13 submit yourselves. Submit is a military term meaning "to arrange in military fashion under the commander," "to put oneself in an attitude of submission." As citizens in the world and under civil law and authority, God's people are to live in a humble, submissive way in the midst of any hostile, godless, slandering society (cf. vv. 21–23; Prov. 24:21; Jer. 29:4–14; Matt. 22:21; Rom. 13:1ff., 1 Tim. 2:1; Heb. 10:32–34). for the Lord's sake. Though the Christian's true citizenship is in heaven (Phil. 3:20), he still must live as an obedient citizen in this world so that God will be honored and glorified. Rebellious conduct by a Christian brings dishonor on Christ. See notes on Romans 13:1–5; Titus 3:1, 2.

2:14 governors. Christians are to live in obedience to every institution of civil and social order on earth. This includes obedience to the national government (v. 13, "king"), the state government, the police, and judges. Only when the government tries to force a Christian to do what is against the law of God explicitly stated in Scripture should he refuse to submit (cf. Acts 4:18–20; 5:28, 29; Titus 1:6; 3:1, 2).

2:15 silence . . . foolish men. Here is the purpose for submission to authority, in order that one should avoid condemnation and win commendation that shuts the mouth of those obstinately set against the faith who are looking for reasons to criticize believers.

2:16 liberty as a cloak for vice. Believers should enjoy their freedom in Christ, but ought not to put on a veil or mask of freedom to cover what really is wickedness. Christian freedom is never to be an excuse for self-indulgence or license. Cf. 1 Corinthians 7:22; 8:9–13; 2 Thessalonians 3:7–9; see notes on Romans 14:1–15:3.

2:17 Honor. Highly esteemed is the idea, and it refers not just to obedient duty but inner respect, brotherhood. The church. Cf. 1:22; 3:8; 4:8; 5:14.

2. Submission to masters (2:18–25)

2:18 Servants, be submissive. One's Christianity does not give him the right to rebel against his superior in the social structure (see notes on 1 Cor. 7:21–23; Eph. 6:5; Col. 3:22; see also Ex. 21:26, 27; Lev. 25:39–43; Deut. 23:15, 16), no matter how unfair or harsh he may be.

2:19, 20 commendable before God. Favor with God is found when an employee, treated unjustly, accepts his poor treatment with faith in God's sovereign care, rather than responding in anger, hostility, discontent, pride, or rebellion (cf. Matt. 5:11).

2:21 to this. Patient endurance (v. 20). you were called. The call, as always in the NT epistles, is the efficacious call to salvation (v. 9; 5:10; Rom. 8:30). Peter's point is that a person called to salvation will, sometimes at least, have to endure unfair treatment. Commendable behavior on the part of the believer in the midst of such trials results in the strengthening and perfecting of the Christian on earth (5:10; cf. James 1:2–4), and his increased eternal capacity to glorify God (cf. Matt. 20:21–23; 2 Cor. 4:17, 18; 2 Tim. 2:12). leaving us an example. The word example literally means “writing under.” It was writing put under a piece of paper on which to trace letters, thus a pattern. Christ is the pattern for Christians to follow in suffering with perfect patience. His death was efficacious, primarily, as an atonement for sin (2 Cor. 5:21); but it was also exemplary, as a model of endurance in unjust suffering.

2:22 This is a quote from Isaiah 53:9. He was the perfect example of patient endurance in unjust suffering because He was sinless, as the prophet said He would be. Cf. 1:19.

2:23 reviled. To revile is to pile up abusive and vile language against someone. Though verbally abused, Christ never retaliated with vicious words and threats (3:9; cf. Matt. 26:57–65; 27:12–14; Luke 23:7–11). committed Himself. “To commit” was “to hand over to someone to keep.” Christ was “handed over” to Pilate (John 19:11); Pilate “handed Him over” to the Jews (John 19:16); Christ “handed over” Himself to God, suffering in silence because of His perfect confidence in the sovereignty and righteousness of His Father (cf. Is. 53:7).

2:24 bore our sins. Christ suffered not simply as the Christian's pattern (vv. 21–23), but far more importantly as the Christian's substitute. To bear sins was to be punished for them (cf. Num. 14:33; Ezek. 18:20). Christ bore the punishment and the penalty for believers, thus satisfying a holy God (3:18; see notes on 2 Cor. 5:21; Gal. 3:13). This great doctrine of the substitutionary atonement is the heart of the gospel. Actual atonement, sufficient for the sins of the whole world, was made for all who would ever believe, namely, the elect (cf. Lev. 16:17; 23:27–30; John 3:16; 2 Cor. 5:19; 1 Tim. 2:6; 4:10; Titus 2:11; Heb. 2:9; 1 John 2:2; 4:9, 10). we, having died to sins. This is true by the miracle of being in Christ. We died to sin in the sense that we paid its penalty—death—by being in Christ when He died as our substitute. See notes on Romans 6:1–11. live for righteousness. Not only have we been declared just, the penalty for our sins paid by His death, but we have risen to walk in new life, empowered by the Holy Spirit (see notes on Rom. 6:12–22). by whose stripes you were healed. From Isaiah 53:5 (see note). Through the wounds of Christ at the Cross, believers are healed spiritually from the deadly disease of sin. Physical healing comes at glorification only, when there is no more physical pain, illness, or death (Rev. 21:4). See notes on Isaiah 53:4–6; Matthew 8:17 for comments on healing in the atonement.

2:25 returned. This means “to turn toward,” and refers to the repentant faith a person has at salvation. Shepherd and Overseer. Christ is not only the Christian's standard (vv. 21–23) and substitute (v. 24), but He is also the Christian's Shepherd (5:4; cf. Is. 53:6; John 10:11). In the OT, the title of Shepherd for the Lord was often messianic (Ezek. 34:23, 24; 37:24; cf. John 10:1–18). Beyond that, Shepherd and Overseer were the most appropriate descriptions of Christ for Peter to use in order to comfort Christians who were being persecuted and slandered (v. 12). These two terms are also used for human spiritual leaders. Shepherd is the word for pastor, and overseer is the word for bishop (cf. Eph. 4:11; Titus 1:7), both referring to the same persons who lead the church (cf. Acts 20:28).

3. Submission in the family (3:1–7)

3:1 likewise. In chapter 2, Peter taught that living successfully as a Christian in a hostile world would require relating properly in two places: the civil society (2:13–17), and the workplace (2:18–25). At the start of this chapter, he added two more places: the family (vv. 1–7) and the local church (vv. 8, 9). be submissive*. Peter insisted that if Christians are to be witnesses for their Lord, they must submit not only to the civil order but also to the social order which God has designed. own husbands*. Women are not inferior to men in any way, any more than submissive Christians are inferior to pagan rulers or non-Christian bosses (cf. Gal. 3:28). But wives have been given a role which puts them in submission to the headship which resides in their own husbands (see notes on 1 Cor. 11:1–9; Eph. 5:22; Col. 3:18; Titus 2:4, 5). some do not obey the word*. Since obedience has been used in this letter to refer to believers and disobedience to non-believers (see notes on 1:2; 2:8), this is a non-Christian husband. In a culture in which women were viewed as lower than men, the potential for conflict and embarrassment in the marriage of a believer and unbeliever was significant, even as it is in contemporary society. Peter did not urge the Christian wife to leave her husband (cf. 1 Cor. 7:13–16), to preach to her husband (“without a word”), or to demand her rights (“be submissive”). won by the conduct of their wives*. The loving, gracious submission of a Christian woman to her unsaved husband is the strongest evangelistic tool she has. Added to submission is modesty, meekness, and respect for the husband (vv. 2–6).

3:2 chaste . . . fear. Purity of life with reverence for God is what the unsaved husband should observe consistently.

3:3 outward. Peter was not here condemning all outward adornment. His condemnation is for incessant preoccupation with the outward to the disregard of one’s character (v. 4; cf. 1 Tim. 2:9, 10). But every Christian woman is especially to concentrate

Key Words

Word: Greek logos—1:23; 2:8; 3:1—lit. “word” or “idea,” also Greek rhēma—1:25. “The word of God” (1:23) is the gospel message about the Lord Jesus Christ. The Spirit uses the Word to produce life. It is the truth of the gospel that saves and regenerates people. Peter used Isaiah 40:6–8, which says “the word of our God” in a NT context.

Example: Greek hupogrammos—2:21—lit. “tracing tablet.” In biblical times, this term denoted tablets that contained the entire Greek alphabet. Students would practice tracing each letter of the alphabet on these tablets. When believers use the life of Jesus as their example, His life of suffering becomes their tracing tablet. Christians who trace the life of Jesus learn godliness and wisdom in the face of persecution.

Love: Greek agape—4:8—lit. “love.” Most of the ancient occurrences of this Greek word appear in the NT. Agape describes the love of a person who shows kindness to strangers, gives hospitality, and acts charitably. In the NT, the word agape took on a special meaning. It denoted a love in action as opposed to the purely emotional kind. Agape love is the self-sacrificial love naturally demonstrated by God.

on developing that chaste and reverent Christlike character.

3:4 gentle and quiet spirit. Here is beauty that never decays, as the outward body does. Gentle is actually “meek or humble” and quiet describes the character of her action and reaction to her husband and life in general. Such is precious not only to her husband, but also to God.

3:5 holy women. Certain OT saints (particularly Sarah, v. 6) are models of inner beauty, character, modesty, and submissiveness to their husbands (see notes on Prov. 31:10–31).

3:6 not afraid with any terror. There are potential fears for a Christian woman who sets out to be submissive to her unsaved husband, as to where such submission might lead. However, Peter’s instruction to the wife is not to be intimidating or fearful; but, as a principle, she is to submit to her husband. This precludes any coercion to sin, disobedience to God’s Word, or imposition of physical harm (cf. Acts 4:18–20; 5:28, 29; Titus 1:6).

3:7 Husbands, likewise. Submission is the responsibility of a Christian husband as well (cf. Eph. 5:21). Though not submitting to his wife as a leader, a believing husband must submit to the loving duty of being sensitive to the needs, fears, and feelings of his wife. In other words, a Christian husband needs to subordinate his needs to hers, whether she is a Christian or not. Peter specifically notes consideration, chivalry, and companionship. weaker vessel*. While she is fully equal in Christ and not inferior spiritually because she is a woman (see Gal. 3:28), she is physically weaker, and in need of protection, provision, and strength from her husband. heirs together of the grace of life*. Here the “grace of life” is not salvation, but marriage—the best relationship earthly life has to offer. The husband must cultivate companionship and fellowship with his wife, Christian or not (cf. Eccl. 9:9). prayers may not be hindered*. This refers specifically to the husband’s prayer for the salvation of his wife (see note on v. 1). Such a prayer would be hindered if he were not respectful of her needs and fellowship.

B. Honorable Living Before Believers (3:8–12)

3:8 be of one mind. From two Greek words, meaning “to think the same,” “to be like-minded.” The idea is to maintain inward unity of heart. All Christians are to be examples and purveyors of peace and unity, not disruption and disharmony (John 13:35; 17; Rom. 12:16; 15:5; 1 Cor. 1:10; Phil. 2:1, 2). love as brothers*. A recurring theme in 1 Peter (see 1:22; 2:17; 4:8; 5:14).

3:9 on the contrary blessing. Blessing means “to speak well of,” “to eulogize.” The blessing that a Christian is to give to the reviler includes (1) finding ways to serve him; (2) praying for his salvation or spiritual progress; (3) expressing thankfulness for him; (4) speaking well of him; and (5) desiring his well-being (2:23; cf. Lev. 19:18; Prov. 20:22; Luke 6:38). you were called to this*. A person to whom God has given undeserved blessings instead of judgment should seek the blessing he will receive when giving a free gift of forgiveness to someone who has wronged him (cf. v. 21; Matt. 18:21–35).

3:10 love life and see good days. Peter used apt scriptural confirmation of his exhortation in verse 9 by quoting from Psalm 34:12–16. The believer has been granted the legacy to enjoy his life (John 10:10). In this section, Peter gave straightforward advice on how to experience that rich joy and fullness of life, even in the midst of a hostile environment. The requirements of the fulfilled life include: (1) a humble, loving attitude toward everyone (v. 8); (2) a non-vindictive response toward revilers (v. 9); (3) pure and honest speech (v. 10); (4) a disdain for sin and pursuit of peace (v. 11); and (5) a right motive, i.e., to work the righteousness that pleases the omniscient Lord (v. 12; cf. Matt. 5:38–48; Rom. 12:14, 17; 1 Cor. 4:12; 5:11; 1 Thess. 5:15).

C. Honorable Living in the Midst of Suffering (3:13–4:6)

1. The principle of suffering for righteousness (3:13–17)

3:13 who will harm you. It is unusual for people to mistreat those who are zealous for good. Even a hostile world is slow to hurt people who are benefactors of society, who are kind and caring (cf. 4:12), but it does happen (v. 14).

3:14 blessed. Here the idea is “privileged” or “honored” (cf. Matt. 5:10). do not be afraid. The idea here is borrowed from Isaiah 8:12, 13.

3:15 sanctify the Lord God in your hearts. Christ is to be preferred here, so the reading is “set apart in your hearts Christ as Lord.” The heart is the sanctuary in which He prefers to be worshiped. Live in submissive communion with the Lord Jesus, loving and obeying Him—and you have nothing to fear. always be ready to give a defense. The English word apologetics comes from the Greek word here translated as “defense.” Peter is using the word in an informal sense (cf. Phil. 1:16, 17) and is insisting that the believer must understand what he believes and why one is a Christian, and then be able to articulate one’s beliefs humbly, thoughtfully, reasonably, and biblically. the hope that is in you. Salvation with its anticipation of eternal glory.

3:16 a good conscience. The conscience accuses (cf. Rom. 2:14, 15) by notifying the person of sin by producing guilt, shame, doubt, fear, anxiety, or despair. A life free of ongoing and unconfessed sin, lived under the command of the Lord, will produce a conscience “without offense” (Acts 24:16; see notes on 2 Cor. 1:12; 4:2). This will cause false accusers to feel the “shame” of their own consciences (cf. 2:12, 15).

2. The paragon of suffering for righteousness (3:18–22)

3:18 For Christ also suffered. Peter wished to encourage his readers in their suffering by again reminding them that even Christ suffered unjustly because it was God’s will (v. 18). Ultimately, however, Christ was triumphant to the point of being exalted to the right hand of God while all of those demon beings who were behind His suffering were made forever subject to Him (v. 22). God also caused Peter’s suffering readers to triumph. once for sins. Under the Old Covenant, the Jewish people offered sacrifice after sacrifice, and then repeated it all the next year, especially at the Passover. But Christ's one sacrifice for sins was of such perpetual validity that it was sufficient for everyone and would never need to be repeated (see notes on Heb. 7:27; 9:26–28). the just for the unjust. This is another statement of the sinlessness of Jesus (cf. Heb. 7:26) and of His substitutionary and vicarious Atonement. He, who personally never sinned and had no sin nature, took the place of sinners (cf. 2:24; 2 Cor. 5:21). In so doing, Christ satisfied God's just penalty for sin required by the law and opened the way to God for all who repentantly believe (cf. John 14:6; Acts 4:12). bring us to God. In this life, spiritually, and in the next life, wholly (cf. Mark 15:38). put to death in the flesh. A violent physical execution that terminated His earthly life (cf. Heb. 5:7). alive by the Spirit. This is not a reference to the Holy Spirit, but to Jesus' true inner life, His own spirit. Contrasted with His flesh (humanness) which was dead for three days, His spirit (deity) was alive, literally "in spirit" (cf. Luke 23:46).

3:19 preached. Between Christ's death and Resurrection, His living spirit went to the demon spirits bound in the abyss and proclaimed that, in spite of His death, He had triumphed over them (see notes on Col. 2:14, 15). spirits in prison. This refers to fallen angels (demons), who were permanently bound because of heinous wickedness. The demons who are not so bound resist such a sentence (cf. Luke 8:31). In the end, they will all be sent to the eternal lake of fire (Matt. 25:41; Rev. 20:10).

3:20 disobedient . . . in the days of Noah. Peter further explains that the abyss is inhabited by bound demons who have been there since the time of Noah, and who were sent there because they overstepped the bounds of God's tolerance with their wickedness.

The demons of Noah's day were running riot through the earth, filling the world with their wicked, vile, anti-God activity, including sexual sin, so that even 120 years of Noah's preaching, while the ark was being built, could not convince any of the human race beyond the eight people in Noah's family to believe in God (see notes on 2 Pet. 2:4, 5; Jude 6, 7; cf. Gen. 6:1–8). Thus, God bound these demons permanently in the abyss until their final sentencing. saved through water. They had been rescued in spite of the water, not because of the water. Here, water was the agent of God's judgment, not the means of salvation (see note on Acts 2:38).

3:21 an antitype which now saves us. In the NT, an antitype is an earthly expression of a spiritual reality. It indicates a symbol, picture, or pattern of some spiritual truth. Peter is teaching that the fact that eight people were in an ark and went through the whole judgment, and yet were unharmed, is analogous to the Christian's experience in salvation by being in Christ, the ark of one's salvation. baptism . . . through the resurrection of Jesus Christ. Peter is not referring to water baptism here, but rather a figurative immersion into union with Christ as an ark of safety from the judgment of God. The Resurrection of Christ demonstrates God's acceptance of Christ's substitutionary death for the sins of those who believe (Acts 2:30, 31; Rom. 1:4). Judgment fell on Christ just as the judgment of the flood waters fell on the ark. The believer who is in Christ is thus in the ark of safety that will sail over the waters of judgment into eternal glory (cf. Rom. 6:1–4). not the removal of the filth of the flesh. To be sure he is not misunderstood, Peter clearly says he is not speaking of water baptism. In Noah's Flood, they were kept out of the water while those who went into the water were destroyed. Being in the ark and thus saved from God's judgment on the world prefigures being in Christ and thus saved from eternal damnation. the answer of a good conscience toward God. The word for answer has the idea of a pledge, agreeing to certain conditions of a covenant (the New Covenant) with God. What saves a person plagued by sin and a guilty conscience is not some external rite, but the agreement with God to get in the ark of safety, the Lord Jesus, by faith in His death and Resurrection (cf. Rom. 10:9, 10; Heb. 9:14; 10:22).

3:22 right hand of God. After Jesus accomplished His cross work and was raised from the dead, He was exalted to the place of prominence, honor, majesty, authority, and power (cf. Rom. 8:34; Eph. 1:20, 21; Phil. 2:9–11; Heb. 1:3–9; 6:20; 8:1; 12:2). The point of application to Peter's readers is that suffering can be the context for one's greatest triumph, as seen in the example of the Lord Jesus.

3. The purpose of suffering for righteousness (4:1–6)

4:1 Therefore. In light of the triumphant suffering and death of Christ, Peter's readers should also be willing to suffer in the flesh, knowing that it potentially produces the greatest triumph. suffered for us in the flesh. A reference to Christ's death on the Cross (see note on 3:18). the same mind. The Christian should be armed (terminology that portrays a battle) with the same thought that was manifest in the suffering of Christ, namely that a person can be triumphant in suffering, even the suffering of death. In other words, the Christian should voluntarily accept the potential of death as a part of the Christian life (cf. Matt. 10:38, 39; 2 Cor. 4:8–11). Peter would have his opportunity to live this principle himself, when he faced martyrdom (see John 21:18, 19). has ceased from sin. The perfect tense of the verb empha-

1 Peter 3:18–22 Summarized

This passage proves to be one of the most difficult texts in the New Testament to translate and interpret. The line between Old Testament allusions and New Testament applications gets blurred. Peter's overall purpose of this passage, which was to encourage his readers in their suffering, must be kept in mind during interpretation. The apostle repeatedly reminded them that even Christ suffered unjustly because it was God's will (vv. 17, 18) and accomplished God's purposes.

Therefore, although Jesus experienced a violent physical execution that terminated His earthly life when He was "put to death in the flesh" (v. 18; Heb. 5:7), nevertheless He was "made alive by the Spirit" (v. 18). This is not a reference to the Holy Spirit, but to Jesus' true inner life, His own spirit. Contrasted with His flesh (humanness) which was dead for three days, His spirit (deity) remained alive, literally "in spirit" (Luke 23:46).

Part of God's purpose in Christ's death involved His activities between His death and Resurrection. His living spirit went to the demon spirits bound in the Abyss and proclaimed victory in spite of death. Peter further explained that the Abyss is inhabited by bound demons that have been there since the time of Noah. They were sent there because they overstepped the limits of God's tolerance with their wickedness. Not even 120 years of Noah's example and preaching had stemmed the tide of wickedness in his time (Gen. 6:1–8). Thus God bound these demons permanently in the Abyss until their final sentencing.

Peter's analogy spotlights the ministry of Jesus Christ in saving us as surely as the ark saved Noah's family. He is not referring to water baptism here but to a figurative immersion in Christ that keeps us safe from the flood of God's sure judgment. The Resurrection of Christ demonstrates God's acceptance of Christ's substitutionary death for the sins of those who believe (Acts 2:30, 31; Rom. 1:4). God's judgment fell on Christ just as the judgment of the floodwaters fell on the ark. The believer who is in Christ is thus in the ark of safety that will sail over the waters of judgment into eternal glory (Rom. 6:1–4).

sizes a permanent eternal condition free from sin. The worst that can happen to a believer suffering unjustly is death, and that is the best that can happen because death means the complete and final end of all sins. If the Christian is armed with the goal of being delivered from sin, and that goal is achieved through his death, the threat and experience of death is precious (cf. Rom. 7:5, 18; 1 Cor. 1:21; 15:42, 49). Moreover, the greatest weapon that the enemy has against the Christian, the threat of death, is not effective.

4:2 no longer should live . . . for the lusts of men. If the goal of the Christian's life is the freedom from sin which comes at death, then he should live the remainder of his life on earth pursuing the holy will of God rather than the ungodly lusts of the flesh.

4:3 lewdness . . . abominable idolatries. Lewdness describes unbridled, unrestrained sin, an excessive indulgence in sensual pleasure. Revelries has the idea of an orgy. The Greek word was used in extrabiblical literature to refer to a band of drunken, wildly acting people, swaggering and staggering through public streets, wreaking havoc. Thus, the pleasures of the ungodly are described here from the perspective of God as despicable acts of wickedness. Though Peter's readers had indulged in such sins before salvation, they must never do so again. Sin in the believer is a burden which afflicts him rather than a pleasure which delights him.

4:4 they think it strange. One's former friends are surprised, offended, and resentful because of the Christian's lack of interest in ungodly pleasures. the same flood of dissipation. Dissipation refers to the state of evil in which a person thinks about nothing else. The picture here is of a large crowd running together in a mad, wild race—a melee pursuing sin.

4:5 give an account. This verb means "to pay back." People who have "walked in lewd-ness" (v. 3) and who malign believers (v. 4) are amassing a debt to God which they will spend all eternity paying back (cf. Matt. 12:36; Rom. 14:11, 12; Heb. 4:13). to judge the living and the dead. All the unsaved, currently alive or dead, will be brought before the Judge, the Lord Jesus Christ at the Great White Throne judgment (Rev. 20:11–15; cf. Rom. 3:19; 2 Thess. 1:6–10).

4:6 to those who are dead. The preaching of the gospel not only offers a rich life (3:10), a ceasing from sin (v. 1), and a good conscience (3:21), but also an escape from final judgment. Peter had in mind believers who had heard and accepted the gospel of Christ when they were still alive, but who had died by the time Peter wrote this letter. Some of them, perhaps, had been martyred for their faith. Though these were dead physically, they were triumphantly alive in their spirits (cf. Heb. 12:23). All their judgment had been fully accomplished while they were alive in this world ("in the flesh"), so they will live forever in God's presence.

III. REMEMBER OUR LORD WILL RETURN (4:7–5:11)

A. The Responsibilities of Christian Living (4:7–11)

4:7 the end of all things. The Greek word for "end" is never used in the NT as a chronological end, as if something simply stops. Instead, the word means a consummation, a goal achieved, a result attained, or a realization. Having emphasized triumphant suffering through death, Peter here begins to emphasize triumphant suffering through the Second Coming of Christ (cf. 1:3; 2:12), which is the goal of all things. He is calling believers to live obediently and expectantly in the light of Christ's return. is at hand. The idea is that of a process consummated with a resulting nearness; that is, “imminent.” Peter is reminding the readers of this letter that the return of Jesus Christ could be at any moment (cf. Rom. 13:12; 1 Thess. 1:10; James 5:7, 8; Rev. 22:20). be serious and watchful. To “be serious” here implies not to be swept away by emotions or passions, thus maintaining a proper eternal perspective on life. The doctrine of the imminent return of Christ should not turn the Christian into a zealous fanatic who does nothing but wait for it to occur. Instead, it should lead the believer into a watchful pursuit of holiness. Moreover, a watchful attitude creates a pilgrim mentality (2:11). It reminds the Christian that he is a citizen of heaven, only sojourning on earth. It should also remind him that he will face the record of his service to God and be rewarded for what stands the test at the judgment seat of Christ, which follows the return of Christ to rapture His church (see 1 Cor. 3:10–15; 4:1–5; 2 Cor. 5:9, 10). watchful . . . prayers. A mind victimized by emotion and passion, out of control, or knocked out of balance by worldly lusts and pursuits, is a mind that cannot know the fullness of holy communion in prayer with God (cf. 3:7). A mind fixed on His return is purified (1 John 3:3) and enjoys the fullness of fellowship with the Lord.

4:8 fervent love. Fervent means “to be stretched,” “to be strained.” It is used of a runner who is moving at maximum output with taut muscles straining and stretching to the limit (cf. 1:22). This kind of love requires the Christian to put another’s spiritual good ahead of his own desires in spite of being treated unkindly, ungraciously, or even with hostility (cf. 1 Cor. 13:4–7; Phil. 2:1–4). love will cover a multitude of sins. Quoted from Proverbs 10:12. It is the nature of true spiritual love, whether from God to man or Christian to Christian, to cover sins (cf. Rom. 5:8). This teaching does not preclude the discipline of a sinning, unrepentant church member (cf. Matt. 18:15–18; 1 Cor. 5). It means specifically that a Christian should overlook sins against him if possible, and always be ready to forgive insults and unkindnesses.

4:9 Be hospitable to one another. The Greek word means “love of strangers.” Love is intensely practical, not just emotional. In Peter’s day, love included opening one’s home and caring for other needy Christians, such as traveling preachers. It also included opening one’s home for church services. Scripture also teaches that Christians should be hospitable to strangers (Ex. 22:21; Deut. 14:28, 29; Heb. 13:1, 2).

4:10 received a gift. A spiritual gift is a graciously given, supernaturally designed ability granted to every believer by which the Holy Spirit ministers to the body of Christ. The Greek word (charisma) emphasizes the freeness of the gift. A spiritual gift cannot be earned, pursued, or worked up. It is merely “received” through the grace of God (cf. 1 Cor. 12:4, 7, 11, 18). The categories of spiritual gifts are given in Romans 12:3–8 and 1 Corinthians 12:4–10 (see notes there). Each believer has one specific gift, often a combination of the various categories of gifts blended together uniquely for each Christian. minister it to one another. Spiritual gifts were used, not for the exaltation of the one with the gift, but in loving concern for the benefit of others in the church (cf. 1 Cor. 12:7; 13). good stewards. A steward is responsible for another’s resources. A Christian does not own his gifts, but God has given him gifts to manage for the church and His glory. manifold grace of God. This emphasizes the vast designs of God for these gifts.

4:11 speaks . . . ministers. Peter is implying that there are two categories of gifts: speaking gifts and serving gifts. Such distinctions are clear in the lists in Romans 12 and 1 Corinthians 12. For a discussion of the gifts, see notes on 1 Corinthians 12–14. oracles of God. Elsewhere used of Scripture, the very words out of God’s mouth (cf. Rom. 3:2; Acts 7:38). God may be glorified. That is the goal of everything. Cf. Romans 11:33–36; Ephesians 3:21; 2 Timothy 4:18; 2 Peter 3:18; Revelation 1:6.

B. The Rewards of Christian Suffering (4:12–19)

4:12 the fiery trial. Peter probably wrote this letter shortly before or after the burning of Rome (see Introduction: Background and Setting), and at the beginning of the horrors of a 200-year period of Christian persecution. Peter explains that four attitudes are necessary in order to be triumphant in persecution: (1) expect it (v. 12); (2) rejoice in it (vv. 13, 14); (3) evaluate its cause (vv. 15–18); and (4) entrust it to God (v. 19). some strange thing happened. Happened means “to fall by chance.” A Christian must not think that his persecution is something that happened accidentally. God allowed it and designed it for the believer’s testing, purging, and cleansing.

4:13 to the extent . . . sufferings. The Christian who is persecuted for his faith is a partner in the same kind of suffering Jesus endured—suffering for doing what is right (cf. Matt. 5:10–12; Gal. 6:17; Phil. 1:29; 3:10; Col. 1:24). when His glory is revealed. That is, at Christ’s Second Coming (cf. Matt. 24:30; 25:31; Luke 17:30). While Jesus is presently glorified in heaven, His glory is not yet fully revealed on earth. be glad with exceeding joy. That is, exult and rejoice with a rapturous joy (cf. James 1:2). A Christian who is persecuted for righteousness in this life will have overflowing joy in the future because of his reward (see notes on Matt. 20:20–23). Such an awareness of future joy enables him also to “rejoice” (v. 13) at the present time (cf. Luke 6:22; see note on Rom. 8:17).

4:14 reproached for the name of Christ.

Insulted and treated unfairly for being a representative of all that Christ is, and for the public proclamation of the name of Christ (cf. Acts 4:12; 5:41; 9:15, 16; 15:26). blesed. Not a general, nondescript happiness so much as a specific benefit, in that suffering triumphantly for Christ shows God’s approval. Spirit of glory. That is, the Spirit who has glory, or who is glorious. In the OT, the glory of God was represented by the Shekinah light, that luminous glow which signified the presence of God (see Ex. 33:15–34:9). rests upon you. When a believer suffers, God’s presence specially rests and lifts him to strength and endurance beyond the physical dimension (cf. Acts 6:8–7:60; 2 Cor. 12:7–10).

4:15 busybody in other people’s matters.

Someone who intrudes into matters that belong to someone else. Peter is dealing with matters that would lead to persecution, such as getting involved in revolutionary, disruptive activity, or interfering in the function and flow of government. It might also refer to being a troublesome meddler in the workplace. As a general rule, a Christian living in a non-Christian culture is to do his work faithfully, exalt Jesus Christ, and live a virtuous life, rather than try to overturn or disrupt his culture (2:13–16; cf. 1 Thess. 4:11; 2 Thess. 3:11; see notes on 1 Tim. 2:1–3).

4:16 Christian. In the earliest days of the church, Christian was a derisive term given to those followers of Christ (cf. Acts 11:26; 26:28). Eventually, followers of Christ came to love and adopt this name.

4:17 judgment . . . house of God. Not condemnation, but the purging, chastening, and purifying of the church by the loving hand of God. It is far better and more important to kingdom work to endure suffering as the Lord purges and strengthens the church, than to endure the eternal sufferings of the unbeliever in the lake of fire. And, if God so strongly and painfully judges His church which He loves, what will be His fury on the ungodly?

4:18 Peter quoted from the LXX of Proverbs 11:31, and reinforced the point that if the justified sinner is saved only with great difficulty, suffering, pain, and loss—what will be the end of the ungodly? Cf. 2 Thessalonians 1:4–10.

4:19 commit their souls to Him. Commit is a banking term meaning “to deposit for safe keeping.” faithful Creator. Peter uses the word Creator to remind his readers that when they committed their lives to God, they were simply giving back to God what He had created. As Creator, God knows best the needs of His beloved creatures (2:23; cf. 2 Tim. 1:12).

C. The Requirements for Christian Leadership (5:1–4)

5:1 elders . . . I exhort. Times of suffering and persecution in the church call for the noblest leadership. The elder is the same leader as the shepherd (i.e., pastor, v. 2), and overseer (i.e., bishop, v. 2; see note on Acts 20:28). The word elder emphasizes their spiritual maturity. As in almost all other uses of the word (with the exception of Peter’s reference to himself here and John’s in 2 John 1 and 3 John 1), Peter wrote in the plural, indicating it was usual to have a plurality of godly leaders who oversaw and fed the flock. fellow elder and a witness . . . and . . . partaker of the glory. Peter loaded this exhortation to the elders with some rich motivation. First, there was motivation by identification with Peter, who refers to himself as a fellow-elder. As such, he could give relevant exhortation to the spiritual leaders. Second, there was motivation by authority. By noting that he had been an eyewitness of Christ’s suffering, Peter was affirming his apostleship (cf. Luke 24:48; Acts 1:21, 22). Third, there was the motivation by anticipation. The fact that Christian leaders will one day receive from the hand of Christ a reward for their service should be a stimulant to faithful duty. The basis of this anticipation was Peter’s experience in observing the Transfiguration of Christ (cf. Matt. 17:1–8; 2 Pet. 1:16). At that momentous event, he did partake of the Lord's glory.

5:2 Shepherd the flock of God. After the motivation (v. 1) comes the exhortation (vv. 2–4). Since the primary objective of shepherding is feeding, that is, teaching, every elder must be able to teach (cf. John 21:15–17; see notes on 1 Tim. 3:2; Titus 1:9). Involved with the feeding of the flock is also protecting the flock (cf. Acts 20:28–30). In both duties, it must be remembered that the flock belongs to God, not to the pastor. God entrusts some of His flock to the pastor of a church to lead, care for, and feed (v. 3). not by compulsion but willingly. Specifically, Peter may be warning the elders against a first danger—laziness. The divine calling (cf. 1 Cor. 9:16), along with the urgency of the task (Rom. 1:15), should prevent laziness and indifference. Cf. 2 Corinthians 9:7. not for dishonest gain. False teachers are always motivated by a second danger, money, and use their power and position to rob people of their wealth (see notes on 2 Pet. 2:1–3). Scripture is clear that churches should pay their shepherds well (1 Cor. 9:7–14; 1 Tim. 5:17, 18); but a desire for undeserved money must never be a motive for ministers to serve (cf. 1 Tim. 3:3; 6:9–11; 2 Tim. 2:4; Titus 1:7; 2 Pet. 2:3; see also Jer. 6:13; 8:10; Mic. 3:11; Mal. 1:10).

5:3 nor as being lords. This is the third major temptation for a pastor: (1) laziness (v. 2); (2) dishonest finances (v. 2); and (3) demagoguery. In this context, lords means to lead by dominating someone or some situation. It implies leadership by manipulation and intimidation. See notes on Matthew 20:25–28. True spiritual leadership is by example (see 1 Tim. 4:12).

5:4 Chief Shepherd appears. The Chief Shepherd is Jesus Christ (cf. Is. 40:11; Zech. 13:7; John 10:2, 11, 12, 16; Heb. 13:20, 21). When He appears at the Second Coming, He will evaluate the ministry of pastors at the judgment seat of Christ (cf. 1 Cor. 3:9–15; 4:5; 2 Cor. 5:9, 10). crown of glory. Lit. the crown which is eternal glory. In the NT world, crowns were given as marks of victorious achievements (cf. 1 Cor. 9:24, 25). Believers are promised crowns of glory, life (James 1:12), righteousness (2 Tim. 4:8), and rejoicing (1 Thess. 2:19), and all are imperishable (1 Cor. 9:25). All the crowns describe certain characteristics of eternal life. See note on 1 Thessalonians 2:19. that does not fade away. The Greek word for “not fade away” is the name of a flower, the amaranth.

D. The Realization of Christian Victory (5:5–11)

5:5 submit yourselves. See 2:18–3:9. elders. The elders are the pastors, the spiritual leaders of the church (cf. v. 1; notes on 1 Tim. 3:1–7; Titus 1:5–9). The church members, especially the young people, are to give honor, deference, and respect to spiritual leadership. Submission is a fundamental attitude of spiritual maturity (cf. 1 Cor. 16:15; 1 Thess. 5:12–14; Titus 3:1, 2; Heb. 13:7, 17). Lack of submission to the elders not only makes the ministry difficult, but also forfeits God's grace, as noted in the quote from Proverbs 3:34 (see note on James 4:6). be clothed with humility. To “be clothed” literally means to tie something on oneself with a knot or a bow. This term was often used of a slave putting on an apron over his clothes in order to keep his clothes clean. Humility is literally “lowly mindedness,” an attitude that one is not too good to serve. Humility was not considered a virtue in the ancient world, any more than it is today (cf. John 13:3–17; Phil. 2:3, 4; see Prov. 6:16–17; 8:13; Is. 57:15).

5:6 under the mighty hand of God. This is an OT symbol of the power of God working in the experience of people, always accomplishing His sovereign purpose (cf. Ex. 3:19, 20; Job 30:20, 21; Ezek. 20:33, 37; Mic.

6:8). The readers of Peter's letter were not to fight the sovereign hand of God, even when it brought them through testings. One of the evidences of lack of submission and humility is impatience with God in His work of humbling believers (see notes on 2 Cor. 12:7–10). exalt you in due time. Cf. Luke 14:11. God will lift up the suffering, submissive believers in His wisely appointed time. See notes on Job 42.

5:7 casting all your care upon Him. This verse partly quotes and partly interprets Psalm 55:22. Casting means "to throw something on something," as to throw a blanket on a donkey (Luke 19:35). Christians are to cast all of their discontent, discouragement, despair, and suffering on the Lord, and trust Him for knowing what He is doing with their lives (cf. 1 Sam. 1:10–18). Along with submission (v. 5) and humility (vv. 5, 6), trust in God is the third attitude necessary for victorious Christian living.

5:8 Be sober. See notes on 1:13 and 4:7. be vigilant. Strong confidence in God's sovereign care does not mean that the believer may live carelessly. The outside evil forces which come against the Christian demand that the Christian stay alert. your adversary. Greek for a legal opponent in a lawsuit. the devil . . . a roaring lion. The Greek word for devil means "slanderer"; thus a malicious enemy who maligns believers. He and his forces are always active, looking for opportunities to overwhelm the believer with temptation, persecution, and discouragement (cf. Pss. 22:13; 104:21; Ezek. 22:25). Satan sows discord, accuses God to men, men to God, and men to men. He will do what he can to drag the Christian out of fellowship with Christ and out of Christian service (cf. Job 1; Luke 22:3; John 13:27; 2 Cor. 4:3, 4; Rev. 12). And he constantly accuses believers before God's throne, attempting to convince God to abandon them (Job 1:6–12; Rev. 12:10).

5:9 Resist him, steadfast in the faith. Cf. James 4:7. Resist means "to stand up against." The way to resist the devil is not with special formulas, or words directed at him and his demons, but by remaining firm in the Christian faith. This means to continue to live in accord with the truth of God's Word (see notes on 2 Cor. 10:3–5). As the believer knows sound doctrine and obeys God's truth, Satan is withstood (cf. Eph. 6:17). the same sufferings. The whole brotherhood, the entire Christian community, is always going through similar trials brought on by the roaring lion who never stops trying to devour believers (cf. 1 Cor. 10:13).

5:10 who called us. As always in the NT epistles, an effectual, saving call. See notes on 1:5; 2:9, 21; 3:9. after you have suffered a while. Christians are to live with the understanding that God's purposes realized in the future require some pain in the present. While the believer is being personally attacked by the enemy, he is being personally perfected by the Lord, as the next phrase attests (cf. 1:6; also 2 Cor. 1:3–7). perfect, establish, strengthen, and settle. These four words speak of strength and resoluteness. God is working through the Christian's struggles to produce strength of character. In verses 5–14, Peter elucidated briefly, but in wonderful richness, those attitudes which are necessary for the believer to grow in Christ to effective maturity. These include submission (v. 5), humility (vv. 5, 6), trust (v. 7), sobermindedness (v. 8), vigilant defense (vv. 8, 9), hope (v. 10), worship (v. 11), faithfulness (v. 12), and affection (vv. 13, 14).

Conclusion (5:12–14)

5:12 Silvanus. This is the Silas who traveled with Paul and is often mentioned in his epistles. He was a prophet (Acts 15:32) and a Roman citizen (Acts 16:37); he was apparently the one who wrote down Peter's words and later took this letter to its intended recipients (cf. Introduction: Author and Date).

5:13 She who is in Babylon. This refers to a church in Rome (cf. Rev. 17, 18; Introduction: Background and Setting). Mark my son*. Mark, called John Mark, was the spiritual son of Peter. Tradition indicates that Peter helped him write the Gospel of Mark (cf. Acts 12:12). This is the same Mark who once failed Paul (Acts 13:13; 15:38, 39; Col. 4:10), but later became useful again for ministry (2 Tim. 4:11).

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PETER

Title

The clear claim to authorship in 1:1 by the apostle Peter gives the epistle its title. To distinguish it from Peter's first epistle, it was given the Greek title Petrou B, or 2 Peter.

Author and Date

The author of 2 Peter is the apostle Peter (see Introduction to 1 Peter). In 1:1, he makes that claim; in 3:1, he refers to his first letter; in 1:14, he refers to the Lord's prediction of his death (John 21:18, 19); and in 1:16–18, he claims to have been at the Transfiguration of Jesus (Matt. 17:1–4). However, critics have generated more controversy over 2 Peter's authorship and rightful place in the canon of Scripture than over any other NT book. The church fathers were slow in giving it their acceptance. No church father refers to 2 Peter by name until Origen near the beginning of the third century. The ancient church historian, Eusebius, only included 2 Peter in his list of disputed books, along with James, Jude, 2 John, and 3 John. Even the leading Reformers only hesitatingly accepted it.

The question about differences in Greek style between the two letters has been satisfactorily answered. Peter wrote that he used an amanuensis, Silvanus, in 1 Peter (cf. 1 Pet. 5:12). In 2 Peter, he either used a different amanuensis or wrote the letter by himself. The differences in vocabulary between the two letters can be explained by the differences in themes. First Peter was written to help suffering Christians. Second Peter was written to expose false teachers. On the other hand, there are remarkable similarities in the vocabulary of the two books. The salutation, "grace to you and peace be multiplied," is essentially the same in each book. The author uses such words as "precious," "virtue," "putting off," and "eyewitness," to name just a few examples, in both letters.

Certain rather unusual words found in 2 Peter are also found in Peter's speeches in the Book of Acts. These include "obtained" (1:2; Acts 1:17); "godliness" (1:3, 6, 7; 3:11; Acts 3:12); and "wages of iniquity" (2:13, 15; Acts 1:18). Both letters also refer to the same OT event (2:5; 1 Pet. 3:18–20). Some scholars have pointed out that there are as many similarities in vocabulary between 1 and 2 Peter as there are between 1 Timothy and Titus, two letters almost universally believed to have been written by Paul.

The differences in themes also explain certain emphases, such as why one letter teaches that the Second Coming is near, and one deals with its delay. First Peter, ministering especially to suffering Christians, focuses on the imminency of Christ as a means of encouraging the Christians. Second Peter, dealing with scoffers, emphasizes the reasons why that imminent return of Christ has not yet occurred. Other proposed differences invented by the critics, such as the contradiction between including the Resurrection of Christ in one letter and the Transfiguration of Christ in the other, seem to be contrived.

Moreover, it is seemingly irrational that a false teacher would spuriously write a letter against false teachers. No unusual, new, or false doctrines appear in 2 Peter. So if 2 Peter were a forgery, it would be a forgery written by a fool for no reason at all. This is too much to believe. The conclusion to the question of authorship is that, when the writer introduced the letter and referred to himself as Peter, he was writing the truth.

Nero died in A.D. 68, and tradition says that Peter died in Nero's persecution. The epistle may have been written just before his death (1:14; c. A.D. 67–68).

Background and Setting

Since the time of the writing and sending of his first letter, Peter had become increasingly concerned about false teachers who were infiltrating the churches in Asia Minor. Though these false teachers had already caused trouble, Peter expected that their heretical doctrines and immoral lifestyles would result in more damage in the future. Thus, Peter, in an almost last will and testament (1:13–15), wrote to warn the beloved believers in Christ about the doctrinal dangers they were facing.

Peter does not explicitly say where he was when he wrote this letter, as he does in 1 Peter (1 Pet. 5:13). But the consensus seems to be that Peter wrote this letter from prison in Rome, where he was facing imminent death. Shortly after this letter was written, Peter was martyred, according to reliable tradition, by being crucified upside down (see note on John 21:18, 19).

Peter says nothing in the salutation about the recipients of this letter. But according to 3:1, Peter was writing another epistle to the same people to whom he wrote 1 Peter. In his first letter, he spelled out that he was writing “To the pilgrims of the Dispersion in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia” (1 Pet. 1:1). These provinces were located in an area of Asia Minor, which is modern Turkey. The Christians to whom Peter wrote were mostly Gentiles (see note on 1:1).

Historical and Theological Themes

Second Peter was written for the purpose of exposing, thwarting, and defeating the invasion of false teachers into the church. Peter intended to instruct Christians in how to defend themselves against these false teachers and their deceptive lies. This book is the most graphic and penetrating exposé of false teachers in Scripture, comparable only to Jude.

The description of the false teachers is somewhat generic. Peter does not identify some specific false religion, cult, or system of teaching. In a general characterization of false teachers, he informs his readers that they teach destructive heresies. They deny Christ and twist the Scriptures. They bring true faith into disrepute. And they mock the Second Coming of Christ. But Peter was just as concerned to show the immoral character of these teachers as he was to expose their teaching. Thus, he describes them in more detail than he describes their doctrines. Wickedness is not the product of sound doctrine, but of “destructive heresies” (2:1).

Other themes for this letter can be discerned in the midst of Peter's polemic against the false teachers. He wanted to motivate his readers to continue to develop their Christian character (1:5–11). In so doing, he explains wonderfully how a believer can have assurance of his salvation. Peter also wanted to persuade his readers of the divine character of the apostolic writings (1:12–21). Near the end of the letter, he presents reasons for the delay in Christ's Second Coming (3:1–13).

Another recurring theme is the importance of knowledge. The word knowledge appears in some form sixteen times in these three short chapters. It is not too much to say that Peter's primary solution to false teaching is knowledge of true doctrine. Other distinctive features of 2 Peter include a precise statement on the divine origin of Scripture (1:20, 21); the future destruction of the world by fire (3:8–13); and the recognition of Paul's letters as inspired Scripture (3:15, 16).

Interpretive Challenges

Perhaps the most important challenge in the epistle is to rightly interpret 1:19–21, because of its far-reaching implications with regard to the nature and authenticity of Scripture. That passage, along with 2 Timothy 3:15–17, is vital to a sound view of the Bible's inspiration. Peter's remark that the Lord "bought" false teachers (2:1) poses a challenge interpretively and theologically with regard to the nature of the Atonement. The identity of the angels who sinned (2:4) also challenges the interpreter. Many who believe that the saved can be lost again use 2:18–22 for their argument. That passage, directed at false teachers, must be clarified so as not to contradict a similar statement to believers in 1:4. Further, whom does God not want to perish (3:9)? All of these matters will be treated in the notes.

Outline

A. Certified by Apostolic Witness (1:12–18)

B. Inspired by the Holy Spirit (1:19–21)

III. Know Your Adversaries (2:1–22)

A. Deceptive in Their Infiltration (2:1–3)

B. Doomed by Their Iniquity (2:4–10)

C. Disdainful in Their Impurity (2:11–17)

D. Devastating in Their Impact (2:18–22)

IV. Know Your Prophecy (3:1–18)

A. The Sureness of the Day of the Lord (3:1–10)

B. The Sanctification of God's People (3:11–18)

SALUTATION (1:1, 2)

1:1 Simon Peter. See Introduction. a bondservant and apostle*. Peter identifies himself with a balance of humility and dignity. As a servant, he was on an equal basis with other Christians—an obedient slave of Christ. As an apostle, he was unique, divinely called, and commissioned as an eyewitness to the Resurrection of Christ (see notes on Rom. 1:1). To those*. The recipients of this letter are the same as those who received Peter's first letter (cf. 3:1; 1 Pet. 1:1; see Introductions to 1, 2 Peter). obtained*. An uncommon word often referring to obtaining something by lot (cf. Acts 1:17). It is often translated "received," and can mean "attaining by divine will." Here, Peter was emphasizing that salvation was not attained by personal effort, skill, or worthiness, but came purely from God's grace. like precious*. Generally the Greek word which is translated "like precious" was used to designate equal in rank, position, honor, standing, price, or value. It was used in the ancient world with strangers and foreigners who were given equal citizenship in a city. Here, Peter was emphasizing that Christians have all received the same precious, priceless saving faith. There are no first- and second-class Christians in spiritual, racial, or gender distinctions (cf. Gal. 3:28). Since Peter was writing to mostly Gentiles, he may have been emphasizing that they have received the same faith as the Jews (cf. Acts 10:44–48; 11:17, 18). faith*. Peter is speaking of a subjective faith, i.e., the Christian's power to believe for his salvation. Faith is the capacity to believe (Eph. 2:8, 9). Even though faith and belief express the human side of salvation, God still must grant that faith. God initiates faith when the Holy Spirit awakens the dead soul in response to hearing the Word of God (cf. Acts 11:21; Eph. 2:8; Phil. 1:2). by the righ- teousness*. Peter's point is that believers share the equal gift of salvation because God's righteousness is imputed to them. That righteousness recognizes no distinction between people, except that the sins of some are more heinous than others. So not only do they have faith because God gives it to them; they are saved only because God imputes righteousness to them (see notes on Rom. 3:26; 4:5; 2 Cor. 5:21; Phil. 3:8, 9). our God and Savior Jesus Christ*. The Greek construction has only one article before this phrase, making the entire phrase refer to the same person. Thus, Peter is identifying Jesus Christ as both Savior and God (cf. Is. 43:3, 11; 45:15, 21; 60:16; Rom. 9:5; Col. 2:9; Titus 2:13; Heb. 1:8).

1:2 knowledge. This is a strengthened form of "knowledge" implying a larger, more thorough, and intimate knowledge. The Christian's precious faith is built on knowing the truth about God (cf. v. 3). Christianity is not a mystical religion, but is based on objective, historical, revealed, rational truth from God and intended to be understood and believed. The deeper and wider that knowledge of the Lord, the more "grace and peace" are multiplied.

I. KNOW YOUR SALVATION (1:3–11)

A. Sustained by God's Power (1:3, 4)

1:3 His divine power. His refers to Jesus Christ. Christ's power is the source of the believer's sufficiency and perseverance (cf. Matt. 24:30; Mark 5:30; Luke 4:14; 5:17; Rom. 1:4; 2 Cor. 12:9). all things that pertain to life*. The genuine Christian is eternally secure in his salvation and will persevere and grow because he has received everything necessary to sustain eternal life through Christ's power. godliness*. To be godly is to live reverently, loyally, and obediently toward God. Peter means that the genuine believer ought not to ask God for something more (as if something necessary to sustain his growth, strength, and perseverance was missing) to become godly, because he already has every spiritual resource to manifest, sustain, and perfect godly living. knowledge of Him. Knowledge is a key word in 2 Peter (vv. 2, 5, 6, 8; 2:20; 3:18). Throughout Scripture, it implies an intimate knowledge (Amos 3:2), and is even used for sexual intercourse (Gen. 4:1). The knowledge of Christ emphasized here is not a superficial knowledge, or a mere surface awareness of the facts about Christ, but a genuine, personal sharing of life with Christ, based on repentance from sin and personal faith in Him (cf. Matt. 7:21). called us by glory and virtue. This call, as always when mentioned in the NT epistles, is the effectual call to salvation (cf. 1 Pet. 1:15; 2:21; 5:10; see note on Rom. 8:30). This saving call is based on the sinner's understanding of Christ's revealed majesty and moral excellence evidencing that He is Lord and Savior. This implies that there must be a clear presentation of Christ's person and work as the God-Man in evangelism, which attracts people to salvation (cf. 1 Cor. 2:1, 2). The Cross and Resurrection most clearly reveal His glory and virtue.

1:4 exceedingly great and precious promises. That is, the promises of abundant and eternal life. partakers of the divine nature. This expression is not different from the concepts of being born again, born from above (cf. John 3:3; James 1:18; 1 Pet. 1:23), being in Christ (cf. Rom. 8:1), or being the human home of the Trinity (John 14:17–23). The precious promises of salvation result in becoming God's children in the present age (John 1:12; Rom. 8:9; Gal. 2:20; Col. 1:27), and thereby sharing in God's nature by the possession of His eternal life. Christians do not become little gods, but they are “new creations” (2 Cor. 5:17) and have the Holy Spirit living in them (1 Cor. 6:19, 20). Moreover, believers will partake of the divine nature in a greater way when they bear a glorified body like Jesus Christ (Phil. 3:20, 21; 1 John 3:1–3). escaped the corruption. The word corruption has the idea of something decomposing or decaying. Escaped depicts a successful flight from danger. At the time of salvation, the believer escapes from the power which the rottenness in the world has over him through his fallen, sinful nature.

B. Confirmed by Christian Graces (1:5–7)

1:5 for this very reason. Because of all the God-given blessings in verses 3 and 4, the believer cannot be indifferent or self-satisfied. Such an abundance of divine grace calls for total dedication. giving all diligence. That is, making maximum effort. The Christian life is not lived to the honor of God without effort. Even though God has poured His divine power into the believer, the Christian himself is required to make every disciplined effort alongside of what God has done (cf. Phil. 2:12, 13; Col. 1:28, 29). add to your faith. Add is to give lavishly and generously. In Greek culture, the word was used for a choirmaster who was responsible for supplying everything that was needed for his choir. The word never meant to equip sparingly, but to supply lavishly for a noble performance. God has given us faith and all the graces necessary for godliness (vv. 3, 4). We add to those by our diligent devotion to personal righteousness. virtue. First in Peter's list of moral excellencies is a word that, in classical Greek, meant the God-given ability to perform heroic deeds. It also came to mean that quality of life which made someone stand out as excellent. It never meant cloistered virtue, or virtue of attitude, but virtue which is demonstrated in life. Peter is here writing of moral energy, i.e., the power that performs deeds of excellence. knowl- edge. This means understanding, correct insight, and truth properly comprehended and applied. This virtue involves a diligent study and pursuit of truth in the Word of God.

1:6 self-control. Lit. “holding oneself in.” In Peter’s day, self-control was used of athletes who were to be self-restrained and self-disciplined. Thus, a Christian is to control the flesh, the passions, and the bodily desires, rather than allowing himself to be controlled by them (cf. 1 Cor. 9:27; Gal. 5:23). Virtue, guided by knowledge, disciplines desire and makes it the servant, not the master, of one’s life. perseverance. That is patience or endurance in doing what is right, never giving in to temptation or trial. Perseverance is spiritual staying power that will die before it gives in. It is the virtue which can endure, not simply with resignation, but with a vibrant hope. godliness. See note on verse 3.

C. Honored by Abundant Reward (1:8–11)

1:8 neither barren. To be barren is to be inactive, indolent, and useless (cf. Titus 1:12; James 2:20–22). With these virtues increasing in one’s life (vv. 5–7), a Christian will not be useless or ineffective. nor unfruitful. I.e., unproductive (cf. Matt. 13:22; Eph. 5:11; 2 Thess. 3:14; Jude 12). When these Christian qualities are not present in a believer’s life (vv. 5–7), he will be indistinguishable from an evildoer or a superficial believer. But when these qualities are increasing in a Christian’s life, there is the manifestation of “the divine nature” within the believer (see note on v. 4).

1:9 these things. The qualities mentioned in verses 5–7 (see v. 10). shortsighted, even to blindness. A professing Christian who is missing the virtues mentioned above is, therefore, unable to discern his true spiritual condition, and thus can have no assurance of his salvation. forgotten. The failure to diligently pursue spiritual virtues produces spiritual amnesia. Such a person, unable to discern his spiritual condition, will have no confidence about his profession of faith. He may be saved and possess all the blessings of verses 3 and 4, but without the excellencies of verses 5–7, he will live in doubt and fear.

1:10 make your call and election sure. This expresses the bull’s-eye Peter has been shooting at in verses 5–9. Though God is “sure” who His elect are and has given them an eternally secure salvation (see notes on 1 Pet. 1:1–5; cf. Rom. 8:31–39), the Christian might not always have assurance of his salvation. Security is the Holy Spirit-revealed fact that salvation is forever. Assurance is one’s confidence that he possesses that eternal salvation. In other words, the believer who pursues the spiritual qualities mentioned above guarantees to himself, by spiritual fruit, that he was called (cf. v. 3; Rom. 8:30; 1 Pet. 2:21) and chosen (cf. 1 Pet. 1:2) by God to salvation. never stumble. As the Christian pursues the qualities enumerated by Peter (vv. 5–7) and sees that his life is useful and fruitful (v. 8), he will not stumble into doubt, despair, fear, or questioning, but enjoy assurance that he is saved.

1:11 abundantly into the everlasting kingdom. Peter piles up the words to bring joy to the weary Christian’s heart. An abundant entrance into eternal heaven is the hope and reality for a Christian who lives a faithful, fruitful life here on earth. Peter’s point is that a Christian who pursues the listed virtues (vv. 5–7) will not only enjoy assurance in the present, but a full, rich reward in the future life (cf. 1 Cor. 4:5; Rev. 22:12).

II. KNOW YOUR SCRIPTURES (1:12–21)

A. Certified by Apostolic Witness

1:12, 13 this reason. Truth always needs repetition because believers forget so easily. Cf. 2 Thessalonians 2:5; Jude 5.

1:13, 14 tent. Death is described aptly as laying aside one's tent (cf. 2 Cor. 5:1). Peter was likely in his seventies as he wrote this letter (likely from a Roman prison) and anticipated dying soon. Nero's persecution had begun and he was martyred in it soon after writing this epistle. Tradition says he was crucified upside down, refusing to be crucified like his Lord.

1:14 Christ showed me. Christ had prophesied the death Peter would die almost forty years earlier (see note on John 21:18, 19).

1:15 after my decease. Peter wanted to make certain that after he died, God's people would have a permanent reminder of the truth; thus he penned this inspired letter.

1:16 cunningly devised fables. The word for fables was used to refer to mythical stories about gods and miracles (cf. 1 Tim. 1:4; 4:7; 2 Tim. 4:4; Titus 1:14). Realizing that false leaders and their followers would try to discredit this letter, and that he was probably already being accused of concocting fables and myths in order to get people to follow him so he could amass wealth, power, and prestige as false teachers were motivated to do, Peter gave evidences in the following verses to prove that he wrote the truth of God as a genuinely inspired writer. made known*. This word is a somewhat technical term for imparting a new revelation—something previously hidden, but now revealed. the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ*. Since there is only one definite article with this phrase, the meaning is, “the powerful coming,” or “the coming in power.” The false teachers who were opposing Peter had tried to debunk the doctrine of the Second Coming of Christ (see 3:3, 4), about which Peter had spoken and written (1 Pet. 1:3–7, 13; 4:13). eyewitnesses of His majesty*. The “we” that begins this verse refers to the apostles. In one sense, all of the apostles had been eyewitnesses to Christ's majesty, especially His miracles, resurrection body, and Ascension into heaven. Peter, however, is referring to a more specific event which he will describe in the next verse. The kingdom splendor of Christ revealed at this event was intended as a preview of His majesty to be ultimately manifested at His Second Coming (cf. Matt. 16:28; see notes on Matt. 17:1–6). The Transfiguration of Jesus was a glimpse of the glory to be unveiled at the final revelation, the Apocalypse of Christ (Rev. 1:1). It must be noted that Jesus' earthly ministry of healing, teaching, and gathering souls into His kingdom was a preview of the character of the earthly kingdom He will establish at His return.

1:17 Excellent Glory. A reference to the glory cloud on the Mount of Transfiguration from which God spoke to the disciples (Matt. 17:5). This is My beloved Son*. This means, “This One is in essence with Me.” The Father is thus affirming the deity of Christ (cf. Matt. 17:5; Luke 9:27–36).

1:18 when we were with Him. Peter implied that there was no reason to believe the false teachers who denied the majesty and Second Coming of Christ, since they were not on the Mount of Transfiguration to see the preview of the kingdom and glory of Christ, as were he, James, and John.

B. Inspired by the Holy Spirit (1:19–21)

1:19 the prophetic word. The prophetic word refers not just to the OT major and minor prophets, but to the entire OT. Of course, all of the OT was written by “prophets” in the truest sense, since they spoke and wrote God’s Word, which was the task of a prophet; and they looked forward, in some sense, to the coming Messiah (cf. Luke 24:27). confirmed. This translation could indicate that the eyewitness account of Christ’s majesty at the Transfiguration confirmed the Scriptures. However, the Greek word order is crucial in that it does not say that. It says, “And we have more sure the prophetic word.” That original arrangement of the sentence supports the interpretation that Peter is ranking Scripture over experience. The prophetic word (Scripture) is more complete, more permanent, and more authoritative than the experience of anyone. More specifically, the Word of God is a more reliable verification of the teachings about the person, atonement, and Second Coming of Christ than even the genuine firsthand experiences of the apostles themselves. you do well to heed. Peter was warning believers that since they would be exposed to false teachers, they must pay careful attention to Scripture. a light that shines in a dark place. The murky darkness of this fallen world keeps people from seeing the truth until the light shines. The light is the lamp of revelation, the Word of God (cf. Ps. 119:105; John 17:17). the day dawns and the morning star rises. These simultaneous images mark the parousia, i.e., the appearing of Jesus Christ (cf. Luke 1:78; Rev. 2:28; 22:16). the morning star rises in your hearts. The Second Coming will have not only an externally transforming impact on the universe (3:7–13), but also an internally transforming impact on those believers who are alive when Jesus returns, forever removing any of their remaining doubts. The perfect, but limited, revelation of the Scriptures will be replaced with the perfect and complete revelation of Jesus Christ at the Second Coming (cf. John 14:7–11; 21:25). Then, the Scriptures will have been fulfilled; and believers, made like Christ (1 John 3:1, 2), will have perfect knowledge and all prophecy will be abolished (see note on 1 Cor. 13:8–10).

Key Words

Knowledge: Greek gnōsis—1:5-6; 3:18—lit. “knowledge.” This Greek word expresses a knowledge that grows and progresses. As Christians, we need to grow in our personal knowledge of Jesus Christ. The greatest protection against false teachings comes from a solid foundation in the Word of God. Peter’s epistle encourages believers to attain a fuller, more thorough knowledge of their Lord Jesus Christ (1:8; 2:20; 3:18). Morning Star: Greek phōsphoros—1:19—lit. “light-bearer” or “light-bringer.” In 2 Peter, Christ is called the “morning star.” He is also called the “Bright and Morning Star” in Revelation 22:16, and the “Dayspring” in Luke 1:78. Christians today have the light of Christ within their hearts. When Jesus returns to earth, He will bring all believers into a perfect day. His outward coming will bring light to all people. On this day, the spirits of the godly will take on “an illuminating transformation” as the light of Christ fills them.

1:20 knowing this first. A call to recognize God’s truth as priority, namely that Scripture is not of human origin. prophecy of Scripture. I.e., all of Scripture. This refers primarily to all of the OT, and then by implication to all of the NT (see notes on 3:15, 16). private interpretation. The Greek word for interpretation has the idea of a “loosing,” as if to say no Scripture is the result of any human privately, “untying” and “loosing” the truth. Peter’s point is not so much about how to interpret Scripture, but rather how Scripture originated, and what its source was. The false prophets untied and loosed their own ideas. But no part of God's revelation was unveiled or revealed from a human source or out of the prophet's unaided understanding (see v. 21).

1:21 by the will of man. As Scripture is not of human origin, neither is it the result of human will. The emphasis in the phrase is that no part of Scripture was ever at any time produced because people wanted it so. The Bible is not the product of human effort. The prophets, in fact, sometimes wrote what they could not fully understand (1 Pet. 1:10, 11), but were nonetheless faithful to write what God revealed to them. moved by the Holy Spirit. Grammatically, this means that they were continually carried or borne along by the Spirit of God (cf. Luke 1:70; Acts 27:15, 17), who is the divine author and originator, the producer of the Scriptures. In the OT alone, the human writers refer to their writings as the words of God over 3,800 times (e.g., Jer. 1:4; cf. 3:2; Rom. 3:2; 1 Cor. 2:10). Though the human writers of Scripture were active rather than passive in the process of writing Scripture, God the Holy Spirit superintended them so that, using their own individual personalities, thought processes, and vocabulary, they composed and recorded without error the exact words God wanted written. The original copies of Scripture are therefore inspired, i.e., God-breathed (cf. 2 Tim. 3:16) and inerrant, i.e., without error (John 10:34, 35; 17:17; Titus 1:2). Peter defined the process of inspiration which created an inerrant, original text (cf. Prov. 30:5; 1 Cor. 14:36; 1 Thess. 2:13).

III. KNOW YOUR ADVERSARIES (2:1–22)

A. Deceptive in Their Infiltration (2:1–3)

2:1 false prophets. Peter described false teachers in detail in this chapter so that Christians would always recognize their characteristics and methods. The greatest sin of Christ-rejecters and the most damning work of Satan is misrepresentation of the truth and its consequent deception. Nothing is more wicked than for someone to claim to speak for God to the salvation of souls when, in reality, he speaks for Satan to the damnation of souls (cf. Deut. 13:1–18; 18:20; Jer. 23; Ezek. 13; Matt. 7:15; 23:1–36; 24:4, 5; Rom. 16:17; 2 Cor. 11:13, 14; Gal. 3:1, 2; 2 Tim. 4:3, 4). among the people. The people is used in the NT of Israel (cf. Acts 26:17, 23). Peter's point, though, is that Satan has always endeavored to infiltrate groups of believers with the deceptions of false teachers (cf. John 8:44). Since Eve, he has been in the deception business (see notes on 2 Cor. 11:3, 4). secretly bring in destructive heresies. The false teachers parade themselves as Christian pastors, teachers, and evangelists (cf. Jude 4). Heresies means self-designed religious lies which lead to division and faction (cf. 1 Cor. 11:19; Gal. 5:20). The Greek word for destructive basically means damnation. This word is used six times in this letter and always speaks of final damnation (vv. 1–3; 3:7, 16). This is why it is so tragic when a church makes a virtue out of the toleration of unscriptural teachings and ideas in the name of love and unity (see 2 Thess. 3:14; 1 Tim. 4:1–5; Titus 3:9–11). denying the Lord. This phrase exposes the depth of the crime and guilt of the false teachers. This unusual Greek word for Lord appears ten times in the NT and means one who has supreme authority, whether human authority or divine authority. Peter, here, warns that false prophets deny the sovereign lordship of Jesus Christ. Though their heresies may include the denial of the Virgin Birth, deity, bodily resurrection, and Second Coming of Christ, the false teachers' basic error is that they will not submit their lives to the rule of Christ. All false religions have an erroneous Christology. who bought them. The terms which Peter used here are more analogical than theological, speaking of a human master over a household. The master bought slaves, and the slaves owed the master allegiance as their sovereign. (For an OT parallel, see Deuteronomy 32:5, 6, where God is said to have bought Israel, though they rejected Him.). Doctrinally, this analogy can be viewed as responsibility for submission to God which the false teachers had refused. Beyond this, they are probably claiming that they were Christians, so that the Lord had bought them actually and personally. With some sarcasm, Peter mocks such a claim by writing of their coming damnation. Thus, the passage is describing the sinister character of the false teachers who claim Christ, but deny His lordship over their lives. swift destruction. This refers to either physical death or judgment at the return of Christ (Prov. 29:1; 2 Thess. 1:7–10).

2:2 many will follow their destructive ways. Many people will profess to be Christians but deny Christ's lordship over their lives, refusing to live as obedient servants to Christ and His Word, following instead the lusts of the flesh, the world, and the devil. Such nominal Christians will be included in the Lord's condemnation of hypocrites at the judgment (Matt. 7:21–23; cf. Jude 4, 7). Denying the lordship of Christ while claiming to be a believer destructively infects other people and discredits the gospel. the way of truth will be blasphemed. The world mocks and scoffs at the gospel of Jesus Christ because of nominal Christians who do not follow the Lord they claim; as such, they have been unmasked as hypocritical people.

2:3 By covetousness. That is, uncontrolled greed. Peter observed that the underlying motive of the false teachers was not love of the truth, but love of money (see v. 14). They exploited people through their lies. their judgment has not been idle. The principle that God will damn false teachers was set in place in eternity past, repeated throughout the OT, and "has not been idle" in the sense that it has not worn out or become ineffective. It is still potent and will come to pass (see Jude 4). their destruction does not slumber. Peter is personifying destruction as if destruction were an executioner who is fully awake and alert, ready to act. Because God is by nature a God of truth, He will judge all liars and deceivers (cf. Prov. 6:19; 19:5, 9; Is. 9:15; 28:15, 22; Jer. 9:3, 5; 14:14; 23:25, 26; Rev. 21:8, 27).

B. Doomed by Their Iniquity (2:4–10)

2:4 if. This is better translated "since" because there is no doubt about the history of judgment which Peter is about to recount. Verses 4–10 are one long sentence, with the conclusion to the "since" clause beginning in verse 9. Lest anyone think that God is too loving and merciful to judge the wicked false teachers and their deceived people, Peter gives three powerful illustrations of past divine judgment on the wicked. These illustrations set the precedents for the future and final judgment on liars and deceivers. Though God has no pleasure in the death of the wicked (Ezek. 33:11), He must judge wickedness because His holiness requires it (2 Thess. 1:7–9). the angels who sinned. These angels, according to Jude 6, "did not keep their proper domain," i.e., they entered men who promiscuously cohabited with women. Apparently, this is a reference to the fallen angels of Genesis 6 (sons of God): (1) before the Flood (v. 5; Gen. 6:1–3) who left their normal state and lusted after women, and (2) before the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah (v. 6; Gen. 19). See notes on Genesis 6:1, 2; Jude 6. cast them down to hell. Peter borrows a word from Greek mythology for hell, tartarus. The Greeks taught that tartarus was a place lower than Hades reserved for the most wicked of human beings, gods, and demons. The Jews eventually came to use this term to describe the place where fallen angels were sent. It defined for them the lowest hell, the deepest pit, and the most terrible place of torture and eternal suffering. Jesus, in spirit, entered that place when His body was in the grave, and proclaimed triumph over the demons during the time between His death and resurrection (see notes on Col. 2:14; 1 Pet. 3:18, 19). chains of darkness. The demons feared going there and begged Jesus during His life on earth not to send them there (cf. Matt. 8:29; Luke 8:31). Not all demons are bound. Many roam the heavens and earth (cf. Rev. 12:7–9). Some are temporarily bound (see notes on Rev. 9:1–12). These were, because of their sin in Genesis 6, permanently bound in darkness. reserved for judgment. These permanently bound demons are like prisoners who are incarcerated awaiting final sentencing. Tartarus is only temporary in the sense that, in the Day of Judgment, the wicked angels confined there will be ultimately cast into the lake of fire (Rev. 20:10).

2:5 did not spare the ancient world. The second illustration serving as precedent for God's future judgment on false teachers is the judgment on the ancient world through the worldwide Flood (cf. Gen. 6–8). The human race was reduced to eight people by that judgment (cf. 1 Pet. 3:20). a preacher of righteousness. See Genesis 6:9; 7:1. His life spoke of righteousness as he called people to repent and avoid the flood judgment.

2:6 Sodom and Gomorrah. The third precedent for a future divine judgment on the wicked is the total destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah and the surrounding cities (cf. Gen. 13; 18:16–33; 19:1–38; Deut. 29:23). This judgment destroyed every person in the area by incineration. See notes on Jude 7.

making them an example. That is, a model or a pattern. God sent an unmistakable message to all future generations that wickedness results in judgment.

2:7, 8 delivered righteous Lot. He was righteous, as all the saved are, by faith in the true God. Righteousness was imputed to him by grace through faith, as it was to Abraham (Gen. 15:6; Rom. 4:3, 11, 22, 23). There was spiritual weakness in Lot (Gen. 19:6), e.g., immorality (Gen. 19:8) and drunkenness (Gen. 19:33–35). His heart was in Sodom (Gen. 19:16), yet he did hate the sins of his culture and sought ways to protect God's angels from harm. He obeyed the Lord in not looking back at Sodom (Gen. 19). In both of the illustrations where God rendered a wholesale judgment on all living people (once on the whole earth, and once in the whole region of the plain south of the Dead Sea), Peter pointed out that God's people were rescued (v. 5; cf. v. 9). The Greek word for "oppressed" implies that Lot was troubled deeply and tortured (the meaning of "tormented") with the immoral, outrageous behavior of the people living in and around Sodom and Gomorrah. Tragically, it is ordinary for believers to be no longer shocked by the rampant sin in today's society.

2:9 to deliver the godly out of temptations. The Greek word for temptations can mean "an attack with intent to destroy" (cf. Mark 8:11; Luke 4:12; 22:28; Acts 20:29; Rev. 3:10) and refers to severe divine judgment. The pattern of the plan of God is to rescue the godly before His judgment falls on the wicked. to reserve the unjust. The wicked are kept like prisoners awaiting the sentencing that will send them to their eternal prison (cf. v. 4). The final judgment on the wicked is called the Great White Throne judgment (Rev. 20:11–15) where all the ungodly of all the ages will be raised, judged finally, and cast into the lake of fire.

2:10 walk according to the flesh. Cf. Jude 6. Like the wicked of Noah's and Lot's time, the false teachers of Peter's era were slaves to the corrupt desires of the flesh. despise authority. Authority comes from the same Greek word as lord (1:2). The false teachers identified with Christ outwardly, but they would not live under His lordship. The two major characteristics of false teachers are emphasized in this verse: (1) lust and (2) arrogance. presumptuous, self-willed. Presumptuous is to be brazen, audacious, and defiant. Self-willed is to be obstinate and determined in one's own way. speak evil of dignitaries. Cf. Jude 8. To speak evil is to ridicule and blaspheme. Dignitaries refers to angels, probably wicked angels. Wicked angels have a level of existence in the supernatural world that has a dignity and a transcendent quality about it that is beyond humanity (Eph. 6:12). A certain honor belongs to those who transcend time. Consequently, there must be no flippancy regarding Satan and his angels. It may even be that these teachers tried to excuse their wicked lusts by pointing to the angels in Genesis 6 "who did not keep their proper domain" (Jude 6). The blasphemy of even bad angels by the false teachers demonstrated their arrogance and antipathy toward any authority, be it good or bad.

C. Disdainful in Their Impurity (2:11–17)

2:11 angels, who are greater in power. A reference to the holy angels, who are greater in power than human beings. do not bring a reviling accusation. Unlike false teachers who are defiant toward higher powers, the holy angels so revere their Lord that they will not speak insults against any authority. Even the archangel, Michael, recognizing the great presence and power of Satan, refused to speak evil of him (see notes on Jude 8, 9), but called on the Lord to do so (see note on Zech.

3:2). No believer should be so boldly foolish as to mock or command the power of supernatural demons, especially Satan.

2:12 like natural brute beasts. Cf. Jude 10. The false teachers have no sensitivity to the power and presence of demons or holy angels, but like wild animals, insubordinate, insolent, and arrogant, they charge into the supernatural realm, cursing away at persons and matters they don't understand. utterly perish. Since they live like beasts who are "made to be caught and destroyed," the false teachers will be killed like beasts. False teachers cannot get beyond their own instincts and, thus, will be destroyed by the folly of those passions.

2:13 the wages of unrighteousness. Immorality and arrogant boldness will not pay. It will rob and destroy. carouse in the daytime. Sinning during the day, without the cover of darkness, was a sign of low-level wickedness in Roman society (cf. 1 Thess. 5:7). But these false teachers are so consumed with lust and rebellion that they are pleased not to wait for the night. Their unbridled passions consume them. spots and blemishes. Cf. Jude 10. That is, dirt spots and scabs. They are opposite to the character of Christ (1 Pet. 1:19). The church should be like her Lord (Eph. 5:27). carousing . . . while they feast with you. The false teachers, feigning to be teachers of truth while sitting with Christians at church love feasts, were behaving arrogantly and immorally, even on such occasions intended for Christian fellowship. Though attempting to cover their corruption with religious talk, they were filthy defects on these church gatherings (cf. 2 John 9–11; Jude 12).

2:14 eyes full of adultery. The false teachers had so totally lost moral control that they could not look at any woman without seeing her as a potential adulteress (cf. Matt. 5:28). They were uncontrollably driven by lust, never resting from their sins. enticing unstable souls. The metaphor is from fishing and appears also in verse 18. To beguile is to catch with bait. False teachers do not capture those strong in the Word, but prey on the weak, the unstable, and the young in the faith (see 3:16; cf. Eph. 4:14; 1 John 2:13). heart trained in covetous practices. The word trained was often used for training in athletics. The false teachers have trained, prepared, and equipped their minds to concentrate on nothing but the forbidden things for which their passions lusted. They were well schooled in the craft of self-fulfillment. accursed children. This is a Hebraism for the curse of sin being the dominant thing in their lives, thus saying that they are damned to hell for their blatant wickedness. Cf. Galatians 3:10, 13; Ephesians 2:1–3; 1 Peter 1:14.

2:15 forsaken the right way. The right way is an OT metaphor for obedience to God (cf. Acts 13:10). Balaam. Cf. Jude 11. Balaam served as an illustration and example of such false prophets. He was an OT compromising prophet for sale to whomever paid him. He preferred wealth and popularity over faithfulness and obedience to God (Num. 22–24). Through a talking donkey, God kept him from cursing Israel (v. 16; cf. Num 22:21–35).

2:17 wells without water. In this verse, Peter uses two poetic figures (“wells” and “clouds”) which represent a precious commodity in the Middle East. A well without water would be a major disappointment in a hot and dry land. Likewise, false teachers have a pretense of spiritual water to quench the thirsty soul, but they actually have nothing to give. clouds carried by a tempest. The coming of clouds would seem to promise rain, but sometimes the storm would blow the clouds by, leaving the land dry and hot. The false teachers might seem to promise spiritual refreshment, but were all show with

Marks of a False Prophet

1. Teach destructive heresies (2:1)
2. Deny Christ (2:1)
3. Blasphemers (2:2)
4. Twist Scripture (2:2, 3)
5. Covetous (2:3, 14)
6. Self-willed (2:10)
7. Immoral (2:10, 14)
8. Wicked (2:12, 14)
9. Bring true faith into disrepute (2:15)
10. Mock Christ's Second Coming (3:4)

no substance (cf. Jude 12). the blackness of darkness. That is, hell (cf. Matt. 8:12; Jude 13.)

D. Devastating in Their Impact (2:18–22)

2:18 great swelling words of emptiness. Cf. Jude 16. That is, ostentatious verbosity. The false teachers deceive the weak with high-sounding words that masquerade as scholarship or profound spiritual insight, and even as direct revelation from God. They may contradict the plain historic teachings of Scripture which, in some cases, they are not able to explain properly because of their lack of adequate training and divine wisdom (cf. 1 Cor. 2:14). In reality, they say nothing genuinely scholarly, spiritual, or divine. allure through . . . lewdness. Nevertheless, in spite of all the empty talk, false teachers entice others to their philosophies by appealing to people on the baser level. Seduction, rather than the winsomeness of truth, is their ploy. They offer people a kind of religion that they can embrace and still hold on to their fleshly desires and sensuality. Peter may also be implying that false teachers particularly aim to seduce women through sensual methods. actually escaped . . . error. The preferred translation is “barely escaping” or “trying to escape.” This is a description not of saved people, but of people who are vulnerable because they have high levels of guilt and anxieties—people with broken marriages, people who are lonely and tired of the consequences of sin and are looking for a new start, even for religion or help from God. The false teachers exploit these kinds of people.

2:19 promise them liberty. False teachers promise those “trying to escape” the struggles of life, the very freedom they seek. slaves of corruption. The false teachers can’t deliver the freedom they promise because they themselves are enslaved to the very corruption which people are trying to escape. overcome . . . bondage. Whoever puts himself, in the name of freedom, into the hands of a false teacher, who is a prisoner himself, also becomes a prisoner. Bondage to corruption awaits all followers of false teachers.

2:20 escaped the pollutions of the world. Pollutions has the idea of putrid or poisonous vapors. Morally, the world gives off a deadly influence. Peter notes that at some point in time, these false teachers and their followers wanted to escape the moral contamination of the world system and sought religion, even Jesus Christ (on their terms, not His; see notes on v. 1). But these false teachers had never genuinely been converted to Christ. They heard the true gospel and moved toward it, but then rejected the Christ of that gospel. That is apostasy, like the people of Hebrews 10:26, 27. Their last end is far worse than the first (for examples of apostasy, see Luke 11:24–26; 12:47, 48; 1 Cor. 10:1–12; Heb. 3:12–18; 6:6; 10:26, 38ff.; 1 John 2:19; Jude 4–6).

2:21 to turn from the holy commandment. Lit. “to turn back.” This verse describes the perversion and defection of the false teachers. They professed the Christian experience (the way of righteousness; cf. Matt. 21:32), and even had access to the true teachings of Scripture. But by their lives, they demonstrated that they ultimately had chosen to reject Christ (cf. Heb. 10:26–31). Such false teachers, as Peter was describing, were not made outside Christianity. They are always bred in the church, half in and half out; but eventually, they reject the truth and try to seduce others in their attempt to fulfill their self-gratification.

IV. KNOW YOUR PROPHECY (3:1–18)

A. The Certainty of the Day of the Lord (3:1–10)

3:1 Beloved. This attitude toward the readers of his letter reflects Peter’s pastoral concern (cf. 1 Pet. 5:1–4). this second epistle. That is, second to 1 Peter (see Introduction). your pure minds. A good commendation which demonstrates that Peter believed that his readers were genuine Christians. Pure means uncontaminated, unmixed with the seductive influences of the world, the flesh, and the devil. How different the true believers were from the corrupt, apostate false teachers (2:10–22). Peter sought to impress on his readers the truth they already knew, so that their sanctified reason and spiritual discernment would be able to detect and refute the purveyors of false doctrine.

3:2 holy prophets. The OT prophets are in view. They were holy in contrast to the unholy false teachers. God’s Word was written by those prophets in the Scriptures (see notes on 1:19–21). In particular, those prophets warned about coming judgment (e.g., Ps. 50:1–4; Is. 13:10–13; 24:19–23; Mic. 1:4; Mal. 4:1, 2), and even about the coming of the Lord (Zech. 14:1–9). the commandment of us. Peter is referring to the warnings which he and the other apostles had written regarding judgment (Jude 17). apostles of the Lord. The apostles (see notes on Rom. 1:1; Eph. 4:11) of Christ filled the 260 chapters of the NT with about 300 references to the Second Coming. NT revelation concerning (1) Christ coming to gather His own, (2) warnings about eschatological judgments, (3) information about the establishment of His kingdom, and (4) teaching about God’s bringing in eternal righteousness, comprise the irrefutable proof for the Second Coming of Christ and the judgment of the wicked.

3:3 knowing this first. First here means the preeminent matter, not the first in a list. Peter’s priority in this section of his letter is to warn Christians about how the false teachers would try to deny this judgment and steal the hope of believers. scoffers will come. False teachers argue against the Second Coming of Christ or any teaching of Scripture through ridicule (cf. Is. 5:19; Jude 18). in the last days. This phrase refers to that entire period of time from the arrival of the Messiah to His return (cf. Acts 2:17; Gal. 4:4; 2 Tim. 3:1; Heb. 1:2; James 5:3; 1 Pet. 1:20; 1 John 2:18, 19; Jude 18). The entire age will be marked by saboteurs of the Christian truth and, especially, the hope of Christ’s return. walking according to their own lusts. Walking speaks of the way of conduct, the course of lifestyle. Peter, again, speaks of the lifestyle of the false teachers, which was characterized by sexual lusts (cf. 2:2, 10, 13, 14, 18), driving home his warning. False teachers who do not know the truth and do not know God have nothing to restrain their lusts. They particularly mock the Second Coming of Jesus Christ, because they want to pursue impure sexual pleasure without consequence or without having to face divine retribution. They want an eschatology that fits their conduct (cf. 1 John 2:28, 29; 3:2, 3).

3:4 Where is the promise of His coming?

The early church believed that Jesus was coming back imminently (cf. 1 Cor. 15:51; 1 Thess. 1:10; 2:19; 4:15–18; 5:1, 2). These scoffers employed an emotional argument against imminency, rather than a biblical argument. Their argument played on ridicule and disappointment. the fathers. The OT patriarchs, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob (cf. Rom. 9:5; Heb. 1:1). all things continue as they were. This argument against the Second Coming of Christ is based on the theory of uniformitarianism, which says that all natural phenomena have operated uniformly since the beginning of the earth. The false teachers were also implying that God is absent from earth affairs. In effect, they were teaching that “there will not be a great cataclysmic, judgmental event at the end of history, because that is not how the universe works. There never has been such a judgment, so why should we expect one in the future? Instead, everything in the universe is stable, closed, fixed, and governed by never-varying patterns and principles of evolution. Nothing catastrophic has ever happened in the past, so nothing catastrophic ever will happen in the future. There will be no divine invasion, no supernatural judgment on mankind.”

3:5 they willfully forget. The false teachers, in their quest to avoid the doctrine of judgment, deliberately ignore the previous two major divine cataclysmic events—creation and the Flood. by the word of God the heavens were of old. Creation was God's stepping into the emptiness and bringing the universe into existence, not by uniformitarianism, but by an instantaneous, explosive six-day creation. Everything has not continued along in some consistent, unvarying evolutionary process. In six days of twenty-four hours, the whole universe was created mature and complete (see notes on Gen. 1; 2). earth standing out of water and in the water. The earth was formed between two realms of watery mass. During the early part of the creation week, God collected the upper waters into a canopy around the whole earth, and the lower waters into underground reservoirs, rivers, lakes, and seas. See notes on Genesis 1:2–10.

3:6 by which. That is, by water. God, by creating water above and below, built into His creation the tool of its destruction. the world that then existed. A reference to the pre-flood world order. This world included the physical arrangement with the canopy above, the waters in the underground reservoirs, rivers, lakes, and seas below, and the heavens in the middle. The pre-Flood world, sheltered from the sun's destructive ultraviolet rays, and with a gentle climate without rain, storms, and winds, was characterized by long life of humans (Gen. 5) and the ability of the earth (like a green house) to produce extensively. perished, being flooded with water. The second great divine cataclysm that refutes the idea of uniformitarianism was the universal Flood which drowned the whole earth and altered the world order. According to Genesis 7:11ff., the Flood occurred from two directions: first, the bursting open of the sources of water below as the earth cracked open and gas, dust, water, and air burst up; then, came the breakup of the overhead canopy when hit by all that upward flow, which sent the water from above crashing down on the earth. The deluge was so cataclysmic that the inhabitants of the earth were all destroyed, except eight people and a representation of every kind of animal (see notes on Gen. 7:11–24). Clearly, by those two great events, it is certain that the world is not in a uniformitarian process.

3:7 which are now. Humanity, since the Flood, lives in the second world order. One of the obvious differences between the two world orders is that people live about 70 years in the present world, not 900 years, which was a common age of pre-Flood human beings. And Peter was making the point that there is a third form of the heavens and earth yet to come following another cataclysm. are now preserved by the same word. The present world system is reserved for future judgment, which will come by the Word of God just as creation and the Flood came. God will speak it into existence as well, after the present order is again destroyed. reserved for fire. God put the rainbow in the sky to signify that He would never destroy the world again by water (Gen. 9:13). In the future, God will destroy the heavens and the earth by fire (cf. Is. 66:15; Dan. 7:9, 10; Mic. 1:4; Mal. 4:1; Matt. 3:11, 12; 2 Thess. 1:7, 8). In the present universe, the heavens are full of stars, comets, and asteroids. The core of the earth is also filled with a flaming, boiling, liquid lake of fire, the temperature of which is some 12,400 degrees Fahrenheit. The human race is separated from the fiery core of the earth by only a thin 10-mile crust. Far more than that, the whole of creation is a potential fire bomb due to its atomic structure. As man from atoms creates destructive bombs that burn a path of death, so God can disintegrate the whole universe in an explosion of atomic energy (see notes on vv. 10–12). until the day of judgment . . . of ungodly men. The earth waits for the day of judgment and destruction of ungodly people. The godly will not be present on earth when God speaks into existence the judgment by fire (cf. 1 Thess. 1:10; 5:9).

3:8 one day is as a thousand years. God understands time much differently than man. From man's viewpoint, Christ's coming seems like a long time away (cf. Ps. 90:4). From God's viewpoint, it will not be long. Beyond that general reference, this may be a specific indication of the fact that there are actually 1,000 years between the first phase of the Day of the Lord at the end of the Tribulation (Rev. 6:17), and the last phase 1,000 years later at the end of the millennial kingdom when the Lord creates the new heavens and new earth (see notes on vv. 10, 13; Rev. 20:1–21:1).

3:9 not slack. That is, not loitering or late (cf. Gal. 4:4; Titus 2:13; Heb. 6:18; 10:23, 37; Rev. 19:11). longsuffering toward us. Us is the saved, the people of God. He waits for them to be saved. God has an immense capacity for patience before He breaks forth in judgment (cf. v. 15; Joel 2:13; Luke 15:20; Rom. 9:22; 1 Pet. 3:15). God endures endless blasphemies against His name, along with rebellion, murders, and the ongoing breaking of His law, waiting patiently while He is calling and redeeming His own. It is not impotence or slackness that delays final judgment; it is patience. not willing that any should perish. The any must refer to those whom the Lord has chosen and will call to complete the redeemed, i.e., the us. Since the whole passage is about God's destroying the wicked, His patience is not so He can save all of them, but so He can receive all His own. He can't be waiting for everyone to be saved, since the emphasis is that He will destroy the world and the ungodly. Those who do perish and go to hell, go because they are depraved and worthy only of hell and have rejected the only remedy, Jesus Christ, not because they were created for hell and predetermined to go there. The path to damnation is the path of a non-repentant heart; it is the path of one who rejects the person and provision of Jesus Christ and holds on to sin (cf. Is. 55:1; Jer. 13:17; Ezek. 18:32; Matt. 11:28; 23:37; Luke 13:3; John 3:16; 8:21, 24; 1 Tim. 2:3, 4; Rev. 22:17). all should come to repentance. All (cf. us, any) must refer to all who are God's people who will come to Christ to make up the full number of the people of God. The reason for the delay in Christ's coming and the attendant judgments is not because He is slow to keep His promise, or because He wants to judge more of the wicked, or because He is impotent in the face of wickedness. He delays His coming because He is patient and desires the time for His people to repent.

3:10 The day of the Lord. See Introduction to Joel: Historical and Theological Themes; see note on 1 Thessalonians 5:2. "Day of the Lord" is a technical term pointing to the special interventions of God in human history for judgment. It ultimately refers to the future time of judgment whereby God judges the wicked on earth and ends this world system in its present form. The OT prophets saw the final Day of the Lord as unequaled darkness and damnation, a day when the Lord would act in a climactic way to vindicate His name, destroy His enemies, reveal His glory, establish His kingdom, and destroy the world (cf. Is. 2:10–21; 13:6–22; Joel 1, 2; Amos 5; Obad. 15; Zech. 14; Mal. 4;

2 Thess. 1:7; 2:2). It occurs at the time of the tribulation on earth (Rev. 6:17), and again 1,000 years later at the end of the millennial kingdom before the creation of the new heavens and new earth (v. 13; Rev. 20:1–21:1). as a thief in the night. The Day of the Lord will have a surprise arrival, sudden, unexpected, and disastrous to the unprepared (see notes on 1 Thess. 5:2). the heavens will pass away with a great noise. The heavens refer to the physical universe. The great noise connotes a whistling or a crackling sound as of objects being consumed by flames. God will incinerate the universe, probably in an atomic reaction that disintegrates all matter as we know it (vv. 7, 11, 12, 13). the elements will melt with fervent heat. The elements are the atomic components into which matter is ultimately divisible, which make up the composition of all the created matter. Peter means that the atoms, neutrons, protons, and electrons are all going to disintegrate (v. 11). the earth and the works. The whole of the physical, natural earth in its present form, with its entire universe will be consumed. Cf. Isaiah 24:19, 20; 34:4.

B. The Sanctification of God's People (3:11–18)

3:11 what manner of persons ought you to be. This is an exclamation rather than a question. It means, "How astoundingly excellent you ought to be!" This is a straightforward challenge for Christians to conform their lives to God's standards in light of the reality of coming judgment and eternity (cf. 1 Cor. 4:15; 2 Cor. 5:9). holy conduct and godliness. Holy conduct refers to the way a Christian should live life—separate from sin. Godliness refers to the spirit of reverence which should permeate a Christian's attitude—that which rules the heart.

3:12 looking for and hastening. One of the motives for holy conduct and godliness is expectation. Hastening means "eagerly desiring" that something will happen. Christians are not to fear the future day of God, but eagerly hope for it (cf. 1 Cor. 1:7; 16:22; 1 John 2:28; 3:3). the day of God. The "day of God" is not the same as the "Day of the Lord." The "day of God" refers to the eternal state, in preparation for which the heavens and the earth are burned up and the new creation is made. It is likely so named because of what Paul had in mind in 1 Corinthians 15:28, the eternal glory of the new creation, with God being all in all. When the day of God comes, man's "day" will be over. The corrupting of the universe by man and Satan will have been terminated and judged, finally and forever. the heavens will be dissolved. See notes on verses 7, 10, 11. The new world in which righteousness dwells (v. 13), requires the Lord to first destroy the old, sin-cursed universe (cf. Rom. 8:19–22).

3:13 new heavens and a new earth. The promise of a new universe is rooted in the OT (e.g., Ps. 102:25; Is. 65:17; 66:22). The word new means new in quality, i.e., different from before, not just new in chronology. righteousness dwells. The universe is new in quality because righteousness has settled in and taken up permanent and exclusive residence (cf. Is. 60:19–22; Rev. 21:1–7).

3:14 in peace. When Christ returns, each Christian should be found enjoying the peace of Christ which knows no worry or fear about the Day of the Lord or the judgment of Christ (cf. Phil. 4:6, 7). To have this peace means that the Christian has a strong sense of assurance of his salvation and a life of obedience to Christ (cf. 1 John 4:17). without spot and blameless. Christians should have a spotless character and a blameless reputation. These characteristics are in graphic contrast to the false teachers (cf. 2:13), but like Christ (1 Pet. 1:18).

3:15 the longsuffering of our Lord is salvation. In addition to what he has already explained in verse 9 about the Lord's patience being the reason He delays judgment, here Peter adds that during the time of God's patience, Christians should engage in seeking the salvation of souls.

3:15b, 16 hard to understand. Since Paul had (by the time Peter wrote) written all his letters and died, the readers of 2 Peter would have already received letters about future events from Paul. Some of Paul's explanations were difficult (not impossible) to interpret. Nevertheless, Peter uses Paul as a support for his teaching.

3:16 untaught and unstable . . . twist. In Peter's day (as today), there was a proliferation of foolish and hurtful perverting of apostolic teaching about the future (cf. vv. 3, 4; 2 Thess. 2:1–5; 3:6–12). to their own destruction. The fact that distorting Paul's writings leads to eternal damnation proves that Paul's writings were inspired of God. the rest of the Scriptures. This is one of the most clear-cut statements in the Bible to affirm that the writings of Paul are Scripture. Peter's testimony is that Paul wrote Scripture, but the false teachers distorted it. The NT apostles were aware that they spoke and wrote the Word of God (1 Thess. 2:13) as surely as did the OT prophets. Peter realized that the NT writers brought the divine truth that completed the Bible (1 Pet. 1:10–12).

3:17 know this beforehand. Since Christians now know that there will be false teachers who will appear, twisting and distorting the Scriptures, they should be all the more on their guard. beware lest you also fall. Any time a believer seriously listens to a false teacher, he runs the risk of being led astray (cf. 2 Tim. 2:14–18; Titus 1:10–16).

3:18 grow in the grace and knowledge. Peter ends this letter with a summary statement of the same instruction with which he began it (1:2–11). Pursuing Christian maturity and a deepening knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ will lead to doctrinal stability and prevent a Christian from being led astray. To Him be the glory. Such a call for glory to Christ demonstrates again that Peter considered Jesus Christ to be deity, equal in honor with God the Father (cf. 1:1; John 5:23).

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF JOHN

Title

First John is the first and largest in a series of three epistles that bear the apostle John's name. Since the letter identifies no specific church, location, or individual to whom it was sent, its classification is as a "general epistle." Although 1 John does not exhibit some of the general characteristics of an epistle common to that time (e.g., no introduction, greeting, or concluding salutation), its intimate tone and content indicate that the term epistle still applies to it.

Author and Date

The epistle does not identify the author; but the strong, consistent, and earliest testimony of the church ascribes it to John the disciple and apostle (cf. Luke 6:13, 14). This anonymity strongly affirms the early church's identification of the epistle with John the apostle; for only someone of John's well known and preeminent status as an apostle would be able to write with such unmistakable authority, expecting complete obedience from his readers, without clearly identifying himself (e.g., 4:6). He was well known to the readers so he didn't need to mention his name.

John and James, his older brother (Acts 12:2), were known as "the sons of Zebedee" (Matt. 10:2–4), whom Jesus gave the name "Sons of Thunder" (Mark 3:17). John was one of the three most intimate associates of Jesus (along with Peter and James—cf. Matt. 17:1; 26:37), being an eyewitness to and participant in Jesus' earthly ministry (1:1–4). In addition to the three epistles, John also authored the Fourth Gospel, in which he identified himself as the disciple "whom Jesus loved" and as the one who reclined on Jesus' breast at the Last Supper (John 13:23; 19:26; 20:2; 21:7, 20). He also wrote the Book of Revelation (Rev. 1:1).

Precise dating is difficult because no clear historical indications of a date exist in 1 John. Most likely, John composed this work in the latter part of the first century. Church tradition consistently identifies John, in his advanced age, as living and actively writing during this time at Ephesus in Asia Minor. The tone of the epistle supports this evidence since the writer gives the strong impression that he is much older than his readers (e.g., "my little children"—2:1, 18, 28). The epistle and John's Gospel reflect similar vocabulary and manner of expression (see Historical and Theological Themes). Such similarity causes many to date the writing of John's epistles as occurring soon after he composed his Gospel. Since many date the Gospel during the latter part of the first century, they also prefer a similar date for the epistles.

Furthermore, the heresy John combats most likely reflects the beginnings of Gnosticism (see Background and Setting) which was in its early stages during the latter third of the first century when John was actively writing. Since no mention is made of the persecution under Domitian, which began about A.D. 95, it may have been written before that began. In light of such factors, a reasonable date for 1 John is c. A.D. 90–95. It was likely written from Ephesus to the churches of Asia Minor over which John exercised apostolic leadership.

Background and Setting

Although he was greatly advanced in age when he penned this epistle, John was still actively ministering to churches. He was the sole remaining apostolic survivor who had intimate, eyewitness association with Jesus throughout His earthly ministry, death, resurrection, and ascension. The church fathers (e.g., Justin Martyr, Irenaeus, Clement of Alexandria, Eusebius) indicate that after that time, John lived at Ephesus in Asia Minor, carrying out an extensive evangelistic program, overseeing many of the churches that had arisen, and conducting an extensive writing ministry (e.g., epistles, the Gospel of John, and Revelation). One church father (Papias) who had direct contact with John described him as a “living and abiding voice.” As the last remaining apostle, John’s testimony was highly authoritative among the churches. Many eagerly sought to hear the one who had firsthand experience with the Lord Jesus.

Ephesus (cf. Acts 19:10) lay within the intellectual center of Asia Minor. As predicted years before by the apostle Paul (Acts 20:28–31), false teachers arising from within the church’s own ranks, saturated with the prevailing climate of philosophical trends, began infecting the church with false doctrine and perverting fundamental apostolic teaching. These false teachers advocated new ideas which eventually became known as Gnosticism (from the Greek word knowledge). After the Pauline battle for freedom from the law, Gnosticism was the most dangerous heresy that threatened the early church during the first three centuries. Most likely, John was combating the beginnings of this virulent heresy that threatened to destroy the fundamentals of the faith and the churches (see Interpretive Challenges).

Gnosticism, influenced by such philosophers as Plato, advocated a dualism which asserted that matter was inherently evil and spirit was good. As a result of this presupposition, these false teachers, although attributing some form of deity to Christ, denied His true humanity to preserve Him from evil. They also claimed elevated knowledge, a higher truth known only to those in on the deep things. Only the initiated had the mystical knowledge of truth that was higher even than the Scripture.

Instead of divine revelation standing as judge over man’s ideas, man’s ideas judged God’s revelation (2:15–17). The heresy featured two basic forms. First, some asserted that Jesus’ physical body was not real but only seemed to be physical (known as Docetism from a Greek word that means “to appear”). John forcefully affirmed the physical reality of Jesus by reminding his readers that he was an eyewitness to Him (“heard,” “seen,” “handled,” “Jesus Christ has come in the flesh”—1:1–4; 4:2, 3).

According to early tradition (Irenaeus), another form of this heresy which John may have attacked was led by a man named Cerinthus, who contended that the Christ’s spirit descended on the human Jesus at his baptism, but left him just before his crucifixion. John wrote that the Jesus who was baptized at the beginning of His ministry was the same person who was crucified on the cross (5:6).

Such heretical views destroy not only the true humanity of Jesus, but also the Atonement, for Jesus must not only have been truly God, but also the truly human (and physically real) man who actually suffered and died on the cross in order to be the acceptable substitutionary sacrifice for sin (cf. Heb. 2:14–17). The biblical view of Jesus affirms His complete humanity as well as His full deity.

The gnostic idea that matter was evil and only spirit was good led to the idea that either the body should be treated harshly, a form of asceticism (e.g., Col. 2:21–23), or sin committed in the body had no connection or effect on one's spirit. This led some, especially John's opponents, to conclude that sin committed in the physical body did not matter; absolute indulgence in immorality was permissible; one could deny sin even existed (1:8–10) and disregard God's law (3:4). John emphasized the need for obedience to God's laws, for he defined the true love of God as obedience to His commandments (5:3).

A lack of love for fellow believers characterizes false teachers, especially as they react against anyone rejecting their new way of thinking (3:10–18). They separated their deceived followers from the fellowship of those who remained faithful to apostolic teaching, leading John to reply that such separation outwardly manifested that those who followed false teachers lacked genuine salvation (2:19). Their departure left the other believers, who remained faithful to apostolic doctrine, shaken.

Responding to this crisis, the aged apostle wrote to reassure those remaining faithful and to combat this grave threat to the church. Since the heresy was so acutely dangerous and the time period was so critical for the church in danger of being overwhelmed by false teaching, John gently, lovingly, but with unquestionable apostolic authority, sent this letter to churches in his sphere of influence to stem this spreading plague of false doctrine.

Historical and Theological Themes

In light of the circumstances of the epistle, the overall theme of 1 John is “a recall to the fundamentals of the faith” or “back to the basics of Christianity.” The apostle deals with certainties, not opinions or conjecture. He expresses the absolute character of Christianity in very simple terms; terms that are clear and unmistakable, leaving no doubt about the fundamental nature of those truths. A warm, conversational, and above all, loving tone occurs, like a father having a tender, intimate conversation with his children.

First John also is pastoral, written from the heart of a pastor who has concern for his people. As a shepherd, John communicated to his flock some very basic, but vitally essential, principles, reassuring them about the basics of the faith. He desired them to have joy regarding the certainty of their faith, rather than being upset by the false teaching and current defections of some (1:4).

The book's viewpoint, however, is not only pastoral, but also polemical; it is not only positive, but also negative. John refutes the defectors with sound doctrine, exhibiting no tolerance for those who pervert divine truth. He labels those departing from the truth as “false prophets” (4:1), “those who try to deceive” (2:26; 3:7), and “anti-christs” (2:18). He pointedly identifies the ultimate source of all such defection from sound doctrine as demonic (4:1–7).

The constant repetition of three sub-themes reinforces the overall theme regarding faithfulness to the basics of Christianity: (1) happiness (1:4), (2) holiness (2:1), and (3) assurance (5:13). By faithfulness to the basics, his readers will experience these three results continually in their lives. Another three factors reveal the key cycle of true spirituality in 1 John: (1) a proper belief in Jesus produces (2) obedience to His commands; obedience issues in (3) love for God and fellow believers (e.g., 3:23, 24). When these three (sound faith, obedience, love) operate in concert together, they result in happiness, holiness and assurance. They constitute the evidence, the litmus test, of a true Christian.

Interpretive Challenges

Theologians debate the precise nature of the false teachers' beliefs in 1 John, because John does not directly specify their beliefs, but rather combats the heretics mainly through a positive restatement of the fundamentals of the faith. The key feature of the heresy, as noted above, seems to be a denial of the Incarnation (i.e., Christ had not come in the flesh). This was most likely an incipient or beginning form of Gnosticism.

The interpreter is also challenged by the rigidity of John's theology. John presents the basics or fundamentals of the Christian life in absolute, not relative, terms. Unlike Paul, who presented exceptions, and dealt so often with believers' failures to meet the divine standard, John does not deal with the "what if I fail" issues. Only in 2:1, 2 does he give some relief from the absolutes. The rest of the book presents truths in black and white rather than shades of gray, often through a stark contrast, e.g., "light" vs. "darkness" (1:5, 7; 2:8–11); truth vs. lies (2:21, 22; 4:1); and children of God vs. children of the devil (3:10).

Those who claim to be Christians must absolutely display the characteristics of genuine Christians: sound doctrine, obedience, and love. Those who are truly born again have been given a new nature, which gives evidence of itself. Those who do not display characteristics of the new nature don't have it, so were never truly born again. The issues do not focus (as much of Paul's writing does) on maintaining temporal or daily fellowship with God, but on the application of basic tests in one's life to confirm that salvation has truly occurred. Such absolute distinctions were also characteristic of John's Gospel.

In a unique fashion, John challenges the interpreter by his repetition of similar themes over and over to emphasize the basic truths about genuine Christianity. Some have likened John's repetition to a spiral that moves outward, becoming larger and larger, each time spreading the same truth over a wider area and encompassing more territory. Others have seen the spiral as moving inward, penetrating deeper and deeper into the same themes while expanding on his thoughts. However one views the spiraling pattern, John uses repetition of basic truths as a means to accentuate their importance and to help his readers understand and remember them.

I. THE FUNDAMENTAL TESTS OF GENUINE FELLOWSHIP—SPIRAL I (1:1–2:17)

A. The Fundamental Tests of Doctrine (1:1–2:2)

1. A biblical view of Christ (1:1–4)

1:1–4 As an apostolic eyewitness to Jesus' ministry, including His death and resurrection, and as one of the three most intimate associates of the Lord (John, Peter, James), John affirms the physical reality of Jesus Christ's having come "in the flesh" (cf. 4:2, 3). In this way, John accentuated the gravity of the false teaching by immediately focusing on a strongly positive affirmation of the historic reality of Jesus' humanity and the certainty of the gospel. Although the false teachers claimed to believe in Christ, their denial of the true nature of Christ (i.e., His humanity) demonstrated their lack of genuine salvation (2:22, 23). The affirmation of a proper view of Christ constitutes the first test of genuine fellowship (v. 3; see 1:5–2:2 for test 2).

1:1 *That which. This phrase refers to the proclamation of the gospel that centers in Christ's person, words, and works as contained in apostolic testimony. from the beginning. Although John's Gospel uses a similar phrase meaning eternity past (John 1:1, "in the beginning"), the phrase here, in the context of verses 1–4, refers to the beginnings of gospel preaching when the readers first heard about Jesus (cf. 2:7, 24). The phrase also emphasizes the stability of the gospel message; its contents do not change, but remain stable from the very beginning; it is not subject to change due to current worldly fads or philosophical thinking. we have heard . . . we have seen . . . we have looked upon . . . our hands have handled. The words used here point to the vivid recollection of the person of Jesus that John still had even in his old age. For John, even sixty years later, those memories were permanently etched on his mind as if the events had just happened. He uses terms that strongly affirm the physical reality of Jesus, for a spirit cannot be heard, gazed at for long periods ("looked upon"), or touched ("handled") as Jesus was by John during His earthly ministry and even after His Resurrection. the Word of life. This refers not only to Jesus Christ, but the proclamation of His gospel.

1:2, 3 *manifested . . . seen . . . bear witness . . . heard . . . declare. John dramatically reemphasizes, through repetition of these terms in verses 2 and 3 (cf. v. 1), the authority of his own personal experience as an eyewitness of Jesus' life. Such repetition pointedly reminds his readers that John's personal testimony refutes the false teachers who boasted arrogantly and wrongly about the Christ they had never seen or known.

1:2 *that eternal life . . . with the Father and . . . manifested to us. With this phrase, John accentuates the eternality of Christ in His preincarnate glory (cf. 5:12; John 1:4; 5:26, 40; 11:25; 14:6).

1:3 *fellowship with us. Fellowship does not mean social relations, but that his readers were to be partakers (or partners) with John in possessing eternal life (cf. Phil. 1:5; 1 Pet. 5:1; 2 Pet. 1:4). John writes not only to affirm the physical reality of Jesus (vv. 1, 2), but also to produce salvation in the readers. That genuine Christians are never "out of fellowship" is clear, since this verse equates fellowship with salvation.

1:4 *your joy may be full. A main goal for this epistle is to create joy in the readers. The proclamation of the reality of the gospel (vv. 1, 2) produces a fellowship in eternal life (v. 3), and in turn, fellowship in eternal life produces joy (v. 4).

2. A biblical view of sin (1:5–2:2)

1:5–2:2 To counter the false teachers who denied the existence or importance of sin, John affirms its reality. This affirmation of sin's reality constitutes the second test of true fellowship (cf. vv. 1–4 for test 1 and 2:3–6 for test 3). Those who deny the reality of sin demonstrate their lack of genuine salvation. The “we” in verses 6, 8, 10 is not a reference to genuine Christians, rather a general reference to anyone claiming fellowship, but denying sin. The “we” in verses 7, 9 and 2:1, 2 is a specific reference to genuine Christians.

1:5 we have heard from Him. The message that John and the other apostles preached came from God, not from men (cf. Gal. 1:12). God is light. In Scripture, light and darkness are very familiar symbols. Intellectually, light refers to biblical truth, while darkness refers to error or falsehood (cf. Ps. 119:105; Prov. 6:23; John 1:4; 8:12). Morally, light refers to holiness or purity, while darkness refers to sin or wrongdoing (Rom. 13:11–14; 1 Thess. 5:4–7). The heretics claimed to be the truly enlightened, walking in the real light, but John denied that because they do not recognize their sin. About that basic reality, they were unenlightened. no darkness at all. With this phrase, John forcefully affirms that God is absolutely perfect and nothing exists in God's character that impinges upon His truth and holiness (cf. James 1:17).

1:6 In spite of their claims to enlightenment and although the false teachers may have claimed fellowship with Christ, their walking in darkness refuted such claims, and consequently, demonstrated their lack of genuine salvation. The reference to lie in verse 6b refers to the claim of fellowship in verse 6a. do not practice. This points to their habitual failure regarding the practice of the truth.

1:7 A genuine Christian walks habitually in the light (truth and holiness), not in darkness (falsehood and sin). See note on 3:9. Their walk also results in cleansing from sin as the Lord continually forgives His own. Since those walking in the light share in the character of God, they will be habitually characterized by His holiness (3 John 11), indicating their true fellowship with Him (James 1:27). A genuine Christian does not walk in darkness, but only in the light (2 Cor. 6:14; Eph. 5:8; Col. 1:12, 13), and cleansing from sin continually occurs (cf. v. 9).

1:8 Not only did the false teachers walk in darkness (i.e., sin; v. 6) but went so far as to deny totally the existence of a sin disposition in their lives. If someone never admits to

Key Words

Sin: Greek hamartia—1:7, 8; 3:4, 5, 8, 9; 5:16, 17—lit. “to miss the mark.” John speaks of a kind of sin one can recover from and another kind of sin from which one cannot recover. John's readers, unlike readers today, apparently understood the difference between these two kinds of sin. The overall teaching of this epistle suggests that those who denied the Christian community (2:18–19) to follow heretical, “antichrist” teachings were irrecoverable. Their rebellion and denial of Jesus' true identity (4:1–3) leads to unrepentant sin. In the end, their sin produces spiritual death.

Advocate: Greek paraklētos—2:1—lit. “one who is called to our side.” This Greek term refers to the position of a comforter, consoler, or defense attorney. In John 14:26 and 15:26, the Holy Spirit is called the Helper/Advocate for believers. The Holy Spirit works within us to comfort and help us and also pleads our case before the Father in heaven (Rom. 8:26, 27, 34).

being a sinner, salvation cannot result (see Matt. 19:16–22 for the account of the young man who refused to recognize his sin). Not only did the false teachers make false claims to fellowship and disregard sin (v. 6), they are also characterized by deceit regarding sinlessness (Eccl. 7:20; Rom. 3:23).

1:9 Continual confession of sin is an indication of genuine salvation. While the false teachers would not admit their sin, the genuine Christian admitted and forsook it (Ps. 32:3–5; Prov. 28:13). The term confess means to say the same thing about sin as God does; to acknowledge His perspective about sin. While verse 7 is from God's perspective, verse 9 is from the Christian's perspective. Confession of sin characterizes genuine Christians, and God continually cleanses those who are confessing (cf. v. 7). Rather than focusing on confession for every single sin as necessary, John has especially in mind here a settled recognition and acknowledgment that one is a sinner in need of cleansing and forgiveness (Eph. 4:32; Col. 2:13).

1:10 make Him a liar. Since God has said that all people are sinners (cf. Ps. 14:3; 51:5; Is. 53:6; Jer. 17:5, 6; Rom. 3:10–19, 23; 6:23), to deny that fact is to blaspheme God with slander that defames His name.

2:1 so that you may not sin. Although Christians must continually acknowledge and confess sin (1:9), they are not powerless against it. Fulfilling the duty of confession does not give license to sin. Sin can and should be conquered through the power of the Holy Spirit (see Rom. 6:12–14; 8:12, 13; 1 Cor. 15:34; Titus 2:11, 12; 1 Pet. 1:13–16). Advocate. John 16:7 translates this word as “Helper” (lit. “one called alongside”). Perhaps a modern concept of the term would be a defense attorney. Although Satan prosecutes believers night and day before the Father due to sin (Rev. 12:10), Christ's high priestly ministry guarantees not only sympathy, but also acquittal (Heb. 4:14–16).

2:2 propitiation. Cf. 4:10. The word means “appeasement” or “satisfaction.” The sacrifice of Jesus on the Cross satisfied the

Why Christians Won't Habitually Sin

This passage begins with the phrase “Whoever commits sin” (v. 4). Commits translates a Greek verb that conveys the idea of habitual practice. Although genuine Christians have a sin nature (1:8) and do behave sinfully, their confession of sin (1:9; 2:1) and acceptance of forgiveness prevent sin from becoming the unbroken pattern of their lives (John 8:31, 34–36; Rom. 6:11; 2 John 9). God builds a certain growing awareness about sin that provides four effective reasons why true Christians cannot habitually practice sin:

1. Genuine Christians cannot practice sin because sin is incompatible with the law of God, which they love (3:4; Ps. 119:34, 77, 97; Rom. 7:12, 22); whereas habitual sin betrays the ultimate sense of rebellion—living as if there were no law or ignoring what laws exist (James 4:17)—in short, lawlessness.

2. Genuine Christians cannot practice sin because sin is incompatible with the work of Christ (3:5). Christ died to sanctify (make holy) the believer (2 Cor. 5:21; Eph. 5:25–27). Habitual sin contradicts Christ's work of breaking the dominion of sin in the believer's life (Rom. 6:1–15).

3. Genuine Christians cannot practice sin because Christ came to destroy the works of the arch-sinner, Satan (3:8). The devil is still operating, but he has been defeated, and in Christ we escape his tyranny. The day will come when all of Satan's activity will cease in the universe, and he will be sent to hell forever (Rev. 20:10).

4. Genuine Christians cannot practice sin because sin is incompatible with the ministry of the Holy Spirit, who has imparted a new nature to the believer (3:9; John 3:5–8). This new nature shuns sin and exhibits the habitual character of righteousness produced by the Holy Spirit (Gal. 5:22–24).

demands of God's holiness for the punishment of sin (cf. Rom. 1:18; 2 Cor. 5:21; Eph. 2:3). So Jesus propitiated or satisfied God. See notes on Hebrews 2:17; 9:15 for a clear illustration of propitiation. for the whole world. This is a generic term, referring not to every single individual, but to mankind in general. Christ actually paid the penalty only for those who would repent and believe. A number of Scriptures indicate that Christ died for the world (John 1:29; 3:16; 6:51; 1 Tim. 2:6; Heb. 2:9). Since much of the world will be eternally condemned to hell to pay for their own sins, they could not have been paid for by Christ (cf. Matt. 7:13–14). The passages which speak of Christ's dying for the whole world must be understood to refer to mankind in general (as in Titus 2:11). World indicates the sphere, the beings toward whom God seeks reconciliation and has provided propitiation. God has mitigated His wrath on sinners temporarily, by letting them live and enjoy earthly life (see note on 1 Tim. 4:10). In that sense, Christ has provided a brief, temporal propitiation for the whole world. But He actually satisfied fully the wrath of God eternally only for the elect who believe. Christ's death in itself had unlimited and infinite value because He is Holy God. Thus, His sacrifice was sufficient to pay the penalty for all the sins of all whom God brings to faith. But the actual satisfaction and atonement was made only for those who believe (cf. John 10:11, 15; 17:9, 20; Acts 20:28; Rom. 8:32, 37; Eph. 5:25). The pardon for sin is offered to the whole world, but received only by those who believe (cf. 4:9, 14; John 5:24). There is no other way to be reconciled to God.

B. The Fundamental Tests of Morals (2:3–17)

1. A biblical view of obedience (2:3–6)

2:3–6 Obedience to God's commands constitutes a third test of genuine fellowship. First John presents two external categories of tests that demonstrate salvation: doctrinal and moral. The doctrinal tests consist of confessing a proper view of Christ and of sin (see 1:1–4 and 1:5–2:2), while the moral tests consist of obedience (vv. 3–6) and love (see also vv. 7–17). Subjective assurance of salvation comes through the internal witness of the Holy Spirit (5:10; Rom. 8:14–16; 2 Cor. 1:12), but the test of obedience constitutes objective assurance that one is genuinely saved. Obedience is the external, visible proof of salvation (see notes on James 2:14–25; 2 Pet. 2:5–11). The false teachers' failure to obey God's commands objectively demonstrated that they were not saved (Luke 6:46). Those who are truly enlightened and know God are obedient to His Word.

2:3, 4 know . . . keep. The repetition of these words emphasizes that those genuinely born again display the habit of obedience. Obedience results in assurance of salvation (cf. Eph. 2:2; 1 Pet. 1:14). That these two words are among John's favorites is clear since he uses know approximately forty times and keep approximately ten times in this epistle.

2:6 abides. This word is one of John's favorite terms for salvation (see notes on John 15:4–10). just as He walked. Jesus' life of obedience is the Christian's pattern. Those who claim to be Christians ought to live as He did (cf. John 6:38) since they possess His Spirit's presence and power.

2. A biblical view of love (2:7–17)

2:7–17 Love of the brethren contrasted with love of the world constitutes the fourth test of genuine fellowship. The primary focus of the moral test is obedience to the command of love because love is the fulfillment of the law (Matt. 22:34–40; Rom. 13:8–10; James 2:8) and is also Christ's new command (John 13:34; 15:12, 17). True enlightenment is to love. God's light is the light of love, so to walk in light is to walk in love.

2:7 new. Not referring to new in the sense of time, but something that is fresh in quality, kind, or form; something that replaces something else that has been worn out. new commandment . . . old commandment. John makes a significant word play here. Though he doesn't state here what the command is, he does in 2 John 5, 6. It is to love. Both of these phrases refer to the same commandment of love. The commandment of love was new because Jesus personified love in a fresh, new way and it was shed abroad in believers' hearts (Rom. 5:5) and energized by the Holy Spirit (Gal. 5:22; 1 Thess. 4:9). He raised love to a higher standard for the church and commanded His disciples to imitate His love ("as I have loved you"; cf. 3:16; John 13:34). The command was also old because the OT commanded love (Lev. 19:18; Deut. 6:5) and the readers of John's epistle had heard about Jesus' command to love when they first heard the gospel. from the beginning. This phrase refers not to the beginning of time, but the beginning of their Christian lives, as indicated by verse 24; 3:11; 2 John 6. This was part of the ethical instruction they received from the day of their salvation and not some innovation introduced by John, as the heretics may have said.

2:9 hates. The original language conveys the idea of someone who habitually hates or is marked by a lifestyle of hate. in darkness until now. Those who profess to be Christians, yet are characterized by hate, demonstrate by such action that they have never been born again. The false teachers made claims to enlightenment, transcendent knowledge of God, and salvation, but their actions, especially the lack of love, proved all such claims false (see also v. 11).

2:12–14 Only two families exist from God's perspective: children of God and children of Satan (see John 8:39–44). John reminds his readers in these verses that Christians have been forgiven and come to know God as their heavenly Father. As a result of salvation, they are a part of God's family and must not love Satan's family or give allegiance to the world controlled by him (see v. 15). The word little children in verse 12 is general for offspring of any age, in contrast to a different Greek word for little children in verse 13, which refers to young children (see note on vv. 13, 14). I write . . . I have written. John repeats the message in these verses to emphasize the certainty of their belonging to God's family. "I write" is from John's perspective, while "I have written" anticipates his readers' perspective when they received the letter.

2:13, 14 fathers . . . young men . . . little children. These very clear distinctions identify three stages of spiritual growth in God's family. Fathers, the most mature, have a deep knowledge of the eternal God. The pinnacle of spiritual maturity is to know God in His fullness (cf. Phil. 3:10). Young men are those who, while not yet having the mature experience of knowing God in the Word and through life, do know sound doctrine. They are strong against sin and error because they have His Word in them. Thus, they overcome the wiles of the devil, who makes havoc of children (cf. Eph. 4:14). Since Satan's efforts are in falsehood and deception, they have overcome him. Little children are those who have only the basic awareness of God and need to grow. All are in God's family and manifest Christ's character at different levels.

2:15 Do not love the world. Although John often repeats the importance of love and that God is love (4:7, 8), he also reveals that God hates a certain type of love: love of the world (John 15:18–20). In this text, John expresses a particular form of the fourth test (i.e., the test of love). Positively, the Christian loves God and fellow Christians. Negatively, an absence of love for the world must habitually characterize the love life of those to be considered genuinely born again. Love here signifies affection and devotion. God, not the world, must have the first place in the Christian's life (Matt. 10:37–39; Phil. 3:20). the world. This is not a reference to the physical, material world but the invisible spiritual system of evil dominated by Satan (see notes on 2 Cor. 10:3–5) and all that it offers in opposition to God, His Word, and His people (cf. 5:19; John 12:31; 1 Cor. 1:21; 2 Cor. 4:4; James 4:4; 2 Pet. 1:4). the love of the Father is not in him. Either a person is a genuine Christian marked by love and obedience to God, or he is a non-Christian in rebellion against God, i.e., in love with and enslaved by the satanically controlled world system (Eph. 2:1–3; Col. 1:13; James 4:4). No middle ground between these two alternatives exists for someone claiming to be born again. The false teachers had no such singular love, but were devoted to the world's philosophy and wisdom, thereby revealing their love for the world and their unsaved state (cf. Matt. 6:24; Luke 16:13; 1 Tim. 6:20; 2 Pet. 2:12–22).

2:16 all that is in the world. Cf. James 4:4.

Destructive Teachings in John's Day

Paul, Peter, and John all faced early forms of a system of false teaching that later became known as Gnosticism. That term (derived from the Greek word for knowledge) refers to the habit that gnostics had of claiming an elevated knowledge, a higher truth known only to those in on the deep things. Those initiated into this mystical knowledge of truth had a higher internal authority than Scripture. This resulted in a chaotic situation in which the gnostics tried to judge divine revelation by human ideas rather than judging human ideas by divine revelation (1 John 2:15–17).

Philosophically, the heresy relied on a distortion of Platonism. It advocated a dualism in which matter was inherently evil and spirit was good. One of the direct errors of this heresy involved attributing some form of deity to Christ but denying His true humanity, supposedly to preserve Him from evil (which they concluded He would be if He actually came in the flesh). Such a view destroys not only the true humanity of Jesus, but also the atonement work of Christ.

Jesus must not only have been truly God, but also the truly human (physically real) man who actually suffered and died on the cross in order to be the acceptable substitutionary sacrifice for sin (Heb. 2:4–17). The biblical view of Jesus affirms His complete humanity, as well as His full deity.

The gnostic heresy, even in John's day, featured two basic forms: (1) Docetism and (2) the error of Cerinthus. Docetism (from a Greek word that means "to appear") asserted that Jesus' physical body was not real but only seemed to be physical. John forcefully and repeatedly affirmed the physical reality of Jesus. He reminded his readers that he was an eyewitness to Him ("heard," "seen," "handled," "Jesus Christ has come in the flesh"; 1 John 1:1–4; 4:2, 3).

The other form of early Gnosticism was traced back to Cerinthus by the early church apologist Irenaeus. Cerinthus taught that Christ's spirit descended on the human Jesus at His baptism but left Him shortly before His crucifixion. John asserted that the Jesus who was baptized at the beginning of His ministry was the same person who was crucified on the cross (1 John 5:6).

John does not directly specify the early gnostic beliefs, but his arguments offer clear clues about his targets. Further, John's wisdom was to avoid direct attacks on rapidly shifting heresies, but to provide a timely, positive restatement of the fundamentals of the faith that would provide timeless truth and answers for later generations of Christians.

While the world's philosophies and ideologies and much that it offers may appear attractive and appealing, that is deception. Its true and pervasive nature is evil, harmful, ruinous, and satanic. Its deadly theories are raised up against the knowledge of God and hold the souls of men captive (2 Cor. 10:3–5). lust. John uses the term negatively here for a strong desire for evil things. flesh. The term refers to the sin disposition of man; the rebellious self dominated by sin and in opposition to God (Rom. 7:15–25; 8:2–8; Gal. 5:19–21). Satan uses the evil world system to incite the flesh. eyes. Satan uses the eyes as a strategic avenue to incite wrong desires (Josh. 7:20, 21; 2 Sam. 11:2; Matt. 5:27–29). Satan's temptation of Eve involved being attracted to something beautiful in appearance, but the result was spiritual death (Gen. 3:6, "pleasant to the eyes"). the pride of life. The phrase connotes the idea of arrogance over one's circumstances, which produced haughtiness or exaggeration, parading what one possessed to impress other people (James 4:16). not of the Father. The world is the enemy of the Christian because it is in rebellion and opposition against God and controlled by Satan (5:19; Eph. 2:2; 2 Cor. 4:4; 10:3–5). The three openings presented, if allowing access to sin, result in tragedy. Not only must the Christian reject the world for what it is, but also for what it does.

2:17 the world is passing away. The Christian also must not love the satanic world system because of its temporary nature. It is in the continual process of disintegration, headed for destruction (Rom. 8:18–22). he who does the will of God abides forever. In contrast to the temporary world, God's will is permanent and unchangeable. Those who follow God's will abide as His people forever. While God offers eternal life to His children, the present age is doomed (cf. 1 Cor. 7:31; 2 Cor. 4:18).

II. THE FUNDAMENTAL TESTS OF GENUINE FELLOWSHIP—SPIRAL II (2:18–3:24)

A. Part 2 of the Doctrinal Test (2:18–27)

1. Antichrists depart from Christian fellowship (2:18–21)

2:18 the Antichrist. This is the first occurrence of the term antichrist. Its usage is found only in John's epistles (4:3; 2 John 7). Here, it is a proper name and refers to the coming final world ruler energized by Satan who will seek to replace and oppose the true Christ (Dan. 8:9–11; 11:31–38; 12:11; Matt. 24:15; 2 Thess. 2:1–12; see notes on Rev. 13:1–5; 19:20). many antichrists have come. While the term's first occurrence refers to a particular person prophesied in Scripture, this one is plural and refers to many individuals. John uses the plural to identify and characterize the false teachers who were troubling John's congregations because their false doctrine distorted the truth and opposed Christ (Matt. 24:24; Mark 13:22; Acts 20:28–30). The term, therefore, refers to a principle of evil, incarnated in people who are hostile and opposed to God (cf. 2 Cor. 10:4, 5). John writes to expose the false teachers, the wolves in sheep's clothing, who purvey damning lies (cf. Eph. 5:11). the last hour. The phrase refers to the "latter times" or "last days," i.e., the time period between the First and Second Comings of Christ (1 Tim. 4:1; James 5:3; 1 Pet. 4:7; 2 Pet. 3:3; Jude 18).

2:19 They went out from us . . . none of them were of us. The first characteristic mentioned of antichrists, i.e., false teachers and deceivers (vv. 22–26), is that they depart from the faithful (see vv. 22, 23 for the second characteristic and v. 26 for the third). They arise from within the church and depart from true fellowship and lead people out with them. The verse also places emphasis on the doctrine of the perseverance of the saints. Those genuinely born again endure in faith and fellowship and the truth (1 Cor. 11:19; 2 Tim. 2:12). The ultimate test of true Christianity is endurance (Mark 13:13; Heb. 3:14). The departure of people from the truth and the church is their unmasking.

2:20, 21 Two characteristics mark genuine Christians in contrast to the antichrists. First, the Holy Spirit (“an anointing,” v. 27) guards them from error (cf. Acts 10:38; 2 Cor. 1:21). Christ as the Holy One (Luke 4:34; Acts 3:14) imparts the Holy Spirit as their illuminating guardian from deception. Second, the Holy Spirit guides the believer into knowing “all things” (John 14:26; 16:13). True Christians have a built-in lie detector and persevere in the truth. Those who remain in heresy and apostasy manifest the fact that they were never genuinely born again (cf. v. 19).

2. Antichrists deny the Christian faith (2:22–25)

2:22, 23 denies the Father and the Son. A second characteristic of antichrists is that they deny the faith (i.e., sound doctrine). Anyone denying the true nature of Christ as presented in the Scripture is an antichrist (cf. 4:3; 2 Thess. 2:11). The denial of Christ also constitutes a denial of God Himself, who testified to His Son (5:9; John 5:32–38; 8:18).

2:24, 25 heard from the beginning. Let the gospel that cannot change remain; do not follow false teachers (cf. 2 Tim. 3:1, 7, 13; 4:3). Christian truth is fixed and unalterable (Jude 3). If we stay faithful to the truth, we continue to experience intimate communion with God and Christ and persevere to the fullness of eternal life (cf. 5:11, 12).

3. Antichrists deceive the Christian faithful (2:26, 27)

2:26 A third characteristic of antichrists is that they try to deceive the faithful (cf. also 1 Tim. 4:1).

2:27 anointing. See note on verses 20, 21. John is not denying the importance of gifted teachers in the church (1 Cor. 12:28; Eph. 4:11), but indicates that neither those teachers nor those believers are dependent on human wisdom or the opinions of men for the truth. God’s Holy Spirit guards and guides the true believer into the truth (see vv. 20, 21). If God is true (cf. 2 Chr. 15:3; Jer. 10:10; John 17:3; 1 Thess. 1:9) and Christ is the truth (cf. John 14:6), so is the Holy Spirit (cf. 5:6; John 15:26; 16:13). abide in Him. In response to such deceivers, the task of the genuine believer is to “walk in the truth,” i.e., persevere in faithfulness and sound doctrine (see vv. 20–21; 2 John 4; 3 John 4).

B. Part 2 of the Moral Test (2:28–3:24)

1. The purifying hope of the Lord’s return (2:28–3:3)

2:28–3:3 This section deals with the “purifying hope” of every Christian, i.e., the return of Christ. John uses this purifying hope to reiterate and elaborate on the moral test (love and obedience) of a true Christian. The hope of Christ’s return has a sanctifying effect on moral behavior. In anticipation of Christ’s return and reward (cf. 1 Cor. 3:10–17; 4:1–5; 2 Cor. 5:9, 10; Rev. 22:12), a genuine Christian walks in holiness of life. Those who do not evidence such behavior manifest an unsaved life. In these five verses, John has given five features of the believer’s hope.

2:28 abide in Him. John repeats his emphasis on abiding (v. 27) to introduce it as the first feature of the believer’s hope in 2:28–3:3. Whenever John refers to abiding, he is referring to persevering in the faith of salvation, which is evidence of being a true believer (John 15:1–6). The hope of Christ's return produces the effect of continual abiding in every true believer as they long for the glorious future prepared for them. Paul called it "loving His appearing" (2 Tim. 4:8) and said those who do that are the ones who will be crowned with eternal righteousness in heaven.

Abiding signifies a permanent remaining in Christ and guarantees the believer's hope. Those who truly abide continue in the faith and in fellowship with the saints (v. 19). In contrast to verse 27 ("you will abide"), however, he commands (imperative) believers to abide. The command signals that abiding is not passive; continual, active abiding must be pursued by every genuine believer (Phil. 2:12). Salvation is eternal because of the Lord's part—He holds us (cf. John 6:37–44) and because of our part—we persevere in faith and obedience (cf. John 8:31, 32). It is not unlike salvation in which God sovereignly saves, but not apart from personal faith of the one He saves. Or, in the case of sanctification, God conforms us to His Son, but not apart from obedience. The NT is rich with statements about God's work and the work of the believer. Paul said it well in Colossians 1:29. when He appears. This refers especially to the rapture and gathering of the church (cf. John 14:1–6; 1 Cor. 15:51–54; 1 Thess. 4:13–18) and the judgment seat of Christ to follow (cf. 1 Cor. 4:5; 2 Cor. 5:9, 10). confidence . . . not be ashamed before Him. The word confidence means "outspokenness" or "freedom of speech." Those who are saved will have confidence at Christ's coming because they will be blameless in holiness based on their abiding in Christ (Eph. 5:27; Col. 1:22; 1 Thess. 3:13; 5:23). In contrast, there will be many, like the soils in Matthew 13, who are temporary look-alike believers (see 13:20–22; cf. John 8:31), who did not believe, who did not persevere in abiding, and consequently, face only shame at His appearance.

2:29 everyone who practices righteousness is born of Him. This is the second feature of the believer's hope in 2:28–3:3. The hope of Christ's return not only sustains faith (v. 28), but makes righteousness a habit. The term for born is the same verb used in John 3:7 where Jesus told Nicodemus that he must be born again. Those truly born again as God's children partake of their heavenly Father's righteous nature (1 Pet. 1:3, 13–16). As a result, they will display characteristics of God's righteousness. John looks from effect (righteous behavior) to cause (being truly born again) to affirm that righteous living is the proof of being born again (James 2:20, 26; 2 Pet. 3:11).

3:1 what manner of love the Father has bestowed on us. This outburst of wonder introduces the third feature of the believer's hope in 2:28–3:3. The believer's hope is strengthened by the fact that God's love initiated his salvation (Eph. 1:3–6). Christ's return will unite the believer with the heavenly Father who loves His child with an immeasurable love. John expresses utter astonishment at God's love for believers in making them His children (Rom. 8:17). Therefore the world does not know us. The real aliens in the world are not extraterrestrials but Christians. Having been born again, given a new nature of heavenly origin, Christians display a nature and lifestyle like their Savior and heavenly Father; a nature totally foreign (other worldly) to the unsaved (1 Cor. 2:15, 16; 1 Pet. 4:3, 4). No wonder Scripture describes Christians as "pilgrims," "sojourners," and "strangers" (Heb. 11:13; 1 Pet. 1:1; 2:11). The Lord Jesus was unearthly in origin, and so are those born again. Truly transformed lives have not yet been manifested (see notes on Rom. 8:18–24).

3:2 now we are children of God.

Everyone who exercises genuine saving faith becomes a child of God at the moment of belief (John 1:12; Rom. 8:16; 2 Pet. 1:4), though the truly heavenly, divine life in that person (cf. Eph. 4:24; Col. 3:10) will not be revealed until Jesus appears (see note on Rom. 8:19). In the meantime, the Holy Spirit is working into us the image of Christ (see note on 2 Cor. 3:18). we shall be like Him. This phrase introduces the fourth feature of the believer's hope in 2:28–3:3. When Christ returns, He shall conform every believer to His image, i.e., His nature. A tension exists between the first part of the verse ("now we are children") and the latter part ("we shall be like Him"). Such tension finds resolution in the solid hope that, at Christ's return, the believer will experience ultimate conformity to His likeness (see notes on Rom. 8:29; 1 Cor. 15:42–49; Phil. 3:21). The glorious nature of that conformity defies description, but as much as glorified humanity can be like incarnate deity, believers will be, without becoming deity.

3:3 purifies himself, just as He is pure.

This is the key verse to 2:28–3:3 and introduces the fifth feature of the believer's hope in this section. Living in the reality of Christ's return makes a difference in a Christian's behavior. Since Christians someday will be like Him, a desire should grow within the Christian to become like Him now. That was Paul's passion, expressed in Philippians 3:12–14 (see notes there). That calls for a purifying of sin, in which we play a part (see notes on 2 Cor. 7:1; 1 Tim. 5:22; 1 Pet. 1:22).

The Believer's Hope (1 John 2:28–3:3)

1. Hope abides in Christ (2:28)
2. Hope makes righteousness a habit (2:29)
3. Hope magnifies God's love (3:1)
4. Hope anticipates Christ's return (3:2)
5. Hope desires to be like Him (3:3)

2. The Christian's incompatibility with sin (3:4–24)

3:4–24 The primary aim of this section is to combat false teachers who are corrupting the fundamentals of the faith. These verses further amplify, reiterate, and emphasize the moral test already presented by John (see 2:3–6, 7–11). Verses 4–10 teach that genuine believers practice righteousness, while verses 11–24 relate that genuine believers practice love toward fellow believers. John was very concerned that Christians know how to tell the true from the false; the genuine from the artificial; true believers from false ones. He presents tests here and throughout this letter to help determine the validity of anybody's claim to be a Christian.

3:4–10 These verses deal with the Christian's incompatibility with sin. The false teachers that John combated, because of their gnostic-like concepts (see Introduction: Background and Setting), discounted the significance of sin and the need for obedience. Because of their philosophical dualism, they viewed matter as inherently bad and, as a result, any sins committed in the physical realm as inconsequential. In this section, John gives four reasons why true Christians cannot habitually practice sin (John 8:31, 34–36; Rom. 6:11; 2 John 9).

3:4 commits sin. The verb commits in the Greek conveys the idea of making sin a habitual practice. Although genuine Christians have a sin disposition (1:8), and do commit and need to confess sin (1:9; 2:1), that is not the unbroken pattern of their lives. A genuinely born-again believer has a built-in check or guard against habitual sinning due to a new nature (“born of God”—v. 9; Rom. 6:12). sin is lawlessness. The first reason why Christians cannot practice sin is because sin is incompatible with the Law of God which they love (Ps. 119:34, 77, 97; Rom. 7:12, 22). The term lawlessness conveys more than transgressing God’s Law. It conveys the ultimate sense of rebellion, i.e., living as if there was no law or ignoring what laws exist (James 4:17).

3:5 He was manifested to take away our sins. A second reason why Christians cannot practice sin is because it is incompatible with the work of Christ. Christ died to sanctify (i.e., make holy) the believer (2 Cor. 5:21; Eph. 5:25–27). To sin is contrary to Christ’s work of breaking the dominion of sin in the believer’s life (Rom. 6:1–15).

3:6 does not sin. Like the phrase “commits sin” of verse 4, the sense conveyed here is the idea of habitual, constant sinning. Whoever sins has neither seen Him nor known Him. If no check against habitual sin exists in someone who professes to be a Christian, John’s pronouncement is absolutely clear—salvation never took place.

3:7 let no one deceive you. The word deceive means “to be led astray.” Since false teachers were attempting to pervert the fundamentals of the faith, the possibility existed that some Christians might be fooled into accepting what they were advocating. To prevent this deception from occurring, John repeatedly emphasized the basics of Christianity, e.g., the need for obedience, the need for love, and the need for a proper view of Christ (see Introduction: Historical and Theological Themes). practices righteous- ness. The genuine believer’s habitual lifestyle of righteousness stands in sharp contrast to those false teachers who practiced sin (cf. vv. 4, 6). Since Christ died on the Cross to transform sinners, those truly born again have replaced the habit of sin with the habit of righteous living (Rom. 6:13, 14). just as He is righteous. Those who are truly born again reflect the divine nature of the Son. They behave like Him, manifesting the power of His life in them (Gal. 2:20).

3:8 He who sins. This phrase means “who habitually practice sin” (see notes on vv. 4, 6). of the devil. This phrase gives the source of the false teachers’ actions. The term devil means “accuser” or “slanderer.” Not only does Satan (“Adversary”) oppose God and His plan, but he is the originator and instigator of sin and rebellion against God and His law (v. 4; see notes on Eph. 6:10–17). Therefore, all the unsaved are under the diabolic influence of Satan. Their sinful lifestyle reflects their satanic origin (see note on Eph. 2:1). John contrasts the children of God with the children of Satan in terms of their actions. While those who are truly born again reflect the habit of righteousness, Satan’s children practice sin. from the beginning. Since Satan was originally created as perfect and only later rebelled against God (Is. 14:12–14; Ezek. 28:12–17), John probably means the moment of his rebellion against God, the beginning of his rebellious career. Since sin characterizes him completely, so everyone characterized by sin must derive from him (cf. John 8:44). For this purpose . . . that He might destroy. A third reason why Christians cannot practice sin is because Christ came to destroy the works of the arch-sinner, Satan. The devil is still operating, but he has been defeated and, in Christ, true believers escape his tyranny. The day will come when all of Satan’s activity will cease in the universe and he will be sent to hell forever (Rev. 20:10). works of the devil. This summarizes a variety of the devil's activities: sin, rebellion, temptation, ruling the world, persecution and accusation of saints, instigation of false teachers, and exercising the power of death (e.g., Luke 8:12; John 8:44; Acts 5:3; 1 Cor. 7:5; 2 Cor. 4:4; Eph. 6:11, 12; 1 Thess. 2:18; Heb. 2:14; Rev. 12:10).

3:9 The fourth reason why Christians cannot practice sin is because it is incompatible with the ministry of the Holy Spirit, who has imparted a new nature to the believer (John 3:5–8). born of God. John wrote here of the new birth (John 3:7). When people become Christians, God makes them new creatures with new natures (2 Cor. 5:17). Believers have God's characteristics because they have been born into God's family. This new nature exhibits the habitual character of righteousness produced by the Holy Spirit (Gal. 5:22–24). John repeats this phrase twice for emphasis. His seed. The New Birth involves the acquisition of a seed, which refers to the principle of God's life imparted to the believer at salvation's New Birth. John uses this image of a planted seed to picture the divine element involved in being born again. See notes on 1 Peter 1:23–25. remains. The word conveys the idea of the permanence of the New Birth which cannot be reversed, for those who are truly born again are permanently transformed into a new creation (2 Cor. 5:17; Gal. 6:15; Eph. 2:10). he cannot sin. This phrase once again conveys the impossibility of habitual sinning (see vv. 4, 6).

3:10 This summary verse is the key to verses 4–10. Only two kinds of children exist in the world: children of God and children of Satan. No one can belong to both families simultaneously. Either one belongs to God's family and exhibits His righteous character or one belongs to Satan's family and exhibits his sinful nature. he who does not love his brother. This phrase introduces the readers to the second aspect of the moral test, i.e., the test of love (as in 2:7–11). John develops this thought with verses 11–24. The false teachers not only had an erroneous view of Christ's nature and displayed disobedience to God's commands, but they also displayed a distinct lack of love for true believers, who rejected their heretical teaching.

3:11–24 John elaborates on the love life of genuine believers. For those who are truly born again, love is an indispensable characteristic. The new nature or "seed" (v. 9) that God imparts not only exhibits holiness, but also love as a habitual characteristic (John 13:35; Rom. 5:5; 1 Thess. 4:9). Those who practice love give proof of the New Birth. Those who do not have never been born again.

3:11 from the beginning. Since the beginning of gospel proclamation, love has been a central theme of Christianity (see notes on 1:1; 2:7). John repeats the theme of what they heard "from the beginning" (1:1; 2:7, 24) to emphasize that the false teachers were preventing that which God, through the apostles, proclaimed. we should love one another. This phrase highlights the habit of love displayed by those possessing the new nature. Love is not merely an optional duty for someone claiming to be a Christian, but proof positive that a person truly has been born again (John 15:12; 1 Pet. 1:22, 23).

3:12–24 As noted throughout this epistle, John often repeated the same truths, expanding on them to allow his readers to hear them in new and fresh ways. Each time, he presents the same truths in "new" packages, which expand on a particular aspect of their significance or approach the subject from a slightly different angle. Verses 12–17 address the characteristic lack of love displayed by the children of the devil, while in verses 18–24 he talks about the characteristics of love displayed by the children of God (see note on v. 10).

3:12 Cain. Scripture presents Cain outwardly as a God-worshiper who even offered sacrifice (Gen. 4:3–5). Cain’s murderous actions, however, revealed that inwardly he was a child of the devil (cf. John 8:44). who was of the wicked one and murdered his brother. In verses 12–17, John presents the first of three behaviors of the devil’s children manifesting their lack of love—murder, the ultimate expression of hate. his works were evil. Cain’s offering was not acceptable because he was sinful (cf. Gen. 4:5). Jealousy was behind his hate and murder, as in the case of the religious leaders who had Christ executed.

3:13 the world hates you. History is filled with stories of the persecution of the saints by the world (Heb. 11:36–40). This does not surprise believers because hateful Satan is their father (v. 10).

3:14 passed from death to life, because we love. Becoming a Christian is a resurrection from death to life, and a turning from hate to love (cf. Gal. 5:6, 22). A lack of love indicates that one is spiritually dead. Love is the sure test of whether someone has experienced the new birth or is still in the darkness of spiritual death (2:9, 11). abides in death. Someone who is characterized by hate has never experienced the new birth.

3:15 Whoever hates his brother is a murderer. John presents the second of three characteristics of the devil’s children with respect to their lack of love. Hatred is spiritually the same as murder in the eyes of God, i.e., the attitude is equal to the act. Hate is the seed that leads to murder, as seen in the example of Cain’s hatred for Abel that resulted in murder (see notes on Matt. 5:20–22; cf. Gal. 5:19–21; Rev. 22:15).

3:16 By this we know love. With this phrase, John introduces the standard of love that is reflected in genuine Christianity. It becomes the measuring stick for every expression of love (see v. 18). John presents the third characteristic of Satan’s children in terms of their lack of love. Satan’s children are marked by indifference toward others’ needs (see also vv. 12, 15). He laid down His life for us. This expression is unique to John (John 10:11, 15, 17, 18; 13:37, 38; 15:13) and speaks of divesting oneself of something. Christian love is self-sacrificing and giving. Christ’s giving up His life for believers epitomized the true nature of Christian love (John 15:12, 13; Phil. 2:5–8; 1 Pet. 2:19–23). we also ought to lay down our lives for the brethren. God calls Christians to that same standard of love for one another as He had for us (see v. 16a).

3:17 whoever has this world’s goods . . . and shuts up his heart. True love is not limited to supreme sacrifices (v. 16), but shows up in lesser ones. Genuine Christian love expresses itself in sacrificial giving to other Christians’ needs (i.e., “his brother”). It is a Christian’s practical love that finds motivation in helping others (1 Tim. 6:17–19; Heb. 13:16; James 2:14–17). Where it does not exist, it is questionable that God’s love is present. If that is so, it is also questionable whether the person is the Lord’s child (v. 14).

3:18 in word or in tongue . . . in deed and in truth. Claiming to love is not enough. Love is not sentiment, but deeds.

3:19 by this we know. A lifestyle of love in action is the demonstrable proof of salvation

Benefits of Love (1 John 3:17–24)

1. The assurance of salvation (3:17–21)
2. Answered prayer (3:22)
3. The abiding presence/empowerment of the Holy Spirit (3:23, 24)

(see v. 16). shall assure our hearts before Him. John gives three benefits of love for the true Christian. The first benefit is assurance of salvation since love in action is the test of Christian profession (cf. 4:7; John 13:34, 35).

3:20 if our heart condemns us, God is greater. God knows those who are truly His (2 Tim. 2:19) and wants to assure His own of their salvation. Although Christians may have insecurities and doubts about salvation, God does not condemn them (Rom. 8:1). Displaying love as a pattern of life is the proof that believers stand uncondemned before God.

3:21 confidence toward God. Love banishes self-condemnation. When a Christian recognizes in his life the manifestation of love in deeds and actions, it results in confidence about his relationship with God.

3:22 The second benefit of love is answered prayer (see v. 19). Since love is the heart of obedience to the law (cf. Matt. 22:37–40; Rom. 13:8–10), its presence in one's life evidences submission to God which He blesses by answered prayers.

3:23, 24 Cf. 4:13. These verses again repeat the three features of this epistle—believing, loving, and obeying—which are the major evidences of true salvation. The third benefit of love is the abiding presence and empowering of the Holy Spirit.

III. THE FUNDAMENTAL TESTS OF GENUINE FELLOWSHIP—SPIRAL III (4:1–21)

1. The demonic source of false doctrine (4:1–3)

4:1–6 John turns from the importance of love to the importance of belief in God's truth. He focuses, once again, on the doctrinal test and emphasizes the need to obey sound teaching (Matt. 24:11; 2 Pet. 2:2, 3; Jude 3). Scripture presents stern warnings against false doctrine. Ever since his temptation of Eve, Satan has sought to distort and deny God's Word (Gen. 3:1–5). He is the ultimate demonic source behind all false teachers and false doctrine (2 Cor. 11:13, 14). In this section, John gives two doctrinal tests to determine truth from error and false teachers from true teachers.

4:1 do not believe every spirit. The mention of the Holy Spirit in 3:24 prompts John to inform his readers that other spirits exist (i.e., demonic spirits) who produce false prophets and false teachers to propagate their false doctrine (see notes on 1 Tim. 4:1, 2). Christians are to have a healthy skepticism regarding any teaching, unlike some among John's congregations who were too open-minded to anyone claiming a new teaching regarding the faith. Christians are to be like the Bereans who, as students of the Word, examined the Scriptures to determine truth and error (Acts 17:11, 12). test. The word test is a metallurgist's term used for assaying metals to determine their purity and value. Christians must test any teaching with a view to approving or disapproving it (see notes on 1 Thess. 5:20–22), rigorously comparing any teaching to the Scripture. the spirits . . . many false prophets. By juxtaposing "spirits" with "false prophets," John reminds his readers that behind human teachers who propagate false doctrine and error are demons inspired by Satan (see notes on 1 Thess. 5:20–22; cf. Acts 20:28–30). Human false prophets and teachers are the physical expressions of demonic, spiritual sources (Matt. 7:15; Mark 13:22).

4:2 By this you know the Spirit of God. John gives a measuring stick to determine whether the propagator of the message is a demon spirit or the Holy Spirit. Jesus Christ has come in the flesh. This is the first test of a true teacher: they acknowledge and proclaim that Jesus is God incarnate in human flesh. The Greek construction does not mean that they confess Christ as having come to earth, but that they confess that He came in the flesh to the earth, i.e., His human body was physically real. Both the full humanity and full deity of Jesus must be equally maintained by the teacher who is to be considered genuinely of the Spirit. The Holy Spirit testifies to the true nature of the Son, while Satan and his forces distort and deny that true nature. John accentuates the crucial importance of sound doctrine expressed in God's Word as the only absolute and trustworthy standard (cf. Is. 8:20).

4:3 the spirit of the Antichrist. These false teachers who denied the true nature of the Son (see Introduction: Background and Setting) are to be identified among the antichrists in 2:18, 19 (2 John 7). The same demonic deception, that will work to produce the final world ruler (see notes on Rev. 13:1–8) who rules as the false Christ, is always actively seeking to distort Jesus Christ's true nature, perverting the gospel. The final Antichrist will not be something new, but will be the ultimate embodiment of all the antichrist spirits that have perverted truth and propagated satanic lies since the beginning. This is similar to 2 Thessalonians 2:3–8, where the man of lawlessness (Antichrist) is still to be revealed, but the mystery of lawlessness is already at work.

Other Names for Antichrist

2. The need for sound doctrine (4:4–6)

4:4 He who is in you is greater. Believers need to be aware and alert to false teaching, but not afraid, since those who have experienced the New Birth with its indwelling of the Holy Spirit have a built-in check against false teaching (cf. 2:20, 27). The Holy Spirit leads into sound doctrine for genuine Christians, evidencing that salvation has actually occurred (cf. Rom. 8:17). True believers have nothing to fear, for even Satan's hosts with their perversions can't take them out of the Lord's hand. Here, as in 2:18–27, protection against error or victory over it are guaranteed by sound doctrine and the indwelling Holy Spirit who illumines the mind.

4:5, 6 they speak as of the world . . . He who knows God hears us. John gives the second test of a true teacher: they speak God's word, following apostolic doctrine.

4:6 By this we know the spirit of truth and the spirit of error. The OT and NT are the sole standards by which all teaching is to be tested. In contrast, demonically inspired teachers either reject the teaching of God's Word or add elements to it (2 Cor. 4:2; Rev. 22:18, 19).

B. Part 3 of the Moral Test (4:7–21)

1. God's character of love (4:7–10)

4:7–21 True to his pattern of developing the same subjects, each time broadening, expanding, and enhancing their significance, John returns once again to the moral test of love. These verses constitute one long unit describing what perfect love is and that it is available to men. In John's third and last discussion of love in this letter (see also 2:7–11; 3:10–14), he gives five reasons why Christians love.

4:7, 8 love is of God . . . God is love. John introduces the reader to the first of five reasons why Christians love: because God is the essence of love. The gnostics believed that God was immaterial spirit and light, but never defined the source of love as coming from His inmost being. As He is spirit (John 4:24), light (1:5), and a consuming fire (Heb. 12:29), so He is love. Love is inherent in all He is and does. Even His judgment and wrath are perfectly harmonized with His love.

4:7 let us love one another. This phrase is the key to the entire section (see v. 21). The original language conveys the idea of making sure that love is a habitual practice. He has already written that those who are truly born again do exhibit the characteristic habit of love (cf. 2:10, 11; 3:14). everyone who loves is born of God. Those who are born again receive God's nature (cf. 2 Pet. 1:4). Since God's nature exhibits love as a chief characteristic (see v. 8), God's children will also reflect that love.

4:8 He who does not love does not know God. Someone may profess to be a Christian, but only those who display love like their heavenly Father actually possess His divine nature and are truly born again.

4:9 John introduces the reader to the second of five reasons why Christians love: to follow the supreme example of God's sacrificial love in sending His Son for us. The judgment of sin on the Cross was the supreme example of God's love, for He poured out His wrath on His beloved Son in place of sinners (John 3:14–16; Rom. 5:8; 2 Cor. 5:21; Eph. 5:1, 2; see note on Titus 3:4). only begotten. Over half of the NT's uses of this term are by John (e.g., John 1:14, 18; 3:16, 18). John always uses it of Christ to picture His unique relationship to the Father, His preexistence, and His distinctness from creation. The term emphasizes the uniqueness of Christ, as the only one of His kind. It was He whom the Father sent into the world as the greatest gift ever given (John 17:3; 2 Cor. 8:9) so believers might have life eternal (cf. John 3:14, 15; 12:24).

4:10 propitiation for our sins. For the word's meaning, see note on 2:2. Hebrews 9:5 translates a form of this word as "the mercy seat." Christ literally became our mercy seat, like the one in the Holy of Holies, where the high priest splattered the blood of the sacrifice on the Day of Atonement (Lev. 16:15). Christ did this when His blood, spilled on behalf of others, satisfied the demands of God's holy justice and wrath against sin.

2. God's requirement of love (4:11–21)

4:11 God's sending His Son gives Christians not only salvation privilege, but obligation to follow this pattern of sacrificial love. Christian love must be self-sacrificing, like God's love.

4:12 John introduces the reader to the third of five reasons why Christians love: because love is the heart of Christian witness. Nobody can see God loving since His love is invisible, Jesus no longer being in the world to manifest the love of God. The only demonstration of God's love in this age is the church. That testimony is critical (John 13:35; 2 Cor. 5:18–20). John's argument in verses 7–12 can be summed up as: love originated in God, was manifested in His Son, and demonstrated in His people.

4:13–16 John introduces the reader to the fourth of five reasons why Christians love: because love is the Christian's assurance (see notes on 3:16–23).

4:15 Whoever confesses. See note on verse 2. This refers to the doctrinal test (cf. vv. 1–6; 1:1–4; 2:23).

4:17–20 John introduces the reader to the fifth reason why Christians love: because love is the Christian's confidence in judgment (see notes on 3:16–23).

4:17 Love . . . perfected among us. John is not suggesting sinless perfection, but rather mature love marked by confidence in the face of judgment. Confidence is a sign that love is mature. as He is, so are we. Jesus was God's Son in whom He was well pleased on earth; we also are God's children (3:11) and the objects of His gracious goodness. If Jesus called God Father, so may we, since we are accepted in the Beloved (Eph. 1:6). In verse 18, the same truth is stated negatively. The love that builds confidence also banishes fears. We love God and reverence Him, but we do not love God and come to Him in love and, at the same time, hide from Him in terror (cf. Rom. 8:14, 15; 2 Tim. 1:7). Fear involves torment or punishment, a reality the sons of God will never experience, because they are forgiven.

4:21 This verse summarizes chapter 4. One cannot love God without first loving his fellow believer. A claim to love God is a delusion if not accompanied by unselfish love for other Christians.

IV. THE FUNDAMENTAL TESTS OF GENUINE FELLOWSHIP—SPIRAL IV (5:1–21)

A. The Victorious Live in Christ (5:1–5)

5:1–5 John introduces the subject of the victorious life. While the Bible uses many terms to describe what Christians are (e.g., believers, friends, brothers, sheep, saints, soldiers, witnesses, etc.), John highlights one particular term in this chapter: the overcomer (see note on v. 4 for the meaning of the term). Of the twenty-four times the word occurs in the NT, John uses it twenty-one times (cf. also Rev. 2:7, 11, 17; 2:26; 3:5, 12, 21). Several different forms of this term appear in these verses to emphasize the victorious nature of the believer.

5:1 Whoever believes. Saving faith is the first characteristic of an overcomer. The term believes conveys the idea of continuing faith, making the point that the mark of genuine believers is that they continue in faith throughout their life. Saving belief is not

Why Believers Love

In stark contrast to the self-centered and destructive philosophies and practices of the false teachers, John unfolds the powerful reasons why Christians practice love. In 1 John 4:7–21, the apostle includes five such reasons:

1. Christians habitually practice love because God, who indwells them, is the essence of love. The gnostics believed that God was immaterial spirit and light, but never defined the source of love as coming from His inmost being. As God is Spirit (John 4:24), light (1:5), and a consuming fire (Heb. 12:9), so He is love (4:7, 8). Love is inherent in all He is and does. Even His judgment and wrath are perfectly harmonized with His love.

2. Christians habitually practice love because they desire to imitate the supreme example of God's sacrificial love in sending His Son for us (4:9).

3. Christians habitually practice love because love is the heart of Christian witness (4:12). Nobody can see God loving since He is invisible. Jesus no longer is in the world to manifest the love of God. The only demonstration of God's love in this age is the church. That testimony is critical (John 13:35; 2 Cor. 5:18–20).

4. Christians habitually practice love because love is the Christian's assurance (4:13–16; 3:21). Love banishes self-condemnation. When a Christian recognizes in his life the manifestation of love in actions, it results in confidence about his relationship with God.

5. Christians habitually practice love because love is the Christian's confidence in judgment (4:17–20; 3:16–23). Confidence is a sign that love is mature. This is not to suggest sinless perfection in a Christian's life, but rather a habitual practice of love marked by confidence in the face of judgment. Christians love, not in order to escape judgment, but because they have escaped judgment.

simply intellectual acceptance, but wholehearted dedication to Jesus Christ that is permanent. Jesus is the Christ. The object of the believer's faith is Jesus, particularly that He is the promised Messiah or Anointed One whom God sent to be the Savior from sin. Whoever places faith in Jesus Christ as the only Savior has been born again and, as a result, is an overcomer (v. 5). born of God. This is a reference to the New Birth and is the same word that Jesus used in John 3:7. The tense of the Greek verb indicates that ongoing faith is the result of the New Birth and, therefore, the evidence of the New Birth. The sons of God will manifest the reality that they have been born again by continuing to believe in God's Son, the Savior. The New Birth brings us into a permanent faith relationship with God and Christ. everyone who loves Him who begot also loves him who is begotten of Him. Love is the second characteristic of the overcomer. The overcomer not only believes in God, but loves both God and fellow believers. The moral test is again in view.

5:2, 3 keep His commandments. John repeats this phrase twice in these two verses. Obedience is the third characteristic of an overcomer. In these five verses, John weaves faith, love, and obedience all together inextricably. They exist mutually in a dynamic relationship, i.e., as the genuine proof of love is obedience, so the genuine proof of faith is love. The word keep conveys the idea of constant obedience (cf. John 8:31, 32; 14:15, 21; 15:10).

5:3 His commandments are not burdensome. For example, in contrast to the burdensome man-made religious traditions of the Jewish leaders (Matt. 23:4), the yoke of Jesus is easy and the burden light (Matt. 11:30).

5:4 overcomes. John clearly defines who these overcomers are: they are all who believe that Jesus is God's Son, and everything that means. The overcomers are believers—all of them (cf. 2:13). The word for overcomer results from a Greek word meaning "to conquer," "to have victory," "to have superiority," or "conquering power." The word reflects a genuine superiority that leads to overwhelming success. The victory is demonstrable; it involves overthrowing an enemy so that the victory is seen by all. Jesus also used this word to describe Himself (John 16:33). Because of believers' union with Christ, they too partake in His victory (Rom. 8:37; 2 Cor. 2:14). The word overcomes in the original language conveys the idea that believers have continual victory over the world.

5:4, 5 the world. Satan's worldwide system of deception and wickedness. See notes on 2:15. Through Christ and His provision of salvation, the believer is a victor (v. 5) over the invisible system of demonic and human evil that Satan operates to capture people's souls for hell. John repeats the reference to overcoming the world three times—to press it home. our faith . . . he who believes. Faith in Jesus Christ and dedication of one's life to Him make a person an overcomer. John repeats the truth for emphasis.

B. The Witness of God for Christ (5:6–12)

5:6–12 The term witness is the theme of this section. The passage concerns the witness or testimony of God and the Spirit to the world regarding the great truth of the deity of Jesus Christ. The previous passage (5:1–5) described overcomers as those who believed in Jesus as Lord and Savior; here, John presents God's own testimony to confirm that Jesus is the Christ (John 5:31–37; 8:13–18). He gives two kinds of testimony: external (vv. 6–9) and internal (vv. 10–12).

5:6 water and blood. Water and the blood constitute external, objective witnesses to who Jesus Christ is. They refer to Jesus' baptism (water) and death (blood). John combats the dualism of false teachers who asserted that the "Christ-spirit" departed from the man Jesus just prior to His death on the Cross (see Introduction: Background and Setting). John writes to show that God has given testimony to the deity of Jesus through both His baptism and death. bears witness. The verb bear witness and the noun testimony both come from the same Greek word and are used a total of nine times in this section. The basic meaning is "someone who has personal and immediate knowledge of something." the Spirit is truth. John no longer emphasizes apostolic testimony (1:1–4; 4:14), but writes of the testimony of God that comes through the Holy Spirit. Since the Spirit of God cannot lie, His testimony is sure.

5:7 three that bear witness. The OT law required "the testimony of two or three witnesses" to establish the truth of a particular matter (Deut. 17:6; 19:15; cf. John 8:17, 18; 1 Tim. 5:19).

5:7, 8 in heaven: the Father, the Word, and the Holy Spirit... three that bear witness on earth. These words are a direct reference to the Trinity; so what they say is accurate. External manuscript evidence, however, is against them being in the original epistle. They do not appear in any Greek manuscripts dated before c. the tenth century A.D. Only eight very late Greek manuscripts contain the reading, and these contain the passage in what appears to be a translation from a late recension of the Latin Vulgate. Furthermore, four of those eight manuscripts contain the passage as a variant reading, written in the margin as a later addition to the manuscript. No Greek or Latin Father, even those involved in Trinitarian controversies, quotes them; no ancient version, except the Latin, records them (not the Old Latin in its early form or the Vulgate). Internal evidence also militates against their presence, since they disrupt the sense of the writer's thoughts. Most likely, the words were added much later to the text. There is no verse in Scripture which so explicitly states the obvious reality of the Trinity, although many passages imply it strongly. See 2 Corinthians 13:14.

5:8 the Spirit, the water, and the blood.

At the baptism of Jesus, the Father and the Spirit testified to the Son (see Matt. 3:16, 17). The death of Jesus Christ also witnessed to who He was (Matt. 27:54; Heb. 9:14). The Holy Spirit testified throughout Jesus' life about His identity (Mark 1:12; Luke 1:35; Acts 10:38).

5:10 has the witness in himself. John writes of the internal subjective witness to the Son within the believer's heart (Rom. 8:15, 16; Gal. 4:6). made Him a liar. If someone refuses the testimony of God regarding His Son, such rejection is the ultimate form of blasphemy, because it is tantamount to calling God a liar (Titus 1:2; Heb. 6:18).

5:11, 12 This testimony summarizes the blessing of the believer's subjective witness—the very life that we possess in Christ expressed in the grace and power He provides all the time. It is the very experience of knowing Christ in one's life. Life is only in Him; so it is impossible to have it without Him.

C. Christian Certainties Because of Christ (5:13–20)

1. The certainty of eternal life (5:13)

5:13–21 John concludes his letter with a discussion regarding five Christian certainties that constitute a powerful climax to the entire epistle. He accentuates their certainty by using the word know seven times in this section.

5:13 These things. This phrase has reference to all that John has written in his letter. that you may know that you have eternal life. Assurance of eternal life constitutes the first Christian certainty. While John wrote his Gospel to bring unbelievers to faith (John 20:31), he wrote the epistle to give believers confidence that they possessed eternal life. The false brethren's departure left John's congregations shaken (2:19). He assured those who remained that since they adhered to the fundamentals of the faith (a proper view of Christ, obedience, and love), their salvation was sure. eternal life. This does not refer primarily to a period of time but a person (v. 20; John 17:3). Eternal life involves having a relationship with the person of Jesus Christ and possessing His nature (as in vv. 11, 12).

2. The certainty of answered prayer (5:14–17)

5:14–17 Answered prayer is the second Christian certainty.

5:14 confidence. For the meaning of the term, see note on 3:21. Christians can know with absolute confidence that God answers prayer when they approach the throne of grace (Heb. 4:16). according to His will. This phrase constitutes a strategic key to answered prayer. To pray according to God's will is to pray in accord with what He would want, not what we would desire or insist that He do for us (John 14:13, 14). John already specified that answered prayer also depends on obedience to God's commandments and avoidance of sin (3:21; Ps. 66:18; John 15:7; 1 Pet. 3:7). Since genuine believers know God's Word (i.e., His will) and practice those things that are pleasing to Him, they never insist on their own will, but supremely seek God's desires (Matt. 27:39–42). He hears us. The word hear signifies that God always hears the prayers of His children (Ps. 34:15–17), but not always in the manner they are presented.

5:16, 17 John illustrates praying according to God's will with the specific example of the "sin leading to death." Such a sin could be any premeditated and unconfessed sin that causes the Lord to end a believer's life. It is not one particular sin, like homosexuality or lying, but whatever sin is the final one in the tolerance of God. Failure to repent of and forsake sin may eventually lead to physical death as a judgment of God (Acts 5:1–11; 1 Cor. 5:5; 11:30). No intercessory prayer will be effective for those who have committed such deliberate high-handed sin, i.e., God's discipline with physical death is inevitable in such cases as He seeks to preserve the purity of His church (see notes on 1 Cor. 5:5–7). The contrast to the phrase "there is sin leading to death" with "there is sin not leading to death" signifies that the writer distinguishes between sins that may lead to physical death and those that do not. That is not to identify a certain kind of mortal or non-mortal sin, but to say not all sins are so judged by God.

3. The certainty of victory over sin and Satan (5:18)

5:18 Victory over sin and Satan is the third Christian certainty (3:9; Rom. 6:15–22). he. This refers to Christ as the only

Five Confidences of a True Christian

|                                                    |         |
|----------------------------------------------------|---------|
| 1. Confident of eternal life in Christ             | 5:13    |
| 2. Confident of answered prayer in the will of God | 5:14–17 |
| 3. Confident of victory over sin                   | 5:18    |
| 4. Confident of belonging to God                   | 5:19    |
| 5. Confident of Christ being the one, true God     | 5:20    | begotten of the Father (cf. John 1:14, 18). himself. This word is not in the best manuscripts. The better reading in the original language is “keeps him,” referring to the fact that God protects the believer. wicked one. This is a reference to Satan. does not touch him. John uses this word only here and in John 20:17. The word suggests “to lay hold of” or “to grasp” in order to harm. Because the believer belongs to God, Satan must operate within God’s sovereignty and cannot function beyond what God allows, as in the example of Job (Job 2:5; Rom. 16:20). While Satan may persecute, tempt, test, and accuse the believer, God protects His children and places definite limits on Satan’s influence or power (2:13; John 10:28; 17:12–15).

4. The certainty of belonging to God (5:19)

5:19 we are of God. That Christians belong to God is the fourth Christian certainty. Only two types of people exist in the world according to John: children of God and children of Satan (see note on 3:10). One belongs either to God or to the evil world system that is Satan’s domain. Because the whole world belongs to Satan, Christians should avoid its contamination.

5. The certainty of Christ being the true God (5:20)

5:20 true. The word means “genuine” as opposed to what is false (cf. v. 21). God and eternal life. That Jesus Christ is the true God is the fifth Christian certainty. This verse constitutes the summation of John’s whole letter. The greatest certainty of all, the Incarnation, guarantees the certainty of the rest. This is the doctrinal foundation out of which comes love and obedience.

D. Vigilance for the Sake of Christ (5:21)

5:21 keep yourselves from idols. John contrasts the term idols with “the true God” of verse 20. He has reference here to the false teachers who withdrew from the brotherhood with which they had been formerly associated (2:19). Their false beliefs and practices are the idols from which the readers are commanded to protect themselves. The false teachers upheld the world’s philosophy as superior to God’s revelation as demonstrated in their perversion of basic Christian teaching (faith, love, and obedience). In closing, John once again highlights the importance of adherence to the fundamentals of the faith.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF JOHN

Title

The epistle's title is "2 John." It is the second in a series of three epistles that bear the apostle John's name. Second and Third John present the closest approximation in the NT to the conventional letter form of the contemporary Greco-Roman world, since they were addressed from an individual to individuals. Second and Third John are the shortest epistles in the NT, each containing less than three hundred Greek words. Each letter could fit on a single papyrus sheet (cf. 3 John 13).

Author and Date

The author is the apostle John. He describes himself in 2 John 1 as "the Elder" which conveys the advanced age of the apostle, his authority, and status during the foundational period of Christianity when he was involved with Jesus' ministry. The precise date of the epistle cannot be determined. Since the wording, subject matter, and circumstances of 2 John closely approximate 1 John (v. 5 [cf. 1 John 2:7; 3:11]; v. 6 [cf. 1 John 5:3]; v. 7 [cf. 1 John 2:18–26]; v. 9 [cf. 1 John 2:23]; v. 12; [cf. 1 John 1:4]), most likely John composed the letter at the same time or soon after 1 John, c. A.D. 90–95, during his ministry at Ephesus in the latter part of his life.

Background and Setting

Second John deals with the same problem as 1 John (see Introduction to 1 John: Background and Setting). False teachers influenced by the beginnings of Gnostic thought were threatening the church (v. 7; cf. 1 John 2:18, 19, 22, 23; 4:1–3). The strategic difference is that while 1 John has no specific individual or church specified to whom it was addressed, 2 John has a particular local group or house-church in mind (v. 1).

The focus of 2 John is that the false teachers were conducting an itinerant ministry among John's congregations, seeking to make converts, and taking advantage of Christian hospitality to advance their cause (vv. 10, 11; cf. Rom. 12:13; Heb. 13:2; 1 Pet. 4:9). The individual addressed in the greeting (v. 1) inadvertently or unwisely may have shown these false prophets hospitality, or John may have feared that the false teachers would attempt to take advantage of her kindness (vv. 10, 11). The apostle warns his readers against showing hospitality to such deceivers (vv. 10, 11). Although his exhortation may appear on the surface to be harsh or unloving, the acutely dangerous nature of their teaching justified such actions, especially since it threatened to destroy the very foundations of the faith (v. 9).

Historical and Theological Themes

The overall theme of 2 John closely parallels 1 John's theme of a "recall to the fundamentals of the faith" or "back to the basics of Christianity" (vv. 4–6). For John, the basics of Christianity are summarized by adherence to the truth (v. 4), love (v. 5), and obedience (v. 6).

The apostle, however, conveys an additional, but related, theme in 2 John: biblical guidelines for hospitality. Not only are Christians to adhere to the fundamentals of the faith, but the gracious hospitality that is commanded of them (Rom. 12:13) must be discriminating. The basis of hospitality must be common love of or interest in the truth, and Christians must share their love within the confines of that truth. They are not called to universal acceptance of anyone who claims to be a believer. Love must be discerning.

Hospitality and kindness must be focused on those who are adhering to the fundamentals of the faith. Otherwise, Christians may actually aid those who are attempting to destroy those basic truths of the faith. Sound doctrine must serve as the test of fellowship and the basis of separation between those who profess to be Christians and those who actually are (vv. 10, 11; cf. Rom. 16:17; Gal. 1:8, 9; 2 Thess. 3:6, 14; Titus 3:10).

Interpretive Challenges

Second John stands in direct antithesis to the frequent cry for ecumenism and Christian unity among believers. Love and truth are inseparable in Christianity. Truth must always guide the exercise of love (cf. Eph. 4:15). Love must stand the test of truth. The main lesson of this book is that truth determines the bounds of love and, as a consequence, of unity. Therefore, truth must exist before love can unite, for truth generates love (1 Pet. 1:22). When someone compromises the truth, true Christian love and unity are destroyed. Only a shallow sentimentalism exists where the truth is not the foundation of unity.

The reference to the “elect lady and her children” (v. 1) should be understood in a normal, plain sense referring to a particular woman and her children rather than interpreted in a non-literal sense as a church and its membership. Similarly, the reference to “the children of your elect sister” (v. 13) should be understood as a reference to the nieces and/or nephews of the individual addressed in verse 1, rather than metaphorically to a sister church and its membership. In these verses, John conveys greetings to personal acquaintances whom he has come to know through his ministry.

- IV. The Blessings of Christian Hospitality (12, 13)

I. THE BASIS OF CHRISTIAN HOSPITALITY (1–3)

1 The Elder. John uses this title to emphasize his advanced age, his spiritual authority over the congregations in Asia Minor, and the strength of his own personal eyewitness testimony to the life of Jesus and all that He taught (vv. 4–6). the elect lady and her children. Some think that this phrase refers metaphorically to a particular local church, while “her children” refers to members of the congregation. The more natural understanding in context, however, is that it refers to a particular woman and her children (i.e., offspring) who were well known to John. whom I love in truth. The basis of Christian hospitality is the truth (vv. 1–3). John accentuates the need for truth by repeating the term truth five times in the opening four verses. Truth refers to the basics or fundamentals of the faith that John has discussed in 1 John (sound belief in Christ, obedience, love) as well as the truths expressed in 2 John (e.g., vv. 4–6). Truth is the necessary condition of unity and, as a result, the basis of hospitality.

2 truth . . . abides in us . . . will be with us forever. This is the cognitive truth of God’s Word (cf. Col. 3:16).

3 Grace, mercy, and peace . . . in truth and love. John’s succession from grace to mercy and then to peace marks the order from the first motion of God to the final satisfaction of man. The confines of these threefold blessings are within the sphere of truth and love.

II. THE BEHAVIOR OF CHRISTIAN HOSPITALITY (4–6)

4 children walking in truth, as we received commandment. The behavior of hospitality involves obedience to the truth

(see vv. 5, 6). The word walking has reference to continual walking in the truth, i.e., making obedience to the truth a habit in one’s life.

5 new commandment . . . that we love one another. John ties the commandment of truth to the commandment of love (cf. 1 John 2:7–11; 4:7–12). The word love has reference to practicing love as a habit in one’s life. Both walking in the truth and in love is the behavior of hospitality.

6 This is love, that we walk according to His commandments. John defines love, not as a sentiment or an emotion, but as obedience to God’s commands (see notes on 1 John 5:2, 3). Those who are obedient to the truth as contained in God’s commandments, the fundamentals of the faith (1 John 2:3–11), are identified as walking in love. Cf. John 14:15, 21; 15:10.

III. THE BOUNDS OF CHRISTIAN HOSPITALITY (7–11)

7 many deceivers. Cf. Mark 13:22, 23; 1 Timothy 4:1–4; 2 Peter 2:1ff.; 1 John 4:1. In verses 7–11, John gives limits for Christian hospitality. This is the centerpiece of John’s thought in this epistle and expands the first two points. Since Satan comes as an angel of light (2 Cor. 11:13–15), believers must be on guard against error by having an intimate acquaintance with the truth. who do not confess Jesus Christ as coming in the flesh. The original language conveys the idea of a habitual denial of the undiminished deity and humanity of Christ. A biblical Christology maintains that Jesus Christ’s nature was both fully God and fully man with all the implications for the fulfillment of redemptive purposes. The essence of the severest error in false religions, heresies, and cults is a denial of the true nature of Jesus Christ.

8 do not lose those things we worked for.

Although a reward is generally promised Christians for hospitality (e.g., Matt. 10:41; 25:40; Mark 9:41), the idea here is of the fullness of a believer's reward for all the good he has done (see 1 Cor. 3:10–17; 2 Cor. 5:9, 10). A loss of that reward may occur to any believer who does not discriminate fellowship on the basis of adherence to the truth (Col. 2:18, 19; 3:24, 25). This is a potent warning. All the eternal reward one earns by seeing Christ purely, eagerly, and effectively in the Spirit can be diminished by any aiding or abetting of false teaching.

9 does not abide in the doctrine of Christ does not have God. A failure to be faithful to the fundamental, sound doctrines of the faith (a proper view of the person and work of Christ, love, obedience) marks a person as having never been born again (1 John 2:23; 3:6–10; 4:20, 21; 5:1–3). The word abide has the idea of constant adherence and warns that these fundamentals are not open to change or subject to the latest trends or philosophical fads.

10 do not receive him into your house nor greet him. John's prohibition is not a case of entertaining people who disagree on minor matters. These false teachers were carrying on a regular campaign to destroy the basic, fundamental truths of Christianity. Complete disassociation from such heretics is the only appropriate course of action for genuine believers. No benefit or aid of any type (not even a greeting) is permissible. Believers should aid only those who proclaim the truth (vv. 5–8).

11 shares in his evil deeds. Hospitality to such leaders aids the spread of their heresy and inevitably leaves the impression of sanctioning the teachings of these antichrists (cf. 1 John 2:22). Supreme loyalty to God and His Word alone must characterize the actions of every true believer.

IV. THE BLESSINGS OF CHRISTIAN HOSPITALITY (12, 13)

12 paper and ink. The word paper refers to a papyrus sheet. One papyrus sheet could contain the whole letter of 2 John. The term ink means "black" and refers to a mixture of water, charcoal, and gum resin that was used to write. face to face. John literally wrote "mouth to mouth." Cf. Numbers 12:8 where God spoke to Moses "mouth to mouth." that our joy may be full. The blessing of hospitality is full joy (vv. 12, 13). John uses this same wording in 1 John 1:4. When believers uphold the biblical standards for fellowship, the result is genuine joy among believers because the truths of the Word are maintained.

13 The children of your elect sister. John refers to the nieces and/or nephews of the woman ("elect lady") addressed in verse 1 who sent their greetings via John.

THE THIRD EPISTLE OF JOHN

Title

The epistle's title is "3 John." It is the third in a series of three epistles that bear the apostle John's name. Third John and Second John present the closest approximation in the New Testament to the conventional letter form of the contemporary Greco-Roman world, since they were addressed from an individual to individuals. Both 2 and 3 John are the shortest epistles in the NT, each containing less than three hundred Greek words, so as to fit on a single papyrus sheet (cf. v. 13).

Author and Date

The author is the apostle John. He describes himself in verse 1 as "the Elder" which conveys the advanced age of the apostle, his authority, and his eyewitness status, especially during the foundational period of Christianity when John was involved with Jesus' ministry (cf. 2 John 1). The precise date of the epistle cannot be determined. Since the structure, style, and vocabulary closely approximate 2 John (v. 1 [cf. 2 John 1]; v. 4 [cf. 2 John 4]; v. 13 [cf. 2 John 12]; v. 14 [cf. 2 John 12]), most likely John composed the letter at the same time or soon after 2 John, c. A.D. 90–95. As with 1 and 2 John, the apostle probably composed the letter during his ministry at Ephesus in the latter part of his life.

Background and Setting

Third John is perhaps the most personal of

John's three epistles. While 1 John appears to be a general letter addressed to congregations scattered throughout Asia Minor and 2 John was sent to a lady and her family (2 John 1), in 3 John the apostle clearly names the sole recipient as "the beloved Gaius" (v. 1). This makes the epistle one of a few letters in the NT addressed strictly to an individual (cf. Philemon). The name Gaius was very common in the first century (e.g., Acts 19:29; 20:4; Rom. 16:23; 1 Cor. 1:14), but nothing is known of this individual beyond John's salutation, from which it is inferred that he was a member of one of the churches under John's spiritual oversight.

As with 2 John, 3 John focuses on the basic issue of hospitality, but from a different perspective. While 2 John warns against showing hospitality to false teachers (2 John 7–11), 3 John condemns the lack of hospitality shown to faithful ministers of the Word (vv. 9, 10). Reports came back to the apostle that itinerant teachers known and approved by him (vv. 5–8) had traveled to a certain congregation where they were refused hospitality (e.g., lodging and provision) by an individual named Diotrephes who domineered the assembly (v. 10). Diotrephes went even further, for he also verbally slandered the apostle John with malicious accusations and excluded anyone from the assembly who dared challenge him (v. 10).

In contrast, Gaius, a beloved friend of the apostle and faithful adherent to the truth (vv. 1–4), extended the correct standard of Christian hospitality to itinerant ministers. John wrote to commend the type of hospitality exhibited by Gaius to worthy representatives of the gospel (vv. 6–8) and to condemn the high-handed actions of Diotrephes (v. 10). The apostle promised to correct the situation personally and sent this letter through an individual named Demetrius, whom he commended for his good testimony among the brethren (vv. 10–12).

Historical and Theological Themes

The theme of 3 John is the commendation of the proper standards of Christian hospitality and the condemnation for failure to follow those standards.

Interpretive Challenges

Some think that Diotrephes may either have been a heretical teacher or at least favored the false teachers who were condemned by 2 John. However, the epistle gives no clear evidence to warrant such a conclusion, especially since one might expect that John would have mentioned Diotrephes's heretical views. The epistle indicates that his problems centered around arrogance and disobedience, which is a problem for the orthodox as well as the heretic.

I. THE COMMENDATION REGARDING CHRISTIAN HOSPITALITY (1–8)

1 The Elder. John uses the same term for himself as he did in 2 John 1. The term probably has reference to his age, his apostolic eyewitness status of Jesus' life, and also that he had an official position of authority in the church. the beloved*. The term beloved is only used of Christians in the NT (Col. 3:12; Philem. 1, 2; 2 Pet. 3:14; 1 John 4:1). Gaius*. Nothing is known of Gaius beyond the mention of his name in the salutation. The name was one of eighteen common names from which Roman parents usually chose a name for one of their sons, making any specific identification doubtful. John, his fellow believers, and even strangers to whom Gaius extended hospitality held him in great esteem for his Christian walk and conduct (vv. 1–6). John conveyed his own appreciation for Gaius by calling him “beloved” four times in the letter (vv. 1, 2, 5, 11). He probably was a member of a church somewhere in Asia Minor that was under John's sphere of influence. The apostle planned to visit him sometime in the near future (v. 13). whom I love in truth*. Because Christians have common knowledge of the truth, they have the common source of love (2 John 1). While some have taken the phrase to mean simply “truly” or “really” (Mark 12:32; John 1:47), John's usage of this phrase elsewhere in these letters, where truth takes on such a significant meaning, suggests that the elder intended the kind of love that is consistent with the fundamental truths of the faith (cf. v. 4; 1 John 2:21; 3:19).

2 I pray. John's prayer for Gaius is significant. Gaius's spiritual state was so excellent that John prayed that his physical health would match his spiritual vigor. To ask about one's health was standard custom in ancient letters, but John adapted this convention in a unique manner to highlight Gaius's vibrant spiritual state.

3 when brethren came and testified. The phrase indicates that Christians continually praised Gaius's exemplary obedience to the fundamentals of the faith. His spiritual reputation was well known. you walk in the truth. Gaius's reputation for practicing what he preached was exemplary (2 John 4). John's commendation of him is one of the greatest given in the NT, since the commendation centers not only on the fact that he knew the truth, but that he faithfully practiced it. Gaius's actions were in stark contrast to Diotrephes's negative reputation (v. 10).

4 I have no greater joy. John's personal affection for Gaius radiated especially from his personal conduct (Luke 6:46). my children. The word my is emphatic in the original. John's heart delighted in the proper conduct of his spiritual children in the faith. Those who walk (conduct) in the truth (belief) have integrity; there is no dichotomy between what one professes and how one lives. John had strong fatherly affection for them (cf. 1 Cor. 4:14–16; 1 Thess. 2:11; 3:1–10).

5 you do faithfully. Genuine faith always produces genuine good works (James 2:14–17). brethren and for strangers. Gaius practiced hospitality not only toward those whom he knew, but also to those whom he did not know. The reference concerns, especially, itinerant gospel preachers whom Gaius aided on their journeys.

6 who have borne witness of your love before the church. Gaius's reputation for hospitality and kindness (as well as obedience—v. 3) was also well known throughout the churches in the region. in a manner wor- thy of God. Cf. Colossians 1:10; 1 Thessalonians 2:12. The phrase has the connotation of treating people as God would treat them (see Matt. 10:40), and becomes the key manner in which hospitality should be practiced (Matt. 25:40–45). you will do well. John encouraged Gaius to keep practicing hospitality, especially because of the actions of Diotrephes, who conducted a heavy-handed campaign against it (v. 10).

7, 8 John gives several grounds for practicing hospitality in a “manner worthy of God.” First, one must show hospitality to those who have pure motives. These itinerant missionaries went out “for the sake of the name” (v. 7; cf. Rom. 1:5). They must be doing their ministry for God's glory, not their own. Second, one must show hospitality to those who are not in ministry for money. Since the missionaries were “taking nothing from the Gentiles” (v. 7), the church was their only means of support. They were free from avarice (2 Cor. 2:17; 1 Tim. 5:17, 18). Third, those who show hospitality participate in the ministries of those to whom hospitality is shown (v. 8). Verse 8 gives the same reason to demonstrate hospitality to genuine teachers, as does 2 John 10, in forbidding hospitality toward false teachers, i.e., that those who extend hospitality share in the deeds (i.e., good or bad) of those receiving it.

II. THE CONDEMNATION REGARDING VIOLATING CHRISTIAN HOSPITALITY (9–11)

9 I wrote to the church. John apparently had written a previous letter to the church, perhaps on the subject of hospitality, but it was lost. Perhaps, Diotrephes never read it to the church because he rejected John's authority (cf. vv. 9, 10). Diotrephes, who loves to have the preeminence. In the second part of his epistle, John condemned the violation of hospitality toward faithful ministers of the Word. The word preeminence has the idea of “desiring to be first.” It conveys the idea of someone who is selfish, self-centered, and self-seeking. The language suggests a self-promoting demagogue, who served no one, but wanted all to serve only him. Diotrephes’s actions directly contradict Jesus’ and the NT’s teaching on servant-leadership in the church (cf. Matt. 20:20–28; Phil. 2:5–11; 1 Tim. 3:3; 1 Pet. 5:3). does not receive us. Diotrephes modeled the opposite of kindness and hospitality to God’s servants, even denying John’s apostolic authority over the local congregation and, as a result, denying the revelation of God that came through that authority. His pride endeavored to supplant the rule of Christ through John in the church. Diotrephes’s character was the very opposite of the gentle and loving Gaius, who readily showed hospitality.

10 if I come, I will call to mind his deeds. John’s apostolic authority meant that Diotrephes had to answer for his behavior. The apostle did not overlook this usurping of Christ’s place in the church.

Verse 10 indicates that Diotrephes was guilty of four things: (1) “prating against us.” The word prating comes from a word meaning “to bubble up” and has the idea of useless, empty jabber (i.e., talking nonsense). The charges against John were completely unjustified; (2) “with malicious words.” Not only were Diotrephes’s charges false, they were evil; (3) “does not receive the brethren.” He not only slandered John, but also deliberately defied other believers; and (4) “putting them out of the church.” The original language indicates that Diotrephes’ habit was to excommunicate those who resisted his authority. does not receive the brethren. To accept John’s authority (v. 9), as well as being hospitable to the traveling ministers, directly threatened the authority that Diotrephes coveted.

11 do not imitate what is evil, but what is good. The verse begins the introduction to the commendation of Demetrius in verse 12. Gaius was to imitate Demetrius as the correct role model for his actions. He who does good is of God, but he who does evil has not seen God. John’s statement indicates that Diotrephes’s actions proved that he was never a Christian. This is a practical application of the moral test (see notes on 1 John 5:2, 3).

III. THE CONCLUSION REGARDING CHRISTIAN HOSPITALITY (12–14)

12 Demetrius. As with Gaius, Demetrius was a very common name in the Roman world (Acts 19:24, 38). Nothing is known of him apart from this epistle. He may have delivered this letter, which also would serve to commend him to Gaius. has a good testimony from all. Like Gaius, Demetrius’s reputation was well known in the region. from the truth itself. Demetrius was an excellent role model preeminently because he practiced the truth of God’s Word in his life.

13, 14 pen and ink ... face to face. See note on 2 John 12.

THE EPISTLE OF JUDE

Title

Jude, which is rendered “Judah” in Hebrew and “Judas” in Greek, was named after its author (v. 1), one of the four half-brothers of Christ (Matt. 13:55; Mark 6:3). As the fourth shortest NT book (Philem., 2 John, and 3 John are shorter), Jude is the last of eight general epistles. Jude does not quote the OT directly, but there are at least nine obvious allusions to it. Contextually, this “epistolary sermon” could be called “The Acts of the Apostates.”

Author and Date

Although Jude (Judas) was a common name in Palestine (at least eight are named in the NT), the author of Jude generally has been accepted as Jude, Christ’s half-brother. He is to be differentiated from the apostle Judas, the son of James (Luke 6:16; Acts 1:13). Several lines of thought lead to this conclusion: (1) Jude’s appeal to being the “brother of James,” the leader of the Jerusalem Council (Acts 15) and another half-brother of Jesus (v. 1; cf. Gal. 1:19); (2) Jude’s salutation being similar to James (cf. James 1:1); and (3) Jude’s not identifying himself as an apostle (v. 1), but rather distinguishing between himself and the apostles (v. 17).

The doctrinal and moral apostasy discussed by Jude (vv. 4–18) closely parallels that of 2 Peter (2:1–3:4), and it is believed that Peter’s writing predated Jude for several reasons: (1) 2 Peter anticipates the coming of false teachers (2 Pet. 2:1, 2; 3:3), while Jude deals with their arrival (vv. 4, 11, 12, 17, 18); and (2) Jude quotes directly from 2 Peter 3:3 and acknowledges that it is from an apostle (vv. 17, 18). Since no mention of Jerusalem’s destruction in A.D. 70 was made by Jude, though Jude most likely came after 2 Peter (c. A.D. 68–70), it was almost certainly written before the destruction of Jerusalem.

Although Jude did travel on missionary trips with other brothers and their wives (1 Cor. 9:5), it is most likely that he wrote from Jerusalem. The exact audience of believers with whom Jude corresponded is unknown, but it seems to be Jewish in light of Jude’s illustrations. He undoubtedly wrote to a region recently plagued by false teachers.

Although Jude had earlier rejected Jesus as Messiah (John 7:1–9), he, along with other half-brothers of the Lord, was converted after Christ’s Resurrection (Acts 1:14). Because of his relation to Jesus, his eyewitness knowledge of the resurrected Christ, and the content of this epistle, Jude was acknowledged as inspired and was included in the Muratorian Canon (A.D. 170). The early questions about its canonicity also tend to support the conclusion that it was written after 2 Peter. If Peter had quoted Jude, there would have been no question about canonicity, since Peter would thereby have given Jude apostolic affirmation. Clement of Rome (c. A.D. 96) plus Clement of Alexandria (c. A.D. 200) also alluded to the authenticity of Jude. Its diminutive size and Jude’s quotations from uninspired writings account for any misplaced questions about its canonicity.

Background and Setting

Jude lived at a time when Christianity was under severe political attack from Rome and aggressive spiritual infiltration from gnostic-like apostates and libertines who sowed abundant seed for a gigantic harvest of doctrinal error. It could be that this was the forerunner to full-blown Gnosticism which the apostle John would confront over twenty-five years later in his epistles. Except for John, who lived at the close of the century, all of the other apostles had been martyred and Christianity was thought to be extremely vulnerable. Thus, Jude called the church to fight for the truth in the midst of intense spiritual warfare.

Historical and Theological Themes

Jude is the only NT book devoted exclusively to confronting “apostasy,” meaning defection from the true, biblical faith (vv. 3, 17). Apostates are described elsewhere in 2 Thessalonians 2:10; Hebrews 10:29; 2 Peter 2:1–22; 1 John 2:18–23. He wrote to condemn the apostates and to urge believers to contend for the faith. He called for discernment on the part of the church and a rigorous defense of biblical truth. He followed the earlier examples of: (1) Christ (Matt. 7:15ff.; 16:6–12; 24:11ff.; Rev. 2; 3); (2) Paul (Acts 20:29, 30; 1 Tim. 4:1; 2 Tim. 3:1–5; 4:3, 4); (3) Peter (2 Pet. 2:1, 2; 3:3, 4); and (4) John (1 John 4:1–6; 2 John 6–11).

Jude is replete with historical illustrations from the OT which include: (1) the Exodus (v. 5); (2) Satan’s rebellion (v. 6); (3) Sodom and Gomorrah (v. 7); (4) Moses’ death (v. 9); (5) Cain (v. 11); (6) Balaam (v. 11); (7) Korah (v. 11); (8) Enoch (vv. 14, 15); and (9) Adam (v. 14).

Jude also vividly described the apostates in terms of their character and unconscionable activities (vv. 4, 8, 10, 16, 18, 19). Additionally, he borrowed from nature to illustrate the futility of their teaching (vv. 12, 13). While Jude never commented on the specific content of their false teaching, it was enough to demonstrate that their degenerate personal lives and fruitless ministries betrayed their attempts to teach error as though it were truth. This emphasis on character repeats the constant theme regarding false teachers—their personal corruption. While their teaching is clever, subtle, deceptive, enticing, and delivered in many forms, the common way to recognize them is to look behind their false spiritual fronts and see their wicked lives (2 Pet. 2:10, 12, 18, 19).

Interpretive Challenges

Because there are no doctrinal issues discussed, the challenges of this letter have to do with interpretation in the normal process of discerning the meaning of the text. Jude does quote from non-canonical, pseudepigraphal (i.e., the actual author was not the one named in its title) sources such as 1 Enoch (v. 14) and the Assumption of Moses (v. 9) to support his points. Was this acceptable? Since Jude was writing under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit (2 Tim. 3:16; 2 Pet. 1:20, 21) and included material that was accurate and true in its affirmations, he did no differently than Paul (cf. Acts 17:28; 1 Cor. 15:33; Titus 1:12).

I. DESIRES OF JUDE (1, 2)

1 Jude. See Introduction: Author and Date. bondservant. Before the Crucifixion and Resurrection, Jude had denied Jesus as Messiah (Matt. 13:55; Mark 6:3; John 7:5), but afterward came to humbly acknowledge himself as His slave, having submitted to Christ's lordship. brother of James. James was the well-known leader of the Jerusalem church (Acts 12:17; 15:13; 21:18; Gal. 2:9) and author of the epistle that carried his name. called. As always in the epistles, this refers not to a general invitation to salvation, but to God's irresistible, elective call to salvation (cf. Rom. 1:7; 1 Cor. 1:23, 24; 1 Thess. 5:24; 2 Thess. 2:13, 14). This call yields: (1) fellowship with Christ (1 Cor. 1:9); (2) peace (1 Cor. 7:15); (3) freedom (Gal. 5:13); (4) a worthy walk (Eph. 4:1); (5) hope (Eph. 4:4); (6) holiness (1 Pet. 1:15); (7) blessing (1 Pet. 3:9); and (8) eternal glory (1 Pet. 5:10). Cf. "grace of our God" (v. 4). sanctified. The better Greek texts have beloved. Cf. John 13:1; 14:23; 16:27; 17:20, 23; Romans 5:8; 1 John 3:1, which expand on the idea of unconditional, thus unending, love from God to the believer in Christ. It is certainly because of that love that believers are "sanctified," set apart from sin to God by the transformation of conversion. God the Father. The plan of salvation and its fulfillment come from God, who is not only Father in the sense of creation and origin of all that exists, but is also "God our Savior" (v. 25; cf. 1 Tim. 2:4; Titus 1:3; 2:10; 3:4). See note on 1 Timothy 4:10. preserved. See note on verse 24. God not only initiates salvation, but He also completes it through Christ, thus preserving or keeping the believer secure for eternal life (cf. John 6:37–44; 10:28–30; 17:11, 15; Rom. 8:31–39; 2 Tim. 4:18; Heb. 7:25; 9:24; 1 Pet. 1:3–5).

2 Mercy, peace, and love. "Mercy and peace" was a common Jewish greeting;

"love" was added to make this distinctively Christian. Only here in the NT do these three qualities appear so closely together. Where law and works prevail, there is failure and death. Where grace prevails, there is mercy (Eph. 2:4; Heb. 4:16), peace (Rom. 5:1), and love (Rom. 5:5) in abundance.

II. DECLARATION OF WAR AGAINST APOSTATES (3, 4)

3 Beloved. Cf. verses 17, 20. I found it necessary. Cf. 1 Corinthians 9:16. This verse implies that Jude had intended to write a letter on salvation as the common blessing enjoyed by all believers, perhaps to emphasize unity and fellowship among believers, and remind them that God is no respecter of persons. But he was compelled, instead, to write a call to battle for the truth in light of the arrival of apostate teachers. contend earnestly. While the salvation of those to whom Jude wrote was not in jeopardy, false teachers preaching and living out a counterfeit gospel were misleading those who needed to hear the true gospel. Jude wrote this urgent imperative for Christians to wage war against error in all forms and to fight strenuously for the truth, like a soldier who has been entrusted with a sacred task of guarding a holy treasure (cf. 1 Tim. 6:12; 2 Tim. 4:7). the faith. This is the whole body of revealed salvation truth contained in the Scriptures (cf. Gal. 1:23; Eph. 4:5, 13; Phil. 1:27; 1 Tim. 4:1). Cf. verse 20. Here is a call to know sound doctrine (Eph. 4:14; Col. 3:16; 1 Pet. 2:2; 1 John 2:12–14), to be discerning in sorting out truth from error (1 Thess. 5:20–22), and to be willing to confront and attack error (see notes on 2 Cor. 10:3–5; Phil. 1:7, 27; 1 Tim. 1:18; 6:12; 2 Tim. 1:13; 4:7, 8; Titus 1:13). once for all delivered . . . saints. God's revelation was delivered once as a unit, at the completion of the Scripture, and is not to be edited by either deletion or addition (cf. Deut. 4:2; 12:32; Prov. 30:6; Rev. 22:18, 19). Scripture is complete, sufficient, and finished; therefore it is fixed for all time. Nothing is to be added to the body of the inspired Word (see notes on 2 Tim. 3:16, 17; 2 Pet. 1:19–21) because nothing else is needed. It is the responsibility of believers now to study the Word (2 Tim. 2:15), preach the Word (2 Tim. 4:2), and fight for its preservation. saints. Believers are identified as holy, since they are set apart from sin to God. See note on 1 Corinthians 1:2.

4 certain men . . . crept in unnoticed. These were infiltrating, false teachers pretending to be true, who on the surface looked like the real thing, but whose intentions were to lead God's people astray (cf. Matt. 7:15; Acts 20:29; Gal. 2:4, 5; 1 Tim. 4:1–3; 2 Pet. 2:1, 20; 1 John 2:18–23). These apostates were Satan's counterfeits, most likely posing as itinerant teachers (cf. 2 Cor. 11:13–15; 2 Pet. 2:1–3; 2 John 7–11). Their stealth made them dangerous. They were characterized by three features: (1) they were ungodly; (2) they perverted grace; and (3) they denied Christ. long ago . . . marked out. Apostasy and apostates in general were written about and condemned many centuries before, such as illustrated in verses 5–7 and spoken of as Enoch did in verses 14–16. Cf. Isaiah 8:19–21; 47:9–15; Hosea 9:9; Zephaniah 3:1–8. Their doom was prewritten in Scripture as a warning to all who would come later. Jesus had warned about them in Matthew 7:15–20 (cf. Acts 20:29). The most recent warning had been 2 Peter 2:3, 17; 3:7. this condemnation. This refers to the judgment spoken of by others "long ago." Jude's present exposé of apostates placed them in the path of the very judgment of God, written of previously. ungodly men. Lit. "impious" or "without worship." Their lack of reverence for God was demonstrated by the fact that they infiltrated the church of God to corrupt it and gain riches from its people. Cf. verses 15, 16, 18, 19. lewdness. Lit. "unrestrained vice" or "gross immorality," which describes the shameless lifestyle of one who irreverently flaunts God's grace by indulging in unchecked and open immorality (cf. Rom. 6:15). deny . . . Lord . . . Lord Jesus Christ. Two Greek words for Lord are used here. The apostates disowned Christ as sovereign Lord (despotes) and disdained any recognition of Christ as honorable Lord (kurios) by their wicked behavior. The better NT manuscripts omit "God" in the text, placing the emphasis clearly on one person, the Lord Jesus Christ, and emphasizing that apostates deny Him. See note on 2 Peter 2:1. Cf. Matthew 10:33; 2 Timothy 2:12; Titus 1:16; 1 John 2:22, 23. It is always true of apostates, false teachers, and false religions that they pervert what Scripture declares is true about the Lord Jesus Christ.

III. DAMNABLE OUTCOME OF APOSTATES (5–7)

5–7 Jude provided three well-known acts of apostasy from the OT as brief reminders (v. 5) to illustrate their damnable outcome as declared in verse 4.

5 saved . . . destroyed. Cf. Hebrews 3:16–19. God miraculously delivered the nation of Israel out of Egyptian bondage (Ex. 12:51; Deut. 4:34), only to have them respond in unbelief, doubting, and defecting from faith in God that He could bring them into the Promised Land (Num. 13:25–14:4), even to the extent of worshiping an idol of their own making, as well as murmuring against God instead of adoring Him (Ex. 16:7–12; 1 Cor. 10:10, 11). That apostate generation died during thirty-eight years of wilderness wanderings (Num. 14:22–30, 35)

6 angels . . . did not keep. This apostasy of fallen angels is described in Genesis 6:1–3 as possessing men who then cohabited with women. See note on 2 Peter 2:4. The transition to Sodom and Gomorrah in verse 7 points to the similitude of the sin of homosexuality and what these angels did in Genesis 6. judgment . . . great day. This refers to the final judgment when all demons and Satan are forever consigned to the “lake of fire” prepared for them (Matt. 25:41; Rev. 20:10) and all the ungodly (Rev. 20:15).

7 Sodom . . . Gomorrah. See notes on 2 Peter 2:6–10. The destruction of these cities at the southeast corner of the Dead Sea is used over twenty times in Scripture as an illustration of God’s judgment during the days of Abraham and Lot (cf. Gen. 18:22–19:29). This destruction was in view of their apostasy, since it occurred about 450 years after the flood, when at least one of Noah’s sons, Shem (Gen. 11:10, 11) was still living. Since this was only 100 years after Noah’s death (Gen. 9:28), people would have known about the message of righteousness and judgment from God which Noah preached, and which they rejected. similar . . . to these. This points back to verse 6. sexual immorality . . . strange flesh. This refers to both the heterosexual (Gen. 19:8) and homosexual lusts (Gen. 19:4, 5) of the residents. Cf. Leviticus 18:22; 20:13; Romans 1:27; 1 Corinthians 6:9; 1 Timothy 1:10 for the absolute condemnation of homosexual activity. eter- nal fire. Sodom and Gomorrah illustrate God’s fire of earthly judgment (cf. Rev. 16:8, 9; 20:9) which was only a preview of the fire that can never be quenched in eternal hell (cf. Matt. 3:12; 18:8; 25:41; Mark 9:43, 44, 46, 48; Luke 3:17; Rev. 19:20; 20:14, 15; 21:8).

IV. DENUNCIATION OF APOSTATES (8–16)

8 these dreamers. See notes on 2 Peter 2:10–12. This refers to a confused state of the soul or abnormal imagination, producing delusions and sensual confusion. These men’s minds were numb to the truth of God’s Word so that, being beguiled and deluded, they fantasized wicked perversions, being blind and deaf to reality and truth. Perhaps they falsely claimed these were dreams/visions from God. These occurs five more times (vv. 10, 12, 14, 16, 19) in reference to the apostates, who are characterized in the following three ways. defile the flesh. Similar to the inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah (v. 7), apostates have few, if any, moral restraints and, thus, are frequently characterized by immoral lifestyles (v. 4). Cf. Titus 1:15; Hebrews 12:15; 2 Peter 2:10–19; 3:3. reject authority. Like the sinning angels (v. 6), these pretenders rejected all authority, civil and spiritual, thus rejecting the Scriptures and denying Christ (v. 4). speak evil . . . dignitaries. Cf. verse 10. That the dignitaries

(lit. “glories”) are likely angels is supported by the illustration in verse 9.

9 Michael . . . archangel. The chief angel of God who especially watches over Israel (Dan. 10:13, 21; 12:1) and leads the holy angels (Rev. 12:7). Nowhere else in Scripture is this struggle over the body of Moses mentioned. Michael had to fight with Satan to do God’s bidding, as he did on another occasion in Daniel 10:13 (see note there). the devil. Another name for Satan which means “accuser” or “slanderer” (cf. Rev. 12:9, 10). body of Moses. Moses died on Mount Nebo in Moab without having entered the Promised Land and was secretly buried in a place not known to man (Deut. 34:5, 6). It would likely be that this confrontation took place as Michael buried Moses to prevent Satan from using Moses’ body for some diabolical purpose not stated. Perhaps Satan wanted to use it as an idol, an object of worship for Israel. God sent Michael, however, to be certain it was buried. This account was recorded in the pseudepigraphal Assumption of Moses (see Introduction: Interpretive Challenges). reviling accusation. See note on 2 Peter 2:11. Rather than personally cursing such a powerful angel as Satan, Michael deferred to the ultimate, sovereign power of God following the example of the Angel of the Lord in Zechariah 3:2. This is the supreme illustration of how Christians are to deal with Satan and demons. Believers are not to address them, but rather to seek the Lord’s intervening power against them.

10 speak evil. Lit. “blaspheme.” Cf. verse 8. Apostate teachers, in their brash, bold, egotistical infatuation with imagined power and authority, rail on that which they don’t even understand. whatever . . . whatever. See note on 2 Peter 2:12. Apostates are intellectually arrogant and spiritually ignorant in that they don’t know because they are blinded by Satan (2 Cor. 4:4), and spiritual matters are beyond their unregenerate capacity to understand (1 Cor. 2:14). In divine matters, they are no brighter than the dumbest beasts. corrupt themselves. This speaks of spiritual and moral self-destruction.

11 Woe. In declaring ultimate spiritual judgment on the apostates, Jude followed the example of the prophets (cf. Is. 5:8–23) and of Christ (cf. Matt. 23:13, 15, 16, 23, 25, 27, 29). The severest judgment of all (Heb. 10:26) will come on apostates because they, too, followed the same path as Cain, Balaam, and Korah. way of Cain. Cain openly rebelled against God’s revealed will regarding sacrifice (see notes on Gen. 4:1–15; cf. Heb. 11:4; 1 John 3:12). error of Balaam. Cf. Numbers 22–25; see note on 2 Peter 2:15. For a large financial reward, Balaam devised a plan for Balak, king of Moab, to entice Israel into a compromising situation with idolatry and immorality which would bring God’s own judgment on His people (cf. Num. 31:16; Rev. 2:14). rebellion of Korah. See notes on Numbers 16:1–32. Korah, plus 250 Jewish leaders, rejected the God-appointed leadership of Moses and Aaron in an attempt to impose his will upon God and the people. Apostates will unquestionably meet the same end as Korah—divine judgment.

12, 13 See notes on 2 Peter 2:13–17.

12 spots . . . love feasts. See note on 2 Peter 2:13. Spots can be taken as “hidden rocks” or “reefs” or as “stains.” These apostates were dirt spots, filth on the garment of the church; or more likely, what God intended for the church as smooth sailing, they turned into a potential shipwreck through their presence. Love feasts were the regular gathering of the early church to partake of the bread and cup, plus share a common meal (cf. 1 Cor. 11:20–30). clouds without water. See note on 2 Peter 2:17. Apostates promise spiritual life but are empty clouds which only bring the hope of rain, actually delivering nothing but dryness and death (cf. Prov. 25:14). They preach a false gospel that leads only to hell. trees without fruit. Apostates hold out the claim of providing a spiritual feast, but instead deliver famine (cf. Luke 13:6–9). Doubly dead trees will never yield fruit and, regardless of what they say, will always be barren because they are uprooted. Cf. Matthew 7:17–20.

13 raging waves. Apostates promise powerful ministry, but are quickly exposed as wreckers of havoc and workers of worthless shame (cf. Is. 57:20). wandering stars. This most likely refers to a meteor or shooting star which has an uncontrolled moment of brilliance and then fades away into nothing. Apostates promise enduring spiritual direction, but deliver a brief, aimless, and worthless flash.

14 Enoch. Following the genealogy of Genesis 5:1–24; 1 Chronicles 1:1–3, Enoch was the seventh in the line of Adam. Because Enoch “walked with God,” he was taken directly to heaven without having to die (cf. Gen. 5:24; Heb. 11:5). prophesied about these men. See note on verse 4. The source of this information was the Holy Spirit who inspired Jude. The fact that it was recorded in the nonbiblical and pseudepigraphal book of Enoch had no effect on its accuracy. See Introduction: Interpretive Challenges. Behold . . . Lord . . . saints. Enoch, before the flood, prophesied about Christ’s Second Coming in judgment (cf. 1 Thess. 3:13). Saints can refer to either angels or believers. Since both angels (Matt. 24:31; 25:31; Mark 8:38; 2 Thess. 1:7) and believers (Col. 3:4; 1 Thess. 3:13; Rev. 19:14) will accompany Him, it may refer to both (cf. Zech. 14:5); but the focus on judgment in verse 15 seems to favor angels, who are often seen in judgment action. While believers will have a role of judging during the Lord’s earthly kingdom (see note on 1 Cor. 6:2) and will return when Christ comes to judge (Rev. 19:14), angels are the executioners of God at the Second Coming of Christ (see Matt. 13:39–41, 49, 50; 24:29–31; 25:31; 2 Thess. 1:7–10).

15 execute judgment. The sentence will be eternal hell (see Rev. 20:11–15). Cf. Matthew 5:22; 7:19; 8:12; 10:28; 13:40–42; 25:41, 46. ungodly. See note on verse 4. The fourfold use of this word as a description of the apostates (cf. vv. 4, 18) identifies the core iniquity, which is failure to reverence God. See Peter’s use of the term in 2 Peter 2:5, 6; 3:7. It was for such that Christ died (Rom. 5:6).

16 grumblers. See note on verse 5. The word, found only here in the NT, is used in the LXX to describe the murmurings of Israel against God (Ex. 16:7–9; Num. 14:27, 29; 1 Cor. 10:10). complainers. Lit. “finding fault.” They gave vent to dissatisfaction with God’s will and way as was the case with Israel, Sodom, the fallen angels, Cain, Korah, and Balaam (cf. vv. 5–7, 11). walking . . . own lusts. See notes on 2 Peter 2:10, 18; 3:3. This is a common phrase used to describe the unconverted (v. 18; 2 Tim. 4:3). Apostates are especially driven by a desire for sinful self-satisfaction. mouth great . . . words. See note on 2 Peter 2:18. They speak arrogantly, pompously, and even magnificently, but with empty, lifeless words of no spiritual value. Their message has external attractiveness, but is void of the powerful substance of divine truth. flattering people. They tell people what they want to hear for their own profit (cf. 2 Tim. 4:3, 4) rather than proclaiming the truth of God’s Word for the auditors’ benefit. Cf. Psalms 5:9; 12:2, 3; Proverbs 26:28; 29:5; Romans 3:13; 16:18.

V. DEFENSES AGAINST APOSTATES (17–23)

17 words . . . by the apostles. The apostles had warned the coming generation about apostates, so that they would be prepared and not be taken by surprise (cf. Acts 20:28–31; 1 Tim. 4:1, 2; 2 Tim. 3:1–5; 4:1–3; 2 Pet. 2:1–3:4; 1 John 2:18; 2 John 7–11). God's Word is designed to warn and protect (Acts 20:31; 1 Cor. 4:14); as verse 18 indicates, there had been continually repeated warnings.

18 mockers. See note on 2 Peter 3:3. These are the scoffers at God's future plans who pretend to know the truth but deny that judgment will ever come. last time. Lit. at the chronological end of the current epoch or season (cf. 2 Tim. 3:1). This term refers to the time of Messiah from His First Coming until His second (see notes on 2 Tim. 3:1; 2 Pet. 3:3; 1 John 2:18). These characteristics will prevail until Christ returns. walk . . . ungodly lust. See note on verse 16.

19 sensual persons. Apostate teachers advertise themselves as having the highest spiritual knowledge, but are actually attracted to the most debased levels of life. They are "soulish," not "spiritual." Cf. James 3:15. cause divisions. They fractured the church rather than united it (cf. Eph. 4:4–6; Phil. 2:2). not having the Spirit. To not have the Spirit is to not have spiritual life at all (see notes on Rom. 8:9; 1 Cor. 6:19, 20) or, in other words, to be an unbeliever.

Parallel Passages in Jude and 2 Peter

| Jude       | 2 Peter |
|------------|---------|
| v. 3       | 1:5     |
| v. 4       | 2:1     |
| v. 6       | 2:4     |
| v. 7       | 2:6–10  |
| v. 8       | 2:10    |
| v. 9       | 2:11    |
| v. 10      | 2:12    |
| v. 11      | 2:15    |
| vv. 12, 13 | 2:13–17 |
| v. 16      | 2:18    |
| vv. 17, 18 | 3:1–3   |

20 building. True believers have a sure foundation (1 Cor. 3:11) and cornerstone (Eph. 2:20) in Jesus Christ. The truths of the Christian faith (cf. v. 3) have been provided in the teaching of the apostles and prophets (Eph. 2:20), so that Christians can build themselves up by the Word of God (Acts 20:32). praying in the Holy Spirit. See note on Ephesians 6:18. This is not a call to some ecstatic form of prayer, but simply a call to pray consistently in the will and power of the Spirit, as one would pray in the name of Jesus Christ (cf. Rom. 8:26, 27).

21 keep. Cf. Acts 13:43. This imperative establishes the believer's responsibility to be obedient and faithful by living out his salvation (cf. Phil. 2:12), while God works out His will (cf. Phil. 2:13). It means to remain in the place of obedience where God's love is poured out on His children, as opposed to being disobedient and incurring His chastening (cf. 1 Cor. 11:27–31; Heb. 12:5–11). This refers to the perseverance of the saints, the counterbalance to God's sovereign preservation of believers in Christ (cf. v. 1). This is accomplished by: (1) building one's self up in the Word of God (v. 20); (2) praying in the Holy Spirit (v. 20); and (3) looking for the finalization of eternal life (v. 21). For a related discussion of the perseverance of the saints, see note on Matthew 24:13. looking. An eager anticipation of Christ's Second Coming to provide eternal life in its ultimate, resurrection form (cf. Titus 2:13; 1 John 3:1–3), which is the supreme expression of God's mercy on one to whom Christ's righteousness has been imputed (cf. v. 2). Paul called this "loving His appearing" (2 Tim. 4:8), and John wrote that such a steady anticipation was purifying (1 John 3:3).

22, 23 some. There are several textual variants here which could result in either two or three groups being indicated. They are: (1) sincere doubters who deserve compassion (v. 22); (2) those who are deeper in unbelief and urgently need to be pulled from the fire (v. 23); and (3) those declared disciples of apostasy who still deserve mercy, but are to be handled with much fear (v. 23; included in better manuscripts), lest the would-be-rescuer also be spiritually sullied. Given the manuscripts evidence and Jude's pattern of writing in triads, three groups is the more likely scenario.

22 compassion. These victims of the apostate teachers need mercy and patience because they have not yet reached a firm conclusion about Christ and eternal life, and so remain doubters who could possibly be swayed to the truth.

23 others save. Others, who are committed to the errors taught by the apostates, need immediate and forthright attention before they are further entrenched on the road to the fire of hell (cf. v. 7) as a result of embracing deceptive lies. with fear. This third group (see note on vv. 22, 23) also needs mercy, even though they are thoroughly polluted by apostate teaching. These people are to be given the true gospel, but with great fear, lest the deliverer be contaminated also. The defiled garment pictures the apostate's debauched life, which can spread its contagion to the well-meaning evangel.

VI. DOXOLOGY OF JUDE (24, 25)

24, 25 Jude's lovely benediction/doxology stands as one of the most splendid in the NT (cf. Rom. 11:33–36; 16:25–27; 2 Cor. 13:14; Heb. 13:20, 21). It returned to the theme of salvation which Jude had hoped to develop at the beginning (cf. v. 3) and bolstered the courage of believers to know that Christ would protect them from the present apostasy.

24 Him who is able. This speaks of omnipotent God. Cf. Genesis 18:14; Deuteronomy

7:21; 1 Samuel 14:6; Matthew 19:26. keep you from stumbling. See notes on verse 1; 1 Peter 1:3–5. The power of Christ would sustain the sincere believer from falling to the temptation of apostasy (cf. Job 42:2; Pss. 37:23, 24; 121:3; Jer. 32:17; Matt. 19:26; Luke 1:37; John 6:39, 40, 44; 10:27–30; Eph. 3:20). present you faultless. Cf. 2 Corinthians 11:2; Ephesians 5:27. Christians possess Christ's imputed righteousness through justification by faith and have been made worthy of eternal life in heaven (see notes on Rom. 8:31–39). with exceeding joy. This refers primarily to the joy of the Savior (cf. Heb. 12:2) but also includes the joy of believers (cf. 1 Pet. 1:8). Joy is the dominant expression of heaven (see Matt. 25:23). God our Savior. God is by nature a saving God, unlike the reluctant and indifferent false deities of human and demon invention (see notes on 1 Tim. 2:2; 4:10; 2 Tim. 1:10; Titus 1:3; 2:10; 3:4; 2 Pet. 1:1).

25 alone is wise. Divine wisdom is embodied by Christ alone (cf. 1 Cor. 1:24, 30; Col. 2:3) and not by any human person or group, like the apostates. glory . . . power. Both Jude on earth and the angels and saints in heaven (Rev. 4:10, 11; 5:12–14) ascribed these qualities to our God and the Lord Jesus Christ.

INTRODUCTION TO REVELATION

The Revelation of Jesus Christ” is from Him and about Him (1:1). The detailed content is unique to Scripture in that what the OT only hints at while Revelation explains. Its time focus is primarily future (1:19). Revelation can easily be outlined in three parts: (1) Christ’s Glory (ch. 1); Christ’s Churches (chs. 2; 3); and (3) Christ’s Future Plans (chs. 4–22). In every sense, Revelation is the grand finale of Scripture, the capstone of biblical revelation, and the magnum opus of the prophets and apostles.

Revelation is the greatest book ever written, as illustrated by these features:

- HOPE: it vastly expands one’s understanding of heaven (chs. 4; 5).
- CHRISTIAN APOLOGETICS: it verifies the Second Coming and kingdom prophecies of the OT (chs. 6–20).
- CHARACTER OF GOD: it focuses on the sovereignty, power, holiness, and righteousness of God (chs. 1–22).
- CHRIST: it enhances Christ’s beauty (ch. 1).
- REWARD: it promises blessing for obedience (1:3; 22:7).
- EVANGELISM: it reminds one of the ultimate judgment on those who refuse to believe (chs. 6–20).
- CHURCH GROWTH: it sets forth Christ’s standards for the church (chs. 2; 3).
- WORSHIP: it reveals how perfect worship is to be conducted in heaven (chs. 4; 5).
- CHRISTIAN LIVING: it tells of God’s ultimate triumph over sin and emphasizes His demand for holy living in this life (chs. 19; 20).

- EXPOSÉ OF SATAN: it warns in detail about the deceitful schemes and final demise of the devil (chs. 12; 20).

Christ’s future plans unfold in three sequential stages. First, there is a future time of Tribulation lasting seven years which corresponds to Daniel’s seventieth week (Dan. 9:26, 27) and the time of Jacob’s trouble (Jer. 30:7) in Revelation 6–18. Second, this period of Tribulation ends and Messiah’s one-thousand-year kingdom on earth is established with the Second Coming of Christ in Revelation 19:1–20:6. Third, there is a transition from time to eternity, from the Millennium to eternity future with the final judgments of Satan and all unbelievers throughout time, followed by the inauguration of the new heaven and the new earth in Revelation 20:7–22:21.

In a very real sense, Scripture ends where it began. What was interrupted in Genesis 3 is renewed and completed in Revelation 19–22.

1. Genesis portrays man’s beginning in a gorgeous paradise (Gen. 1; 2); Revelation pictures the wonderful paradise of eternity future (Rev. 21; 22).
2. Genesis reveals Satan for the first time (Gen. 3:1–5); Revelation indicates his final doom (Rev. 20:10).

3. Genesis unveils Satan's initial attempt at undermining God's Word (3:1–5); Revelation declares that such will be cursed (Rev. 22:18, 19) and have no place in the new Jerusalem (Rev. 22:15).
4. Genesis records man's first disobedience of God (Gen. 3:6, 7; Revelation envisions a future time when there will be perfect obedience (Rev. 21; 22).
5. Genesis introduces the curse (3:15–19); Revelation anticipates when the curse will be lifted (Rev. 22:3).
6. Genesis warns that Satan's head would be bruised (Gen. 3:15); Revelation verifies that this was fulfilled (Rev. 19:20–20:3).
7. Genesis tells how man lost the privilege of eating from the Tree of Life (Gen. 3:22–24); Revelation promises that man will once again eat of this tree (Rev. 22:2).
8. Genesis recounts the tragedy of sin (Gen. 3; 4); Revelation looks to a time when there will be no sorrow (Rev. 21:4).
9. Genesis chronicles the first murderer, polygamist, and rebel (Gen. 4); Revelation points to a place where all residents will live in perfect righteousness (Rev. 21; 22).
10. Genesis reports the first death (Gen. 4:8); Revelation says that in the future there will be no dying (Rev. 21:4).

Christ's final promise in Scripture is found in Revelation 22:20a, "Surely I am coming quickly." To which the apostle John and all Christians afterward have responded "Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus!" (Rev. 22:20b).

THE REVELATION OF JESUS CHRIST

Title

Unlike most books of the Bible, Revelation contains its own title: “The Revelation of Jesus Christ” (1:1). Revelation (Greek apokalupsis) means “an uncovering,” “an unveiling,” or “a disclosure.” In the NT, this word describes the unveiling of spiritual truth (Rom. 16:25; Gal. 1:12; Eph. 1:17; 3:3), the revealing of the sons of God (Rom. 8:19), Christ’s Incarnation (Luke 2:32), and His glorious appearing at His Second Coming (2 Thess. 1:7; 1 Pet. 1:7). In all its uses, revelation refers to something or someone, once hidden, becoming visible. What this book reveals or unveils is Jesus Christ in glory. Truths about Him and His final victory, that the rest of Scripture merely allude to, become clearly visible through revelation about Jesus Christ (see Historical and Theological Themes). This revelation was given to Him by God the Father, and it was communicated to the apostle John by an angel (1:1).

Author and Date

Four times the author identifies himself as John (1:1, 4, 9; 22:8). Early tradition unanimously identified him as John the apostle, author of the Fourth Gospel and three epistles. Important second-century witnesses to the apostle John’s authorship include Justin Martyr, Irenaeus, Clement of Alexandria, and Tertullian. Many of the book’s original readers were still alive during the lifetimes of Justin Martyr and Irenaeus—both of whom held to apostolic authorship.

There are differences in style between Revelation and John’s other writings, but they are insignificant and do not preclude one man from writing both. In fact, there are some striking parallels between Revelation and John’s other works. Only John’s Gospel and Revelation refer to Jesus Christ as the Word (19:13; John 1:1). Revelation (1:7) and John’s Gospel (19:37) translate Zechariah 12:10 differently from the Septuagint, but in agreement with each other. Only Revelation and the Gospel of John describe Jesus as the Lamb (5:6, 8; John 1:29); both describe Jesus as a witness (cf. 1:5; John 5:31, 32).

Revelation was written in the last decade of the first century (c. A.D. 94–96), near the end of Emperor Domitian’s reign (A.D. 81–96). Although some date it during Nero’s reign (A.D. 54–68), their arguments are unconvincing and conflict with the view of the early church. Writing in the second century, Irenaeus declared that Revelation had been written toward the end of Domitian’s reign. Later writers, such as Clement of Alexandria, Origen, Victorinus (who wrote one of the earliest commentaries on Revelation), Eusebius, and Jerome affirm the Domitian date.

The spiritual decline of the seven churches (chs. 2, 3) also argues for the later date. Those churches were strong and spiritually healthy in the mid-60s, when Paul last ministered in Asia Minor. The brief time between Paul’s ministry there and the end of Nero’s reign was too short for such a dramatic decline to have occurred. The longer time gap also explains the rise of the heretical sect known as the Nicolaitans (2:6, 15), who are not mentioned in Paul's letters, not even to one or more of these same churches (Ephesians). Finally, dating Revelation during Nero's reign does not allow time for John's ministry in Asia Minor to reach the point at which the authorities would have felt the need to exile him.

Background and Setting

Revelation begins with John, the last surviving apostle and an old man, in exile on the small, barren island of Patmos, located in the Aegean Sea southwest of Ephesus. The Roman authorities had banished him there because of his faithful preaching of the gospel (1:9). While on Patmos, John received a series of visions that laid out the future history of the world.

When he was arrested, John was in Ephesus, ministering to the church there and in the surrounding cities. Seeking to strengthen those congregations, he could no longer minister to them in person and, following the divine command (1:11), John addressed Revelation to them (1:4). The churches had begun to feel the effects of persecution; at least one man—probably a pastor—had already been martyred (2:13), and John himself had been exiled. Now, the storm of persecution was about to break in full fury upon the seven churches so dear to the apostle's heart (2:10). To those churches, Revelation provided a message of hope: God is in sovereign control of all the events of human history, and though evil often seems pervasive and wicked men seem all-powerful, their ultimate doom is certain. Christ will come in glory to judge and rule.

Historical and Theological Themes

Since it is primarily prophetic, Revelation contains little historical material, other than that in chapters 1–3. The seven churches to whom the letters were addressed were existing churches in Asia Minor (modern Turkey). Apparently, they were singled out because John had ministered in them.

Revelation is first and foremost a revelation about Jesus Christ (1:1). The book depicts Him as the risen, glorified Son of God ministering among the churches (1:10ff.), as “the faithful witness, the first-born from the dead, and the ruler over the kings of the earth” (1:5), as “the Alpha and the Omega, the Beginning and the End” (1:8), as the One “who is and who was and who is to come, the Almighty” (1:8), as “the First and the Last” (1:11), as “the Son of Man” (1:13), as the One who was dead, but now is alive forevermore (1:18), as “the Son of God” (2:18), as the One who is holy and true (3:7), as “the Amen, the Faithful and True Witness, the Beginning of the creation of God” (3:14), as “the Lion of the tribe of Judah” (5:5), as the Lamb in heaven, with authority to open the title deed to the earth (6:1ff.), as the Lamb on the throne (7:17), as the Messiah who will reign forever (11:15), as the majestic King of kings and Lord of lords, returning in glorious splendor to conquer His foes (19:11ff.), as “The Word of God” (19:13), and as “the Root and the Offspring of David, the Bright and Morning Star” (22:16).

Many other rich theological themes find expression in Revelation. The church is warned about sin and exhorted to holiness. John's vivid pictures of worship in heaven both instruct and exhort believers. In few other books of the Bible is the ministry of angels so prominent. Revelation's primary theological contribution is to eschatology, i.e., the doctrine of last things. One learns about: the final political setup of the world; the last battle of human history; the career and ultimate defeat of Antichrist; Christ's 1,000-year earthly kingdom; the glories of heaven and the eternal state; and the final state of the wicked and the righteous.

Finally, only Daniel rivals this book in declaring that God providentially rules over the kingdoms of men and will accomplish His sovereign purposes regardless of human or demonic opposition.

Interpretive Challenges

No other NT book poses more serious and difficult interpretive challenges than Revelation. The book's vivid imagery and striking symbolism have produced four main interpretive approaches:

The preterist approach interprets Revelation as a description of first-century events in the Roman Empire (see Author and Date). This view conflicts with the book's own often-repeated claim to be prophecy (1:3; 22:7, 10, 18, 19). It is impossible to see all the events in Revelation as already fulfilled. The Second Coming of Christ, for example, obviously did not take place in the first century.

The historicist approach views Revelation as a panoramic view of church history from apostolic times to the present—seeing in the symbolism such events as the barbarian invasions of Rome, the rise of the Roman Catholic Church (as well as various individual popes), the emergence of Islam, and the French Revolution. This interpretive method robs Revelation of any meaning for those to whom it was written. It also ignores the time limitations the book itself places on the unfolding events (cf. 11:2; 12:6, 14; 13:5). Historicism has produced many different—and often conflicting—interpretations of the actual historical events contained in Revelation.

The idealist approach interprets Revelation as a timeless depiction of the cosmic struggle between the forces of good and evil. In this view, the book contains neither historical allusions nor predictive prophecy. This view also ignores Revelation's prophetic character and, if carried to its logical conclusion, severs the book from any connection with actual historical events. Revelation then becomes merely a collection of stories designed to teach spiritual truth.

The futurist approach insists that the events of chapters 6–22 are yet future, and that those chapters literally and symbolically depict actual people and events yet to appear on the world scene. It describes the events surrounding the Second Coming of Jesus Christ (chs. 6–19), the Millennium and final judgment (ch. 20), and the eternal state (chs. 21, 22). Only this view does justice to Revelation's claim to be prophecy and interprets the book by the same grammatical-historical method as chapters 1–3 and the rest of Scripture.

I. THE THINGS WHICH YOU HAVE SEEN (1:1–20)

A. The Prologue (1:1–8)

1:1 *The Revelation. The Greek word from which the English word apocalypse comes literally means “to uncover, or to reveal.” When it refers to a person, it means that person becomes clearly visible (see Introduction: Title; cf. Luke 2:30–32; Rom. 8:19; 1 Cor. 1:7; 1 Pet. 1:7). Jesus Christ. The Gospels unveil Christ at His First Coming in humiliation; Revelation reveals Him in His exaltation: (1) in blazing glory (vv. 7–20); (2) over His church, as its Lord (chs. 2, 3); (3) in His Second Coming, as He takes back the earth from the usurper, Satan, and establishes His kingdom (chs. 4–20); and (4) as He lights up the eternal state (chs. 21, 22). The NT writers eagerly anticipate this unveiling (1 Cor. 1:7; 2 Thess. 1:7; 1 Pet. 1:7). God gave Him. As a reward for Christ's perfect submission and Atonement, the Father now presented to Him the great record of His future glory (cf. Phil. 2:5–11). Readers eavesdrop on the gift of this book, from the Father to His Son. shortly. The primary meaning of this word (lit. “soon”; cf. 2:5, 16; 3:11; 11:14; 22:12; 2 Tim. 4:9) underscores the imminence of Christ's return.

1:3 *Blessed. This is the only biblical book that comes with a blessing for the person who listens to it being read and explained and, then, responds in obedience. This is the first of seven Beatitudes in the book (v. 3; 14:13; 16:15; 19:9; 20:6; 22:7, 14). time is near. Time refers to epochs, eras, or seasons. The next great epoch of God's redemptive history is imminent. But although Christ's Coming is the next event, it may be delayed so long that people begin to question whether He will ever come (cf. Matt. 24:36–39; 2 Pet. 3:3, 4).

1:4 seven churches which are in Asia.

Asia Minor, equivalent to modern Turkey, was composed of seven postal districts. At the center of those districts were seven key cities which served as central points for the dissemination of information. It is to the churches in those cities that John writes. who is and who was and who is to come. God's eternal presence is not limited by time. He has always been present and will come in the future. the seven Spirits. There are two possible meanings: (1) a reference to Isaiah's prophecy concerning the sevenfold ministry of the Holy Spirit (Is. 11:2); or (2) more likely, it is a reference to the lampstand with seven lamps (a menorah) in Zechariah—also a description of the Holy Spirit (see notes on 4:5; 5:6; Zech. 4:1–10). In either case, seven is the number of completeness, so John is identifying the fullness of the Holy Spirit.

1:5 firstborn. Of all who have been or will be raised from the dead, Jesus is the preeminent One, the only One who is the rightful heir (cf. 3:14; Ps. 89:27; Col. 1:15).

1:6 kings and priests. More accurately, “a kingdom and priests.” All who believe live in the sphere of God's rule, a kingdom entered by faith in Jesus Christ. And as priests, believers have the right to enter God's presence.

1:7 coming with clouds. This echoes the promise of Daniel: The Son of Man will come with the clouds of heaven (Dan. 7:13)—not ordinary clouds but clouds of glory. In the OT, God often manifested Himself in an energized, blazing light, called the Shekinah or glory cloud. No one could see it fully and live (Ex. 33:20), so it had to be veiled. But when Christ returns, the glory will be completely visible. Cf. Matthew 24:29, 30; 25:31; see notes on 6:12–17. they who pierced. Not a reference to the four Roman soldiers usually involved in crucifixion, but to the Jews who were actually responsible for Christ's death (Acts 2:22, 23; 3:14, 15). Zechariah identified the ones who pierced Him as “the house of David” and “the inhabitants of Jerusalem” and prophesied that they will weep tears of genuine repentance because of what they did to their Messiah (Zech. 12:10). all the tribes . . . will mourn. The mourning of the rest of the earth's inhabitants is not that which accompanies genuine repentance (cf. 9:21). It is the result of guilt for sin and fear of punishment (6:16; cf. Gen. 3:8–10).

1:8 Alpha and the Omega. These are the first and last letters of the Greek alphabet. An alphabet is an ingenious way to store and communicate knowledge. The twenty-six letters in the English alphabet, arranged in almost endless combinations, can hold and convey all knowledge. Christ is the supreme, sovereign alphabet; there is nothing outside His knowledge, so there will be no unknown factors that can sabotage His Second Coming. (cf. Col. 2:3). the Almighty. “Almighty God” occurs eight times in Revelation, underscoring that God's power is supreme over all the cataclysmic events it records (see also 4:8; 11:17; 15:3; 16:7, 14; 19:15; 21:22). He exercises sovereign control over every person, object, and event; and not one molecule in the universe is outside that dominion.

B. The Vision of the Glorified Christ (1:9–18)

1:9–18 This vision of Christ is equaled in grandeur only by the vision of His final return as King of kings and Lord of lords (19:11–16).

1:9 tribulation and kingdom and patience. There are four characteristics that John and his believing readers share: (1) persecution for their faith; (2) membership in the redeemed community over which Christ serves as Lord and King; (3) eager anticipation of the glory of His coming millennial reign on earth; and (4) endurance and perseverance in spite of difficult times. island . . . called Patmos. Located in the Aegean Sea off the coast of Asia Minor (modern Turkey) and part of a group of about fifty islands, Patmos was a barren, rocky, crescent-shaped island in John's day that is about ten miles long and less than six miles wide at its widest

Key Words

The Alpha and the Omega: 1:8, 11; 21:6; 22:13—Alpha and omega are the first and last letters of the Greek alphabet. This phrase is used of both God the Father and God the Son. God in Christ comprises everything, all that goes between the Alpha and the Omega, as well as being the First and the Last. This expresses God's fullness, comprehensiveness, and all-inclusiveness. He is the Source of all things and will bring all things to their appointed end.

point. It served as a Roman penal colony. According to early Christian historian, Eusebius, the emperor Nerva (A.D. 96–98) released John from Patmos.

1:10 in the Spirit. This was not a dream. John was supernaturally transported out of the material world awake—not sleeping—to an experience beyond the normal senses. The Holy Spirit empowered his senses to perceive revelation from God (cf. Acts 10:11). Lord's Day. This phrase appears in many early Christian writings and refers to Sunday, the day of the Lord's Resurrection. Some have suggested this phrase refers to the Day of the Lord (see note on 1 Thess. 5:2), but the context doesn't support that interpretation, and the grammatical form of the word Lord is adjectival, thus "the Lord's day." loud voice. Throughout Revelation, a loud sound or voice indicates the solemnity of what God is about to reveal.

1:11 book. The Greek word refers to a scroll made of parchment formed from papyrus, a reed that grows plentifully along the Nile River in Egypt.

1:12 lampstands. These were portable gold lampstands that held small oil lamps. Each lampstand represented a church (v. 20), from which the light of life was to have shone. Throughout Scripture, seven is the number of completeness, so these seven lampstands are representative of all the churches.

1:13 Son of Man. According to the Gospels, this is the title Christ used most often for Himself during His earthly ministry (eighty-one times in the Gospels). Taken from the heavenly vision in Daniel 7:13, it is an implied claim to deity. garment. Most occurrences of this word in the Septuagint, the Greek OT, refer to the garment of the high priest. The golden sash across His chest completes the picture of Christ serving in His priestly role (cf. Lev. 16:1–4; Heb. 2:17).

1:14 white like wool. White does not refer to a flat white color, but a blazing, glowing, white light (cf. Dan. 7:9). Like the glory cloud (or Shekinah), it is a picture of His holiness. eyes . . . flame of fire. Like two lasers, the eyes of the exalted Lord look with a penetrating gaze into the depths of His church (2:18; 19:12; Heb. 4:13).

1:15 feet . . . fine brass. The altar of burnt offering was covered with brass and its utensils were made of the same material (cf. Ex. 38:1–7). Glowing hot, brass feet are a clear reference to divine judgment. Jesus Christ, with feet of judgment, is moving through His church to exercise His chastening authority upon sin. voice . . . sound of many waters. No longer was His voice like the crystal clear note of a trumpet (v. 10), but John likened it to the crashing of the surf against the rocks of the island (cf. Ezek. 43:2). It was the voice of authority.

1:16 seven stars. These are the messengers who represent the seven churches (see note on v. 20). Christ holds them in His hand, which means that He controls the church and its leaders. a sharp two-edged sword. A large, two-edged, broad sword. It signifies judgment (cf. 2:16; 19:15) on those who attack Christ's people and destroy His church.

1:17 fell at His feet. A common response

A Picture of Christ (Rev. 1:14–16)

| Symbol                                         | Reality                            |
|-------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------|
| 1. Head and hair like wool and white as snow (v. 14)  | Christ's holiness                         |
| 2. Eyes like a flame of fire (v. 14)                  | Christ's all-knowingness                  |
| 3. Feet like fine brass, refined in a furnace (v. 15) | Christ chastises sin in the church        |
| 4. Voice as the sound of many waters (v. 15)          | Christ's authority                        |
| 5. Right hand holding seven stars (v. 16)             | Christ's control of church leaders        |
| 6. Out of His mouth, a sharp two-edged sword (v. 16)  | Christ's judgment on the church's enemies |
| 7. Countenance like the shining sun (v. 16)           | Christ's glory                            | to seeing the awesome glory of the Lord (Gen. 17:3; Num. 16:22; Is. 6:1–8; Ezek. 1:28; Acts 9:4). the First and the Last. Jesus Christ applies this OT name for Yahweh (22:13; Is. 41:4; 44:6; 48:12) to Himself, clearly claiming to be God. Idols will come and go. He was before them, and He will remain after them.

1:18 keys of Hades and of Death. See note on Luke 16:23. Death and Hades are essentially synonyms, but death is the condition and Hades, equivalent to the OT Sheol, the place of the dead (see note on 20:13). Christ decides who lives, who dies, and when.

C. The Apostle's Commission to Write (1:19, 20)

1:19 This verse provides a simple outline for the entire book: “the things which you have seen” refers to the vision John has just seen (ch. 1); “the things which are” denotes the letters to the churches (chs. 2, 3); and “the things which will take place after this” refers to the revelation of future history (chs. 4–22).

1:20 the angels. The word literally means “messenger.” Although it can mean angel—and does throughout the book—it cannot refer to angels here because angels are never leaders in the church. Most likely, these messengers are the seven key elders representing each of those churches (see note on v. 16).

II. THE THINGS WHICH ARE (2:1–3:22)

A. The Letter to the Church at Ephesus (2:1–7)

2:1–3:22 Although these seven churches were actual, historical churches in Asia Minor, they represent the types of churches that perennially exist throughout the church age. What Christ says to these churches is relevant in all times.

2:1 angel. The elder or pastor from the church (see note on 1:20). Ephesus. It was an inland city three miles from the sea, but the broad mouth of the Cayster River allowed access and provided the greatest harbor in Asia Minor. Four great trade roads went through Ephesus; therefore, it became known as the gateway to Asia. It was the center of the worship of Artemis (Greek), or Diana (Roman), whose temple was one of the seven Wonders of the Ancient World. Paul ministered there for three years (Acts 20:31), and later met with the Ephesian elders on his way to Jerusalem (Acts 20). Timothy, Tychicus, and the apostle John all served this church. John was in Ephesus when he was arrested by Domitian and exiled fifty miles southwest to Patmos. seven stars. See note on 1:16. seven golden lamp-stands. See note on 1:12.

2:2 who say they are apostles. The Ephesian church exercised spiritual discernment.

It knew how to evaluate those who claimed spiritual leadership by their doctrine and behavior (cf. 1 Thess. 5:20, 21).

2:3 not become weary. For over forty years, since its founding, this church had remained faithful to the Word and the Lord. Through difficulty and persecution, the members had endured, always driven by the right motive, i.e., for Christ's name and reputation.

2:4 left your first love. To be a Christian is to love the Lord Jesus Christ (John 14:21, 23; 1 Cor. 16:22). But the Ephesians' passion and fervor for Christ had become cold, mechanical orthodoxy. Their doctrinal and moral purity, their undiminished zeal for the truth, and their disciplined service were no substitute for the love for Christ they had forsaken.

2:5 remove your lampstand. God's judgment would bring an end to the Ephesian church. Cf. 3:3.

2:6 the deeds of the Nicolaitans. A problem in Pergamos also (vv. 12–15), this heresy was similar to the teaching of Balaam (vv. 14, 15). Nicolas means "one who conquers the people." Irenaeus writes that Nicolas, who was made a deacon in Acts 6, was a false believer who later became apostate; but because of his credentials, he was able to lead the church astray. And, like Balaam, he led the people into immorality and wickedness. The Nicolaitans, followers of Nicolas, were involved in immorality and assaulted the church with sensual temptations. Clement of Alexander wrote, "They abandoned themselves to pleasure like goats, leading a life of self-indulgence." Their teaching perverted grace and replaced liberty with license.

2:7 him who overcomes. According to John's own definition, to be an overcomer is to be a Christian (see note on 1 John 5:4; cf. vv. 11, 17, 26; 3:5, 12, 21). tree of life. True believers enjoy the promise of heaven (see notes on 22:2; Gen. 2:9).

B. The Letter to the Church at Smyrna (2:8–11)

2:8 angel. See note on verse 1. Smyrna. Smyrna means "myrrh," the substance used for perfume and often for anointing a dead body for aromatic purposes. Called the crown of Asia, this ancient city (modern Izmir, Turkey) was the most beautiful in Asia Minor and a center of science and medicine. Always on the winner's side in the Roman wars, Smyrna's intense loyalty to Rome resulted in a strong emperor-worship cult. Fifty years after John's death, Polycarp, the pastor of the church in Smyrna, was burned alive at the age of eighty-six for refusing to worship Caesar. A large Jewish community in the city also proved hostile to the early church. the First and the Last. See note on 1:17.

2:9 who say they are Jews. Although they were Jews physically, they were not true Jews but spiritual pagans (cf. Rom. 2:28), who allied with other pagans in putting Christians to death as they attempted to stamp out the Christian faith. synagogue of Satan. With the rejection of its Messiah, Judaism became as much a tool of Satan as emperor worship.

2:10 devil. The Greek name for God's archenemy means "accuser." For a discussion of Satan, see notes on Ephesians 6:10–17. tribulation ten days. Their imprisonment will be brief. crown of life. It is the crown which is life or the reward which is life, not an actual crown to adorn the head. Crown here does not refer to the kind royalty wear, but to the wreath awarded winning athletes. See notes on 1 Thessalonians 2:19; 2 Timothy 4:8.

2:11 who overcomes. This identifies every Christian (see note on v. 7). the second death. The first death is only physical; the second is spiritual and eternal (cf. 20:14).

C. The Letter to the Church at Pergamos (2:12–17)

2:12 angel. See note on 1:20. Pergamos. Pergamos literally means "citadel" and is the word from which we get parchment—a writing material developed from animal skin, which apparently was first developed in that area. Pergamos (modern Bergama) was built on a 1,000-foot hill in a broad, fertile plain about twenty miles inland from the Aegean Sea. It had served as the capital of the Roman province of Asia Minor for over 250 years. It was an important religious center for the pagan cults of Athena, Asklepios, Dionysius (or Bacchus, the god of drunkenness), and Zeus. It was the first city in Asia to build a temple to Caesar (29 B.C.) and became the capital of the cult of Caesar worship. two-edged sword. See note on 1:16.

2:13 where Satan's throne is. The headquarters of satanic opposition and a Gentile base for false religions. On the acropolis in Pergamos was a huge, throne-shaped altar to Zeus. In addition, Asklepios, the god of healing, was the god most associated with Pergamos. His snake-like form is still the medical symbol today. The famous medical school connected to his temple mingled medicine with superstition. One prescription called for the worshiper to sleep on the temple floor, allowing snakes to crawl over his body and infuse him with their healing power. Antipas. Probably the pastor of the church. faithful martyr. Tradition says Antipas was burned to death inside a brass bull. Martyr, a transliteration of the Greek word, means "witness." Because so many of the witnesses faithful to Christ were put to death, the word martyr developed its current definition.

2:14 doctrine of Balaam. Balaam tried unsuccessfully to prostitute his prophetic gift and cursed Israel for money offered him by Balak, king of Moab. So he devised a plot to have Moabite women seduce Israelite men into intermarriage. The result was the blasphemous union of Israel with fornication and idolatrous feasts (for the story of Balaam, see Num. 22–25). things sacrificed to idols. See Acts 15:19–29.

2:15 Thus you also. The teaching of the Nicolaitans led to the same behavior as Balaam's schemes. doctrine of the Nicolaitans. See note on verse 6.

2:16 sword of My mouth. See note on 1:16.

2:17 overcomes. See note on verse 7. hidden manna. Just as Israel received manna (Ex. 16), God promises to give the true believer the spiritual bread the unbelieving world cannot see: Jesus Christ (cf. John 6:51). white stone. When an athlete won in the games, he was often given, as part of his prize, a white stone which was an admission pass to the winners' celebration afterwards. This may picture the moment when the overcomer will receive his ticket to the eternal victory celebration in heaven. new name. A personal message from Christ to the ones He loves, which serves as their admission pass into eternal glory. It is so personal that only the person who receives it will know what it is.

D. The Letter to the Church at Thyatira (2:18–29)

2:18 angel. See note on 1:20. Thyatira. Located halfway between Pergamos and Sardis, this city had been under Roman rule for nearly three centuries (c.190 B.C.). Since the city was situated in a long valley that swept forty miles to Pergamos, it had no natural defenses and had a long history of being destroyed and rebuilt. Originally populated by soldiers of Alexander the Great, it was little more than a military outpost to guard Pergamos. Lydia came from this city on business and was converted under Paul's ministry (Acts 16:14, 15). eyes like a flame of fire. See note on 1:14. feet like fine brass. Cf. 19:15; see note on 1:15.

2:20 Jezebel. Probably a pseudonym for a woman who influenced the church in the way Jezebel influenced the OT Jews into idolatry and immorality (cf. 1 Kin. 21:25, 26). sexual immorality and eat things sacrificed to idols. Cf. Acts 15:19–29; see note on verse 14.

2:22 sickbed. Lit. "bed." Having given this woman time to repent, God was to judge her upon a bed. Since she used a luxurious bed to commit her immorality, and the reclining couch at the idol feast to eat things offered to false gods, He was to give her a bed in hell where she would lie forever.

2:23 her children. The church was about forty years old as John wrote, and her teaching had produced a second generation, advocating the same debauchery. who searches the minds and hearts. God has perfect, intimate knowledge of every human heart; no evil can be hidden from Him (Ps. 7:9; Prov. 24:12; Jer. 11:20; 17:10; 20:12). according to your works. Human works are always the basis for future judgment (20:12, 13; Matt. 16:27; Rom. 2:6). Works do not save (Eph. 2:8, 9), but they do evidence salvation (James 2:14–26).

2:24 the depths of Satan. This unbelievable libertinism and license was the fruit of prenostic teaching that one was free to engage and explore the sphere of Satan and participate in evil with the body without harming the spirit (see Introduction to 1 John: Background and Setting).

2:26 overcomes. See note on verse 7.

2:27 rule them with a rod of iron. Lit. "shepherd them with an iron rod." During the millennial kingdom, Christ will enforce His will and protect His sheep with His iron scepter from any who would seek to harm them (cf. Ps. 2:9).

2:28 the morning star. John later reveals Christ to be "the Bright and Morning Star" (22:16). Although the morning star has already dawned in our hearts (2 Pet. 1:19), someday we will have Him in His fullness.

E. The Letter to the Church at Sardis (3:1–6)

3:1 angel. Messenger or pastor (see note on 1:20). Sardis. Situated on a natural acropolis rising 1,500 feet above the valley floor, the city (modern Sart) was nearly impregnable. Around 1200 B.C. it gained prominence as the capital of the Lydian kingdom. Its primary industry was harvesting wool, dying it, and making garments from it. The famous author, Aesop, came from Sardis, and tradition says that Melito, a member of the church in Sardis, wrote the first-ever commentary on certain passages in the Book of Revelation. The church in Sardis was dead, that is, basically populated by unredeemed, unregenerate people. seven Spirits. See note on 1:4. seven stars. The pastors of these seven churches (see notes on 1:16, 20).

3:3 come upon you as a thief. Here the reference is not to Christ's Second Coming (cf. 16:15; 1 Thess. 5:2; 2 Pet. 3:10), but to His sudden and unexpected coming to His unrepentant, dead church to inflict harm and destruction. Cf. 2:5.

3:4 who have not defiled their garments. Defiled means "to smear, to pollute," or "to stain," and garments refers to character. There were a few whose character was still godly (cf. Jude 23). in white. The white garments of all the redeemed (cf. 6:11; 7:9, 13; 19:8, 14), speak of holiness and purity. Such white robes are reserved for Christ (Matt. 17:2; Mark 9:3), holy angels (Matt. 28:3; Mark 16:5), and the glorified church (19:8, 14). In the ancient world, white robes were commonly worn at festivals and celebrations.

3:5 overcomes. All true Christians (see note on 2:7). Book of Life. A divine journal records the names of all those whom God has chosen to save and who, therefore, are to possess eternal life (13:8; 17:8; 20:12, 15; 21:27; 22:19; cf. Dan. 12:1; Luke 10:20). Under no circumstances will He erase those names (see note on Phil 4:3), as city officials often did of undesirable people on their rolls.

F. The Letter to the Church at Philadelphia (3:7–13)

3:7 angel. See note on 1:20. Philadelphia. Located on a hillside about thirty miles southeast of Sardis, the city (modern Alashehir) was founded around 190 B.C. by Attalus II, king of Pergamos. His unusual devotion to his brother earned the city its name, "brotherly love." The city was an important commercial stop on a major trade route called the Imperial Post Road, a first-century mail route. Although Scripture does not mention this church elsewhere, it was probably the fruit of Paul's extended ministry in Ephesus (cf. Acts 19:10). holy . . .

true. A common description in this book (4:8; 6:10; 15:3; 16:7; 19:2, 11). Christ shares the holy, sinless, pure nature of His Father (Ps. 16:10; Is. 6:3; 40:25; 43:15; Hab. 3:3; Mark 1:11, 24; John 6:69; Acts 3:14); that is, He is absolutely pure and separate from sin. True can refer both to one who speaks truth, and who is genuine or authentic as opposed to fake. the key of David. Christ has the sovereign authority to control entrance into the kingdom (Is. 22:22; cf. Matt. 16:19; John 14:6). In 1:18, He is pictured holding the keys to death and hell—here, the keys to salvation and blessing.

3:8 open door. This is either admission into the kingdom (see v. 7), or an opportunity for service (cf. 1 Cor. 16:9; 2 Cor. 2:12; Col. 4:3).

3:9 synagogue of Satan. See note on 2:9. who say they are Jews. See note on 2:9.

3:10 keep you from the hour of trial. Christ's description—an event still future that for a short time severely tests the whole world—must refer to the time of tribulation, the seven-year period before Christ's earthly kingdom is consummated, featuring the unleashing of divine wrath in judgments expressed as seals, trumpets, and bowls. This period is described in detail throughout chapters. 6–19. The latter half is called "the Great Tribulation" (7:14; Matt. 24:21) and is identified as to time in 11:2, 3; 12:6, 14; 13:5. The verb "to keep" is followed by a preposition whose normal meaning is "from" or "out of"—this phrase, "keep . . . from" supports the pretribulational Rapture of the church (see notes on John 14:1–3; 1 Cor. 15:51, 52; 1 Thess. 4:13–17). This period is the same as Daniel's seventieth week (see notes on Dan. 9:24–27) and "the time of Jacob's trouble" (see notes on Jer. 30:7).

3:11 I am coming quickly! This isn't the threatening temporal judgment described in verse 3; 2:5, 16, or the final judgment of chapter 19; it is a hopeful event because Christ will return to take His church out of the hour of trial (see note on 2 Thess. 2:1).

3:12 He who overcomes. All Christians (see note on 2:7). a pillar. Believers will enjoy an unshakable, eternal, secure place in the presence of God. temple. See note on 7:15. write . . . name of My God. In biblical times, one's name spoke of his character. Christ's writing His name on us speaks of imprinting His character on us and identifying us as belonging to Him. New Jerusalem. The capital city of heaven (see notes on 21:1–27). The overcomer will enjoy eternal citizenship. My new name. At the moment we see Christ, whatever we may have called Him and understood by that name will pale in the reality of what we see. And He will give us a new, eternal name by which we will know Him.

G. The Letter to the Church at Laodicea (3:14–22)

3:14 angel. The pastor-messenger designated to deliver this letter (see note on 1:20). Laodiceans. Located in the Lycus River Valley, the southwest area of Phrygia, Laodicea became the wealthiest, most important commercial center in the region. It was primarily known for three industries: banking, wool, and medicine (notably eye salve). An inadequate local water supply forced the city to build an underground aqueduct. All three industries, as well as the inadequate water supply, played a major part in this letter. The church began through the ministry of Epaphras, while Paul was ministering in Ephesus (cf. Col. 1:7; Paul never personally visited Laodicea). the Amen. A common biblical expression signifying certainty and veracity (cf. Is. 65:16, “the God of truth”). According to 2 Corinthians 1:20, all the promises of God are fulfilled in Christ; that is, all God's promises and unconditional covenants are guaranteed and affirmed by the person and work of Jesus Christ. Faithful and True Witness. He is a completely trustworthy and perfectly accurate witness to the truth of God (John 14:6). Beginning of the creation. This corrects a heresy, apparently present in Laodicea as in Colosse, that Christ was a created being (cf. Col. 1:15–20). Instead, He is the “Beginning” (lit. “beginner, originator, initiator”) of creation (cf. John 1:3; 3:14) and the “firstborn of creation”; that is, the most preeminent, supreme person ever born (Col. 1:15). As a man, He had a beginning, but as God, He was the beginning. Sadly, this heresy concerning the person of Christ had produced an unregenerate church in Laodicea.

3:16 lukewarm. I.e., tepid. Nearby Hierapolis was famous for its hot springs, and Colosse for its cold, refreshing mountain stream. But Laodicea had dirty, tepid water that flowed for miles through an underground aqueduct. Visitors, unaccustomed to it, immediately spat it out. The church at Laodicea was neither cold, openly rejecting Christ, nor hot, filled with spiritual zeal. Instead, its members were lukewarm, hypocrites professing to know Christ, but not truly belonging to Him (cf. Matt. 7:21ff.). I will vomit you out of My mouth. Just like the dirty, tepid water of Laodicea, these self-deceived hypocrites sickened Christ.

3:18 gold . . . white garments . . . eye salve. See note on verse 14. Christ was offering them the spiritual counterparts to their three major industries. Each item was a way to refer to genuine salvation.

3:19 As many as I love . . . chasten. Verses 18 and 20 indicate that Christ was speaking here to unbelievers. God certainly loves the unconverted (cf. John 3:16). And chasten (lit. “reprove”) often refers to God's convicting and punishing the unregenerate (Matt.

18:17; 1 Cor. 14:24; 2 Tim. 2:25).

3:20 *I stand at the door and knock. Rather than allowing for the common interpretation of Christ's knocking on a person's heart, the context demands that Christ was seeking to enter this church that bore His name, but lacked a single true believer. This poignant letter was His knocking. If one member would recognize his spiritual bankruptcy and respond in saving faith, He would enter the church.

3:21 *overcomes. All true Christians (see note on 2:7). sit with Me on My throne. A figurative expression meaning that believers will share the privilege and authority that Christ enjoys as they reign with Him (1:6; Matt. 19:28; Luke 22:29, 30).

III. THE THINGS WHICH WILL TAKE PLACE AFTER THIS (4:1–22:21)

A. Worship in Heaven (4:1–5:14)

4:1 Come up here. This is not a veiled reference to the Rapture of the church, but a command for John to be temporarily transported to heaven “in the Spirit” (see note on 1:10) to receive revelation about future events. things which must take place after this. According to the outline given in 1:19, this begins the third and final section of the book, describing the events that will follow the church age.

4:2 I was in the Spirit. See note on 1:10. throne. Not so much a piece of furniture, but a symbol of sovereign rule and authority (7:15; 11:19; 16:17, 18; cf. Is. 6:1). It is the focus of chapter 4, occurring thirteen times, eleven times referring to God’s throne.

4:3 jasper. John later describes this stone as “crystal clear” (21:11), probably referring to a diamond, which refracts all the colors of the spectrum in wondrous brilliance. sardius. A fiery, bright ruby stone named for the city near which it was found. emerald. A cool, emerald-green hue dominates the multicolored rainbow surrounding God’s throne

(cf. Ezek. 1:28). From the time of Noah, the rainbow became a sign of God’s faithfulness to His Word, His promises, and His Noahic covenant (Gen. 9:12–17).

4:4 twenty-four elders. Their joint rule with Christ, their white garments (19:7, 8), and their golden crowns (2:10) all seem to indicate that these twenty-four represent the redeemed (vv. 9–11; 5:5–14; 7:11–17; 11:16–18; 14:3; 19:4). The question is which redeemed? Not Israel, since the nation is not yet saved, glorified, and coronated. That is still to come at this point in the events of the end. Their resurrection and glory will come at the end of the seven-year Tribulation time (cf. Dan. 12:1–3). Tribulation saints aren’t yet saved (7:9, 10). Only one group will be complete and glorified at this point—the church. Here, elders represent the church, which sings the song of redemption (5:8–10). They are the overcomers who have their crowns and live in the place prepared for them, where they have gone with Jesus (cf. John 14:1–4).

4:5 lightnings, thunderings. Not the fury of nature, but the firestorm of righteous fury about to come from an awesome, powerful God upon a sinful world (8:5; 11:19; 16:18).

seven Spirits of God. The Holy Spirit (see note on 1:4).

4:6 sea of glass. There is no sea in heaven (21:1), but the crystal pavement that serves as the floor of God's throne stretches out like a great, glistening sea (cf. Ex. 24:10; Ezek. 1:22). four living creatures. Lit. "four living ones or beings." These are the cherubim (singular, cherub), those angels frequently referred to in the OT in connection with God's presence, power, and holiness. Although John's description is not identical to Ezekiel's, they are obviously both referring to the same supernatural and seemingly indescribable beings (Pss. 80:1; 99:1; see notes on Ezek. 1:4–25; 10:15). full of eyes. Although not omniscient—an attribute reserved for God alone—these angels have a comprehensive knowledge and perception. Nothing escapes their scrutiny (cf. v. 8).

4:7 first . . . like a lion. In what is obviously intended as symbolic language, John compares these four beings with four of God's earthly creations. Ezekiel indicates that every cherub has these four attributes. The likeness to a lion symbolizes strength and power. second . . . like a calf. The image of a calf demonstrates that these beings render humble service to God. third . . . face like a man. Their likeness to man shows they are rational beings. fourth . . . like a flying eagle. The cherubim fulfill their service to God with the swiftness of eagles' wings.

4:8 full of eyes. See note on verse 6. Holy, holy, holy. Often, God is extolled for His holiness in this threefold form, because it is the summation of all that He is—His most salient attribute (see note on Is. 6:3). Who was and is and is to come! See note on 1:4.

4:10 cast their crowns. Aware that God alone is responsible for the rewards they have received, they divest themselves of all honor and cast it at the feet of their King (see note on 2:10).

4:11 You created all things. It is the Creator God who set out to redeem His creation.

5:1 a scroll. See note on 1:11. written inside and on the back. This is typical of various kinds of contracts in the ancient world, including deeds, marriage contracts, rental and lease agreements, and wills. The inside of the scroll contained all the details of the contract, and the outside—or back—contained a summary of the document. In this case, it almost certainly is a deed—the title deed to the earth (cf. Jer. 32:7ff.) sealed with seven seals. Romans sealed their wills seven times—on the edge at each roll—to prevent unauthorized entry. Hebrew title deeds required a minimum of three witnesses and three separate seals, with more important transactions requiring more witnesses and seals.

5:2 strong angel. The identity of this angel is uncertain, but it may refer to the angel Gabriel, whose name means "strength of God" (Dan. 8:16).

5:3 heaven or on the earth or under the earth. A common biblical expression denoting the entire universe, but not intended to teach three precise divisions.

5:5 the Lion of the tribe of Judah. One of the earliest titles for the Messiah (see notes on Gen. 49:8–12), it speaks of His fierceness and strength, which although glimpsed in His First Coming, do not appear in their fullness until the moment anticipated here. the Root of David. Another clearly messianic title (see notes on Is. 11:1–10), it anticipates His being a descendant of David, who with devastating force will compel the wicked of the earth to succumb to His authority.

5:6 Lamb. Hearing of a lion, John turns to see a lamb (lit. "a little, pet lamb"). God required the Jews to bring the Passover lamb into their houses four days, essentially making it a pet, before it was to be violently slain

(Ex. 12:3, 6). This is the true Passover Lamb, God's Son (cf. Is. 53:7; Jer. 11:19; John 1:29). as though it had been slain. The scars from its slaughter are still clearly visible, but it is standing—it is alive. seven horns. In Scripture, horns always symbolize power, because in the animal kingdom they are used to exert power and inflict wounds in combat. Seven horns signify complete or perfect power. Unlike other defenseless lambs, this One has complete, sovereign power. seven eyes . . . seven Spirits. Cf. 4:5; see note on 1:4.

5:8 harp. These ancient stringed instruments not only accompanied the songs of God's people (1 Chr. 25:6; Ps. 33:2), but also accompanied prophecy (cf. 1 Sam. 10:5). The twenty-four elders, representative of the redeemed church, played their harps in praise and in a symbolic indication that all the prophets had said was about to be fulfilled. bowls full of incense. These golden, wide-mouth saucers were common in the tabernacle and temple. Incense was a normal part of the OT ritual. Priests stood twice daily before the inner veil of the temple and burned incense so the smoke would carry into the Holy of Holies and be swept into the nostrils of God. That symbolized the people's prayers rising to Him. prayers of the saints. Specifically, these prayers represent all that the redeemed have ever prayed concerning ultimate and final redemption.

5:9 new song. Cf. 15:3. The OT is filled with references to a new song that flows from a heart that has experienced God's redemption or deliverance (cf. 14:3; Pss. 33:3; 96:1; 144:9). This new song anticipates the final, glorious redemption that God is about to begin. redeemed us to God by Your blood. The sacrificial death of Christ on behalf of sinners made Him worthy to take the scroll (cf. 1 Cor. 6:20; 7:23; 2 Cor. 5:21; Gal. 3:3; 1 Pet. 1:18, 19; 2 Pet. 2:1).

5:10 kings and priests. See note on 1:6. reign on the earth. See note on 20:2.

5:11 ten thousand times ten thousand. Lit. "myriads of myriads." The number is to express an amount beyond calculation. The Greek expression can also be translated "innumerable" (Luke 12:1; Heb. 12:22).

5:12 power . . . and blessing. This doxology records seven qualities intrinsic to God and to the Lamb that demand our praise.

5:13 heaven and on the earth and under the earth. See note on verse 3.

5:14 four living creatures. See note on 4:6. twenty-four elders. See note on 4:4.

B. The Great Tribulation (6:1–18:24)

6:1–18:24 This lengthy section details the judgments and events of the time of Tribulation (see note on 3:10) from its beginning with the opening of the first seal (vv. 1, 2) through the seven seal, trumpet, and bowl judgments.

6:1 the seals. In chapter 5, Christ was the only one found worthy to open the little scroll—the title deed to the universe. As He breaks the seven seals that secure the scroll, each seal unleashes a new demonstration of God's judgment on the earth in the future Tribulation period (see notes on 5:1; Matt. 24:3–9). These seal judgments include all the judgments to the end. The seventh seal contains the seven trumpets; the seventh trumpet contains the seven bowls.

6:2 white horse. The animal represents an unparalleled time of world peace—a false peace that is to be short-lived (see note on v. 4). This peace will be ushered in by a series of false messiahs, culminating with the Antichrist (Matt. 24:3–5). He who sat on it. The four horses and their riders do not represent specific individuals, but forces. Some, however, identify this rider with Antichrist. Although he will be the leading figure, John's

The Hymns of Heaven

Rev. 4:8: “The four living creatures, each having six wings, were full of eyes around and within. And they do not rest day or night, saying: ‘Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, Who was and is and is to come!’”

Rev. 4:11: “You are worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honor and power; for You created all things, and by Your will they exist and were created.”

Rev. 5:9, 10: “And they sang a new song, saying: ‘You are worthy to take the scroll, and to open its seals; for You were slain, and have redeemed us to God by Your blood out of every tribe and tongue and people and nation, And have made us kings and priests to our God; and we shall reign on the earth.’”

Rev. 5:12: “saying with a loud voice: ‘Worthy is the Lamb who was slain to receive power and riches and wisdom, and strength and honor and glory and blessing!’”

Rev. 5:13: “And every creature which is in heaven and on the earth and under the earth and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, I heard saying: ‘Blessing and honor and glory and power be to Him who sits on the throne, and to the Lamb, forever and ever!’”

Rev. 7:12: “saying: ‘Amen! Blessing and glory and wisdom, thanksgiving and honor and power and might, be to our God forever and ever. Amen.’”

Rev. 11:17, 18: “saying: ‘We give You thanks, O Lord God Almighty, the One who is and who was and who is to come, because you have taken Your great power and reigned. The nations were angry, and Your wrath has come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, And that you should reward Your servants the prophets and the saints, and those who fear Your name, small and great, and should destroy those who destroy the earth.’”

Rev. 15:3, 4: “They sing the song of Moses, the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, saying: ‘Great and marvelous are Your works, Lord God Almighty! Just and true are Your ways, O King of the saints! Who shall not fear You, O Lord, and glorify Your name? For You alone are holy. For all nations shall come and worship before You, for Your judgments have been manifested.’”

Rev. 16:5: “And I heard the angel of the waters saying: ‘You are righteous, O Lord, the One who is and who was and who is to be, because You have judged these things. For they have shed the blood of saints and prophets, and You have given them blood to drink. For it is their just due.’”

Rev. 19:1: “After these things I heard a loud voice of a great multitude in heaven, saying, ‘Alleluia! Salvation and glory and honor and power belong to the Lord our God!’”

Rev. 19:3: “Again they said, ‘Alleluia! Her smoke rises up forever and ever!’”

Rev. 19:5: “Then a voice came from the throne, saying, ‘Praise our God, all you His servants and those who fear Him, both small and great!’”

Rev. 19:6: “And I heard, as it were, the voice of a great multitude, as the sound of many waters and as the sound of mighty thunderings, saying, ‘Alleluia! For the Lord God Omnipotent reigns!’” point is that the entire world will follow him, being obsessed with pursuing this false peace. bow. The bow is a symbol of war, but the absence of arrows implies that this victory is a bloodless one—a peace won by covenant and agreement, not by war (cf. Dan. 9:24–27). crown. This word refers to the kind of laurel wreath awarded winning athletes. It “was given to him.” Antichrist becomes king, elected by the world’s inhabitants regardless of the cost, and will conquer the entire earth in a bloodless coup.

6:4 Another horse, fiery red. Its blood-red appearance speaks of the holocaust of war (cf. Matt. 24:7). God will grant this horse and its rider the power to create worldwide war. But as horrible as this judgment is, it will be only the “birth pangs,” the beginning pains of God’s wrath (Matt. 24:8; Mark 13:7, 8; Luke 21:9). people should kill one another. Violent slaughter will become commonplace. sword. Not the long, broad sword, but the shorter, more easily maneuvered one that assassins often used and that soldiers carried into battle. It depicts assassination, revolt, massacre, and wholesale slaughter (cf. Dan. 8:24).

6:5 black horse. Black signifies famine (cf. Lam. 5:8–10). Worldwide war will destroy the food supply which spawns global hunger. pair of scales. The common measuring device—two small trays hung from each end of a balance beam—indicates that the scarcity of food will lead to rationing and food lines.

6:6 quart of wheat. The approximate amount necessary to sustain one person for one day. denarius. One day’s normal wage. One day’s work will provide enough food for only one person. three quarts of barley. Usually fed to animals, this grain was low in nutrients and cheaper than wheat. A day’s wage provides enough for only a small family’s daily supply. oil and the wine. Although the point could be that these foods will not be affected by the famine, a more straightforward meaning is that bare staples—oil was used in the preparation of bread, and wine was considered necessary for cooking and purifying water—suddenly will become luxuries that have to be carefully protected.

6:8 pale horse. The Greek word from which the English word chlorophyll comes describes the pale, ashen-green, pallor characteristic of the decomposition of a corpse. God grants this horseman the authority to bring death to twenty-five percent of the world’s population. Hades. See note on Luke 16:23. The place of the dead, which is identified as a common and fitting partner for death (20:13; see note on 1:18).

What Is the Tribulation?

The Tribulation refers to that seven-year time period immediately following the Rapture—removal of the church from the earth (John 14:1–3; 1 Thess. 4:13–18), when the righteous judgments of God will be poured out upon an unbelieving world (Jer. 30:7; Dan. 9:27; 12:1; 2 Thess. 2:7–12; Rev. 16). These judgments will be climaxed by the return of Christ in glory to the earth (Matt. 24:27–31; 25:31–46; 2 Thess. 2:7–12).

In the Book of Revelation, the lengthy section from 6:1 to 19:21 details the judgments and events of the time of Tribulation from its beginning with the opening of the first seal through the seventh seal, trumpet, and bowl judgments of God, to the return of Christ to destroy the ungodly (19:11–21). The passage of time during this period is tracked in Revelation (11:2–3; 12:6, 14; 13:5). The second half of the seven-year period is specifically called in Revelation 7:14 “the great tribulation.”

6:9 fifth seal. This seal describes the force of the saints' prayers for God's vengeance. Its events will begin in the first half and mark the mid-point and events following, in the seven-year period, which is called the Great Tribulation (2:22; 7:14; see notes on Dan. 9:27; Matt. 24:15; 2 Thess. 2:3, 4). The second three-and-one-half-year period (11:2; 12:6; 13:5) features the Day of the Lord, in which God unleashes His judgment and wrath on the earth in intensifying waves (see note on 1 Thess. 5:2). under the altar. Probably a reference to the altar of incense, which pictured the saints' prayers ascending to God (5:8; cf. Ex. 40:5). the souls of those who had been slain. Christians martyred for their faith (cf. 7:9, 13–15; 17:6; Matt. 24:9–14; see also Mark 13:9–13; Luke 21:12–19).

6:11 white robe. See note on 3:4. rest a little while longer. God will answer their prayer for vengeance, but in His time. until both the number . . . was completed. God has predetermined the number of the righteous whose death He will allow before moving to destroy the rebels.

6:12 sixth seal. The force described in this seal is overpowering fear (cf. Luke 21:26). While the first five seals will result from human activity God used to accomplish His purposes, at this point He begins direct intervention (cf. Matt. 24:29; Luke 21:25). The previous five seals will be precursors to the full fury of the Day of the Lord which will begin with the sixth seal (v. 17). The events described in this seal unleash the seventh, which contains the trumpet judgments (chs. 8, 9; 11:15ff.) and the bowl judgments (ch. 16). great earthquake. There have been many earthquakes prior to this (Matt. 24:7), but this will be more than an earthquake. All the earth's faults will begin to fracture simultaneously, resulting in a cataclysmic, global earthquake. moon became like blood.

Accompanying the earthquake will be numerous volcanic eruptions; and large amounts of ash and debris will be blown into the earth's atmosphere, blackening the sun and giving the moon a blood-red hue (cf. Zech. 14:6, 7).

6:13 stars of heaven fell. The word stars can refer to any celestial body, large or small, and is not limited to normal English usage. The best explanation is a massive asteroid or meteor shower. late figs. Winter figs that grow without the protection of leaves and are easily blown from the tree.

6:14 sky receded as a scroll. The earth's atmosphere will be somehow dramatically affected and the sky, as we know it, will disappear (cf. Is. 34:4). every mountain and island was moved. Under the stress created by the global earthquake, great segments of the earth's plates will begin to slip and shift, realigning whole continents.

6:16 wrath of the Lamb. Earth's inhabitants will recognize for the first time the source of all their trouble (see note on 5:6). Incredibly, prior to this they will be living life as usual (Matt. 24:37–39).

6:17 great day. The sixth seal will begin what the prophets call the "Day of the Lord." See Introduction to Joel: Historical and Theological Themes; see note on 1 Thessalonians 5:2.

7:1–17 Chapter 7 forms a parenthesis between the sixth seal (6:12–17) and the seventh seal (8:1) and answers the question posed at the end of chapter 6. Two distinct groups will survive the divine fury: (1) 144,000 Jewish evangelists on earth (vv. 1–8) and (2) their converts in heaven (vv. 9–17).

7:1 four corners. The four quadrants of the compass; that is, the angels will take up key positions on earth. four winds. A figurative expression, indicating all the earth's winds—those from south, east, north, and west. The four angels will turn off, for a brief interlude, the essential engine of our earth's atmosphere.

7:2 seal of the living God. Seal often refers to a signet ring used to press its image into wax melted on a document. The resulting imprint implied authenticity and ownership and protected the contents (cf. 9:4; Ezek. 9:3, 4). In this case, the mark is the name of God (14:1).

7:4 One hundred and forty-four thousand. A missionary corps of redeemed Jews who are instrumental in the salvation of many Jews and Gentiles during the Tribulation (vv. 9–17). They will be the firstfruits of a new redeemed Israel (v. 4; Zech. 12:10). Finally, Israel will be the witness nation she refused to be in the OT (see notes on Rom. 11:25–27). all the tribes of the children of Israel. By sovereign election, God will seal 12,000 from each of the Twelve Tribes, promising His protection while they accomplish their mission.

7:9 a great multitude. While the Tribulation period will be a time of judgment, it will also be a time of unprecedented redemption (cf. v. 14; 6:9–11; 20:4; Is. 11:10; Matt. 24:14). all nations, tribes, peoples, and tongues. All the earth's people groups. white robes. See note on 3:4. palm branches. In ancient times, they were associated with celebrations, including the Feast of Tabernacles (Lev. 23:40; Neh. 8:17; John 12:13).

7:10 Salvation belongs to our God. Salvation is the theme of their worship, and they recognize that it comes solely from Him.

7:11 elders. See note on 4:4. See note on 4:6.

7:12 Blessing . . . and might. See note on 5:12.

7:13 white robes. See note on 3:4.

7:14 the great tribulation. See notes on 3:10; 6:1, 9, 12. These people didn't go with the raptured church, since they were not yet saved. During the seven-year period they will be saved, martyred, and enter heaven. Though it is a time of unparalleled judgment, it is also a time of unparalleled grace in salvation (cf. Matt. 24:12–14). washed their robes. Cf. 19:8. Salvation's cleansing is in view (see Titus 2:11–14). blood of the Lamb. This refers to the atoning sacrifice of Christ (cf. 1:5; 5:9; Rom. 3:24, 25; 5:9).

7:15 His temple. This refers to the heavenly throne of God (see note on 11:19). During the Millennium, there will also be a temple on earth—a special holy place where God dwells in a partially restored but still fallen universe (see Ezek. 40–48). In the final, eternal state with its new heavens and earth, there is no temple; God Himself, who will fill all, will be its temple (21:22). dwelt among them. The preferred reading is that He “will spread His tent over them.” God's presence will become their canopy of shelter to protect them from all the terrors of a fallen world and the indescribable horrors they have experienced on the earth during the time of Tribulation.

8:1 the seventh seal. This seal includes not only an earthquake, but the seven trumpet judgments (8:1–9:21; 11:15ff.) and the seven bowl judgments (16:1–21), with the bowl judgments flowing out of the seventh trumpet and coming in rapid succession just before Christ's return (see note on 6:1). silence in heaven. The silence of awe and anticipation at the grim reality of the judgments God is about to unleash.

8:2 seven trumpets. In Revelation, trumpets primarily announce impending judgment. The trumpets are of greater intensity than the seals, but not as destructive as the final bowl judgments will be (cf. 16:1–21). They occur during the final three and one-half years, but the time of each is indefinite, except the effects of the fifth trumpet judgment, which will last five months (9:10). The first four announce the divine destruction of earth's ecology (vv. 6–12), while the final three involve demonic devastation of earth's inhabitants (9:1–21; 11:15ff.).

8:3 censers. A golden pan, suspended on a rope or chain, that was used to transport fiery coals from the brazen altar to the altar of incense, in order to ignite the incense, symbolizing the prayers of the people (5:8; Ex. 27:3; cf. Luke 1:8, 9). This occurred twice daily at the time of the morning and evening sacrifices.

8:5 thunderings, lightnings. See note on 4:5. an earthquake. Surely of equal or greater intensity than the one described in the sixth seal (see note on 6:12).

8:7 hail and fire followed, mingled with blood. This may describe volcanic eruptions that could certainly result from the earthquake in verse 5. The steam and water thrown into the sky by such eruptions could easily condense into hail and fall to earth along with the fiery lava (cf. Ex. 9:13–25). Dust and gases may so contaminate falling liquid water that it appears blood red. a third of the trees were burned up. The lava storm will create a blazing fire that devastates one-third of the earth's forests.

8:8 like a great mountain. Probably a huge meteor or asteroid surrounded by gases that will ignite as it enters earth's atmosphere. Its impact will create a tidal wave, destroying one-third of the world's ships. sea became blood. This may refer to an event known as red tides, caused by billions of dead microorganisms poisoning the water—in this case the result of the meteor's collision. Or it may be actual blood, a clear act of eschatological judgment.

8:10 great star fell. Another celestial body, perhaps a comet in this case since it leaves a fiery trail (see notes on v. 8; 6:13). It will disintegrate as it nears the earth, scattering over the globe.

8:11 Wormwood. A bitter, poisonous substance, derived from a root, that causes drunkenness and eventually death (Deut. 29:18; Prov. 5:4; Jer. 9:15; Lam. 3:15).

8:12 a third of the sun was struck. God will supernaturally reduce the intensity of the celestial bodies by one-third. The loss of solar heat will cause a radical drop in temperature, producing severe changes in meteorological, botanical, and biological cycles (Luke 21:25; cf. Ex. 10:21–23). But this is temporary (cf. 16:8, 9).

8:13 Woe, woe, woe. One for each remaining trumpet blast. Although the first four trumpets are unimaginable, they will be nothing like the three to come (9:1–21; 11:15ff.).

9:1 a star fallen from heaven. Unlike the other stars that will have fallen (6:13; 8:8), this one will be an angelic being (cf. v. 2)—probably Satan himself (v. 4; 12:7; see notes on Is. 14:12–14; Ezek. 28:12–15; Luke 10:18). bottomless pit. Lit. “pit of the abyss.” Mentioned seven times in Revelation, it always refers to the prison where some of the demonic hordes are incarcerated, the place of severest torment and isolation (vv. 1, 2, 11; 11:7; 17:8; 20:1, 3; see notes on 2 Pet. 2:4; Jude 6, 7).

9:3 locusts. Grasshopper-like insects that descend in swarms so thick they can obscure the sun and strip bare all vegetation. In the 1950s, a locust swarm devoured every growing thing for several hundred thousand square miles in the Middle East. These are not normal locusts, however, but specially prepared ones that are merely the outward form of demons, who, like locusts, will bring swarming desolation (see notes on Joel 2:2, 4). Like appears nine times in John’s description; he finds it difficult to describe what he sees in a way the reader can understand. scorpions. An arachnid that inhabits warm, dry regions and has an erect tail tipped with a venomous stinger. A scorpion’s victim often rolls on the ground in agony, foams at the mouth, and grinds his teeth in pain. The demons, in locust form, are able to inflict the physical—and perhaps, spiritual—pain like the scorpion (v. 5).

9:4 men who do not have the seal of God. Everyone on earth, except the two groups mentioned in chapter 7—the 144,000 Jewish evangelists and their converts (see note on 7:4).

9:5 five months. The normal life cycle of locusts is five months, usually from May to September.

9:6 seek death and will not find it. The tormented will find no relief. Even their unimaginable attempts to end their misery in suicide will be unsuccessful.

9:7 faces of men. Probably a reference to these demonic creatures as rational, intelligent beings.

9:8 women’s hair. Jeremiah 51:27 refers to locusts having bristles like hair. lions’ teeth. They are fierce, powerful, and deadly (cf. Jer. 51:27).

9:9 breastplates of iron. Breastplates were designed to protect the vital organs and sustain the life of the warrior. These creatures are invulnerable.

9:10 five months. See note on verse 5.

9:11 Abaddon . . . Apollyon. Although locusts normally have no king (Prov. 30:27), these demonic creatures do. His name in both Hebrew and Greek means “destroyer.” There is a hierarchy of power among the demons, just as among the holy angels. Apparently, “the angel of the bottomless pit” is one of Satan’s most trusted leaders or, possibly, Satan himself.

9:12 One woe. The first of the final three trumpets (see note on 8:13).

9:13 horns of the golden altar. God’s design for the golden altar of incense included small protrusions (horns) on each corner (Ex. 30:2; see note on 6:9). Normally a place of mercy; as God responds to His people’s prayers, the altar will resound with a cry for vengeance.

9:14 four angels. Scripture never refers to holy angels as being bound. These are fallen angels—another segment of Satan’s force whom God had bound, but will free to accomplish His judgment through their horsemen (vv. 15–19). God’s control extends even to the demonic forces; they are bound or freed at His command. Euphrates. One of the four rivers that flowed through the Garden of Eden (see note on 16:12; cf. Gen. 2:14). Starting with Babel, this region has spawned many of the world’s pagan religions.

9:15 the hour and day and month and year. God works according to His predetermined plan (cf. Matt. 24:36; Acts 1:7).

9:16 the army. Some see this as a reference to forces accompanying the kings of the east (16:12) and identify them with a human army coming from Asia. But that event occurs in connection with the seventh trumpet, not the sixth. The language is better understood as referring to a demon force that makes war with the earth’s inhabitants and kills one-third of humanity (v. 15).

9:17 breastplates. See note on verse 9. brimstone. Brimstone is a yellowish, sulfuric rock that often attends fire and smoke in Revelation (14:10; 19:20; 20:10). Common in the Dead Sea region, when ignited such deposits melt and produce burning streams and suffocating gas.

9:20, 21 God lists five sins that are representative of their defiance.

9:20 demons. Reminiscent of Paul’s comments about idolatry (see note on 1 Cor. 10:19, 20); demons impersonate the stone and wood idols men make.

9:21 they did not repent. Cf. 16:9, 11, 21.

9:21 sorceries. This Greek word is the root of the English word pharmacy. Drugs in the ancient world were used to dull the senses and induce a state suitable for religious experiences such as seances, witchcraft, incantations, and cavorting with mediums (21:8; 22:15). See note on Ephesians 5:18.

10:1–11:14 These verses serve as an interlude between the sixth trumpet and the seventh trumpet (11:15). The seals and the bowls also have a brief interlude between their sixth and seventh judgments (7:1–17; 16:15). God’s intention is to encourage and comfort His people in the midst of the fury and to remind them that He is still sovereign, that He remembers His people, and that they will ultimately be victorious.

10:1 another mighty angel. Many commentators understand this to be Jesus Christ. But the Greek word translated “another” means one of the same kind, that is, a created being. This is not one of the seven angels responsible for sounding the trumpets (8:2), but one of the highest ranking in heaven, filled with splendor, greatness, and strength (cf. 5:2; 8:3; 18:1). rainbow. See note on 4:3. Perhaps God included this to remind John that even in judgment, He will always remember His Noahic covenant and protect His own. feet like pillars of fire. This angel’s feet and legs indicate the firm resolve with which he will execute the Day of the Lord.

10:2 little book. The seven-sealed scroll that is the title deed to the earth (see note on 5:1) will be fully opened and all the final judgments made visible. right foot on the sea and his left foot on the land. Although Satan has temporarily usurped the sea and the earth, this symbolic act demonstrates that all creation belongs to the Lord and He rules it with sovereign authority.

10:3 seven thunders. See note on 4:5; cf. 6:1; 8:5.

10:4 seven sourcerers. John was told he must conceal the message of the seven thunders until God's time (cf. 22:10; Dan. 8:26, 27; 12:9).

10:5 raised up his hand. This Greek verb appears often in the technical sense of raising the hand to take an oath or a solemn vow (cf. Dan. 12:7; see notes on Matt. 5:33, 34). The hand is raised toward heaven because that is where God dwells. The angel is taking an oath.

10:6 there should be delay no longer. This initiates the last plagues of the Day of the Lord (11:15), indicating that the time the disciples anticipated has come (Matt. 24:3; Acts 1:6). The prayers of the saints will be answered (6:9–11; Matt. 6:10).

10:7 the mystery. A Greek term meaning “to shut” or “to close.” In the NT, a “mystery” is a truth that God concealed, but has revealed through Christ and His apostles (see notes on Eph. 3:4, 5; cf. Rom. 16:25). Here the mystery is the final consummation of all things as God destroys sinners and establishes His righteous kingdom on earth. as He declared. This mystery, though not fully revealed, was declared to God's prophets (cf. Amos 3:7).

10:9 Take and eat it. This act graphically illustrates taking in God's Word. John's physical reactions demonstrate what every believer's proper response to God's judgment should be (cf. Ezek. 3:1)—sweet anticipation of God's glory and the Christians' victory, and at the same time, the bitterness of seeing God's wrath poured out on those who reject His Son. your stomach bitter. As he truly digests what the seal, trumpet, and bowl judgments hold in store for the sinner, John becomes nauseated. sweet as honey in your mouth. But still, God's final victory and vindication are sweet realities to the believer.

10:11 prophesy again. A call for John to warn people about the bitter judgment in the seventh trumpet and the seven bowls.

peoples, nations, tongues, and kings. See note on 7:9.

11:1 a reed. A hollow, bamboo-like cane plant that grew in the Jordan Valley. Because of its light weight and rigidity, it was commonly used as a measuring rod (cf. Ezek. 40:3, 5). Measuring the temple signified God's ownership of it (cf. 21:15; Zech. 2:1–5). the temple of God. This refers to the Holy of Holies and the Holy Place, not the entire temple complex (cf. v. 2). A rebuilt temple will exist during the time of the Tribulation (Dan. 9:27; 12:11; Matt. 24:15; 2 Thess. 2:4). altar. The reference to worshipers suggests this is the bronze altar in the courtyard, not the incense altar in the Holy Place, since only the priests were permitted inside the Holy Place (cf. Luke 1:8–10).

11:2 court which is outside. The court of the Gentiles, separated from the inner court in the Herodian temple by a low wall. Gentiles were forbidden to enter the inner court on penalty of death. That John is instructed not to measure the outer court symbolizes God's rejection of the unbelieving Gentiles who have oppressed His covenant people. tread the holy city underfoot. Assyria, Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, and Rome all oppressed Jerusalem in ancient times (cf. 2 Kin. 25:8–10; Ps. 79:1; Is. 63:18; Lam. 1:10). This verse refers to the future devastating destruction and oppression of Jerusalem by the forces of the Antichrist. forty-two months. This three-and-one-half-year period covers the second half of the Tribulation and coincides with the visibly evil career of the Antichrist (v. 3; 12:6; 13:5). During this same time, the Jews will be sheltered by God in the wilderness (12:6, 14).

11:3 two witnesses. Individuals granted special power and authority by God to preach a message of judgment and salvation during the second half of the Tribulation. The OT required two or more witnesses to confirm testimony (cf. Deut. 17:6; 19:15; Matt. 18:16; John 8:17; Heb. 10:28), and these two prophets will be the culmination of God's testimony to Israel: a message of judgment from God and of His gracious offer of the gospel to all who will repent and believe. one thousand two hundred and sixty days. Forty-two months or three and one-half years (cf. 12:6; 13:5; see note on v. 2). sack-cloth. Coarse, rough cloth made from goat or camel hair. Wearing garments made from it expressed penitence, humility, and mourning (cf. Gen. 37:34; 2 Sam. 3:31; 2 Kin. 6:30; 19:1; Esth. 4:1; Is. 22:12; Jer. 6:26; Matt. 11:21). The witnesses are mourning because of the wretched wickedness of the world, God's judgment on it, and the desecration of the temple and the holy city by the Antichrist.

11:4 This imagery is drawn from Zechariah 3 and 4 (see notes there). Zechariah's vision had both a near fulfillment (the rebuilding of the temple by Joshua and Zerubbabel) and a far future fulfillment (the two witnesses, whose ministry points toward Israel's final restoration in the millennium). two olive trees and the two lampstands. Olive oil was commonly used in lamps; together, the olive trees and lampstands symbolize the light of spiritual revival. The two witnesses' preaching will spark a revival, just as Joshua's and Zerubbabel's did in Israel after the Babylonian captivity.

11:5, 6 While it is impossible to be dogmatic about the identity of these two witnesses, several observations suggest they might be Moses and Elijah: (1) like Moses, they strike the earth with plagues, and like Elijah, they have the power to keep it from raining; (2) Jewish tradition expected both Moses (cf. Deut. 18:15–18) and Elijah (cf. Mal. 4:5, 6) to return in the future (cf. John 1:21); (3) both Moses and Elijah were present at the Transfiguration of Jesus, the preview of Christ's Second Coming; (4) both

Moses and Elijah used supernatural means to provoke repentance; (5) Elijah was taken up alive into heaven, and God buried Moses' body where it would never be found; and (6) the length of the drought the two witnesses bring (three and one-half years; cf. v. 3) is the same as that brought by Elijah (James 5:17).

11:5 fire proceeds . . . and devours. This probably refers to literal fire. These two will be invincible during their ministry, protected by supernatural power. The false prophet will counterfeit this sign (13:3).

11:6 power to shut heaven. Miracles have often authenticated God's messengers. Here, bringing a three-and-one-half-year drought (as did Elijah before them) will add immeasurable torment to those experiencing the worldwide disasters of the Tribulation—and exacerbate their hatred of the two witnesses. waters to turn them to blood. The earth's water, already devastated by the effects of the second and third trumpets, will become undrinkable, adding immensely to the suffering caused by the drought.

11:7 the beast. The first of thirty-six references to this person in Revelation, who is none other than the Antichrist (see ch. 13). That he will ascend out of the bottomless pit indicates that his power is satanic. kill them. Their ministry completed, God will withdraw the two witnesses' supernatural protection. The beast will then be able to accomplish what many had died trying to do.

11:8 bodies will lie in the street. Refusing to bury one's enemies was a way to dishonor and show contempt for them (cf. Acts 14:19). The OT expressly forbids this practice (Deut. 21:22, 23). the great city. Identifying Jerusalem as a city like Sodom and Egypt emphasizes the city's wickedness. Its Jewish population will apparently be the focus of the witnesses' ministry, leading to the conversions of verse 13.

11:9 three-and-a-half days. The entire world will watch (undoubtedly on the latest form of visual media) and glorify the Antichrist as the bodies of the dead prophets who have been killed begin to decay.

11:10 rejoice . . . make merry . . . send gifts. Wild with joy over the death of their tormentors, those who dwell on the earth (a phrase used eleven times in Revelation to speak of unbelievers) will celebrate the two witnesses' deaths as a holiday.

11:11 breath of life from God entered them. The festivities, however, are short-lived as God vindicates His faithful witnesses by resurrecting them.

11:12 ascended to heaven in a cloud. Some may wonder why God will not allow them to preach, assuming their message would have more force following their resurrection. But that ignores Christ's clear statement to the contrary (Luke 16:31). enemies saw them. Those who hated and dishonored the two witnesses will watch their vindication.

11:13 earthquake. God punctuates the ascension of His prophets with a shattering earthquake. The destruction and loss of life may be primarily among the leaders of the Antichrist's forces. the rest. This refers to the Jews still living, who will not yet have come to faith in Christ. gave glory to the God of heaven. A genuine experience of the salvation of Jews (cf. Luke 17:18, 19), in contrast to those who blaspheme and refuse to glorify God (16:9). This makes a key fulfillment of Zechariah's prophecy (12:10; 13:1) and Paul's (Rom. 11:25–27).

11:14 second woe. The sixth trumpet (see note on 9:12). The interlude between the sixth and seventh trumpets ends (see note on 10:1). Israel's repentance will shortly usher in the millennial kingdom (Acts 3:19–21; Rom. 11:25, 26). But first will come the final, climactic judgments.

11:15 seventh angel sounded. The seventh trumpet includes the seven bowl, final judgments depicted in chapter 16 and all the events leading up to the establishing of the millennial kingdom (ch. 20) and the coronation of Jesus as King (ch. 19). kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ. The singular (kingdom) is the preferred reading. Despite its many political and cultural divisions, the Bible views the world spiritually as one kingdom, with one ruler—Satan (John 12:31; 14:30; 16:11; 2 Cor. 4:4). Following Satan's lead, the human rulers of this world are generally hostile to Christ (Ps. 2:2; Acts 4:26). The long rebellion of the world kingdom will end with the victorious return of the Lord Jesus Christ to defeat His enemies and establish His messianic kingdom (Is. 2:2, 3; Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 18, 22, 27; Luke 1:31–33). This kingdom also belongs to God the Father (see notes on 1 Cor. 15:24).

11:16 twenty-four elders. See note on 4:4.

11:17 One who is and who was. The final phrase, "who is to come" (used in 1:4, 8; 4:8), is omitted in the most reliable Greek manuscripts. The coming of the kingdom is no longer future, it will be immediate.

11:18 nations were angry. No longer terrified (cf. 6:15–17), they will be filled with defiant rage. Their hostility will shortly manifest itself in a foolish attempt to fight against Christ—a doomed, futile effort that is the apex of human rebellion against God (16:14; 19:17–21). Your wrath. Almighty God answers the feeble, impotent fury of the nations (cf. Ps. 2:1–9). The twenty-four elders speak of God's future wrath (20:11–15) as if it were already present, signifying its certainty. That God will one day pour out His wrath on rebellious people is a major theme in Scripture (cf. Is. 24:17–23; 26:20, 21; 30:27–33; Ezek. 38:16ff.; 2 Thess. 1:5–10). dead . . . judged. The final outpouring of God's wrath includes judging the dead (cf. Matt. 25:31–46; John 5:25–29). The judgment has two parts: (1) God rewards OT saints (Dan. 12:1–3; cf. 22:12; 1 Cor. 3:8; 4:5), the raptured church (1 Cor. 15:51, 52; 1 Thess. 4:13–18), and Tribulation saints (20:4); and (2) God condemns unbelievers to the lake of fire forever (20:15).

11:19 temple of God . . . heaven. See 3:12; 7:15; 14:15, 17; 15:5–8; 16:1, 17. The heavenly Holy of Holies (see notes on Ex. 26:31–36) where God dwells in transcendent glory, already is identified as His throne (chs. 4, 5). Cf. Heb 9:24. John had seen the throne (4:5), the altar (6:9; 8:3–5), and, here, the Holy of Holies. ark of His covenant. This piece of furniture in the OT tabernacle and temple (see notes on Ex. 25:11–18) symbolized God's presence, atonement, and covenant with His people. That earthly ark was only a picture of this heavenly one (see Heb. 9:23; 10:20). It was there God provided mercy and atonement for sin. As the earthly Holy of Holies was open when the price of sin was paid (Matt. 27:51; Heb. 10:19, 20), so the Holy of Holies in heaven is opened to speak of God's saving New Covenant and redeeming purpose in the midst of judgment. lightnings, noises, thunderings, an earthquake, and great hail. What was anticipated in 4:5 and 8:5 will become a terrifying reality. These events occur as part of the seventh bowl (16:17–21) and are the climax of the seventh trumpet. Since heaven is the source of vengeance, judgment also comes out of God's Holy of Holies (14:15, 17; 15:5–8; 16:1, 7, 17). See note on 6:1.

12:1 sign. A symbol pointing to something else. This is the first of seven signs in the last half of Revelation. Cf. verse 3; 13:13, 14; 15:1; 16:14; 19:20. a woman. Not an actual woman, but a symbolic representation of Israel, pictured in the OT as the wife of God (Is. 54:5, 6; Jer. 3:6–8; 31:32; Ezek. 16:32; Hos. 2:16). Three other symbolic women appear in Revelation: (1) Jezebel, who represents paganism (2:20); (2) the scarlet woman (17:3–6), symbolizing the apostate church; and (3) the wife of the Lamb (19:7), symbolizing the true church. That this woman does not represent the church is clear from the context. clothed with the sun . . . moon under her feet . . . twelve stars. Cf. Genesis 37:9–11. Being clothed with the sun speaks of the glory, dignity, and exalted status of Israel, the people of promise who will be saved and given a kingdom. The picture of the moon under her feet possibly describes God's covenant relationship with Israel, since new moons were associated with worship (1 Chr. 23:31; 2 Chr. 2:4; 8:13; Ezra 3:5; Ps. 81:3). The twelve stars represent the Twelve Tribes of Israel.

12:2 cried out . . . in pain. Israel, often pictured as a mother giving birth (cf. Is. 26:17, 18; 54:1; 66:7–12; Hos. 13:13; Mic. 4:10; 5:2, 3; Matt. 24:8), had agonized and suffered for centuries, longing for the Messiah to come and destroy Satan, sin, and death, and usher in the kingdom.

12:3 great, fiery red dragon. The woman's mortal enemy is Satan, who appears as a dragon thirteen times in this book (cf. v. 9; 20:2). Red speaks of bloodshed (cf. John 8:44). seven heads . . . ten horns . . . seven diadems. Figurative language depicting Satan's domination of seven past worldly kingdoms and ten future kingdoms (cf. Dan. 7:7, 20, 24). See notes on 13:1; 17:9, 10. Satan has and will rule the world until the seventh trumpet blows (11:15). He has inflicted relentless pain on Israel (Dan. 8:24), desiring to kill the woman before she could bring forth the child who would destroy him (see notes on Esth. 3:6–15).

12:4 a third of the stars of heaven. Satan's original rebellion (cf. Is. 14:12ff.; Ezek. 28:11ff.) resulted in one-third of the angelic host joining his insurrection and becoming demons. to devour her Child. Unable to prevent the Virgin Birth of Christ, Satan tried to kill the child in a general massacre of male children commanded by Herod (Matt. 2:13–18; cf. Luke 4:28, 29).

12:5 a male Child. Jesus Christ in His Incarnation was of Jewish descent (Matt. 1:1; 2 Tim. 2:8). Despite Satan's efforts to destroy Israel and the messianic line, Jesus' birth took place as predicted by the prophets (cf. Is. 7:14; 9:6; Mic. 5:2). rod of iron. This describes Jesus' coronation as King over the nations of the world (cf. 11:15; 19:15; Ps. 2:6–9). her Child was caught up to God. Christ's Ascension is in view (Acts 1:9; 2:33; Heb. 1:1–3; 12:2).

12:6 wilderness. God will protect Israel from Satan by hiding her in the wilderness, perhaps in the regions of Moab, Ammon, and Edom, east of Palestine. Interestingly, those countries will be specifically spared from the Antichrist's attack against the Holy Land (cf. Dan. 11:41). one thousand two hundred and sixty days. At the mid-point of the Tribulation, the Antichrist breaks his covenant with Israel, puts a stop to temple worship, sets up the abomination of desolation (Dan. 9:27; Matt. 24:15), and devastates Jerusalem (11:2). At that time, many Jews flee for their lives (Matt. 24:16ff.). God will preserve them during the last 1,260 days (forty-two months; three and one-half years) constituting the Great Tribulation. See notes on 3:10; 6:1, 9.

12:7 war broke out in heaven. The tumultuous events on earth during the Tribulation find their counterpart in heaven. A state of war has existed since the fall of Satan (cf. v. 4; cf. Dan. 10:13; Jude 9). Something will intensify that warfare—possibly the raptured saints passing through the realm of the prince of the power of the air (cf. Eph. 2:2).

12:9 dragon was cast . . . to the earth. Satan and his demons were cast out of heaven at the time of their original rebellion, but still have access to it (cf. Job 1:6; 2:1). That access will then be denied, and they will be forever barred from heaven. Devil and Satan. Cf. 20:2. Devil comes from a Greek verb meaning “to slander” or “to falsely accuse.” He is a malignant liar (John 8:44; 1 John 3:8). His accusations against believers (v. 10) are unsuccessful because of Christ our Advocate (1 John 2:1). Satan, meaning “adversary,” or “enemy,” appears especially in Job and the Gospels. deceives the whole world. As he has throughout human history, Satan will deceive people during the Tribulation (cf. 13:14; 20:3; John 8:44). After his temporary release from the bottomless pit at the end of the Millennium, he will briefly resume his deceitful ways (20:8, 10).

12:10 accuser. See note on verse 9. Satan will no longer accuse believers before the throne of God because he will no longer have access to heaven.

12:12 he has a short time. Knowing that his time is limited, Satan will intensify his efforts against God and mankind, and specifically target Israel (v. 13, 17).

12:14 wings of a great eagle. Not actual birds' wings, but a graphic depiction of God's providential protection of Israel (cf. Ex. 19:4). Wings often speak of protection (cf. Deut. 32:9–12; Ps. 91:4; Is. 40:31). Eagles—probably vulture-like griffins—were the largest birds known in Palestine. a time and times and half a time. Three and one-half years; the second half of the Tribulation (cf. v. 6; 11:2, 3; 13:5).

12:16 earth opened its mouth. A great army will come against Israel like a flood (v. 15; cf. Jer. 46:8; 47:2), only to be swallowed up, perhaps in conjunction with one of the numerous earthquakes that occur during that period (6:12; 8:5; 11:13, 19; 16:18; Matt. 24:7).

| Key Word                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |

| Devil/Satan: The word diabolos signifies one who accuses another (2:10; 12:9, 12; 20:2, 10). Hence that other name given him, “the accuser of our brethren” (see 12:10). The name Satan signifies one who lies in wait for or sets himself in opposition to another (20:2, 7). These and other names of the same fallen spirit point to different features of his evil character and deceitful operations. |

12:17 rest of her offspring. Satan will turn his frustrated rage against every follower of the Lamb he can find—Jew or Gentile. commandments of God . . . testimony of Jesus. The revealed truth from God and Christ contained in Scripture. Obedience to God’s Word always marks a genuine believer. Cf. John 8:32.

13:1 Then I stood. Most manuscripts read “he stood,” referring again to the dragon, or Satan (cf. 12:9, 17). He takes a position in the midst of the nations of his world, represented by the sand of the sea. a beast. Lit. “a monster” (cf. 11:7), which describes a vicious, killing animal. In this context, the term represents both a person (Antichrist) and his system (the world). The final satanic world empire will be inseparable from the demon-possessed man who leads it. For a discussion of Antichrist, see notes on 2 Thessalonians 2:3–11. He is also described in Daniel 7:8, 21–26; 8:23–25; 9:24–27; 11:36–45. rising up out of the sea. The sea represents the abyss or pit, the haunt of demons (cf. 11:7; 17:8; 20:1; Luke 8:31). The picture is of Satan summoning a powerful demon from the abyss, who then activates and controls the beast (Antichrist) and his empire. seven heads and ten horns. This description is like that of Satan in 12:3. The heads may represent successive world empires—Egypt, Assyria, Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, Rome, and the final kingdom of Antichrist (see notes on 17:9, 10). The final one is made up of all the kingdoms represented by the horns (see notes for 17:12). Ten is a number that symbolizes the totality of human military and political power assisting the beast (Antichrist) as he controls the world. Horns always represent power, as in the animal kingdom—both offensive power (attack) and defensive power (protection). Daniel shows that the human Antichrist will rise up from these ten kings (Dan. 7:16–24). John picks up the numerical imagery of Daniel 2:41, 42, which refers to the ten toes on the statue’s clay and iron feet. The apostle sees the beast as the final world government—the anti-Christ, anti-God coalition—headed by a revived Roman Empire, having the strengths of various world powers, yet mixed with weakness and ultimately crushed (cf. Dan. 2:32–45; 7:7, 8, 19–25; see note on 12:3). The crowns show the regal dominion of this confederate kingdom.

blasphemous name. Throughout history, every time a monarch has identified himself as a god, he has blasphemed the true God. Each ruler who contributes to the beast’s final coalition has an identity, wears a crown, exerts dominion and power, and, therefore, blasphemes God.

13:2 leopard. A metaphor for ancient Greece, alluding to the Greeks’ swiftness and agility as their military moved forward in conquest, particularly under Alexander the Great (cf. Dan. 7:6). The leopard and subsequent animal symbols were all native wildlife in Palestine, familiar to John’s readers. bear. A metaphor for the ancient Medo-Persian Empire, depicting that kingdom’s ferocious strength, combined with its great stability (cf. Dan. 7:5). lion. A metaphor for the ancient Babylonian Empire, referring to the Babylonians' fierce, all-consuming power as they extended their domain (cf. Dan. 7:4). The dragon gave him his power. See notes on verse 1; 12:9.

13:3 his deadly wound was healed. This statement could refer to one of the kingdoms that was destroyed and revived (i.e., the Roman Empire). But more likely, it refers to a fake death and resurrection enacted by the Antichrist, as part of his lying deception. Cf. verses 12, 14; 17:8, 11; 2 Thessalonians 2:9. world marveled. People in the world will be astounded and fascinated when Anti-christ appears to rise from the dead. His charisma, brilliance, and attractive but deluding powers will cause the world to follow him unquestioningly (v. 14; 2 Thess. 2:8–12).

13:5 was given. The sovereign God will establish the limits within which Antichrist will be allowed to speak and operate. God will allow him to utter his blasphemies, to bring the rage of Satan to its culmination on earth for three and one-half years (v. 5; 11:2, 3; 12:6, 13, 14). forty-two months. The final three and one-half years—1,260 days—of the “time of Jacob’s trouble” (Jer. 30:7) and Daniel’s seventieth week (Dan. 9:24–27), known as the Great Tribulation (see notes on 11:2; 12:6; cf. Dan. 7:25). This last half is launched by the abomination of desolations (see note on Matt. 24:15).

13:6 His name. This identifies God and summarizes all His attributes (cf. Ex. 3:13, 14). His tabernacle. This is symbolic of heaven (cf. Heb. 9:23, 24). those who dwell in heaven. The angels and glorified saints who are before the throne of God and serve Him day and night.

13:7 make war with the saints. The Antichrist will be allowed to massacre those who are God’s children (cf. 6:9–11; 11:7; 12:17; 17:6; Dan. 7:23–25; 8:25; 9:27; 11:38; 12:10; Matt. 24:16–22). See note on 17:6.

13:8 Book of Life. See note on 3:5. Lamb slain. The Lord Jesus who died to purchase the salvation of those whom God had chosen was fulfilling an eternal plan. from the foundation of the world. According to God’s eternal, electing purpose before creation, the death of Christ seals the redemption of the elect forever (cf. Acts 2:23; 4:27, 28). Antichrist can never take away the salvation of the elect. The eternal registry of the elect will never be altered, nor will the saved in the Antichrist’s day worship him.

13:9 Cf. 2:7, 11, 17, 29; 3:6, 13, 22. This phrase omits “what the Spirit says to the churches” as in the seven letters to the churches, perhaps because they have been raptured.

13:10 A call for believers to accept persecution from Antichrist with perseverance and endurance. God has chosen some believers to be imprisoned and executed which they must not resist (cf. Matt. 26:51–54; 2 Cor. 10:4), but accept with patience such suffering as God ordains for them (cf. 1 Pet. 2:19–24).

13:11 another beast. This is the final false prophet (called such in 16:13; 19:20; 20:10) who promotes Antichrist’s power and convinces the world to worship him as God. This companion beast will be the chief, most persuasive proponent of satanic religion (cf. 16:13; 19:20; 20:10). Antichrist will be primarily a political and military leader, but the false prophet will be a religious leader. Politics and religion will unite in a worldwide religion of worshiping the Antichrist (see 17:1–9, 15–17). out of the earth. Likely another reference to the abyss that lies below the earth. The false prophet will be sent forth and controlled by a powerful demon from below. The earth imagery, in contrast to that of the foreboding, mysterious sea in verse 1, may imply that the false prophet is subtler and more winsome than Antichrist. two horns like a lamb. This describes the relative weakness of the false prophet compared to Antichrist, who has ten horns. A lamb has only two small bumps on its head, very inferior to the ten-horned beast. like a lamb. The lamb imagery may also imply that the false prophet will be also a false Christ masquerading as the true Lamb. Unlike Antichrist, the false prophet will come not as a killing, destroying animal, but as one who appears gentle and deceptively attractive. spoke like a dragon. The false prophet will be Satan's mouthpiece and, thus, his message will be like the dragon, Satan—the source of all false religion (cf. 2 Cor. 11:14).

13:12 exercises all the authority of the first beast. The false prophet exercises the same kind of satanic power as Antichrist because he is empowered by the same source. He, too, will have worldwide influence and reputation as a miracle worker and speaker. causes . . . to worship. "He causes" is used eight times of him. He wields influence to establish a false world religion headed by Antichrist and to entice people to accept that system. whose deadly wound was healed. See notes on verse 3; 17:8. This likely refers to the carefully crafted deception of a false resurrection, a false murder to inspire allegiance for the world.

13:13 great signs. The same phrase is used of Jesus' miracles (John 2:11, 23; 6:2), which indicates the false prophet performs signs that counterfeit Christ's. Satan, who has done supernatural works in the past (e.g., Ex. 7:11; 2 Tim. 3:8), must use his strategy of false miracles to convince the world that Antichrist is more powerful than God's true witnesses (ch. 11), including Jesus Christ. fire come down from heaven. The context indicates that the false prophet does counterfeit pyrotechnic signs continually to convince people of his power, and also in imitation of the two witnesses (11:5).

13:14 make an image. This refers to a replication of Antichrist that is related to the throne he will erect during the abomination of desolation, halfway into the Tribulation period. This will happen in the Jerusalem temple when Antichrist abolishes the former false world religion and seeks to have people worship him alone as God (cf. Dan. 9:27; 11:31; 12:11; Matt. 24:15; 2 Thess. 2:4). The false prophet and Antichrist again will deceive the world with a clever imitation of Christ, who will later return and reign from the true throne in Jerusalem.

13:15 speak. The false prophet will give the image of Antichrist the appearance of life, and the image will seem to utter words—contrary to what is normally true of idols (cf. Ps. 135:15, 16; Hab. 2:19). cause . . . to be killed. His gentleness is a lie, since he is a killer (7:9–17). Some Gentiles will be spared to populate the kingdom (Matt. 25:31–40), and Jews will be protected (12:17).

13:16 a mark. In the Roman Empire, this was a normal identifying symbol, or brand, that slaves and soldiers bore on their bodies. Some of the ancient mystical cults delighted in such tattoos, which identified members with a form of worship. Antichrist will have a similar requirement, one that will need to be visible on the hand or forehead.

13:17 buy or sell. Antichrist's mark will allow people to engage in daily commerce, including the purchase of food and other necessities. Without the identifying mark, individuals will be cut off from the necessities of life. number of his name. The beast (Antichrist) will have a name inherent in a numbering system. It is not clear from the text exactly what this name and number system will be or what its significance will be.

13:18 His number is 666. This is the essential number of a man. The number six falls one short of God's perfect number, seven, and thus represents human imperfection. Antichrist, the most powerful human the world will ever know, will still be a man, i.e., a six. The ultimate in human and demonic power is a six, not perfect, as God is. The threefold repetition of the number is intended to reiterate and underscore man's identity. When Antichrist is finally revealed, there will be some way to identify him with this basic number of a man, or his name may have the numerical equivalent of 666. (In many languages, including Hebrew, Greek, and Latin, letters have numerical equivalents.) Because this text reveals very little about the meaning of 666, it is unwise to speculate beyond what is said.

14:1 a Lamb. See note on 5:6. Mount Zion. The city of Jerusalem, where Messiah will return and plant His feet (cf. Pss. 2; 48:1, 2; Is. 24:23). one hundred and forty-four thousand. See note on 7:4. name. The counterpart to the mark of the beast. It is the stamp that will identify the 144,000 as belonging to God (see note on 13:6).

14:3 new song. The song of redemption, being sung by all the redeemed saints in one gigantic choir. They are rejoicing over the accomplishment of God's entire redemptive work before Christ's return (cf. Pss. 33:1–3; 40:3; 96:1; 144:9, 10; 149; Luke 15:10; see note on 5:9). the four living creatures, and the elders. See notes on 4:4, 6.

14:4 not defiled with women. An illustration of God's ability to keep believers remarkably pure in the midst of great difficulty. This phrase indicates that the 144,000 Jewish evangelists will have not only resisted the perverse system of Antichrist, but they will have also resisted all temptations to illicit sex. Cf. 2 Corinthians 11:2. follow the Lamb. This indicates partisanship for Jesus Christ. The victorious 144,000 are unwaveringly loyal to Him, whatever the cost (cf. Matt. 16:24; Mark 10:21; Luke 9:23; John

What Does 666 Mean?

Numbers are important in Scripture in two ways: (1) they speak to God's exactness and (2) they represent certain recurring ideas. The number 666 is mentioned only in Revelation 13:18. The significance of the number itself is not explained, so speculation about the meaning must be cautious and limited.

The number 6 falls one short of God's perfect number, 7, and thus points to human imperfection. Antichrist, the most powerful human the world will ever know, will still be a man—a 6. The ultimate in human and demonic power is a 6, not perfect, as God is. The threefold repetition of the number is intended to emphasize man's identity. He is emphatically imperfect, not almost perfect. So the number represents the essential number of a man.

When Antichrist is finally revealed, there will be some way to identify him with this basic number, or his name may have the numerical equivalent of 666. In many languages, including Hebrew, Greek, and Latin, letters from the alphabet were used to represent numbers. Beyond these basic observations, the text reveals nothing about the meaning of 666. It is unwise, therefore, to speculate beyond what God's Word gives us. However, it will certainly be someone in the future, not the past.

10:27; 12:26; 14:15). firstfruits. Like the OT firstfruits offerings, these men will be set apart for special service to God (cf. Deut. 26:1–11). Some see firstfruits as the first large group of redeemed Israel (see note on 11:13), saved much earlier, and representative of more converts to follow (cf. Rom. 16:5; 1 Cor. 16:15), the first fruits of a redeemed Israel (Rom. 11:1–5, 11–15, 25–27).

14:5 no deceit. The 144,000 speak God's truth accurately and precisely, with no exaggeration or understatement (cf. Zeph. 3:13). without fault. Not sinless, but sanctified (see Eph. 1:4; 5:27; Col. 1:22).

14:6 midst of heaven. From a Greek term ("mid-heaven") denoting the point in the noonday sky where the sun reaches its zenith. This is the highest and brightest point, where all can see and hear. the everlasting gospel. The angel is preaching the good news concerning everlasting life and entrance into the kingdom of God (cf. Matt. 24:14; 1 Cor. 15:1–10). He is urging the people of the world to change their allegiance from the beast to the Lamb. It is also called, in the NT, the gospel of God, the gospel of grace, the gospel of Christ, the gospel of peace, the glorious gospel, and the gospel of the kingdom. It is good news that God saves by the forgiveness of sin and opens His kingdom to all who will repent and believe. The whole world will hear this preaching by the angel as God graciously calls all to salvation.

14:7 Fear God. Not Satan, or Antichrist. This is the theme of Scripture, calling people to give honor, glory, worship, and reverence to God (cf. Prov. 23:17; 1 Pet. 2:17). See notes on Rom. 1:18–21. hour of His judgment has come. The last moment arrives to repent and believe before God's wrath is poured out. This is the book's first use of the word judgment, a term that has the same meaning as wrath (see 6:17; 12:12). Him who made heaven and earth. Creation is the great proof of God, which preachers will appeal to as the ground for all people to believe in Him and worship Him (cf. 4:11; 10:6; John 1:9; Acts 14:15–17; 17:23–28).

14:8 Babylon is fallen. Lack of response to the first angel's message causes a second angel to pronounce this judgment. Babylon refers to the entire worldwide political, economic, and religious kingdom of Antichrist

(cf. 16:17–19 for details of this fall). The original city of Babylon was the birthplace of idolatry where the residents built the Tower of Babel, a monument to rebelliousness and false religion. Such idolatry was subsequently spread when God confounded man's language and scattered them around the world (cf. Gen. 11:1–9). wine of the wrath of her fornication. This pictures Babylon causing the world to become intoxicated with her pleasures and enter an orgy of rebellion, hatred, and idolatry toward God. Fornication is spiritual prostitution to Antichrist's false system, which will fall for such iniquity.

14:9 worships the beast. See notes on 13:14, 15; cf. 13:8.

14:10 cup of His indignation. Anyone loyal to the Antichrist and his kingdom will suffer the outpouring of God's collected wrath, done with the full force of His divine anger and unmitigated vengeance (cf. Ps. 75:8; Is. 51:17; Jer. 25:15, 16). Divine wrath is not an impulsive outburst of anger aimed capriciously at people God does not like. It is the settled, steady, merciless, graceless, and compassionless response of a righteous God against sin. fire and brimstone. These two elements are often associated in Scripture with the torment of divine punishment (Gen. 19:24, 25; Is. 34:8–10). Here, the reference is to hell, the lake of fire (cf. 19:20; 20:10; 21:8). Brimstone is a fiery sulfur (see note on 9:17).

14:11 torment ascends forever and ever. A reference to the eternity of hell (cf. Matt. 3:12; 13:41, 42; 25:41; Mark 9:48). Torment is the ceaseless infliction of unbearable pain (cf. Luke 16:23, 24), here prescribed for all who are loyal to Satan's leader.

14:12 This is excellent scriptural support for the doctrine of perseverance, which assures all true believers in Christ that they will never lose their faith. The regenerate will continually endure, right to the end, in obedience to the truth, no matter what may come against them (see notes on Rom. 8:31–39; Phil. 1:6; cf. Jer. 32:40; Matt. 24:13; John 6:35–40; 10:27–30; 1 John 5:4, 11–13, 20).

14:13 Blessed. See note on 1:3.

14:14 Son of Man. See note on 1:13. The imagery of the Lord on a cloud is from Daniel 7:13, 14 and emphasizes magnificent majesty (cf. 1:7; Matt. 24:30; 26:64; Acts 1:9–11). golden crown*. The victor's crown, a laurel wreath, worn by those who celebrated victory in war or athletic competition. Christ now wears this particular crown, in this case made of gold, as a triumphant conqueror coming out of heaven to prevail over His enemies. sickle*. A harvesting tool with a razor-sharp, curved steel or iron blade and a wooden handle, commonly used by ancient farmers to cut grain. It represents swift and devastating judgment.

14:15 harvest of the earth. The grain—in this case the ungodly people of the world—is ready to be gathered up and judged.

14:17 temple. See note on 11:19. This refers to the heavenly dwelling place of God, not the Tribulation temple in Jerusalem (cf. 11:1).

14:18 another angel . . . who had power over fire. This angel is associated with fire on the altar, which represents the prayers of the saints (6:9–11; 8:3–5). Fire refers to the constantly burning fire on the brass altar of Jerusalem's temple. Twice daily the priest would burn incense with that fire and offer the burning incense in the Holy Place as a symbol of the people's prayers (see notes on 5:8; 6:9; 8:3). This angel is coming from the heavenly altar to ensure that all the prayers of all the saints for judgment and the coming of the kingdom are answered. He calls for judgment to start. sickle*. See note on verse 14.

14:19 winepress. This vivid imagery signifies a horrendous slaughter or bloodbath

The Seven Beatitudes

1. "Blessed is he who reads and those who hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written in it; for the time is near." (Rev. 1:3)

2. "Then I heard a voice from heaven saying to me, 'Write: Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from now on.' 'Yes,' says the Spirit, 'that they may rest from their labors, and their works follow them.'" (Rev. 14:13)

3. "Behold, I am coming as a thief. Blessed is he who watches, and keeps his garments, lest he walk naked and they should see his shame." (Rev. 16:15)

4. "Then he said to me, 'Write: "Blessed are those who are called to the marriage supper of the Lamb!"' And he said to me, "These are the true sayings of God.'" (Rev. 19:9)

5. "Blessed and holy is he who has part in the first resurrection. Over such the second death has no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with Him a thousand years." (Rev. 20:6)

6. "Behold, I am coming quickly! Blessed is he who keeps the words of the prophecy of this book." (Rev. 22:7)

7. "Blessed are those who do His commandments, that they may have the right to the tree of life, and may enter through the gates into the city." (Rev. 22:14)

(cf. Is. 63:2, 3; Lam. 1:15; Joel 3:13). Here, it refers to the slaughter of all the enemies of God who are still alive, facing the destruction at Armageddon, the final battle against God's enemies, staged on the plain of Esdraelon. The bloody imagery comes from the fresh juice of stomped grapes splattering and running down a trough from the upper vat to the lower vat of a stone winepress.

14:20 outside the city. God will determine that this bloodbath will occur outside Jerusalem, as if God wants to protect the city from the carnage all around. Zechariah 14:1–5 makes clear that Jerusalem will be attacked, but will not be destroyed in the end; the city will be spared for the glory of the kingdom, and the believing remnant will be saved as the Lord defends them and the city against the nations. They will escape through a newly created valley as the Lord finishes judgment and sets up His kingdom. up to the horses' bridles. The severity of the slaughter is indicated in the imagery of the blood of those killed in the battle of Armageddon splattering as high (about four feet) as the bridles of the horses involved. Equally likely, if the battle occurs near the central valley of Israel, the tremendous volume and flow of blood could easily form troughs four feet deep in some places. This event clearly is described in 19:11–21. Ezekiel 39:8–16 may be describing the clean up. one thousand six hundred furlongs. Approximately 184 miles The approximate distance from Armageddon in the north of Palestine to Edom in the south. The great battle will rage across that entire area and even slightly beyond.

15:1–8 Chapter 15 introduces the seven bowls of wrath, God's final judgments at the end of the seven-year Tribulation period. The bowl judgments come in a rapid-fire, staccato fashion, each one stronger in fury and intensity. The bowls are the last plagues that issue from the blast of the seventh trumpet, and will conclude the seventh seal (see note on 6:1).

15:1 wrath of God. See notes on 11:18; 14:10; 16:19; 19:15; cf. Romans 1:18–21.

15:2 sea of glass. God's heavenly throne sits on a transparent crystal platform or pavement (see note on 4:6). victory over the beast. All the saints from every nation, including Israel, ultimately triumph over Satan's Antichrist and his system because of their faith in Jesus Christ. number of his name. See note on 13:17. harps. See note on 5:8.

15:3 song of Moses. Sung by the people of Israel immediately after their passage through the Red Sea and their deliverance from the Egyptian armies (Ex. 15:1–21; cf. Deut. 32:1–43), this was a song of victory and deliverance that the redeemed who overcome Antichrist and his system will readily identify with. song of the Lamb. See 5:8–14. These two songs celebrate two great redemptive events: (1) deliverance of Israel by God from Egypt through Moses; and (2) deliverance of sinners by God from sin through Christ. Great and marvelous are Your works. This statement from the song of the Lamb extols God's powerful works in creation as He providentially upholds the universe (cf. Ps. 139:14). Almighty. God is omnipotent (cf. Amos 4:13). King of the saints. God is sovereign over the redeemed of every nation (cf. Jer. 10:7).

15:4 God's holy and perfect character inevitably demands that He judge (cf. Ps. 19:9; Nah. 1:3, 6). After God's righteous judgment is complete, He will set up Christ's millennial kingdom on earth, and the elect from every nation will come and worship Him (cf. Ps. 66:4; Is. 66:23; Phil. 2:9–11).

15:5 the temple of the tabernacle of the testimony. This refers to the location of the ark of the covenant in the Holy of Holies where God dwells (see note on 11:19; cf. Num. 10:11).

15:6 seven plagues. The final, most severe judgments from God, described in chapter 16 (see note on v. 1). linen . . . golden bands. The fabric represents holiness and purity (19:14). These are belts or girdles, running from the shoulder to the waist, that each of the seven angels wear over his garments. The bands demonstrate riches, royalty, and untarnished glory.

15:7 four living creatures. See notes on 4:6–8. seven golden bowls. These are shallow saucers, familiar items often associated with various functions of the temple worship (1 Kin. 7:50; 2 Kin. 12:13; 25:15), such as wine (Amos 6:6) and blood sacrifice (Ex. 27:3). Their flat shallowness pictures how the divine judgments will be emptied instantly, rather than slowly poured, drowning those who refused to drink the cup of salvation. wrath of God. See notes on 11:18; 14:10.

15:8 filled with smoke. Cf. Exodus 19:16–18; 40:34–35; 1 Kings 8:10, 11; Isaiah 6:4.

16:2 first . . . bowl . . . a foul and loathsome sore. The Septuagint (LXX) uses the same Greek word to describe the boils that plagued the Egyptians (Ex. 9:9–11) and afflicted Job (Job 2:7). In the NT, it describes the open sores that covered the beggar Lazarus (Luke 16:21). All over the world, people will be afflicted with incurable, open, oozing sores. mark of the beast. Only the worshipers of Antichrist will be afflicted (see note on 13:16; cf. 14:9–11).

16:3 second . . . bowl . . . every living creature in the sea died. This is reminiscent of the second trumpet (8:8, 9), and of the first plague against Egypt (Ex. 7:20–25). This plague, however, will be far more widespread. The water in the world's oceans will become thick, dark, and coagulated, like the blood of a corpse. The death and decay of billions of sea creatures will add to the misery of this judgment.

16:4 third . . . bowl . . . rivers and springs of water. Fresh water, already in short supply because of the prolonged drought (11:6), will now suffer the fate of the oceans (cf. Ex. 7:19ff.). In addition to suffering from thirst, the worshipers of Antichrist will have no clean water with which to wash their sores.

16:5 who is and who was and who is to be. This phrase expresses God's eternity

(cf. 1:4, 8; 4:8; 11:17). Verse 6 says that the eternal God will judge justly because they have killed the believers and preachers of the gospel (6:9–11; 7:9–17; 11:18; 17:6; 18:20). This slaughter will have no parallel in history (Matt. 24:21) and neither will the vengeance of God (cf. Rom. 12:19–21).

16:6 given them blood to drink. The thick, blood-like substance which the fresh waters have become is all that is available to drink (cf. v. 4). For it is their just due. The angel exonerates God from any charge that His judgments are too harsh. The unspeakably wicked generation then alive will shed more blood than any before it, including that of saints (6:9; 17:6) and prophets (11:7–10). God's judgment is fair and proper (cf. Ex. 21:25–27; Lev. 24:19, 20; Heb. 10:26–31).

16:7 altar. The personified altar echoes the words of the angel, reinforcing the truth that God is just in all judgment (19:1, 2; cf. Gen. 18:25; Ps. 51:4; Rom. 3:4).

16:8 fourth . . . bowl . . . scorch . . . with fire. The sun that normally provides light, warmth, and energy will become a deadly killer. With no fresh water to drink, earth's inhabitants will face extreme heat. The scorching heat will melt the polar ice caps, which some estimate would raise the level of the world's oceans by two hundred feet, inundating many of the world's major cities and producing further catastrophic loss of life (cf. Amos 9:5, 6). The resulting disruption of ocean transportation will make it difficult to distribute the dwindling resources of food and water.

16:9 they did not repent. Incredibly, sinners will still refuse to repent (cf. vv. 11, 21), and, instead, blaspheme God—the One they know has caused their afflictions.

16:10 throne of the beast. This refers to either Antichrist's actual throne, or his capital city, but extends to all his dominion. Regardless of where the darkness begins, it eventually covers Antichrist's entire kingdom. full of darkness. Worldwide darkness is elsewhere associated with the judgment of God (cf. Is. 60:2; Joel 2:2; Mark 13:24, 25). gnawed their tongues. A futile attempt to alleviate the pain from their sores, the drought, and the fierce heat.

16:11 blasphemed the God of heaven. A sign of their continued loyalty to Antichrist and their anger at God for the cumulative miseries brought about by the first five bowls. "God of heaven," a frequent OT title for God, appears in the NT only here and in 11:13. their sores. The lingering effects of the first bowl are the chief cause of their blasphemy.

16:12 Euphrates. Called "the great river" five times in Scripture (cf. 9:14; Gen. 15:18; Deut. 1:7; Josh. 1:4), it flows some 1,800 miles from its source on the slopes of Mt. Ararat to the Persian Gulf (see note on 9:14). It forms the eastern boundary of the land God promised to Israel (Gen. 15:18; Deut. 1:7; 11:24; Josh. 1:4). With its flow already reduced by the prolonged drought and intensified heat, God supernaturally will dry it up to make way for the eastern confederacy to reach Israel (Is. 11:15). the kings from the east. God providentially draws these kings and their armies in order to destroy them in the battle of Armageddon (v. 14). Their reason for coming may be to rebel against Antichrist, whose failure to alleviate the world's suffering will no doubt erode his popularity. Or, this may be a final act of rabid anti-Semitism intent on destroying Israel, perhaps in retaliation for the plagues sent by her God. Since the sun may have melted the ice caps on Mt. Ararat, flooding the valley of the Euphrates as the river overflows its banks and bridges, the land will be swamped. God will have to dry it up miraculously for the eastern army to get to Armageddon.

16:13 three unclean spirits. A common NT designation for demons (cf. Matt. 12:43; Mark 1:23; Luke 8:29). These are especially vile, powerful, and deceitful (v. 14). like frogs. This figure further emphasizes their vileness (cf. Lev. 10:11, 41). Frogs were unclean animals according to OT dietary laws (Lev. 11:10, 11, 41). Persian mythology views them as plague-inducing creatures. The demons are thus described as slimy, cold-blooded, loathsome beings. the dragon . . . the beast . . . the false prophet. The "unholy trinity," composed of Satan (the dragon; see note on 12:3), the Antichrist (the beast; see note on 11:7), and Antichrist's associate (the false prophet; see note on 13:11), spew out this plague.

16:14 signs. These are supernatural wonders (cf. 13:12–15) designed to deceive (cf. 19:20; 1 Kin. 22:20–23; Mark 13:22) the kings into invading Israel. Their impact will be so great that the unclean spirits are able to induce the kings to make the journey in spite of their sores, the intense heat, drought, and darkness. kings of the earth. No longer just the eastern confederacy, but now all the world begins to gather in Israel for the final, climactic battle (Ps. 2:2, 3; Joel 3:2–4; Zech. 14:1–3). the battle of that great day of God Almighty. The battle of Armageddon (v. 16). It is the great war with God and Christ (see notes on 2 Thess. 1:7–10; cf. Joel 2:11; 3:2, 4). The war will end when Christ arrives (19:17–20).

16:15 Blessed. See note on 1:3. watches, and keeps his garments. Our Lord emphasizes the need for constant readiness for His return (cf. 1 John 2:28). The imagery pictures a soldier ready for battle, or a homeowner watchful for the arrival of a thief (see also 3:3; 1 Thess. 5:2, 4; 2 Pet. 3:10).

16:16 Armageddon. The Hebrew name for Mt. Megiddo, sixty miles north of Jerusalem. The battle will rage on the nearby plains, site of Barak's victory over the Canaanites (Judg. 4), and Gideon's victory over the Midianites (Judg. 7). Napoleon called this valley the greatest battlefield he had ever seen. But the battle of Armageddon will not be limited to the Megiddo plains; it will encompass the length of Israel (see note on 14:20).

16:17 seventh . . . bowl . . . It is done! This bowl will complete God's wrath (except for final judgment on the rebellion at the end of the Millennium; 20:7–10) and immediately precedes the Second Coming of Christ. It will usher in the worst calamity in the history of the world. The voice from the temple in heaven is undoubtedly that of God Himself. "It is done!" is best translated, "It has been and will remain done" (cf. John 19:30). God will punctuate the completion of His wrath with a devastating earthquake—the most powerful in earth's history (cf. vv. 19–21).

16:19 the great city. Cf. 11:13; 21:10; see notes on Zechariah 14:1–8. Jerusalem will be split into three parts (Zech. 14:4), not as a judgment (cf. 11:13), but as an improvement. The additional water supply (Zech. 14:8) and topographical changes (Zech.

14:4, 5) will prepare the city for its central place in the millennial kingdom. Jerusalem is the only city to be spared the judgment (cf. 1 Chr. 23:25; Ps. 125:1, 2; Mic. 4:7) and will be made more beautiful (Ps. 48:2), because of her repentance (see 11:13). cities of the nations. God's purpose is very different for the rest of the world's cities—they are to be destroyed. Babylon. The capital of the Antichrist's empire will receive a special outpouring of God's wrath as prophesied in Isaiah 13:6–13. Chapters 17 and 18 give details of its destruction.

16:20 every island fled . . . mountains . . . not found. This powerful earthquake will radically alter all the earth's topography, preparing it for the coming millennial kingdom. Cf. 6:12–14; Isaiah 40:4, 5; Jeremiah 4:23–27.

16:21 a talent. The heaviest weight a normal man could carry (about 75 lbs.). The huge size of the hailstones indicates unparalleled atmospheric convulsions. Such massive chunks of ice will cause unimaginable devastation and death.

17:1 seven angels. The reference to these angels links chapters 17 and 18 with the bowl judgments (ch. 16), which extend to the Second Coming of Christ (see note on 16:17). Chapters 17 and 18 focus on one aspect of those bowl judgments, the judgment of Babylon. The judgments already

Key Word

Almighty: 1:8; 4:8; 11:17; 15:3; 16:7, 14; 19:15; 21:22—lit. "one who has power over everything," in other words, the One in total control. God commands all the hosts of powers in heaven and earth, and He is able to overcome all His foes. The title Almighty occurs often in Revelation as this book unveils God's awesome control over all the universe and throughout all history.

described are identified as targeting the final world system. great harlot. See note on 14:8. Prostitution frequently symbolizes idolatry or religious apostasy (cf. Jer. 3:6–9; Ezek. 16:30ff.; 20:30; Hos. 4:15; 5:3; 6:10; 9:1). Nineveh (Nah. 3:1, 4), Tyre (Is. 23:17), and even Jerusalem (Is. 1:21) are also depicted as harlot cities. sits on many waters. This picture emphasizes the sovereign power of the harlot. The picture is of a ruler seated on a throne, ruling the waters, which symbolize the nations of the world (see v. 15).

17:2 kings . . . committed fornication. The harlot will ally herself with the world's political leaders. Fornication here does not refer to sexual sin, but to idolatry (see note on 14:8). All the world rulers will be absorbed into the empire of Satan's false christ. wine of her fornication. The harlot's influence will extend beyond the world's rulers to the rest of mankind (cf. v. 15; 13:8, 14). The imagery does not describe actual wine and sexual sin, but pictures the world's people being swept up into the intoxication and sin of a false system of religion.

17:3 in the Spirit. Cf. 1:10; 4:2; 21:10. The Holy Spirit transports John into the wilderness (a deserted, lonely, desolate wasteland), perhaps to give him a better understanding of the vision. a woman. The harlot of verse 1, Babylon. scarlet beast. The Antichrist (cf. 13:1, 4; 14:9; 16:10), who for a time will support and use the false religious system to effect world unity. Then he will assume political control (cf. v. 16). Scarlet is the color of luxury, splendor, and royalty. full of names of blasphemy. Because of his self-deification (cf. 13:1; Dan. 7:25; 11:36; 2 Thess. 2:4). having seven heads and ten horns. This pictures the extent of Antichrist's political alliances (see notes on vv. 9–12; 13:1).

17:4 purple and scarlet. The colors of royalty, nobility, and wealth. The woman is portrayed as a prostitute who has plied her trade successfully and become extremely wealthy. adorned. Prostitutes often dress in fine clothes and precious jewels to allure their victims (cf. Prov. 7:10). The religious harlot Babylon is no different, adorning herself to lure the nations into her grasp. a golden cup. Still another evidence of the harlot's great wealth (cf. Jer. 51:7); but the pure gold is defiled by the filthiness of her immorality. Just as a prostitute might first get her victim drunk, so the harlot system deceives the nations into committing spiritual fornication with her.

17:5 forehead. It was customary for Roman prostitutes to wear a headband with their name on it (cf. Jer. 3:3), parading their wretchedness for all to see. The harlot's forehead is emblazoned with a threefold title descriptive of the world's final false religious system. Mystery. A NT mystery is truth once hidden, but in the NT revealed. See notes on Matthew 13:11; Ephesians 3:4, 5. Spiritual Babylon's true identity is yet to be revealed. Thus, the precise details of how it will be manifested in the world are not yet known. Babylon the Great. This Babylon is distinct from the historical, geographical city of Babylon (which still existed in John's day). The details of John's vision cannot be applied to any historical city (see note on 14:8). Mother of Harlots. All false religion stems ultimately from Babel, or Babylon (cf. Gen. 11; see note on 14:8).

17:6 the blood of the saints . . . martyrs of Jesus. Some see the first group as OT saints, and the second as NT saints—an unimportant distinction since this pictures the martyrs of the Tribulation. John's point is that the harlot is a murderer. False religion has killed millions of believers over the centuries, and the final false system will be far more deadly than any that preceded it.

known, but that the beast will fully support the harlot and together exert vast influence over the whole earth.

17:8 The beast. Both a king and kingdom are referred to by this term. was, and is not, and will ascend. A reference to the Antichrist's false resurrection (13:3, 4, 12–14; see note on 13:3). out of the bottomless pit. After his "resurrection," the Antichrist will become possessed by a great demon from the abyss (see notes on 13:1, 3). perdition. Eternal destruction (cf. v. 11; Matt. 7:13; John 17:12; Phil. 1:28; 3:19; 2 Thess. 2:3; Heb. 10:39; 2 Pet. 2:3; 3:7, 16). This is the lake of fire, the place of Antichrist's destruction (19:20). Book of Life. The roll of the elect, written in eternity past by God (see note on 3:5). Only the elect will escape the Antichrist's deception (Matt. 24:24). from the foundation of the world. See note on 13:8; cf. 2 Timothy 1:9; Titus 1:2 ("before time began"). A frequent phrase (Matt. 13:35; 25:34; Luke 11:50; John 17:24; Eph. 1:4; Heb. 4:3; 9:26; 1 Pet. 1:20) referring to God's precreation plan.

17:9 seven mountains. The Greek word is often used of hills (Matt. 5:1; 15:29; John 6:15; 8:1). Many commentators interpret this expression to mean Rome, which sits on seven hills. It is true that the final worldwide system of false religion includes, but is not necessarily limited to, Rome; but specifically, the seven mountains in context likely symbolize the seven kingdoms and their kings of verse 10.

17:10 seven kings. Representatives of the seven great world empires (Egypt, Assyria, Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, Rome, and that of the Antichrist). Cf. Daniel's image in Daniel 2:37–45. Five have fallen, one is, and the other. When John wrote, the Egyptian, Assyrian, Babylonian, Medo-Persian, and Greek empires had gone out of existence; Rome still existed; and the Antichrist's empire had not yet come. When it does, it will be brief (12:12; 13:5) and he will end in perdition (v. 11; see note on v. 8).

17:11 and is not . . . the eighth. The Antichrist's kingdom is said to be both the seventh and eighth kingdoms because of his supposed demise and resurrection. He is the seventh king before and the eighth king after his "resurrection" when he destroys the harlot's religious empire and demands exclusive worship of himself (v. 16).

17:12 ten kings. See notes on 12:3; 13:1 (cf. Dan. 2:41, 42). These kings are sub-rulers under the Antichrist, whose empire will apparently be divided into ten administrative districts. no kingdom as yet. Thus, the kings cannot be identified with any historical figures. one hour. Symbolic of the brief three and one-half year period of time (cf. 11:2, 3; 12:6, 12, 14; 13:5; 18:10, 17, 19).

17:14 make war. A reference to the battle of Armageddon (16:14–16), where the Lamb will utterly destroy the kings (19:17–21). Lord of lords and King of kings. A title for God (19:16; 1 Tim. 6:15; cf. Deut. 10:17; Ps. 136:3) that emphasizes His sovereignty over all other rulers to whom He has delegated authority.

17:15 See note on verse 1.

17:16 these will hate the harlot. After using the false religious system to unify the world kingdoms and gain control of all, the Antichrist—with the help of his ten sub-rulers—will turn against the system, plunder and destroy it, and seize all power and worship for himself. They will be carrying out God's will (v. 17). Cf. Genesis 50:20.

17:18 great city. Here is another identification of the capital city of Babylon, centerpiece of Antichrist's empire. Cf. 18:10, 18, 21.

18:1 earth was illuminated with his glory. The fifth bowl (16:10) will have plunged the world into darkness. Against that backdrop, the sudden, blazing appearance of another angel (not the same as in 17:1, 7, 15) will certainly rivet the world's attention on him and his message of judgment on Babylon (cf. 14:8).

18:2 *Babylon the great is fallen. Cf. 14:8; see note on Isaiah 21:9, the verse from which these words come. The Greek text views the results of this as if it had already taken place (see note on 14:8). But the seventh bowl is being referred to here, and it is yet to come at this point (16:17–21). When it comes, devastation and annihilation will take place, leaving the place to demons.

18:3 *wine . . . of her fornication. Religious Babylon (ch. 17) lures the nations into spiritual drunkenness and fornication with false gods (17:2, 4); commercial Babylon (ch. 18) seduces the unbelieving world into a materialistic stupor, so that the people of the world will become drunk with passion because of their relationship with Babylon. kings . . . merchants. Political rulers and corporate leaders alike are swept up in this worldwide system of commerce (14:8; 17:2).

18:4 *Come out of her, my people. God will call His own to disentangle themselves from this evil system. This may also be God's calling the elect to abandon the world system and come to faith in the Savior. In either case, the message is to abandon the system before it is destroyed (cf. 2 Cor. 6:17; 1 John 2:15). The judgment of God on that society living in sinful, arrogant self-indulgence can be avoided. Cf. Isaiah's and Jeremiah's message to their people to leave Babylon (Is. 48:20; Jer. 50:8; 51:6–9, 45).

18:5 *remembered. See 16:19. God does not remember the iniquities of His people (Jer. 31:34), but does remember to protect them (Mal. 3:16–4:2). For unrepentant Babylon, there will be no such forgiveness, only judgment.

18:6, 7 *repay. The angel calls for God to recompense wrath to Babylon in her own cup to repay her according to her deeds (see note on 17:4). This is an echo of the OT law of retaliation (Ex. 21:24) which will be implemented by God (Rom. 12:17–21).

18:6 *double. Has the sense of “full,” or “overflowing.” The punishment will fit the crime (cf. Jer. 16:18). cup. The cup of wickedness from which so many people have drunk (14:8; 17:2, 4, 6) will call for the cup of wrath (14:10; 16:19).

18:7 *am no widow. A proud, but empty, boast of self-sufficiency, also made by historical Babylon (Is. 47:8). Cf. 1 Corinthians 10:12.

18:8 *her plagues. These could include those of 16:1ff., but must be the special destruction of the city as well, described as “death and mourning and famine.” in one day. See verses 10, 17, 19. The special judgments on Babylon take place in a brief period of time. Daniel 5:30 records that Babylon of old fell in one day.

18:9–20 This section records the lament over Babylon's destruction, not her sin, by those who were part of her system.

18:9 *kings. The political leaders of the world will weep because the loss of his capital city will signal the doom of Antichrist's empire, and with it, the source of their power. Cf. verse 3; 17:2. weep and lament for her. Weep means “to sob openly.” Lament translates the same Greek word used to express the despair of the unbelieving world at the return of Christ (1:7).

18:10 *one hour. Cf. verses 8, 17, 19.

18:12, 13 Over half of their commodities appear in the list of Ezekiel 27:12–22.

18:12 *purple. This refers to garments laboriously dyed with purple dye extracted from shellfish. Lydia (Acts 16:14) was a seller of such expensive garments. A distinctive mark of the Caesars was their purple robes. citron wood. Wood from North African citrus trees, highly valued because of its color, which was used to make extremely expensive pieces of furniture. marble. Marble, imported from Africa, Egypt, and Greece, was widely used in Roman buildings.

18:13 *fragrant oil. A very costly perfume (cf. Matt. 26:7, 12; John 12:3). frankincense. A fragrant gum or resin imported from Arabia and used in incense and perfume (Song 3:6; Matt. 2:11). bodies and souls of men. The slave trade, long banned by the civilized nations of the world, will reappear in Antichrist's debauched commercial system.

18:17 *shipmaster. Ship captains will mourn the loss of Babylon and the lucrative transport business that went with it.

18:19 *threw dust on their heads. An ancient expression of grief (cf. Josh. 7:6; 1 Sam. 4:12; 2 Sam. 1:2; 15:32; Job 2:12; Lam. 2:10; Ezek. 27:30). in one hour. Not just sixty minutes, but one brief period of swift judgment (see note on v. 8).

18:20 *God has avenged you on her. The angel will exhort the tribulation martyrs (6:9–11) to rejoice, not over the deaths of those doomed to eternal hell, but because God's righteousness and justice will have prevailed.

18:21 *great millstone. Millstones were large, heavy stones used to grind grain. This metaphor portrays the violence of Babylon's overthrow. Cf. Jeremiah 51:61–64; see note on Matthew 18:6.

18:22, 23 The fall of Babylon ends whatever semblance of normalcy will still exist in the world after all the seals, trumpets, and bowls. Life will be totally disrupted and the end near. No more music, no industry, no preparing of food ("millstone"), no more power for light, and no more weddings because God will destroy the deceivers and deceived.

18:24 *blood of prophets and saints. The religious and commercial/political systems embodied in Babylon will commit unspeakable atrocities against God's people (cf. 6:10; 11:7; 13:7, 15; 17:6; 19:2). God will avenge that slaughter of His people (19:2).

C. The Return of the King (19:1–21)

19:1–6 *Alleluia! The transliteration of this Hebrew word appears four times in the NT, all in this chapter (vv. 1, 3, 4, 6). This exclamation, meaning "Praise the Lord," occurs frequently in the OT (cf. Pss. 104:35; 105:45; 106:1; 111:1; 112:1; 113:1; 117:1; 135:1; 146:1). Five reasons for their praise emerge: (1) God's deliverance of His people from their enemies (v. 1); (2) God's meting out of justice (v. 2); (3) God's permanent crushing of man's rebellion (v. 3); (4) God's sovereignty (v. 6); and (5) God's communion with His people (v. 7).

19:1 *After these things. This is a time key. After the destruction of Babylon at the end of the Great Tribulation, just before the kingdom is established (ch. 20). This section bridges the Tribulation and the millennial kingdom. great multitude. Probably angels, since the saints join in later (vv. 5ff.; cf. 5:11, 12; 7:11, 12). The imminent return of the Lord Jesus Christ prompts this outburst of praise.

19:2 *judgments. Saints long for the day of judgment (cf. 6:10; 16:7; Is. 9:7; Jer. 23:5). Godly people love righteousness and hate sin, because righteousness honors God and sin mocks Him. Believers long for a world of justice, and it will come (v. 15; 2:27; 12:5).

19:3 *smoke rises. This is because of the fire (cf. 17:16, 18; 18:8, 9, 18; 14:8–11).

19:4 *twenty-four elders. Best understood as representatives of the church (see note on 4:4). four living creatures. A special order of angelic beings (see note on 4:6). These compose the same group as in 7:11 and are associated with worship frequently (4:8, 11; 5:9–12, 14; 11:16–18).

19:5 *small and great. All distinctions and ranks are to be transcended.

19:6 Omnipotent. Or “Almighty.” Used nine times in Revelation as a title for God (cf. v. 15; 1:8; 4:8; 11:17; 15:3; 16:7, 14; 21:22). The great praise of the multitude sounds like a massive crashing of waves.

19:7 marriage of the Lamb. Hebrew weddings consisted of three phases: (1) betrothal (often when the couple were children); (2) presentation (the festivities, often lasting several days, that preceded the ceremony); and (3) the ceremony (the exchanging of vows). The church was betrothed to Christ by His sovereign choice in eternity past (Eph. 1:4; Heb. 13:20) and will be presented to Him at the rapture (John 14:1–3; 1 Thess. 4:13–18). The final supper will signify the end of the ceremony. This symbolic meal will take place at the establishment of the millennial kingdom and last throughout that 1,000-year period (cf. 21:2). While the term bride often refers to the church, and does so here (2 Cor. 11:2; Eph. 5:22–24), it ultimately expands to include all the redeemed of all ages, which becomes clear in the remainder of Revelation.

19:8 righteous acts of the saints. Not Christ’s imputed righteousness granted to believers at salvation, but the practical results of that righteousness in believers’ lives, i.e., the outward manifestation of inward virtue.

19:9 Blessed. See note on 1:3. those who are called. This is not the bride (the church) but the guests. The bride doesn’t get invited; she invites. These are those saved before Pentecost, all the faithful believers saved by grace through faith up to the birth of the church (Acts 2:1ff.). Though they are not the bride, they still are glorified and reign with Christ in the millennial kingdom. It is really differing imagery rather than differing reality. The guests also will include tribulation saints and believers alive in earthly bodies in the kingdom. The church is the bride, pure and faithful—never a harlot, like Israel was (see Hos. 2). So the church is the bride during the presentation feast in heaven, then comes to earth for the celebration of the final meal (the Millennium). After that event, the new order comes and the marriage is consummated (see notes on 21:1, 2). true sayings of God. This refers to everything since 17:1. It is all true—the marriage will take place after judgment.

19:10 fell at his feet. Overwhelmed by the grandeur of the vision, John collapsed in worship before the angel (cf. 1:17; 22:8). do not do that. Cf. 22:8, 9. The Bible forbids the worship of angels (Col. 2:18, 19). the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy. The central theme of both OT prophecy and NT preaching is the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ.

19:11 heaven opened. The One who ascended to heaven (Acts 1:9–11) and had been seated at the Father’s right hand (Heb. 8:1; 10:12; 1 Pet. 3:22) will return to take back the earth from the usurper and establish His kingdom (5:1–10). The nature of this event shows how it differs from the Rapture. At the Rapture, Christ meets His own in the air—in this event He comes with them to earth. At the Rapture, there is no judgment; in this event, it is all judgment. This event is preceded by blackness—the darkened sun, moon gone out, stars fallen, smoke—then lightning and blinding glory as Jesus comes. Such details are not included in rapture passages (John 14:1–3; 1 Thess. 4:13–18). white horse. In the Roman triumphal processions, the victorious general rode his white war horse up the Via Sacra to the temple of Jupiter on the Capitoline Hill. Jesus’ First Coming was in humiliation on a colt (Zech. 9:9). John’s vision portrays Him as the conqueror on His war horse, coming to destroy the wicked, to overthrow the Antichrist, to defeat Satan, and to take control of the earth (cf. 2 Cor. 2:14). Faithful and True. True to His word, Jesus will return to earth (Matt. 24:27–31; see note on 3:14). in righteousness He judges. See 20:11–15; cf. Matthew 25:31ff.; John 5:25–30; Acts 17:31. makes war. This startling statement, appearing only here and 2:16, vividly portrays the holy wrath of God against sinners (cf. Ps. 7:11). God's patience will be exhausted with sinful, rebellious mankind.

19:12 His eyes were like a flame of fire. Nothing escapes His penetrating vision, so His judgments are always just and accurate (see note on 1:14). a name . . . no one knew. John could see the name, but was unable to comprehend it (cf. 2 Cor. 12:4). There are unfathomable mysteries in the Godhead that even glorified saints will be unable to grasp.

19:13 a robe dipped in blood. This is not from the battle of Armageddon, which will not have begun until verse 15. Christ's blood-spattered garments symbolize the great battles He has already fought against sin, Satan, and death and been stained with the blood of His enemies. The Word. Only John uses this title for the Lord (see Introduction: Author and Date). As the Word of God, Jesus is the image of the invisible God (Col. 1:15); the express image of His person (Heb. 1:3); and the final, full revelation from God (Heb. 1:1, 2).

19:14 armies in heaven. Composed of the church (v. 8), tribulation saints (7:13), OT believers (Jude 14; cf. Dan. 12:1, 2), and even angels (Matt. 25:31). They return not to help Jesus in the battle (they are unarmed), but to reign with Him after He defeats His enemies (20:4; 1 Cor. 6:2; 2 Tim. 2:12). Cf. Psalm 149:5–9.

19:15 sharp sword. This symbolizes Christ's power to kill His enemies (1:16; cf. Is. 11:4; Heb. 4:12, 13). That the sword comes out of His mouth indicates that He wins the battle with the power of His Word.

Though the saints return with Christ to reign and rule, they are not the executioners. That is His task, and that of His angels (Matt. 13:37–50). rod of iron. Swift, righteous judgment will mark Christ's rule in the kingdom. Believers will share His authority (2:26; 1 Cor. 6:2; see notes on 2:27; 12:5; Ps. 2:9). winepress. A vivid symbol of judgment (see note on 14:19). Cf. Isaiah 63:3; Joel 3:13.

19:16 on His thigh. Jesus will wear a banner across His robe and down His thigh with a title emblazoned on it that emphasizes His absolute sovereignty over all human rulers (see note on 17:14).

19:17–21 These verses depict the frightening holocaust unparalleled in human history—the battle of Armageddon, the pinnacle of the Day of the Lord (see note on 1 Thess. 5:2). It is not so much a battle as an execution, as the remaining rebels are killed by the Lord Jesus (v. 21; see notes on 14:19, 20; cf. Ps. 2:1–9; Is. 66:15, 16; Ezek. 39:1ff.; Joel 3:12ff.; Matt. 24, 25; 2 Thess. 1:7–9). This Day of the Lord was seen by Isaiah (66:15, 16), Joel (3:12–21), Ezekiel (39:1–4, 17–20), Paul (2 Thess. 1:6ff.; 2:8) and our Lord (Matt. 25:31–46).

19:17, 18 supper of the great God. Cf. Ezekiel 39:17. Also called “the battle of that great day of God Almighty” (16:14), it will begin with an angel summoning birds to feed on the corpses of those who will be killed (cf. Matt. 24:27, 28). God will declare His victory before the battle even begins. The OT frequently pictures the indignity of carrion birds feasting on human dead (Deut. 28:26; Ps. 79:2; Is. 18:6; Jer. 7:33; 16:4; 19:7; 34:20; Ezek. 29:5).

19:19 kings of the earth. See 17:12–17. their armies. See 16:13, 14. His army. Zechariah describes this army of the Lord as “all the saints” (14:5).

19:20 beast was captured, and . . . the false prophet. In an instant, the world's

The Glories of Christ

"Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to think of anything as being from ourselves, but our sufficiency is from God. . . ." (2 Cor. 3:5)

One of the great tenets of Scripture is the claim that Jesus Christ is completely sufficient for all matters of life and godliness (2 Pet. 1:3, 4)! He is sufficient for creation (Col. 1:16, 17), salvation (Heb. 10:10–12), sanctification (Eph. 5:26, 27), and glorification (Rom. 8:30). So pure is He that there is no blemish, stain, spot of sin, defilement, lying, deception, corruption, error, or imperfection (1 Pet. 1:18–20).

So complete is He that there is no other God besides Him (Is. 45:5); He is the only begotten Son (John 1:14, 18); all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge are in Him (Col. 2:3); the fullness of the Godhead dwells bodily in Him (Col. 2:9); He is heir of all things (Heb. 1:2); He created all things and all things were made by Him, through Him, and for Him (Col. 1:16); He upholds all things by the word of His power (Col. 1:17; Heb. 1:3); He is the firstborn of all creation (Col. 1:15); He is the exact representation of God (Heb. 1:3).

He is the only Mediator between God and man; He is the Sun that enlightens; the Physician that heals; the Wall of Fire that defends; the Friend that comforts; the Pearl that enriches; the Ark that supports; and the Rock to sustain under the heaviest of pressures; He is seated at the right hand of the throne of the Majesty on high (Heb. 1:3; 8:1); He is better than the angels (Heb. 1:4–14); better than Moses; better than Aaron; better than Joshua; better than Melchizedek; better than all the prophets; greater than Satan (Luke 4:1–12); and stronger than death (1 Cor. 15:55).

He has no beginning and no end (Rev. 1:17, 18); He is the spotless Lamb of God; He is our Peace (Eph. 2:14); He is our Hope (1 Tim. 1:1); He is our Life (Col. 3:4); He is the living and true Way (John 14:6); He is the Strength of Israel (1 Sam. 15:29); He is the Root and Offspring of David, the Bright and Morning Star (Rev. 22:16); He is Faithful and True (Rev. 19:11); He is the Author and Finisher of our faith (Heb. 12:1, 2); He is the Captain of our Salvation (Heb. 2:10); He is the Champion; He is the Elect One (Is. 42:1); He is the Apostle and High Priest of our confession (Heb. 3:1); He is the Righteous Servant (Is. 53:11).

He is the Lord of Hosts, the Redeemer—the Holy One of Israel, the God of the whole earth (Is. 54:5); He is the Man of Sorrows (Is. 53:3); He is the Light; He is the Son of Man (Matt. 20:28); He is the Vine; He is the Bread of Life; He is the Door; He is Lord (Phil. 2:10–13); He is Prophet, Priest and King (Heb. 1:1–3); He is our Sabbath rest (Heb. 4:9); He is our Righteousness (Jer. 23:6); He is the Wonderful Counselor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace (Is. 9:6); He is the Chief Shepherd (1 Pet. 5:4); He is Lord God of hosts; He is Lord of the nations; He is the Lion of Judah; the Living Word; the Rock of Salvation; the Eternal Spirit; He is the Ancient of Days; Creator and Comforter; Messiah; and He is the great I AM (John 8:58)!

armies are without their leaders. The beast is Antichrist (see notes on 13:1–8); the false prophet is his religious cohort (see notes on 13:11–17). cast alive. The bodies of the beast and the false prophet will be transformed, and they will be banished directly to the lake of fire (Dan. 7:11)—the first of countless millions of unregenerate people (20:15) and fallen angels (cf. Matt. 25:41) to arrive in that dreadful place. That these two still appear there 1,000 years later (20:10) refutes the false doctrine of annihilationism (cf. 14:11; Is. 66:24; Matt. 25:41; Mark 9:48; Luke 3:17; 2 Thess. 1:9). lake of fire. The final hell, the place of eternal punishment for all unrepentant rebels, angelic or human (cf. 20:10, 15).

The NT says much of eternal punishment (cf. 14:10, 11; Matt. 13:40–42; 25:41; Mark 9:43–48; Luke 3:17; 12:47, 48). fire . . . brimstone. See note on 9:17. These two are frequently associated with divine judgment (14:10; 20:10; 21:8; Gen. 19:24; Ps. 11:6; Is. 30:33; Ezek. 38:22; Luke 17:29).

19:21 sword. See verse 15; cf. Zechariah 14:1–13. birds were filled with their flesh. All remaining sinners in the world will have been executed, and the birds will gorge themselves on their corpses.

20:1–22:21 Chapter 19 ends with the battle of Armageddon and Christ's Second Coming—events that mark the close of the Tribulation. The events of chapter 20—the binding of Satan, Christ's 1,000-year earthly kingdom, Satan's final rebellion, and the Great White Throne judgment—fit chronologically between the close of the Tribulation and the creation of the new heaven and the new earth described in chapters 21 and 22.

D. The Millennium (20:1–10)

20:2 laid hold. This includes not only Satan, but the demons as well. Their imprisonment will dramatically alter the world during the kingdom, since their destructive influence in all areas of human thought and life will be removed. dragon*. Likening Satan to a dragon emphasizes his ferocity and cruelty (see note on 12:3). serpent of old*. A reference to Satan's first appearance in the Garden of Eden (Gen. 3:1ff.), where he deceived Eve (cf. 2 Cor. 11:3; 1 Tim. 2:14). Devil . . . Satan*. See note on 12:9. a thousand years*. This is the first of six references to the length of the millennial kingdom (cf. vv. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7). There are three main views of the duration and nature of this period: (1) Premillennialism sees this as a literal 1,000-year period during which Jesus Christ, in fulfillment of numerous OT prophecies (e.g., 2 Sam. 7:12–16; Ps. 2; Is. 11:6–12; 24:23; Hos. 3:4, 5; Joel 3:9–21; Amos 9:8–15; Mic. 4:1–8; Zeph. 3:14–20; Zech. 14:1–11; Matt. 24:29–31, 36–44), reigns on the earth. Using the same general principles of interpretation for both prophetic and non-prophetic passages leads most naturally to premillennialism. Another strong argument supporting this view is that so many biblical prophecies have already been literally fulfilled, suggesting that future prophecies will likewise be fulfilled lit. (2) Postmillennialism understands the reference to a 1,000-year period as only symbolic of a golden age of righteousness and spiritual prosperity. It will be ushered in by the spread of the gospel during the present church age and brought to completion when Christ returns. According to this view, references to Christ's reign on earth primarily describe His spiritual reign in the hearts of believers in the church. (3) Amillennialism understands the 1,000 years to be merely symbolic of a long period of time. This view interprets OT prophecies of a Millennium as being fulfilled spiritually now in the church (either on earth or in heaven) or as references to the eternal state. Using the same literal, historical, grammatical principles of interpretation so as to determine the normal sense of language, one is left with the inescapable conclusion that Christ will return and reign in a real kingdom on earth for 1,000 years. There is nothing in the text to render the conclusion that “a thousand years” is symbolic. Never in Scripture when “year” is used with a number is its meaning not literal (see note on 2 Pet. 3:8).

20:3 bottomless pit. All seven times that this appears in Revelation, it refers to the place where fallen angels and evil spirits are kept captive, waiting to be sent to the lake of fire—the final hell prepared for them (Matt. 25:41). released for a little while*. Satan will be released so God can make a permanent end of sin before establishing the new heaven and earth. All who survive the Tribulation and enter the kingdom will be believers. However, despite that and the personal presence and rule of the Lord Jesus Christ, many of their descendants will refuse to believe in Him. Satan will then gather those unbelievers for one final, futile rebellion against God. It will be quickly and decisively crushed, followed by the Great White Throne judgment and the establishment of the eternal state.

6:9; 18:24; 19:2). The Greek word translated “beheaded” became a general term for execution, not necessarily a particular method. his mark. See note on 13:16. Tribulation martyrs will be executed for refusing the mark of the beast. reigned. Tribulation believers, along with the redeemed from both the OT and NT eras, will reign with Christ (1 Cor. 6:2; 2 Tim. 2:12) during the 1,000-year kingdom.

20:5 the rest of the dead. The bodies of unbelievers of all ages will not be resurrected until the Great White Throne judgment (vv. 12, 13). first resurrection. Scripture teaches two kinds of resurrections: the “resurrection of life” and “the resurrection of condemnation” (John 5:29; cf. Dan. 12:2; Acts 24:15). The first kind of resurrection is described as “the resurrection of the just” (Luke 14:14), the resurrection of “those who are Christ’s at His coming” (1 Cor. 15:23), and the “better resurrection” (Heb. 11:35). It includes only the redeemed of the church age (1 Thess. 4:13–18), the OT (Dan. 12:2), and the Tribulation (v. 4). They will enter the kingdom in resurrection bodies, along with believers who survived the Tribulation. The second kind of resurrection, then, will be the resurrection of the unconverted who will receive their final bodies suited for torment in hell.

20:6 Blessed. Those who die in the Lord (14:13) are blessed with the privilege of entering His kingdom (see note on 1:3). second death. The first death is only physical; the second is spiritual and eternal in the lake of fire, the final, eternal hell (v. 14). It could exist outside the created universe as we know it, outside of space and time, and be presently unoccupied (see note on 19:20). thousand years. See note on verse 2.

20:7 Satan . . . released. He is loosed to bring cohesive leadership to the world of rebels born to the believers who entered the kingdom at the beginning. He is loosed to reveal the character of Christ-rejecting sinners who are brought into judgment for the last time ever.

20:8 Gog and Magog. The name given to the army of rebels and its leader at the end of the Millennium. They were names of ancient enemies of the Lord. Magog was the grandson of Noah (Gen. 10:2) and founder of a kingdom located north of the Black Sea and the Caspian Sea. Gog is apparently the leader of a rebel army known collectively as Magog. The battle depicted in verses 8 and 9 is like the one in Ezekiel 38 and 39; it is best to see this one as taking place at the end of the Millennium. For the difference, see notes on Ezekiel 38, 39.

20:9 beloved city. Jerusalem (cf. Pss. 78:68; 87:2), the capital city during Christ’s millennial reign (Jer. 3:17). The saints will be living around the city where Christ reigns (cf. Is. 24:23; Jer. 3:17; Zech. 14:9–11). fire. Frequently associated in Scripture with divine judgment of wicked men (Gen. 19:24; 2 Kin. 1:10, 12, 14; Luke 9:54; 17:29).

20:10 deceived. Just as his demons will entice the world’s armies into the battle of Armageddon, Satan will draw them into a suicidal assault against Christ and His people (16:13, 14). lake of fire and brimstone. See note on 19:20. tormented day and night. See note on 14:11. Continuous, unrelieved torment will be the final state of Satan, fallen angels, and unredeemed men.

E. The Great White Throne Judgment (20:11–15)

20:11–15 These verses describe the final judgment of all the unbelievers of all ages (Matt. 10:15; 11:22, 24; 12:36, 41, 42; Luke 10:14; John 12:48; Acts 17:31; 24:25; Rom. 2:5, 16; Heb. 9:27; 2 Pet. 2:9; 3:7; Jude 6). Our Lord referred to this event as the “resurrection of condemnation” (John 5:29). This judgment takes place in the indescribable void between the end of the present universe (v. 11) and the creation of the new heaven and earth (21:1).

20:11 great white throne. Nearly fifty times in Revelation there is the mention of a throne. This is a judgment throne, elevated, pure, and holy. God sits on it as judge (cf. 4:2, 3, 9; 5:1, 7, 13; 6:16; 7:10, 15) in the person of the Lord Jesus Christ. See 21:5, 6; John 5:22–29; Acts 17:31. earth and the heaven fled away. John saw the contaminated universe go out of existence. Peter described this moment in 2 Peter 3:10–13 (see notes there). The universe is “uncreated,” going into non-existence (cf. Matt. 24:35).

20:12 standing before God. In a judicial sense, as guilty, condemned prisoners before the bar of divine justice. There are no living sinners left in the destroyed universe since all sinners were killed and all believers glorified. books. These books record every thought, word, and deed of sinful men—all recorded by divine omniscience (see note on Dan. 7:9, 10, the verse that is the source of this text). They will provide the evidence for eternal condemnation. Cf. 18:6, 7. Book of Life. It contains the names of all the redeemed (Dan. 12:1; see notes on 3:5). judged according to their works. Their thoughts (Luke 8:17; Rom. 2:16), words (Matt. 12:37), and actions (Matt. 16:27) will be compared to God’s perfect, holy standard (Matt. 5:48; 1 Pet. 1:15, 16) and will be found wanting (Rom. 3:23). This also implies that there are degrees of punishment in hell (cf. Matt. 10:14, 15; 11:22; Mark 12:38–40; Luke 12:47, 48; Heb. 10:29).

20:13 Death and Hades. See note on 1:18. Both terms describe the state of death. All unrighteous dead will appear at the Great White Throne judgment; none will escape. All the places that have held the bodies of the

F. The Eternal State (21:1–22:21)

21:1 As the chapter opens, all the sinners of all the ages, both demons and men, including Satan, the beast, and false prophet, are in the lake of fire forever. The whole universe has been destroyed, and God creates a new universe to be the eternal dwelling place of the redeemed. a new heaven and a new earth. The entire universe, as we now know it, will be destroyed (2 Pet. 3:10–13) and be replaced by a new creation that will last forever. This fulfills an OT prophecy (Ps. 102:25, 26; Is. 65:17; 66:22), as well as a NT one (Luke 21:33; Heb. 1:10–12). See note on 20:11–15. no more sea. Currently, three fourths of the earth’s surface is water; but the new environment will no longer be water-based and will have completely different climatic conditions. See notes on 22:1, 2.

21:2–22:5 By this point in the chronology of Revelation, OT saints, tribulation saints, and all those converted during the millennial kingdom will be incorporated into the ultimate redeemed bride and will dwell in the New Jerusalem. John described the consummation of all things in Christ and the New Jerusalem descending into the eternal state (cf. 19:7; 20:6; 1 Cor. 15:28; Heb. 12:22–24).

21:2 New Jerusalem. Cf. 3:12; Hebrews 11:10; 12:22–24; 13:14. This is the capital city of heaven, a place of perfect holiness. It is seen “coming down out of heaven” indicating it already existed; but it descends into the new heavens and new earth from its place on high. This is the city where the saints will live (cf. John 14:1–3). bride. An important NT metaphor for the church (cf. Matt. 25:1–13; Eph. 5:25–27). John’s imagery here extends

Hades: 1:18; 6:8; 20:13–14—lit. “the place of the unseen.” This Greek word, translated from the Hebrew word sheol, describes the invisible world of the dead. All people who die go to Hades in the sense that death leads from the visible world to the invisible. Therefore, death and Hades can be used interchangeably. Unfortunately, many people mistakenly associate Hades with hell, a place of eternal punishment. But the Greek word for hell is gehenna (see Mark 9:43–45). While everyone will all one day go to Hades, anyone can avoid hell and inherit heaven by believing in Jesus Christ’s work of salvation.

from the third part of the Jewish wedding, the ceremony. Believers (the bride) in the New Jerusalem come to meet Christ (the Bridegroom) in the final ceremony of redemptive history (see note on 19:7). The whole city, occupied by all the saints, is called the bride, so that all saints must be finally included in the bride imagery and bridal blessing. God has brought home a bride for His beloved Son. All the saints live with Christ in the Father’s house (a promise made before the church began; John 14:2).

21:3 the tabernacle of God. The word translated tabernacle means “place of abode.” This is God’s house, the place where He lives (cf. Lev. 26:11, 12; Deut. 12:5).

21:4 wipe away every tear. Since there will never be a tear in heaven, nothing will be sad, disappointing, deficient, or wrong (cf. Is. 53:4, 5; 1 Cor. 15:54–57).

21:5 true and faithful. Cf. 3:14; 19:11. God always speaks truth (John 17:17).

21:6 the Alpha and the Omega. See note on 1:8. water of life. Cf. 7:17; 22:1, 17. The lasting spiritual water of which Jesus spoke (John 4:13, 14; 7:37, 38; cf. Is. 55:1, 2). him who thirsts. Heaven belongs to those who, knowing their souls are parched by sin, have earnestly sought the satisfaction of salvation and eternal life (cf. Ps. 42:1, 2; Is. 55:1, 2; John 7:37, 38).

21:7 He who overcomes. Cf. 1 John 5:4, 5. Anyone who exercises saving faith in Jesus Christ (see note on 2:7). inherit. The spiritual inheritance all believers will receive (1 Pet. 1:4; cf. Matt. 25:23) is the fullness of the new creation. Cf. Romans 8:16, 17.

21:8 A solemn, serious warning about the kinds of people who will be outcasts from the new heaven and the new earth in the lake of fire. The NT often goes beyond just citing unbelief in listing character and lifestyle traits of the outcast, so that believers can identify such people (1 Cor. 6:9, 10; Gal. 5:19; cf. John 8:31). sorcerers. See note on 9:21. lake which burns with fire. See note on 19:20. brimstone. See note on 9:17. second death. See note on 20:6.

21:9 seven bowls. See note on 15:7. seven last plagues. See note on 15:1–8.

21:10 in the Spirit. See note on 1:10.

Key Word

New Jerusalem: 3:12; 21:2, 10—The New Jerusalem that comes out of heaven is plainly distinct from the earthly Jerusalem, the former capital of Israel. This is the city Abraham looked for, the city whose builder and maker is God (Heb. 11:10). This is the city that exists even now in heaven, for Paul calls it the Jerusalem that is above (Gal. 4:26).

refers to a completely clear diamond, a perfect gem with the brilliant light of God's glory shining out of it and streaming over the new heaven and the new earth (cf. 4:3).

21:12–14 wall. See verse 16 for the dimensions of the city and, thus, the length of the wall.

21:15 gold reed. See note on Ezekiel 40:3. The reed was about ten feet long, which was a standard for measure. measure the city. This action indicates that the capital of heaven belongs to God and He is measuring what is His (cf. 11:1; Ezek. 40:3).

21:16 twelve thousand furlongs. This would be nearly 1,400 miles cubed or about two million square miles, offering plenty of room for all the glorified saints to live. length, breadth, and height. The city has the symmetrical dimensions of a perfect cube, which parallels its closest earthly counterpart, the inner sanctuary in the tabernacle and temple (cf. 1 Kin. 6:20).

21:17 one hundred and forty-four cubits. This is 72 yards or 216 feet. This is likely the width of the wall.

21:18 jasper. See note on verse 11. This is the material of the thick wall—diamond! pure gold, like clear glass. Unlike earth's gold, this gold will be transparent so the overpowering radiance of God's glory can refract and glisten through the entire city.

21:19, 20 Because some of the names of these gems have changed through the centuries, it is difficult to identify each one with certainty. Eight of the twelve stones are found in the breastplate of the high priest (Ex. 28, 39), and the other four may also be related to the breastplate. The gems picture a brilliant, indescribable panoply of beautiful colors that send forth the light of God's glory. The following are possible identifications for these gems.

21:19 chalcedony. This name derives from Chalcedon, an ancient name for a city in modern Turkey. The gem is a sky-blue agate stone with translucent, colored stripes.

21:20 sardonyx. A variety of chalcedony with parallel layers of red and white (see note on v. 19). sardius. A common stone from the quartz family, which ranged in color from orange-red to brownish-red to blood-red (4:3). chrysolite. A gem with a transparent gold or yellowish tone. beryl. A mineral with several varieties of gems, ranging from the green emerald to the golden yellow beryl to the light blue aquamarine. topaz. Ancient topaz was a softer stone with a yellow or yellow-green color. chrysoprase. The modern form of this jewel is an apple-green variety of quartz. The Greek name suggests a gold-tinted, green gemstone. jacinth. Today, this stone is a transparent zircon, usually red or reddish-brown. The one John saw was blue or shining violet in color. amethyst. A clear quartz crystal that ranges in color from a faint purple tint to an intense purple.

21:21 one pearl. Each of the gates of the city is a single, almost 1,400-mile-high pearl. Even as earthly pearls are formed in response to the wounding of oyster flesh, so these gigantic, supernatural pearls will remind saints throughout eternity of the magnitude of Christ's suffering and its eternal benefit.

21:22 no temple. Several passages affirm that there is a temple in heaven (3:12; 7:15; 11:19; 15:5). Here, it is clear there is none in eternity. How can this be? The temple is not a building; it is the Lord God Himself. Revelation 7:15 implies this when it says, "He who sits on the throne will dwell among them." Verse 23 continues the thought of no temple, except God and the Lamb. The glory of God which illuminates all heaven defines it as His temple. There is no need for a temple in the eternal state since God Himself will be the temple in which everything exists. The presence of God literally fills the entire new heaven and new earth (cf. v. 3). Going to heaven will be entering the limitless presence of the Lord (cf. John 14:3; 1 Thess. 4:17).

21:24 the nations. Lit. “the peoples.” Redeemed people from every nation and ethnic group will dwell in heaven’s light. In the eternal city, there will be no more divisions, barriers, or exclusions because of race or politics. All kinds of peoples in eternity dissolve into the one people of God, and they will move freely in and about the city.

21:27 Lamb’s Book of Life. See note on 3:5.

22:1 river . . . of life. This river is unlike any on earth because no hydrological cycle exists. Water of life symbolizes the continual flow of eternal life from God’s throne to heaven’s inhabitants (see note on 21:6).

22:2 tree of life. A symbol of both eternal life and continual blessing (see note on Gen. 2:9). The tree bears twelve fruits, one for each month, and is symbolic of the abundant variety in heaven. The English word therapeutic comes from the Greek word translated “healing.” The leaves somehow enrich heavenly life, making it full and satisfying.

22:3 no more curse. The curse on humanity and the earth, as a result of Adam’s and Eve’s disobedience (Gen. 3:16–19), will be totally finished. God will never have to judge sin again, since it will never exist in the new heaven and new earth. His servants shall serve Him. See note on 7:15.

22:4 see His face. No unglorified human could see God’s face and live (Ex. 33:20–23). But the residents of heaven can look on God’s face without harm because they are now holy (cf. John 1:18; 1 Tim. 6:16; 1 John 3:20). His name. They are God’s personal possession (see note on 3:12).

22:5 they shall reign. Heaven’s citizens are more than servants (see note on 3:21).

22:6 His servants. The members of the seven churches of Asia Minor who received this letter (1:11), and then all believers who have read, or will read it since. things which must shortly take place. This involves the entire revelation which John has just related (see note on 1:1).

22:7 I am coming quickly! Jesus’ return is imminent (see note on 3:11). Blessed. See note on 1:3.

22:8 heard and saw. John resumes speaking for the first time since chapter 1 and confirms the veracity of the revelation with his own eyewitness testimony—the basis of any reliable witness. fell down to worship. See note on 19:10.

22:10 Do not seal the words. Cf. 10:11. Previous prophecies were sealed up (Dan. 8:26; 12:4–10). These prophecies are to be proclaimed so they can produce obedience and worship. the time is at hand. This refers to imminency, which means that the end is next.

22:11 Those who reject God’s warnings will fix their eternal destiny in hell, where they will retain their evil and filthy natures for all eternity. Those who respond to the warnings will fix their eternal destiny in glory and realize perfect righteousness and holiness in heaven.

22:12 I am coming quickly. See note on 3:11. Again, imminence is the issue (cf. Mark 13:33–37). according to his work. Only those works which survive God’s testing fire have eternal value and are worthy of reward (1 Cor. 3:10–15; 4:1–5; 2 Cor. 5:10).

22:13 the Alpha and the Omega. See note on 1:8.

22:14 Blessed are those who do His commandments. See note on 1:3. The preferred reading is “Blessed are those who wash their robes,” symbolizing those who have been forgiven of their sins—who have been cleansed by the blood of the Lamb of God (Heb. 9:14; 1 Pet. 1:18, 19; see note on 7:14). tree of life. See notes on verse 2; Genesis 2:9.

A Severe Warning

Deut. 4:2: “You shall not add to the word which I command you, nor take from it, that you may keep the commandments of the LORD your God which I command you.”

Deut. 12:32: “Whatever I command you, be careful to observe it; you shall not add to it nor take away from it.”

Prov. 30:6: “Do not add to His words, lest He rebuke you, and you be found a liar.”

Rev. 22:18, 19: “For I testify to everyone who hears the words of the prophecy of this book: If anyone adds to these things, God will add to him the plagues that are written in this book; and if anyone takes away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part from the book of Life, from the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book.”

tures in NT times, the term when applied to people referred to anyone of low moral character. Unfaithful leaders (Is. 56:10) and homosexual prostitutes (Deut. 23:18) are among those who received such a designation. sorcerers. See note on 9:21.

22:16 My angel. See 1:1. the churches. The seven churches of Asia Minor who were the book’s original recipients (1:11). the Root and the Offspring of David. Christ is the source (root) of David’s life and line of descendants, which establishes His deity. He is also a descendant of David (offspring), which establishes His humanity. This phrase gives powerful testimony to Christ as the God-Man (cf. 2 Tim. 2:8). Bright and Morning Star. This is the brightest star announcing the arrival of the day. When Jesus comes, He will be the brightest star who will shatter the darkness of man’s night and herald the dawn of God’s glorious day (see note on 2:28).

22:17 “Come!” This is the Spirit’s and church’s answer to the promise of His coming. let him. This is an unlimited offer of grace and salvation to all who desire to have their thirsty souls quenched. Cf. Isaiah 55:1, 2. water of life. See note on verse 1.

22:18, 19 Jesus offers extended testimony on the authority and finality of the prophecy. He commissioned John to write it, but He was its author. These are not the first such warnings (cf. Deut. 4:2; 12:32; Prov. 30:6; Jer. 26:2). These warnings against altering the biblical text represent the close of the NT canon. Anyone who tampers with the truth by attempting to falsify, mitigate, alter, or misinterpret it will incur the judgments described in these verses.

22:20 Surely I am coming quickly. See note on 3:11. In light of this future expectation, what is now required of believers is outlined by Peter (see 2 Pet. 3:11–18).
